Poetry.

Flowers and Spikenard.

In weeping I am weeping, while the tears fill
Yo[illegible] I whence might there my grief
B[illegible] I pallid cheek ne'er rest itself
[illegible]
Y[illegible]l your falling drops when life ever appears.

[illegible]-chamber hover—bring spikenard's sweet perfume
[illegible] before the hearse's
plu[illegible]
[illegible] my door-way—can odors then avail
When I am in my cell, and clods in death are piled?

If you have wreaths of blooming, it bring in to my [illegible]
Let them exhale their fragrance before the mourners come
To keep around my casket; for what avail their smell
When I no longer breathe it when heart has ceased to beat?

I want the fame of [illegible] which dark deeds
shame in my way,
I want the friendship nothing before the final day;
Love round scatter[illegible]—honor them cruelly life to pain;
Speak how your words of loving—the end be mine long[illegible]

The blossoms may fade in [illegible]; spare my earthy
lot,
But when my eyes are [illegible], beneath that cov'ring
sod,
I cannot sense their fragrance, nor on their colors
gaze,
Bring flowers to me living—I speak now your words of praise.

The Lake of Fire.

Will Bro. W. H. Wilson please explain Rev. xiv. 10, 11; and xx. 10, as we never could harmonize those texts with Rev. xx. 12-15, and xxi. 4-8, and other such Scripture texts fully to our satisfaction from any of the translations.

WM. MILLS.

I suppose the difficulty Bro. Mills has in mind is, how can a place of unending torment and sorrow exist cotemporaneous with a period spoken of when "there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain?" Such conditions could not exist cotemporaneously, they are utterly antagonistic one to the other. But the fact is, the texts referred to, instead of being contradictory one to the other, they harmonize exactly, and the lake of fire period is in fact used as a means to bring about the happy state of things mentioned in Rev. xxi. 4.

The trouble all arises from a misconception of the way the Bible uses the words: "forever," "forever and ever," everlasting," "eternal," etc. These words are translated from the Hebrew word olam, and the Greek word aion, and its adjective aionios. These words in both Testaments describe both on endless and a limited period of time. The Bible uses these words, "forever," "forever and ever," etc., two hundred and forty times in a limited sense. Therefore, when we read these words in the Scriptures, we must take into consideration the context, and also ascertain whether or not the person or object to which the word "forever" is applied, is capable of endless duration. If not capable, then the "forever," applied to such person or object will terminate with its existence.

Prof. Stuart, a believer in endless torment in his critical work on these words, says on page 15: "the classical sense of aion (forever) is (1) length or space of time; and so of time of life, age of man, age considered as a space of time. (2) Long time, eternity, long, indefinite space of time." Out of six senses only one signifies eternity. Parkhurst, on the word olam, (forever) says: "It seems to be much more frequently used for an indefinite than for infinite time." Commenting on the Greek words aion, and aionios, he says: "The Hebrew word olam answers as the corresponding word for these two words in the Greek, which words denote time hidden from man, whether indefinite or definite; whether past or future."

Says Prof. Hudson: "All the terms for eternity are very often in the Bible used in a modified sense."

I will quote a few of the instances from the Bible where these words are used in a limited sense.

EVERLASTING.

Aaron's priesthood is described as being "everlasting." Exod. xl. 15.

Moses law is said to be "everlasting." Lev. xvi. 31.

Circumcision is called an "everlasting" covenant. Gen. xvii. 13.

"The everlasting mountains shall be scattered." Hab. iii. 6.

FOREVER.

Jewish ordinances "forever." Exod. xii. 17 24.

Jewish servant to have his ear bored and "serve forever." Exod. xix 6; xxi. 6.

Heathen "forever." Lev. xxv. 23, 30, 46.

"The city shall be a heap forever." Deut. iv. 26; xii. 28; xviii. 16.

"Stones to be a monument forever." Josh. iv. 7, 21.

Solomon's temple to "continue forever." 1 Kings viii. 13.

Leprosy cleave "forever." 2 Kings v. 27.

"Shew bread to be an ordinance forever." 2 Chron. ii. 4.

EVER AND NEVER.

God said to David "the sword shall never depart from thine house." 2 Sam. xii. 10.

"The fire on the altar shall never go out." 1 Kings v. 6.

"I ever taught in the synagogue." John xviii. 20.

"Hiram was ever a lover of David." 1 Kings v. 1.

FOREVERMORE.

"Ye shall observe to do forevermore." 2 Kings xvii. 37.

Shows mercy to David's seed forevermore." Psa. xviii. 50.

Olam is rendered twenty-one times

PERPETUAL.

"Perpetual generations." Gen. ix. 12.

Aaron's priesthood "perpetual." Exod. xxix. 9; xxxi. 16.

"Perpetual reproach." Psa. lxxviii. 6.

"Perpetual hills did bow." Hab. iii. 6.

FOREVER AND EVER.

"Now go, write it before them in a table, and note it in a book, that it may be for the time to come for ever and ever." Isa. xxx. 8.

"And the streams thereof shall be turned into pitch, and the dust thereof into brimstone, and the land thereof shall become burning pitch. It shall not be quenched night nor day; the smoke thereof shall go up for ever: from generation to generation it shall lie waste; none shall pass through it for ever and ever."

Speaking of this same land it is promised to the wild beast and satyr and says:

"And he hath cast the lot for them, and his hand hath divided it unto them by line; they shall possess it for ever, from generation to generation shall they dwell therein." Ver. 17.

The above prediction with regard to Idumea has taken place, the fires are gone out; the smoke has ceased to ascend, and people now pass through it, therefore the "forever and ever" as applied to this land is in the past.

As I said before, when the words forever," "forever and ever," are applied to a person or object, we must take into account their capability of endless duration. Now let us apply

THIS RULE TO REV. XX. 10.

In the first place "the devil" was cast into the lake of fire. It is certain the devil is not a deathless being, because we read in Heb. ii. 14, as follows:

"Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil." Now, therefore, as the devil is capable of, and will be destroyed, he cannot endure unending "torment." So he must be counted out. We next have "the beast and false prophet," one a corrupt civil system, and the other a corrupt ecclesiastical system. Neither of them having bodily form, or animal life, could either burn, or suffer pain. Yet the imagery of Rev. xix. 5 personifies them and says: "These both were cast alive into a lake of fire," yet they did not, and could not have animal life. I am a printer, and it is a common expression with the trade to say the type set up is "alive," before it is used, but after being used, they say it is "dead." Therefore we must count "the beast and false prophet" out because they cannot suffer endless "torment." Next, we have "death" cast into the lake of fire. Death is simply a condition, there is nothing about that that can suffer burn or suffer torment. Next, we have "hell" cast into the lake of fire. "Hell" is simply a place, and does not possess animal life, therefore that cannot suffer "torment." The apostasy says the lake of fire is hell, and hence we have hell cast into hell, that is about as consistent as the "death that never dies."

Next we read: "And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." With regard these characters we read: "For yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be; yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be."

"And they shall be as though they had not been." If they are so completely blotted out, that they shall be as though they had never had an existence, there is no endless torment for them. So we see that not a single thing that is cast into the lake of fire is capable of suffering endless torment.

"The beast," is the very last phase of human government, presided over by a vile enumerator variously described as, "the little horn," "king of fierce countenance," "that wicked," "man of sin," "son of perdition," "the antichrist," etc., and allied with "the beast" will be the "false prophet," the very last phase of the apostasy, steeped in iniquity. The happy time mentioned in Rev. xxi. 4, can never come, while the devil, beast and false prophet bear rule, therefore they must be exterminated. Neither can sorrow and pain cease, until death and hell (grave) pass away, and the wicked cease from troubling. The lake of fire will accomplish the desired result. There is no such thing as a literal lake of fire, it is merely an apt symbol of destruction. Rev. xx. 14 says plainly what the lake of fire is: "This is the second death." Systems of government, death, the grave, the devil and wicked people can all be destroyed, but none of them are capable of suffering unending torment. "The second death," is absolutely a finality, whatever that preys upon can never revive again. When great Babylon is thrown down she "shall be found no more at all." Rev. xx. 10, says the devil, beast and false prophet "shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever." There is a thought right here. The "forever and ever," here spoken of must end in the "day and night" period, and that period pass away before we reach the happy time of Rev. xxi. 4, because we read in verse 25: "there shall be no night there." Therefore the "forever and ever," of the lake of fire, ends with passing away of the "day and night" period.

Hence we must see that the "lake of fire," or "second death," period does not exist cotemporaneously with the "no sorrow," and "no death" period, but merely prepares the way for that glorious time, by destroying "the devil," "the beast," "the false prophet," "death," "hell"—the grave, and those "not found written in the book of life."

Man Proposes, God Disposes.

There are no people upon earth that have been bereft of territory who do not cling tenaciously to the hope of recovering every inch of it at length; and the cecity of men is phenominal in that they do not comprehend that in spite of every probability to the contrary, the descendants of the ancient Hebrews have a fundamental claim upon their land of lofty origin, and that in some form or other they will be represented at Jezreel.

In connection, therefore, with "Israel" and "Gog," already standing face to face in the brief but intent moments which now precede the final settlement of "the Eastern Question," it is a remarkable outcome of the methods of Divine Providence that "Judah" herself is also brought into the controversy!

The attitude of Russia towards the Jews has suddenly become the topic of the day! This is a proof, were all other signs missing, that the "set time" to restore the captivity of his people—of all his people—has come.

As a party to the settlement "Judah" is by no means to be left out in fact, she is the principal meter, or at least factor, in the question; and, no matter how the solution operates, for human foresight is at best obtuse, the Pharaonic oppression now on foot in northern quarters will be sure to eventuate in a decisive manner the Hope of History. A great many good people have laughed at the idea of Judah's and Israel's restoration to the land of Promise, thinking that God was done with them nationally. How slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have written. One writer grew quite facetious over the fact that some attempts to resettle the Jews—only a part of all Israel—in Palestine had proved a failure, and affirmed that all such projects would continue to work out disastrously as that of Mr. Adams did many years ago. It is true this gentleman was brought to grief by the utter failure of his enterprise, but his effort to colonize Judah on her own soil was premature, God's "set time" to favor Zion had not come, but how is it today? The Jews are going back to the land of their fathers, from all countries where they are oppressed. This movement homeward is providential. The strong anti-Jewish sentiment which prevails in several countries of Europe, calling for severe laws against them is causing them to set their faces Zionward. It is another instance of God's overruling man's wrath to his own praise. Israel, or the ten tribes must be restored also. The two houses have remained apart since the days of Rehoboam and Jeroboam. They must become one nation upon the mountains of Israel, and one king be king to them all; (Ezek. xxxvii. 22) else God's Word will fail.

JOHN L. WINCH.

You cannot keep a good man down. God has decreed for him a certain elevation to which he must attain. He will bring him through, though it cost a thousand worlds. There are men constantly in trouble lest they shall not be appreciated. Every man comes in the end to be valued for just what he is worth. How often you see men turn out their forces to crush one man or set of men. How do they succeed? No better than the government that tried to crush Joseph, a Scripture character.—Talmage.

"He Lives in Death."

Editor of the Grand Rapids Herald:

One of your correspondents has inquired of the author of an eulogy of Professor Ellis of Oberlin, lately deceased, whether he means by the words "He lives in death," to be understood literally or in a qualified sense. Whatever his meaning was, it is generally believed that all do live in what appears to be death. But some teach there is no death except a "moral death." I heard a Rev. D. D. say repeatedly at a funeral that "there was no death but a moral death." Death like all other words, may be used in a figurative sense, but the figurative always implies the literal. For example, a man may be said to have a fiery temper, but this implies a literal fire as the common meaning. So a man may be said to be "dead in trespasses and sin," but if there is no literal death, there would be no sense in speaking of any metaphorical death that is like the literal. The Creator gave a law to the first man and woman, which, if disobeyed, they would surely die. That "old serpent which is the devil or Satan," Rev. xx. told the woman, "Ye shall not surely die, but be as gods." They disobeyed. Sentence was passed. And unto Adam he said, "Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree of which I commanded thee, saying, thou shalt not eat of it, cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." Gen. iii. 17. In these very plain words Adam was told what he should suffer all the days of his life, and then, as he was wholly made of dust, he should, without excepting any part, return to dust, and the ground from which he was taken. "The moral death" consisted of his disobedience. And all the days that Adam lived were 930 years, and he died (a natural death.) Gen. v. But it may be inquired, did not the first man have a soul that escaped death? He was a living soul according to the translation, after receiving the breath of life. The word translated soul is nephesh, which is translated creature three times in the previous chapter. But if translated souls it means mortal creatures as in the Book of Joshua, 10th chapter, where it is said many times that he took their cities and smote "all the souls therein with the edge of the sword." They must have been material and mortal souls. "But God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son (to be crucified) that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish, but have everlasting life." Does this great gift come to the believer at death? If so, it might be "he lives in death." The death of the Christian is spoken of in many places in the Bible as a "sleep in Jesus." I will quote a few out of many. "But I would not have you to be ignorant brethren concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring (from the dead) with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not go before them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the Archangel, and trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." "Wherefore comfort one another with these words." 1 Thess. iv. 13. It is said of King David, that he "slept with his fathers and was buried in the city of David." 1 Kings, ii. 10. "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness. I will be satisfied, when I awake with thy likeness." Ps. xvii. 15. He did not expect to see his God, or be in his likeness till he should awake from the sleep of death. Peter on the day of Pentecost, declared "David is both dead and buried—David hath not ascended to heaven." If he has not ascended yet, it is likely other good men have not. Isaiah says, "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing ye that dwell in the dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." Isa. xxiv. 19. They will awake first, then sing. "Many of them who sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life." Dan. xi. 2. The eternal life will not begin till they awake from the sleep of death. Jesus said unto Martha, "I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in me, though he were dead yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." There are two classes of believers, the largest class will be dead when he comes, they will live again at that time, but those who are alive then will never die." John xi. 25. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order (will be made alive;) Christ the first fruits, (was made alive) afterward they that are Christ's (will be made alive) at his coming." That life will be endless. John "saw the souls (persons) who had been beheaded for the witness of Jesus and the Word of God, and who had not worshipped the beast, and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection." Rev. xx. 4. "The blessed and holy" will not live or reign with Christ till that time. Jesus said to his disciples, "No man hath left house or parents, or brothers, etc., for the kingdom of God, who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the age to come, shall receive life everlasting." This blood bought gift that is offered so freely to all on the most reasonable conditions, is never promised at death or in the world, or cosmos to come but in the aione (the word used here) age to come. Luke, xviii, 29-30.

Bible believers, wherever the end of the world is spoken of in the Bible, the Greek word is aione—age and world to come—not death. Our last enemy can't give us the endless life. If that future blessed and immortal life is plainly promised in the millennial age to come, it cannot be allowed before that time.—E. Hoyt.

Shallow Waters.

A vessel was sailing on waters with which the master of the vessel was not familiar. There were indications upon the surface that all was not right. He examined, and found he was upon shallows. He signaled for a pilot. With difficulty one was secured and taken on board. The pilot immediately called the crew around him and said to them, "Your only safety is in getting into deep water. Every man to his post, and obey orders." With promptness they obeyed. The vessel was put about, and they were soon moving safely over the rough waves, the great deep.

There are many shallows in the voyage of life where the experienced and too confiding are wrecked. The irregularities upon the surface often indicate them. In the line of business habits by questionable practices for greater gain, in the way of taking advantage of the inexperience and ignorance of others, many get on shallows where they wreck their honor, self-respect, and integrity of character. In the line of pleasure and social enjoyment, how many of the young, are they are aware, find themselves drifting along in shallow waters, in parties and associations of very doubtful propriety and morality, from which many have passed on to be wrecked? In the fortification of the appetites and passions, with the social attractions of the saloon and the club-room, how many have found themselves in shallows from which they were unable to extricate themselves, and have gone on to a complete wreck.

How much better to keep in the deep waters of undoubted integrity; of unquestionable morality; of unsullied purity? If any find themselves drifting on the shallows of liberal and skeptical ideas of the claims of virtue and responsibility to God that smooth the way for every departure from good, they need to seek a pilot to guide them into the deep waters of that Christian faith that has stood the test of all time, and all the storms of life and has produced fruits of righteousness incomparable in value for the welfare of man, and to the glory of God.

"Too Late to Mend."

"A bad place to mend," said Mr. Shoemaker, as Toby put up his foot, showing a gap in the side of his shoe.

"Never too late to mend, you know," said Toby, cheerfully.

"Where did you learn that, boy?" asked Mr. Shoemaker, a little sternly.

"Oh, I have often heard it! A kind of a proverb, you know."

"Well, its a lying proverb."

"How do you make that out?" asked Toby, who had a rather high opinion of his own smartness.

The shoemaker pushed his spectacles up on his forehead, looked fixedly at the lad, and said: "Toby, did you hear about the man who was hung the other day?"

"Yes," answered the boy, "I heard of it, but father wouldn't let me read the paper nor look at the pictures of the hanging."

"Your father was quite right. Boys ought not to read such news, put in the sensational style of the newspapers. But this much they all ought to know: The man who was hung went to Sunday-school once; he had a good mother, and she tried to have him do right. He soon thought he was wiser than his mother. He drank, he idled, he stole; and when he was found breaking into a store, he killed the man who discovered him. It was too late for him to mend then. He was tried, found guilty, and hung."

"That is so," said Toby; "but you don't think I will ever kill a man, do you?"

"I hope not, indeed; but that murderer never thought he would do such a thing."

"No, I suppose not. I don't drink, you know."

"I am glad of that. But there are other wrong things you do. I heard you swear before you came in."

"Did you? Well, I don't often swear, but Joe Smith was too provoking!"

"Can you take back that oath?"

"No; but what if you can't?"

"God will bring everything into judgment. You can mend now; God will forgive your sins, for Christ's sake, if you ask him. But remember there comes a time when 'it is too late to mend!'"—Kind Words.

...ER OF TRUTH:
...ry of the C. P. Association.
...PUBLE, Corresponding Editor.
PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 9, 1894.

The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

Motium in parvo:—"The Truth is as refreshing as water, nourishing as milk, strengthening as bread, gladdening as wine, and as purifying as fire to all those who do themselves the honor to believe and obey it."

WORD received from Nebraska states that Bro. Adams baptized 11 at Bassett, April 17, and 6 at St. Paul, April, 26. Truly the outlook is good in this quarter, and Bro. Adams a workman who is earnest and faithful to the high calling. May the Lord bless the worker and those he instructs.

GOD commands men to repent,—commands them to obey him; this throws the responsibility where it belongs—upon men. They can repent and they can obey him,—they are responsible for their own conduct, and will have to take the consequences. This paragraph is written in hope that some poor soul, who is waiting for God to exert his power to convert him, will see that the exceeding great and precious promises together with the gift of his only begotten Son are the evidences of his love, and are expected to influence him to love and obey in return; no miracle will be performed to change him.

"THE Hope set before us;" what a solid footing we have in the hope set before us! Surely it is an anchor to the soul. What a glorious prospect it brings to view? How it animates the true believer! His present is but a vapor, and soon passes away. A few years at most, and possibly a few months or weeks or days and he will be numbered with the dead. But if he die with a sure and certain hope of a resurrection to glory, honor, and immortality, his treasure is in heaven, not in his perishing mortality. It is perfectly safe there; neither moth nor rust nor thieves can reach it; it is hid with Christ in God; and when he who is his life shall appear, he will appear with him in glory. Oh what an anchor to the soul, is the hope set before us. Let us cherish it more and more. The stronger our faith and brighter our hope, the more safely shall we escape the contaminating influences around us.

THE plans of God are simplicity itself. While he did not see fit to fully reveal his beneficent purpose at the beginning, there was no mystery about what was revealed. The reader need not smile at this truism. We purposely put it in that way; because, while the first promises of God contained the germ of all future promises, they meant exactly what the words implied. He rules the heavens, regulates the seasons and saves man upon just a few powerful principles. Unlike men who have to experiment, and often abandon one plan for another because it does not fully come up to the requirements, he knows what he wants, and by his Almighty power makes what he wants. What folly then, to think that he has devised several means for saving man! In infinite wisdom he chose the best means first, and infinite wisdom would not allow him to set aside the best means. Faith and obedience have always been the principles on which man could be justified; and it is because the Scriptures teach this, that they are able to make us wise unto salvation;—no other instrumentality is needed. We do not believe there is a mystery now connected with the Gospel—the saving power of God. The mystery has been cleared up, declared, revealed. The secret is out. The new and living way for ages concealed, but now disclosed, is spoken of as a mystery, which the prophets who predicted what was coming did not see into, and which even excited the curiosity of angels. See 1 Peter i. 10, 11, 12. And to show the folly of thinking that we have to believe in mysteries in order to be saved, it is sufficient to say, that it is the revelation of the mystery that now forms part of the faith that saves.

"WHAT is the use of religion without an immortal soul? If there is no immortal soul, there is no God." These are words of a minister who was not able to put his hand on the fact, just then, which proved that man has an immortal soul. What a shame not to keep posted on a subject of such vital importance, and one so much talked of?

AT the meeting of the Methodist ministers in Cleveland on Monday, April 23, a note of warning was sounded that the Hindoos were about to make a desperate effort to introduce their religion into this country; and the brethren were exhorted to study up and be prepared to meet it. Little by little the truth leaks out. Evidently they see no danger that the missionary work of Americans and English will upset their religion at home, or they would spend their strength in opposing it, instead of sending missionaries abroad. But it comes to America, does Brahmanism, under cover of another name or address, viz: Theosophy, from the Greek theosophia, divine wisdom. It sets aside both philosophy and theology, as we understand it, and claims to derive its knowledge of God by intuition or immediate communication from God himself. Plotinus its founder, was born at Lycopolis in Egypt A. D. 205, and Chamber's Cyclopedia says that he resuscitated Plato; and Proclus gave the world another Aristotle, and in Julian the Apostate Theosophy became a power that ruled the world for three centuries. The God of Plotinus was a Mystical Trinity in the exposition of which he displayed a dialectical subtelty that the most ingenious school men never reached.

Signs of the Times.

Watchers on the other side of the water are keenly alive to the importance of the Jews moving toward the land of their fathers,—and to "the steady and rapid growth of Russia toward the colossal climax of her greatness; the world-wide spread of her outstretched wings;" and report that the Times Paris correspondent gives an interesting conversation with Mr. Barthelomy Saint-Hilaire, now in his 90th year, who expressed his apprehension as to the outlook in the next century in consequence of the embarrassments which all the continental powers are incurring through their gigantic armaments, and set forth the reasons why he thinks an alliance between France and Russia undesirable. He said, "Though rather an optimist, I take a gloomy view of the 20th century. European finances are in a disastrous state. The armaments which Europe imposes on herself are leading up to catastrophe. France has a debt of nearly 40 milliard, and the Budget shows a deficit. All the other states are almost crushed by their burdens. England alone for 50 years has been steadily reducing her debt, and has achieved a reduction of nearly ten milliards. I am frequently blamed for not being a partisan of Russia. Now, I have all my life been a Republican. I cannot see how France, springing from the Revolution can be the ally of an Autocratic power like Russia. Russia covets Afghanistan, and whenever she possesses Constantinople, Moscow, and St. Petersburgh, she will command 150 million souls. She is already almost mistress of Persia, and she will then be a formidable menace to the whole civilized world, which will have to resist her supremacy. If France and Russia emerge victorious from a future war, France, it is true, will have the Rhine frontier, but Europe will be vanquished, and Russia, seated at Constantinople and St. Petersburgh with 150 millions of men, will have universal sway. I cannot forget the Russian Soldiers passing through Paris so laden with booty that I saw a grand pair of horses sold for 20 francs, and a donkey for a gloss of of brandy. Everything in me may be questioned except my ardent patriotism; and if the idea of France joining Russia does not please me, nobody has the right to prevent my expressing what my patriotism and reason dictate." Of course all this is from a purely human standpoint. The aged patriot head seems to see what Napoleon the First predicted,—the supremacy of Russia. But neither of them knew that the Son of Man is to take a hand in the final settlement of earth's affairs.

Laurence Coster and John Guttenburg.

Laurence Coster was a Hollander. He lived in the city of Haerlem. His country was crossed and recrossed by canals. Much of it used to be under water. The people built dikes or walls to keep the water from crossing in again, and then pumped the ponds, bays and lakes dry with wind-mills, and made themselves gardens where the water had been.

One day Laurence Coster thought it would be a nice thing to take a trip into the country, so he got into a canal-boat with his children and went where they could have the pleasant shade of the trees over their heads, while they were rambling about listening to the songs of the birds.

The children were very happy. They ran about everywhere, until they were tired. What do you think they found when they came back to their father, whom they had left seated under a tree? He had been carving their names on its bark. It pleased them but they didn't know what he had been thinking about. It was something very wonderful, about carving letters on blocks of wood, each letter by itself. Then he thought he could cover them with ink and make words.

It was in 1423. The happy party went back to the city. The father cut out his blocks. He then cut all the letters of the alphabet on them. Then he tied the little pieces together with a string into words. One day he showed the children a little book that he had printed. They thought it was very funny that squares of wood could be made to talk.

The Egyptians and Chinese had carved letters on blocks, and had printed from the blocks, but Mr. Coster was the first to think of putting the blocks together into words and then printing from them. All the books before this time had been written with a pen, but Mr. Coster thinks it a much nicer and more speedy way to print them, so he keeps on at the work, and by and by he hires a boy to help him. His name is John Guttenburg. They sell the pamphlets that they print but they tell no one how they are made.

When Laurence Coster dies, John Guttenburg goes to Strasburg and studies how he can make type that will be stronger than wood. He could not cut metal-type, it would take too long, so he made molds to cast them in, and kept trying and trying to find some metal that would be just right for the types, until his money was all gone, then he had to tell his secret to a rich man, so that he could borrow gold to go on with his work.

It cost a great deal before he was successful. One day he showed the rich man a specimen of his first printing, it was beautifully done. In 1450, the two men began to print their first book.

They used an old, out of the way room, so that no one would come to find out what they were doing. By and by the book was finished. It was printed on paper called vellum.

They soon printed more. Charles VII. King of France, bought one of the books. He paid 750 crowns for it. The Archbishop bought another, and some of the rich men of the city bought copies for themselves. When the Archbishop found out that the King had a Bible, just as beautiful as his own, and other men had; Bibles, he concluded it was the devil that had made them, but after a little while he discovered that it was John Faust, (the rich man who had loaned Guttenburg the money) who was printing the books. He was going to have him burned. Then the secret had to be told. Faust showed the Archbishop how the books were printed. Is it not a wonderful story?

This is the way the Bible has been given to the world; this is the way God has chosen to speak to men. He has flooded the world with light. Do not refuse it dear children. Accept the truth and live forever.

Acts of the Apostles.—Chap. 1.

1. The first account we made O Theophilos, concerning all the things which Jesous began to do and to teach,

2. Until the day when he enjoined on the apostles through sanctified spirit, those whom he had chosen, and was taken up;

3. To whom also he presented himself alive, after he had suffered, with many demonstrative proofs, being seen by them for forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God;

4. And while meeting with them he enjoined on them not to depart from Hierousalem, but to await the promise of the Father, namely the one which ye heard from me, as follows, to-wit.

5. Joannes baptized in water forsooth, but ye will have been baptized in spirit in sanctified spirit, not these many days hereafter.

6. Then as they went along with him they asked him saying, Lord, art thou at this time restoring the kingdom to Israel? And he said unto them, It is not for you to know times or periods which the Father hath disposed in his own official power.

8. But ye will receive ability when the sanctified spirit hath come upon you, and ye will be my witnesses in Hierousalem and in all Joudaia and Samareia and unto a farthest (limit) of the earth (or land),

9. And having said these things, as they were looking, he was taken up and a cloud received him up and away from their eyes.

10. And as they were steadfastly gazing into the heavens, while he was going his way, to even two men stood by them in white apparel; and they said, men of Galilaia, why stand ye looking into the heavens? This Jesous who hath been taken up from you into the heavens will in this wise come in the way that ye beheld him going his way into the heavens.

12. Then they returned to Hierousalem from the mountain called the Mount of Olive-Orchard which is nigh Hierousalem, a sabbath-journey off.

13. And when they had entered in, they went up to the upper-room where those who had stayed behind were, namely, Petros, and Joannes and Jacobos and Andreas, Philippos and Thomas, Bartholomaios and Mathaios, Jacobos of Alphaios and Simon the Zealot, and Joudas of Jacobos.

14. All these were continuing steadfastly together in votive-prayer along with women and with Maria the mother of Jesous and his brothers.

15. And in those days Petros arose in the midst of the brethren and said; and there was a multitude of names at the same place, about one hundred and twenty.

16. Men, brethren, it was necessary that the Scripture he fulfilled which the sanctified spirit had previously spoken through the mouth of Daveid concerning Joudas who became a guide for those who seized Jesous,—

17. Because he was numbered among us and had attained the lot of this service (deaconship).

18. This one then had acquired a country-place (or an estate) with the wages of his iniquity and becoming precipitated headlong he burst in two in the middle and all his entrails poured out;

19. And it became known to all the dwellers of Hierousalem, so that place was called in their dialect Acheldamach (litulas the burden or distress of a covetous desire) that is a place of blood.

20. For it hath been written in a book of Psalms. Let his country-place (or estate) become desolate, and let there be no one to dwell therein; and his bishopric (office as over-seer) let another take.

20. It is befitting then that of our men who have come together during all the time that the Lord Jesous hath come in and gone out for us;

22. Beginning from the baptism of Joannes unto the day when he was taken up from us, that one of these who hath been with us should be a witness in respect to his resurrection.

23. And they stood two, Joseph called Barsabbas (son of Sabbas) who was also called Joustos and Matthias.

24. And they offered votive-prayer and said, Do thou, O Lord, thou heart-knower of all, show up which one of these two thou hast choosen to take the place of this deaconship—and apostleship from which Joudas hath passed by to go his way to his own place.

26. And they gave lots to them and the lot fell upon Matthias and he was unanimously voted to be accounted with the eleven apostles.

COMMENT.

"Sanctified spirit" instead of "the Holy Ghost" R. V. the idea being that spirit here spoken of is sanctified as opposed to unsanctified spirit to which we as human beings are in some way liable to become subjected both consciously and unconsciously in this probationary state.

"In water" instead of "with water" R. V.

"In sanctified spirit" instead of "with the Holy Ghost" R. V.

"Official-power" instead of "authority" R. V.

"Ability" instead of "power" R. V.

"The heavens" or "canopy" instead of "heaven" R. V.

"Olive-Orchard" instead of "Olivet" R. V.

"Where those who had stayed behind were" instead of "Where they were abiding" R. V.

See the difference of spelling in the names in the 13th verse. Compare with C. V. and R. V.

"Votive-prayer" instead of "prayer" merely R. V.

"With women" instead of "the women" or "certain women" R. V.

"Through the mouth" instead of "by the mouth" R. V.

"Deaconship service" instead of "ministry" R. V.

"An estate" or "place" instead of "field" R. V.

"Wages" instead of "reward" R. V.

"Bishopric" or "overseership" instead of "office" merely R. V.

"Sined" instead of "put-forward" R. V.

"Also called" instead of "surnamed" R. V. There were no sir or sur-names in those days.

"Offered votive-prayer" instead of "prayed" merely R. V.

"Thou heart-knower of all" instead of "Thou which knowest the hearts of all men" R. V.

"Shew-up" instead of "shew" merely R. V.

"Deacon-ship" instead of "ministry" R. V.

"Hath passed by" instead of "fell away" R. V.

"Lots to them" instead of "lots for them" R. V.

"Was unanimously voted" instead of "numbered" merely R. V. This was a separate action as I understand. The lot was cast as a tentative act and the vote taken afterwards.

This is important as giving us some idea of their form of procedure in church-matters in those days.

CHAS. GARDNER.

We do not labor alone. However feeble our hands, that mighty Hand is laid on them, to direct their movements and to lend strength to their weakness. It is not our speech which will secure results, but his presence with our words. Here is our encouragement when we are despondent. Here is our rebuke when we are self-confident. Here is our stimulus when we are indolent. Here is our quietness when we are impatient. If ever we are tempted to think our task heavy, let us not forget that he who set it helps us to do it, and from his throne shares in all our toils—the Lord still, as of old, works with us. If ever we feel that our strength is nothing, and that we stand solitary against many foes, let us fall back upon the peace-giving thought, that one man against the world, with Christ to help him, is always in the majority; and let us leave the issues of our work in his care, whose hands will guard the seed sown in weakness, whose smile will bless the springing thereof.—A. Maclaren.

HOW can we be unhappy when we see so many evidences of the love of God to us, expressed in his created works? When we look upon the lofty trees, or listen to the happy songsters caroling forth their hymns of praise to God above, and contemplate the loving heavenly Father who gave them to us, our hearts are drawn out in praise and thanksgiving to the Giver of every good and perfect gift.

Do Something.

Each member of a Christian church should be a worker for Christ. Our Lord has never granted a dispensation to a single one of us; would any of us desire that he should? His vows are upon us all without exception. Are we obedient to his word: "Occupy till I come?" Are we putting out our talents to interest? If we are not doing so, we can never enter into rest. Rest implies previous labor. We are bidden by the Holy Spirit to labor to enter into the rest of God; it is the way thereto. Idlers are unrestful, fidgety, worried and worrying, fretful and fanciful, troubled and troublesome. They are happiest who are most completely consecrated to the service of God and most fully absorbed in obedience to his will.

Oh, that all our church members were constrained by divine grace to do their utmost for the Lord! There would then be no lack of laborers; no vine would be left unpruned, no wheat ungarnered. Under God we have in the church all that is needful for her great work: it only needs bringing out and setting in order—perhaps we ought to say arousing and quickening. The world is full of stir—social, political, scientific, selfish—and shall the Savior's household be given to slumber? Heaven can be no heaven to us if we do not labor here, by either doing or suffering the divine will.—Spurgeon.

The Analysis of a Cigarette.

Good Health has made an analysis of a cigarette. "The tobacco was found to be strongly impregnated with opium, while the wrapper which was warranted to be rice paper, was proven to be the most ordinary quality of paper whitened with arsenic. The two poisons combined were present in sufficient quantities to create in the smoker a habit of using opium without his being aware of it, his craving for which can only be satisfied by an incessant consumption of cigarettes." The State should prohibit the making and vending of poisonous alcoholic beverages, and for kindred reasons.

The Drunkard's Will.

I leave to society a ruined character, a wretched example, and a memory that will soon rot.

I leave to my parents during the rest of their lives, as much sorrow as humanity in a feeble and declining state can sustain.

I leave to my brothers and sisters as much mortification and injury as I could bring on them.

I leave my wife a broken heart, a life of wretchedness and shame, to weep over my premature death.

I give and bequeath to each of my children poverty, ignorance and low character, and the remembrance that their father was a monster.

There is nothing like prayer for producing calm self-possession. When the dust of business fills your room so that it threatens to choke you, sprinkle it with the water of prayer, and then you can cleanse it out with comfort and expedition.—The Rev. James Stalker.

MAN have different spheres. It is for some to evolve great moral truths, as the heavens evolve stars, to guide the sailor on the sea and the traveller on the desert; and it is for some, like the sailor and the traveller, simply to be guided.

Announcement.

The Third Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God in Neb. will be held at Moorefield, June 15 to 17, 1894. Moorefield is on a branch of the B. & M. R. R., 50 miles west of Holdridge. Any one coming by rail notify Bro. A. Shultz at least one week before the meeting and you will be received and cared for.

Although this meeting is not in as central a point as heretofore, still, by commencing now and making an extra effort all can get there. Meetings will be held in the big tent except the business meeting which will be held at Bro. Morgan's school house at 2 P. M. on Saturday as usual.

All arrangements will be made for the next annual conference and other important business transacted. It is expected that a full attendance will be present.

ALBERT ADAMS, Pres.
J. J. CADY, Sec'y.

Another year has nearly rolled around since the annual meeting of the Michigan Conference was held. Death has been doing its work among us, and some are now sleeping that were accustomed to meet with us, how many more will lay their burdens down e'er another year will pass. God only knows, this we do know, that the left ones must work with still greater zeal and energy as the ranks are all the time being lessened, so let every lover of the Truth be at their post ready for duty at the old gath-ering place in Dutton, Kent Co., Mich. Meeting will begin Thursday evening, May 31st and continue over Sunday. Such a few hours to spend together, but we can do much if we all come with the one thought to further the cause of Christ. Not altogether to get good, but determined to give as much as we receive, then as is already predicted we will have a grand meeting. Those coming from the south on the G. R. and I. R. R. will be met at Carlisle Station in afternoon Thursday if they will notify me in time. The train reaches Carlisle about 1 o'clock P. M. If any should wish to go on to Grand Rapids, the train will leave the city for Dutton at 5:20 P. M. Dutton is on the M. C. R. R. Those coming from the east, can reach here at 5:00 A. M. 1:15 P. M. and 10:00 P. M. Brethren, the King's business is very urgent this year, and it is very important that all who possibly can will be in attendance from the first meeting. We expect several new converts present and want them to see that we are alive to the times in which we are living. Let each Church send at least one delegate with report of their standing during the past year. The ladies of the tithing society are doing considerable, let them be present with their report if they have not saved more than 50cts. It is the Lords and will be accepted by him. The friends here are prepared to keep all who may come, and we hope every bed, and couch, and rug, and corner will be full. Brethren awake, awake, and herald out once more the glad tidings of a coming King.

MARY A. WOODWARD, Sec.

The North District Quarterly Conference of the Church of God, will be held, D. V., at Blair, Neb., commencing Friday evening, June 1st and continue over Sunday. Those coming from a distance should write to Brother John Mehrens, Blair, Neb., as to place of meeting etc. The State Evangelist is expected to be present to preach the Word. Brethren, you cannot spend two or three days more profitably than by attending this meeting. There is a large and prosperous Church at Blair and we feel assured that all who come will receive a kind welcome, a hospitable entertainment.

"Custom in infancy becomes nature in old age," and habits which at first were trivial and of slight importance, come at last to hold men as with the grip of fate. Acts lead to habits, habits fix destinies. Men toy and trifle with evils until they find themselves powerless within their grasp. They think, "I can lay this aside when I will," until at length they find that will is paralyzed and powerless, and their slave has become their master.

Poetry.

Whose I Am.

Jesus, Master, whose I am,
Purchased thine alone to be,
By thy blood, O spotless Lamb,
Shed so willingly for me!
Let my heart be all thine own,
Let me live to thee alone.

Other lords have long held sway;
Jesus, thy name alone to bear,
Thy dear claim alone obey,
Is my daily, hourly prayer.
Whom have I in heaven but thee?
Nothing else my joy can be.

Jesus, Master! I am thine;
Keep me faithful, keep me near;
Let thy presence in me shine
All my homeward way to cheer.
Jesus! at thy feet I fall,
Oh, be thou my All-in-all.

Selected.

The King of the Jews.

The impending universal monarchy. A brief statement of "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ."

Since we have mentioned the throne of David on which Christ is to reign, it is proper to know how it came to be temporarily discontinued and overthrown.

Zedekiah, a "profane and wicked prince," was the last descendant of David who reigned on David's throne. The Lord said to him by Ezekiel, "Remove the diadem and take off the crown; this shall not be the same; exalt him that is low and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it; and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him." Ezek. xxi. 26, 27.

This decree was promulgated about 600 years B. C., but David in his life time about 480 years earlier, had prophesied of this event, for after alluding to the solemn covenant made with him, which would, at some day, cause his throne and Seed to come into perpetual manifestation, he sees and describes a great chasm and interregnum between himself and that time, saying, "But thou hast cast off and abhorred, thou hast been wroth with thine anointed." "Thou hast made void the covenant of thy servant; thou hast profaned his crown by casting it down to the ground. * * * How long Lord! wilt thou stay hid forever? shall thy wrath burn like fire?" Psa. lxxix. 34-38.

In the decree announced to Zedekiah concerning the throne, the Lord Jesus is the one spoken of as he "whose right it is." Luke i. 32, 33; Isa. ix. 6, 7. See also marginal references.

In the foregoing pages we have elaborated and made very plain this great truth, namely, that Christ Jesus will most assuredly at some future time, reign on this earth, over the restored and submissive twelve tribes of Israel.

The territory which these tribes will be permitted to occupy is

THE LAND PROMISED TO CHRIST AND THE SAINTS.

This land is accurately described in the covenant made with Abraham. See Gen. xii. 1, 5, 7; xiii. 14, 15; xv. 7, 18-21; xxii. 17, 18; xxvi. 3, 4. It extends from the great river Euphrates on the east, to the Mediterranean Sea, and the "river of Egypt" on the west—a territory of about 300,000 square miles according to British survey. The "river of Egypt" mentioned here, is not the Nile, as some have supposed, for that would make the promise include half of Egypt, the Nile being the central and not the border stream of that kingdom; as the Mississippi is the central stream of the United States. The "river of Egypt" is a much smaller stream between Egypt and Palestine, and was a part of the actual boundary of the land occupied by the children of Israel under Joshua. Josh. xv. 4; Num. xxxiv. 5; 1 Kings viii. 65.

When the Lord said to Abraham, "To thee and to thy Seed will I give this land for an everlasting possession," Paul settles forever the meaning of the promise by saying, "He saith not and to seeds, as of many, but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ." Gal. iii. 16. And he shows that the interest which the saints will possess in this promise, after they have been endowed with immortal and glorified natures, will be by virtue of their union and oneness with Christ, saying, "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii. 18, 27-29. "Heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ." Rom. viii. 17; Ephes. v. 30-32.

It must be borne in mind that the word "forever" does not always imply endless duration. The "Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge" says of the word olam, translated "forever," "The primary and proper signification of olam is that which always exists." But in this word, as in others, usage always modifies the original meaning. In this sense of unlimited duration must it always be taken, unless something appears in the subject or connection in which it occurs, to limit its signification."

Two of the plainest instances in which it means a limited period, may be found in Exod. xxi. 6; xxv. 46. Here are the meanings given in a standard Greek lexicon, "duration, finite or infinite; unlimited duration, eternity; a period of duration, past or future, time, age, lifetime; the world, universe." "Forever," it will thus be seen, is different from "everlasting" (olamyoc, aionios,) which it defines thus, "unlimited as to duration, eternal, everlasting."

And therefore when the Scripture says that the Jews in their "flesh and blood" or mortal nature, will be restored to the Promised Land, and that the Lord will reign over them "forever," we can understand by comparing this with other Scripture, that it means the limited period of one thousand years; at the end of which time the eternal state will obtain, in which there will be no longer a human being in the flesh and blood, or mortal nature: seeing that the necessary consequences of such nature, namely, death, sorrow, crying and pain, will all have "passed away." But the glorified saints, being endowed with deathless natures, will "for an everlasting possession" eternally occupy the land of promise and its accruing territory—"the uttermost parts of the earth." Psa. ii. 8; xxxvii. 22, 29; Prov. ii. 21, 22; Matt. v. 5.

The thousand years' reign of Christ and the saints over the Jews and over other nations remaining in the mortal state, will thus be the transition period, or vestibule conducting us, as through a preparatory ante-room, from the present sin-stained condition of things into that ineffably glorious and blissful "holy of holies"—the boundless eternity.

But this does not lessen the importance of the doctrine concerning that period of one thousand years called the millennium, during which Christ will reign on the earth. There is another period, much shorter than this, the history and doctrine pertaining to which is nevertheless a most indispensable item and link in the gospel plan of salvation; and that period is the time of thirty-three years, during which our Savior sojourned on earth at his coming. What would the gospel be, and of what would the Christian's faith consist, if all that transpired in those thirty-three years was ignored and passed lightly by? And can we, without sin, expunge from our faith and studiously ignore the doctrine pertaining to a period many times longer, and just as wonderful in its events; being no less than the consummation and full fruition of that "great salvation" which our Lord lived and died on the cross to secure?

Here then we perceive that during the first thousand years of the kingdom of God on earth, "a strong nation" is to be settled as liege-tenants in the land of promise, and to be reigned over by an immortal King and his immortal viceroys or subordinate rulers. Matt. xix. 28; Rev. ii. 26, 27; iii. 21; v. 10; Psa. cxlix. 8, 9.

When this nation formerly dwelt in this land, and was reigned over by mortal monarchs, it was called the Lord's throne and kingdom. 1 Chron. xvii. 14; xxviii. 5; xxix. 23; 2 Chron. ix. 8. Much more therefore will it be his throne and kingdom when the Lord, Jehovah, shall occupy the throne in the person of his immortal Son, who himself is called "The Mighty God." Psa. cxxii. 14; Isa. ix. 6, 7.

This then will be that "kingdom of God" or "kingdom of heaven" which the Christian desires when he understandingly prays "thy kingdom come;" and the gospel, or glad tidings of which our Lord commanded to "be preached in all the world." Matt. xxiv. 14.

The kingdom of God, while for a little moment confined to the "garden"—the promised land and the Jewish nation—will be in a comparatively small or mustard-seed condition; but its increase will be most rapid and miraculous, until our Lord has obtained the heathen for an inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession. Luke xiii. 19.

The word "garden" here suggests the triple classification of affairs in the millennial state. Thus on all well regulated plantations we see (1st) the family mansions; (2) the contiguous garden of high and fine culture; (3rd) the outside farm at large. And so there will be (1st) Jerusalem with its many mansions for "the saints secure abode;" (2) the promised land around it, peopled by Israel after the flesh; (3) the outside world at large, peopled by Gentiles of every clime and race. The parable of the three measures of meal (Matt. xiii. 33) also indicates the same truth. In that age then will be the church, the Jews, and the Gentiles; the divine government permeating and extending over them all.

In "the generations of the heavens and earth," we may perceive shadowy intimations that this will be the arrangement in the period of the re-generation thereof. (1st) There was the "garden eastward in Eden"—a garden within a garden; (2nd) Eden; (3rd) the world at large. Also in the plan of the temple there "good things to come" seem to be pictured by (1st) the court of the priests; (2nd) the court of Israel; and (3rd) the court of the Gentiles, but as for the land of promise, Israel's court, Abraham was commanded to, as it were, measure this, "Arise, walk through the land, in the length of it and the breadth of it." Rev. xi. 2; Gen. xiii. 17.

David in prophesying of his divine Son and Lord says, "his kingdom shall extend from the river to the ends of the earth. All kings shall fall down before him, all nations shall serve him." Psa. lxxii. 8, 9. If any monarch now were to write thus concerning one of his future descendants, we should readily understand his meaning. We should know that he was predicting that his kingdom, however small it might be at his writing, would yet in the hands of his illustrious descendant, break in pieces and subdue all other kingdoms, and become itself the only and universal monarchy in the world. I say that if we had any doubt about his words, it would not be as to their meaning but as to their truthfulness—whether they would really be fulfilled.

Well, there can be no doubt as to the truth and ultimate fulfilment of David's words, for he was a prophet and spoke as he was moved by the Holy Ghost. And our Lord has said that "all things" written in the Psalms concerning himself, "must be fulfilled." Luke xxiv. 44. But did this prophecy refer to him? Undoubtedly, for it never has been and never can be fulfilled in any less personage. And besides, the same language is most unmistakably applied to him in Zech. ix. 10.

All large empires founded in the world have had their irradiating or starting points—their small beginnings. See for instance, the histories of Greece, Rome, England, etc. And this increasing and growing feature is positively affirmed of the kingdom of God. Isa. ix. 7; Dan. ii. 35; Luke xiii. 19.

As we have demonstrated, the land promised to Christ and the saints will be the germ-land, (relatively to other lands,) and the nucleus from which this kingdom will spread. Compared to all other parts of the earth, this land will be the more immediate territory of the kingdom; as the Jews, compared to all other nations in the flesh, will be the more immediate subjects thereof. In an ethnological or national point of view, "Salvation is of the Jews." This is a great comprehensive truth, the full and complete development of which extends through ages and dispensations. Thus our Savior, as to his human nationality, was a Jew—"he took on him the nature of the Seed of Abraham." And his immediate apostles who preached the gospel to the other nations were Jews.

This nature will also, to some extent, be a medium for the manifestation of divine power not only in blessing but also in conquering the Gentile nations; "And the remnant of Jacob shall be in the midst of many people, as a dew from the Lord, as the showers upon the grass, that tarrieth not for man, nor waiteth for the sons of men." "And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people, as a lion among the beasts of the forests, as a young lion among the flocks of sheep; (marg—or goats) who if he go through, both treadeth down and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver." Micah v. 7, 8. "The Lord of hosts hath visited his flock, the house of Judah, and hath made them as his goodly horse in the battle." Zech. x. 3; xiv. 14.

Thus in the atonement and in the fruition of the atonement; in the sufferings of Christ and in the glories following, that is to say, in the whole work of salvation the Jews are to act a very important part. For it must be borne in in mind salvation is not yet a completed work; the full fruition of the atonement of Christ, and of justification by faith, has not yet been realized. This requires the coming of Christ to reign on the throne of David, and to resurrect and reward his people of all ages. This returning to resurrect the saints and to reign on the throne of David, will be in fulfilment of the covenant made with David. Because David could see no other way of realizing salvation except through the appointed means involved in that covenant, he could properly say of it "This is all my salvation and all my desire." 2 Sam. xxiii. 4. And as the existence of the Jews and the family of David; and also their settlement in the land of promise, attended the first coming of our Lord as "the Son of David, the Son of Abraham;" so will their existence in that land attended his second coming as "the King of the Jews;" for when "the Lord shall give unto him the throne of his father David, he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever," or for the millennial age.

Since the last dispersion of the Jews, the promised land has been permitted to "enjoy her sabbaths," (Lev. xxvi. 34) laying fallow and almost unbroken by the plowshare. And this fact, that it has not been filled up by other nations, and the countries around about it, and taxed by excessive cultivation for their support, is an indication that it is kept for its future occupants; somewhat as an untenanted house. And although the surrounding nations look with covetous eyes upon it, and though Russia, England, France, Turkey, Greece, Egypt and Arabia might oppose the establishment of a powerful, overshadowing and hostile empire in that land, yet the Lord will "beat off" all opposers, from the utmost and most exact borders of the land, even from the channel (a surveyor's limit) of the river Euphrates, to the stream of Egypt. Isa. xxvii. 12. This remarkable phrase, "beat off," is exactly descriptive of the modern requirements of the case; just as "cast out" was of their first settlement in the land. Deut. vii. 1. For it was then occupied by the nations who had most power to prevent them—the "seven nations" of Canaan; but the modern seven nations who look with jealousy upon it, all have their capitals outside of it and would only need to be beaten off, as a confederation of invaders, combining to defeat the long-established purpose of the Lord with regard to that land and the whole earth.

And after all the opposing forces have met with an awful defeat, probably in that historic and decisive battlefield, "Armageddon" or Esdraelon, will "the Lord mighty in battle," pause with having acted as it were, merely on the defensive? No, but he will pursue his enemies and trample them down as the mire of the streets; and as his raiment was stained with his own blood at his first coming, so will it be stained with that of his enemies at his second coming. Rev. xvi. 16; Zech. xiv. 1-4; Psa. xviii. 37; Isa. xvii. 12-14; lxiii. 3.

The land will then be made capable of sustaining a dense and immense population, for after its long rest "the wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them, and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose." Isa. xxxv. 1. Notice the expression "for them." There will be a delightful symphony of acclaim between the land and its inhabitants. As the whole creation now groaneth with man, so it will rejoice with him." "because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into"—what! the fires of annihilation? no, but "the glorious liberty of the sons of God." Rom. viii. 19-23. The allusion to blossoming as the rose implies that its capacity is now concealed like the rose in the bud; but then it will blossom forth in all its richness, beauty and sweetness. A celebrated traveler to Palestine has said that "under a wise and benificent government the productiveness of this land could exceed all calculation."

And as it is desirable that all capitals should have central position with regard to the territory, wealth, and population of the whole empire; so the all-wise Creator who "stood and measured the earth" (Hab. iii. 6; Job xxxviii. 5) has selected Zion, he hath desired it for his habitation. "This is my rest forever; here will I dwell; for I have desired it." "Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth is Mount Zion, on the sides of the north, the city of the Great King." Psa. cxxxii. 13, 14; xlviii. 2.

That this land is the central one of all the earth, is proved by the fact that when the Lord desired to people the earth he twice selected this vicinity as the irradiating center from which the population should spread. And when he sent forth the gospel light "into all the world," commanding "all men everywhere to repent," it was from this land and city its beams irradiated as the spokes from a hub of a wheel. It is not an obscure or out of the way place; and the mighty works which have been and will be done here, were not and will not be "done in a corner." Acts xxvi. 26.

OBITUARY.

Died at Hesperia, Oceana Co., Mich. April 20, 1894, Sister Savilla Weaver, aged 60 yrs, and 8 mo. Savilla Walling was born in 1834, Sept. 5. She was married to Daniel Weaver in May 1880. Sister Weaver embraced the faith more than 35 years ago, was baptized by a Disciple minister at the time of her conversion, but in after years she did not feel satisfied with her baptism and was again baptized by B. W. Woodward at our conference meeting in Dutton three years ago. Sister Weaver had many reverses in her life but was a true Christian through it all, always firm in the faith. For many years THE RESTITUTION has been her weekly welcome guest, and was always read aloud to the dear faithful mother who is left almost alone now. Their house has always been our home when in Hesperia, preaching, long before Bro. Weaver died and always since have we received a hearty welcome there, but the dear old place is now left with dear Mother Rogers, aged 81 years, and her grandson who has been a son indeed to them both in their hour of need.

Sister Weaver died quite suddenly, no one realizing her danger until death touched her, and trying to speak to her mother they saw she was speechless. She soon passed away. Elder B. W. Woodward spoke in the Baptist Church to the assembled friends from 1 Thess. iv. 8.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Died, Harriett Dunham, at Ravenna, Mich. March 20, 1894, at the advanced age of 90 years and 2 months. She was married at the age of 17. She and her husband moved to Oakland Co., Mich. in 1832, while it was yet a territory, and there helped to organize the first Baptist Church, which they joined as charter members, to which church she belonged at the time of her death. Eleven children were born to them, 5 sons and 6 daughters, of which 3 sons and 3 daughters mourn her absence. Elder Woodward spoke at the funeral services held at Alaska in the Baptist Church to a crowded house from 1 Cor. xv. 26.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Died at her home near Arapahoe, Neb., April 10, 1894, of pneumonia, Sister R. Ada Brown, beloved wife of Brother T. G. Brown, and daughter of D. N. and Christiana Prime, aged 38 years, 5 months, and 2 days.

Sister Brown was born in Story Co., Iowa, Nov. 8, 1855, came with her parents to Neb., Aug. 9, 1873. Her father being one of the pioneer settlers of Furnas Co., the county at that time being very sparingly settled except with Indians and buffaloes.

She was married to T. G. Brown Sept. 21, 1876. They both heard the Gospel of the Kingdom at the Second Annual Conference of the Church of God in Neb., under the able preaching of our esteemed brother, C. G. Ramsay,—received the truth and was accordingly baptized into the Christ-body by Bro. T. J. Prime, Sept. 4, 1887.

A husband and four children, the youngest three years old, are left to mourn the loss of a faithful wife and a loving, Christian mother.

In her late sickness she had all the care and attention that could possibly be given, it being remarked on several occasions that her life was seemingly prolonged by faithful and efficient nursing. She was patient and submissive through it all, never once murmuring or complaining.

She died firm in the faith, and in the hope of a resurrection from among the dead. She has not long to wait for that day will soon appear,—the dawn is breaking,—the enemy death will be destroyed,—immortality and eternal life will be bestowed upon those who continue faithful to the end.

The funeral discourse was delivered by Elder J. S. Miller, of the Christian Church, from 1 Thess. iv. 13, after which a large concourse of relatives and friends followed her to her last resting place, to await the coming of the Life Giver.

Brethren, when we meet again in annual conference, our number will be one less, Sister Ada will be missed. Many, no doubt, will remember the excellent exhortation she gave in the social meeting. How she admonished us to be faithful unto death, and receive a crown of life when Jesus comes. Will we do it? That we may exemplify the Christian life and character of our esteemed sister, conduct our lives in conformity to his will, and finally clasp immortal hands on the Evergreen Shore, is the prayer of your unworthy brother.

J. J. CADY.

Emma Viola Hahn Freeman, was born in Stark Co., Ohio, Dec., 22, 1863. Died April 18, 1894, aged 30 years, 8 months and 27 days. She was a daughter of our esteemed and quiet Sister Hahn, a member of the Gospel Grove Church, who died a few months ago.

Mrs. Freeman was a resident of of Sidney, Kosciusko Co., Ind.

She left a husband, one son, two sisters and a brother, to mourn her untimely death. I had known her from early girlhood. She was of a retiring disposition, kind and affectionate.

Funeral conducted by the writer. It is sad for one standing in the relation of wife and mother and so young in life to be snatched away from the love and endearments of home, to leave the family lonesome and grief-stricken and desolate. But every day repeats this bitter experience. The breaking of family ties must go on until all things are made new. The sweet refrain of redeeming love, "no more death" will be sung some day, and tears will be wiped from all eyes.

JOHN L. WIXOM.

"And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power." 2 Thess. i. 7, 8.

Faith Given Power.

"The barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the cruise of oil fail." 1 Kings xvii. 14. When the poor widow arose on the day of Elijah's arrival and took a look into her pantry, how her heart sank. She probably never came any nearer giving up in complete discouragement than she did just then. But a few hours later she was singing about the house as happy as a lark. What caused the change? Did the barrel become full of meal? No. Did the cruise run over with oil? No. Then why did her heart become so light? Simply because she had stopped living by sight, and had begun to live by faith. She looked away from her poverty and found joy and peace in the word of God. In the morning she had looked into the empty barrel, thought of her hungry child and sat down to weep, but in the afternoon she looked at the promise of unfailing supply which the man of God gave her, and rejoiced. Her anxiety all left her the minute she began to trust. From all that she could see, she was just as bad off after she had fed the prophet as she was before he came, but as long as she had God's word that her supply should not become less, she could look want in the face, and still feel safe. When she went to scraping the barrel to bake the prophet's cake, she didn't care whether there was a spoonful left or not. She was not concerned whether rain came soon or late. She did her part faithfully as directed, and left all the rest to God. No famine or panic can destroy the peace of those who have a faith that takes hold of God.—Ram's Horn.

Luxury in Travel.

The North-Western Line, embracing nearly 8,000 miles of standard railway, has long been known as one of the most progressive railways in the west, and it certainly merits this distinction, as we can testify from an extended trip recently made over a major portion of its lines. One of the handsomest trains we have ever traveled in (and nobody could wish for finer service) is the "North-Western Limited," leaving Chicago at 6:30 P. M. daily for St Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth. It is vestibuled throughout and lighted with gas, and has been justly described as the most complete and elegant train in the west, the Hon. T. B. Bryan, vice-president of the World's Fair Commision referring to it as "the finest on wheels." One has but to glance at the rich upholstering, tapestry, ornaments and carvings to confirm the fact that the highest degree of the car-builder's art has been employed in the construction of the handsome equipment of this North-Western flyer. The coaches, library cars, the 16-section palace sleeping cars and the compartment sleeping cars, each compartment being supplied with hot and cold water and lavatory, certainly seem to preclude the possibility of further improvement in making travel a luxury. Supper is served in the elegant dining car, and the buffet-library car is well stocked with reading material, metropolitan dailies, magazines and leading pictorial publications for the evening's entertainment. The management of the Chicago & North-Western R'y believes that perfect service is the strongest possible advertisement for securing passenger traffic, and we are told by one of its officials that its train service and accommodations are always carefully planned with this end in view. The results are so satisfactory that a person who once goes over the line generally selects it whenever and wherever he goes. M. 9 and 23.

The Reason Why

The Wisconsin Central has become known as the popular route for tourists and pleasure seekers, is because it pays particular attention to this class of travel and caters to the comfort and convenience of its patrons. Its trains are equipped with the finest Pullman sleeping cars, parlor cars, and dining cars in which the meals are unexcelled. It is the "travelers choice" to all the principal summer resorts in the northwest, and Yellowstone National Park.

Maps, time tables and guide books will be mailed free upon application to Jas. C. Pond, Genl. Passr. Agt., Milwaukee, Wis.

…ut of the vine, ye are the branches: he that abideth in me, the same beareth much fruit: for apart from me ye can do nothing." John xv. 5. Rev. Ver.

When I was a student at Princeton, Prof. Henry had so constructed a huge bar of iron, bent into the form of a horse-shoe, that it used to hang suspended from another iron bar above it. Not only did it hang there, but it upheld four thousand pounds' weight attached to it! That horse-shoe magnet was not welded or glued to the metal above it; but through the iron wire coiled around it there ran a subtle current of electricity from a galvanic battery. Stop the flow of that current one instant, and the huge horse-shoe dropped. So does all the lifting power of a Christian come from the currents of spiritual influence which flow into his heart from the living Jesus. The strength of the Almighty one enters into the believer. If this connection with Christ is cut off, in an instant he becomes as weak as any other.—T. L. Cuyler.

The Thebans in their armies had a band of men called the holy band, consisting of such men only as were joined together in the bonds of love, as would live and die together. These were made great account of, and esteemed the strength of their armies. Such a holy band every society of Christians should be.—J. Trapp.

EVANGELIST FUND.

We whose names are hereunto subscribed, prompted by a love of truth, and prayerfully desiring the salvation of our fellow beings, agree to pay into the hands of our Conference Treasurer L. B. Boggs, Argos, Indiana, the several sums herein pledged as free-will offerings to a fund to be devoted to sounding out the Word of reconciliation by the tongue of the earnest Evangelist. These contributions to be paid within one year from Nov. 18, 1893.

☞It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for ons who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

Kansas Evangelist Fund.

This fund is raised for the purpose of sending an evangelist to isolated brethren that are desirous of having the Gospel proclaimed in their vicinity and are not able financially to bear the expense.

Those wishing to have an evangelist sent to them, can correspond with the Secretary, L. A. Chaplin, Ashton, Kansas. Those wishing to contribute to this fund may send the amount to the Treasurer, W. H. Bernard, Oxford, Kansas.

Conference Announcement.

The annual conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will be held at Nevada, Story Co. Nevada is on the C. & N. W. R. R. 20 miles west of Marshalltown and 8 miles east of Ames. This meeting will last ten days, commencing June 7, 1894, and will be the most important meeting we ever had. The Young Men's educational work, tent work, new hymn book, and other important matters will be considered. Brethren and sisters, we need your presence and counsel. We are living in a time when the cause of Christ demands that every one do his duty. It is true we have attended year after year and helped to carry the burden of work for our Master, but the burden was light and you found rest and peace in toil. But there are some isolated ones to whom this privilege has not come in many years, to you we say come to the meeting. We want to see your faces and hear your voices in our social meetings. As you shall tell us of your faith and hope. Make an extra effort, begin your plans now. It may be the last conference till Jesus comes. Come, spend a week in the tented grove with those of like precious faith. It will rest you, and strengthen you in the Divine life. A full program will be published in due time.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

The Christian Hymnal. The above is the title of a Hymn Book issued from THE RESTITUTION office, containing 256 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, printed on fine paper, from good clear type. Music on every page, followed by two to four pieces of Sacred Text to go to the music, making over 400 hymns. To this is added 32 pages of Hymns for Children to use Sunday Schools or at home. Price 35 cents each; 3 copies for $1.00; 6 copies for $2.00; 12 copies, $4.00. Special rates to congregations wishing larger quantities to place in churches, or to those who will act as agents and introduce the work into their neighborhoods.

A Letter to a Friend. A new edition of this popular work has been printed. It is not necessary to say a word about this work to the older readers, but to the new ones we say the subject treated of is the "Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the One Hope, One Faith, and One Baptism." It was written some years ago by the late Mrs. C. C. Woodcock, and it is truly "A letter to a Friend." Many editions have been printed and distributed until this little 32 page tract is acknowledged as the most effective missionary that can be handed out. Price 10 cts. each. Send and get a supply to distribute.

Future Probation. By Wm. G. Moncrieff. We have received an invoice of the new book of 148 pages, written by William Glen Moncrieff, subject, "Future Probation: Is That Awaiting Any of the Unrighteous?" Bro. Moncrieff is a writer well known to our readers, and of undoubted ability. This book is paper covers, and sells for 15 cts. each, and can be had at this office.

See Here.

An Exposition of John xvii. 5, being the article in RESTITUTION of Nov. 1, 1893, by M. Joblin, put in tract form. Eight large pages. Price 10 cents per dozen. 30 cents for 50 copies, 55 cents for 100. Only a limited number were printed, so if you want them send soon to this office for them.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 16, 1894. NO. 19.

Poetry.

SLEEP.

He giveth his beloved sleep.—Ps. cxxvii. 2.

He sees when their footsteps falter, when their hearts go weak and faint,
He marks when their strength is failing, and listens to each complaint:
He bids them rest for a season; for the pathway has grown too steep;
And, folded in fair, green pastures, he giveth his loved ones sleep.

The weary and worn-out children that ask for the day-light's close,
He knows that they all are longing for home and the sweet repose;
So he calls them in from their labors ere the bad-ness comes to their sleep.
And of early watching over them, he giveth his loved ones sleep.

He giveth it, oft, so gently that a mother will touch to feel
The tide-mark of the salty pillows so tenderly on her breast:
Forgetful, in sore the trials and sorrows that made them weep.
For with peace a soothing promise, he giveth his loved ones sleep.

He giveth it: friends, the dearest can never this boon bestow;
But he touches the drooping eyelids, and places the features so:
Their foes may gather about them, and storm-clouds may round them sweep,
But, guarding them safe from danger, he giveth his loved ones sleep.

All clouds of the dim and future, all fears that appear today,
Like a dark, that clear in the shall hit, have noiselessly passed away;
No call, or clamor can rouse them from slumber—no pain, and sleep!
For only His voice can reach them who giveth his loved ones sleep.

Weep not that their tolls are over, weep not that their race is run;
God grant we may run as calmly who work our work, as their's is done!
Till it on we will pass with gladness our watches to keep,
And rejoice in the sweet assurance, he giveth his loved ones sleep.

Original.

The Christian Religion, Pure and Holy.

"Unto the pure all things are pure; but unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure; but even their mind and conscience is defiled. They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable, and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate." Titus i. 15, 16.

Christianity as it is revealed in the Scriptures of truth is pre-eminently a religion of purity. In this respect it forms a striking contrast to every other religion not of Divine origin. The religion of the ancient Egyptians, Babylonians, Greeks and Romans, being founded upon the worship of the creature instead of the Creator, partook of the nature of that which is unclean and corruptible; and "changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and four-footed beasts, and creeping things. Wherefore God also gave them up to uncleanness through the lusts of their own hearts," etc., Rom. i. 18-32. And the idolatry of today is no purer than that of ancient times. An impure fountain cannot give forth pure water; neither will the wicked deceitful human heart evolute into one of holiness by following its own devices. Christianity is not of the earth—it is of heavenly birth. It is "the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom:" revealed to the apostles by the Spirit, as it was not made known unto the sons of men in other ages, and has been published to all nations in the word of the truth of the gospel. "The manifold wisdom of God" is displayed in the gospel, and presents a striking contrast with the wisdom of this world; for when the world by its wisdom did not know God, it pleased God by what the world calls the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. 1 Cor. i. 20, 35. The Apostle James shows the difference between the wisdom of God and of men. That which is from above is pure, peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy; but that which is not from God, is earthly, sensual, devilish, producing every evil work. Jas. iii. 15-18.

That the Christian religion is from heaven, and therefore Divine, can be satisfactorily and abundantly proved by both external and internal testimony. A tree is known by the kind of fruit it bears. Jesus asks "Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit." Matt. vii. 17, 18. Infidels, either ignorantly or wickedly, charge Christianity with being the cause of war, rapine, bloodshed, misery, etc., etc., found in and practiced by what are called Christian nations, when in fact is no nation or kingdom upon earth governed by the heavenly principles of the gospel of Christ. Christianity is not responsible for the deeds of wicked men, who may have assumed its name for sinister purposes, or worn its garb in order to deceive the unwary. It can only be judged properly by the principles upon which it is founded, and by the faith and practice of its sincere followers. No one yet has brought a reasonable objection against the teachings of Christ, or the purity of his life. Even those of his enemies sent to arrest him, returned to those who sent them, saying, "Never man spoke like this man." John vii. 32, 45, 46. And Pilate, who condemned him at the request of the Jews, three times declared to them "I find no fault in him," John xviii. 38; xix. 4, 6; and in proof thereof, "he took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this just person: see ye to it." Matt. xxvii. 24. Well might the apostle Peter say of him, "Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth," and whose blood was precious, "as of a lamb without blemish and without spot." 1 Pet. i. 19; ii. 22. If such was the character of the Good Shepherd, who gave his life for the sheep, then those who profess to be his followers, "should follow his steps," and "so walk, even, as he walked." 1 Pet. ii. 21; 1 John ii. 6.

Whatever may be the conduct of those who profess to be Christians, whether they honor or disgrace that "worthy name by which they are called," nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal. The Lord knoweth them that are his. And, let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." 2 Tim. ii. 19. While it is a comfort to be assured of the fact that the Lord knows and cares for his own, still it will greatly add to that consolation for us to know that we are his. How may this knowledge be obtained? Is there any certainty about it? Are we to depend upon our own feelings, or upon the word of the living God? Most assuredly upon the latter, if we would know the truth of the matter.

Christians of the apostolic order are chosen of God "for salvation through sanctification of spirit and belief of the truth, whereunto he called you by our gospel, to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ." 2 Thess. ii. 13, 14. This high, holy, and heavenly call of the gospel, in sanctification of spirit, is in order to obedience and a sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ. 1 Pet. i. 2. This sanctification or cleansing must be obtained in a legitimate way. Jesus prayed "sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth." John xvii 17. The word of the truth is in the gospel which was preached by the apostles. Col. i. 5, 6, 25. This word is the incorruptible seed, by which we are begotten, Jas. i. 18; 2 Pet. i. 23, 25; 1 Cor. iv. 15; and by which we become the children of God—purifying our hearts by faith, and by obeying the truth, Acts xv. 9; 1 Pet. 22; "for ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." Gal. iii. 26, 27. It is by obeying this form of doctrine that we are made free from sin, and become servants to God, bearing fruit unto holiness, and at the end obtaining everlasting life. Rom. vi. 17-23. As it is the design of preaching the gospel to save those who believe and obey its requirements, the obedient ones are selected for the name of the Lord; and become "a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; in order to show forth the praises of him who has called them out of darkness into his marvellous light." 1 Pet. ii. 9, 10. The gospel calls us to glory and virtue—to obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory—to lay hold on eternal life and to walk worthy of God, who has called us to his kingdom and glory. 2 Pet. i. 3; 2 Tim. ii. 10; 1 Tim. vi. 12; 1 Thess. ii. 12.

Now, brethren, in the light of the foregoing passages, and of your knowledge of the gospel call, may I ask you, whether we are living and "walking worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called; with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace?" Eph. iv. 1-3. Are we careful to maintain the doctrine comprised in this unity of the Spirit, and as enumerated by Paul in verses 4 to 6? Seven units,—seven pillars supporting the truth of our holy religion. "One body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all." This is sound doctrine, and comes to us from high authority. The apostle Paul, exhorted both Timothy and Titus, his sons in the faith, "to preach the word;" to "hold fast the form of sound words;" "speak the things which become sound doctrine;" take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee;" for the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned to fables." Surely that time has come—perilous times of the last days—when men shall be lovers of their own selves, etc., "having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away." But if any man "consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the doctrine which is according to godliness, he is proud, knowing nothing, etc., from such withdraw thy self." These instructions given to the apostle concerning doctrine show its importance, and how anxious he was that these two evangelists should "hold fast the faithful word as they had been taught." But he also exhorted them to be examples to the believers, "in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity," in all things showing "a pattern of good works—in doctrine showing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity, sound speech, that cannot be condemned, etc." As Christians, we are called upon to "adorn the doctrine of God our Savior in all things;" and "denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Savior Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." Titus ii. 10-14.

We may learn from these quotations, that the religion of Christ is a pure, clean, and holy religion. Its professors are called upon to "cleanse themselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God," 2 Cor. vii. 1; "for God has not called us unto uncleanliness, but unto holiness." 1 Thess. iv. 7; and the Apostle Peter exhorts us, saying, "As obedient children, not fashioning yourselves according to your former lusts in your ignorance; but as he who has called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation (or behavior;) because it is written, Be ye holy; for I am holy." 1 Pet. i. 14-16. God, our heavenly Father, is holy, righteous, and perfect; and his children ought to bear his likeness; —to stand perfect and complete in all the will of God; and though once alienated from the life of God through ignorance and wicked works, they have been reconciled and adopted into his family through the death of Christ. Their hearts have been sprinkled from an evil conscience through the sprinkled blood of Jesus Christ, and their bodies washed with pure water by immersion into his name for salvation. Thus purified and cleansed in the bath of regeneration, they have been born again, or from above, and have become new creatures in Christ Jesus, created in him for good works, before ordained of God that they should walk in him.

Holiness of life, purity of character, and sanctification of the entire being is taught by Jesus and his apostles, and is required of all who profess to be the children of God. The apostle Paul prayed for the Thessalonians, saying, "and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and may your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Thess. v. 23. A Christian cannot be holy and blameless, and continue in sin. God forbid. How shall we that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?" Rom. vi. 2. Jesus said, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God," Matt. v. 8; and we are exhorted to "follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." Heb. xii. 14. And the apostle John says, "and we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." 1 John iii. 2, 3. Christ "gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present evil world, according to the will of God and our Father." Gal. i. 4; "Christ loved the church, and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it in the bath of water by the word; that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish." Eph. v. 25-27. The disciples of Christ are not of the world, even as he was not of the world, John xvii. 16; they have been separated from it by the truth. "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." 1 John ii. 15. Hence there is to be no coquetry with the world, no yoking together with unbelievers, no fellowship with unrighteousness, no communion with darkness; for what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? Entire separation from unclean things, persons, and practices is required of the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty. 2 Cor. vi. 14-18. In the language of Paul, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world; but be transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God." Rom. xii. 1, 2.

Christians cannot serve God acceptably with a conscience defiled by sin, or a body tainted with impurity. "Know you not that your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit?" "If any man defile the temple of God, him will God destroy." 1 Cor. vi. 19, 20; iii. 16, 17. The impure, the unrighteous, in fact all who practice iniquity will be excluded from the holy city, the new Jerusalem: will have no inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God. Eph. v. 5; Gal. v. 19-21; 1 Cor. vi. 9, 10; Rev. xxi. 27. None but those who have clean hands, and a pure heart, shall ascend into the hill of the Lord, or shall stand in his holy place. Psa. xxiv. 3-5; xv. 1-5. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. vi. 7, 8. Amen.

Words of Warning.

O! slumberer awake, Arouse! Shake off that lethargy. Come out of that haze and mist. Buckle on your armor, stop that dreaming of riches and power and pleasure. Fill and trim your lamp brighter, hold it high, that the millions dying in darkest corners of the earth may see the light and come to be guided by its brightness to eternal life and pleasures that will not end, to riches everlasting, and to power that will not corrupt. Call aloud from the hilltops. Send God's voice through all the land. There are millions starving for the bread of life. Will we withhold it and let them die unsaved? Jesus died to save them. God has left the work in our hands, shall we while we have money or strength allow the messengers of the Gospel to be idle, for ease of some luxury we want to buy, or because we want to lay aside enough for a rainy day.

"Let him know, that he that converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins." James v. 20.

Oh! I wish I was a millionaire, that out of every thousand I owned I could send a preacher into new fields, and send books and tracts to all who are too poor to get them, and to those who never heard the gospel, never heard the glad tidings. But if I got my wish perhaps my heart would become hardened, and I would not hear their cry for help. God knows best, dear Father, thy will not mine be done.

"For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. And having food and raiment, let us therewith be content. But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows. 1 Tim. vi. 7, 8, 9, 10.

We are surely nearing the end. We can almost see the red dawn in the east, the dawn of that bright morning of eternal spring. We are surely now in that time of trouble. Take up a daily paper and read for yourself. The whole world appears to be crazed, to have gone mad. The papers are gorged with the most appalling crimes the wicked and cruel imagination of man can invent. Nihilists, anarchists, labor strikes, white caps, and other lawless bands too numerous to mention, have taken the law in their own hands. The law that used to protect us, seems to be paralyzed and helpless. There have been three men killed within six miles of us since Christmas, and the law did nothing to punish the criminals. Two men committed suicide one day within twelve miles of our home but week on account of financial troubles. Men breaking up and drawing others into the great whirlpool of bankruptcy with them. The whole world seems to be bankrupt, gold is hidden somewhere. The starving and hungry millions who are out of work in the cities will soon grow desperate and will make a mad rush for the banks and money vaults of those millionaires. They will fight like savages. Oh no! nothing can stop them. They are fighting; for bread, they are fighting to save their wives and little ones. They will show no mercy, they received no mercy from you. You drew your silken robes around you when you passed them in the street, fearing you might touch their rags. They are driven desperate by cruel hunger. We can expect nothing but murder and robbery from them. All Europe is preparing for war. The next war will be more than boy's play. Men have invented more destructive machinery for fighting than they ever had before. "And ye shall hear of wars and rumors of war, see that ye be not troubled, for all these things must come to pass: but the end is not yet, for nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom, and there shall be famines and pestilences and earthquakes in divers places." Matt. xxiv. 6, 7.

"And there shall be signs in the sun and in the moon and in the stars. And upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and waves roaring. Men's hearts failing them for fear, and looking for those things which are coming on the earth, for the powers of heaven shall be shaken." Luke xxi. 25, 26.

Thousands are killed by railroad accidents, mine disasters, storms and many other ways. It is not surprising that there are so many papers published, the number we had a few years ago could not hold the great load of crimes and accidents and troubles of every description that crowd the press of today. Surely perilous times have come, but we have not reached the worst yet, "And except the Lord had shortened those days, no flesh should be saved. But for the Elect's sake whom he hath chosen, he hath shortened the days." Mark xiii. 20.

O, what great love, are we worthy? "Come my people enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For behold the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain. Isaiah xxvi. 20, 21.

Whither shall we fly for refuge? We cannot depend upon our own strength, to whom shall we go? "Trust ye in the Lord for ever: for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength." Isa. xxvi. 4. Dear followers of the lamb, are we trusting in him, or are we trusting in our own strength?

"Rejoice in the Lord always: and again I say, Rejoice. Let your moderation be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand. Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God." Phil. iv. 4, 5, 6.

Finally brethren, pray for us, that we may be accounted worthy of eternal life.

VIOLA V. SKEELS.

Where are the Dead?

Job asks the question in another form: "Man giveth up the ghost and where is he?" Mark, he does not ask, "where is his ghost," but "where is he," the man? Human philosophy has never been able to answer this question. Science throws no light upon the dreary abodes of death. All is alike dark to human reason and speculation. Poets have sent the spirit into far off worlds beyond sound and sense. Theologians have invented a hell and a heaven for the spirit after the body dies, and spiritualists have opened up sort of a spiritual commerce with the departed shades. But in all these theories we find nothing satisfactory, nothing real. Aside from the Bible there is no light shining upon the gloomy land where the dead are sleeping. That period between death and the resurrection seems to be a quiet sleep for the weary, aching head, says, "O that thou wouldst hide me in the grave; that thou wouldst keep me secret until thy wrath be passed; that thou wouldst appoint a set time and remember me." This looks like rest. David points to the same sweet repose in the 6th Psalm; "Return O Lord, deliver my soul: O save me for thy mercies' sake. For in death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave who shall give thee thanks." Again says David; "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence," Psa. cxv. 17. "The grave cannot praise," says Hezekiah. The whole volume of inspiration is a unit against the idea of the dead being in some fairy world. "If I wait, the grave is my house," says the man of Uz. If, then, the dead are in quiet sleep awaiting the coming day of life, how precious to the dying children of earth is the promise of life and the resurrection. Christ was placed in the grave, but it could not hold him. The hour is coming when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God and come forth. Those who fall shall rise and amid the growing brightness of the perfect day they will wear the crown of life, victorious over death.

The sepulcher of David was with Israel when Peter was discoursing on the day of Pentecost to the multitudes, and it was there said, "David is not ascended into heaven." No promise this side of the resurrection. That is the day of life, of the crown of victory. Men may strive to beat back the tides of death, but they will surely come. There is a light shining in the lonely grave; there is a promise to the quiet sleeper; there is a hope beyond the night of dreary watching. The life age is about to dawn, the golden lamp of faith will yet shine brightly in the valley of death, and beyond we behold the Dayspring from on high. We have reared monuments to our dead; we have written epitaphs on marble; we have watched over the silent grave with bleeding hearts. But this is not all. We have heard the prophecy from the sacred depths of God's own eternal truth; "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing ye that dwell in the dust, for thy dew shall be as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out her dead."

Death holds some, the grave holds others, while others are sleeping on the ever moving floors of the sea. But from all these the resurrection voice from the great white throne will call them forth to golden crowns shining beyond the reign of death.

The dead, then, are awaiting the morning; they rest in hope, and when quickened from their earthly pillow will come forth in the white robes of Immortal life, bearing palms before the ever blessed King. "I shall be satisfied," says David, "when I awake with thy likeness." The awakening comes in the morning of joy after the night of weeping is past. Glorious hope! Blessed assurance! We will wait in patience, bear the burdens, hold fast the promise and trust Him who is the Resurrection and the Life." —Hon. J. Reed, in 1875.

We cannot serve God by doing things tomorrow which should be done today. There is too much of this dallying in the Lord's work. If we wish to serve him truly we should enter into his service with earnestness today; tomorrow will bring its own particular duties.

THE question regarding the anointing of the sick with oil, must go over for a week.

SOME one has said that he treated the difficulties of the Scriptures as he treated the bones of the fish he may be eating, lays them aside and eats the fish. Time may solve the difficulties—if not, eternity will.

WE wish to call the attention of the friends whom we have trusted since the beginning of the year, and some for a longer time, to the fact that it is hard times, and we need our money. We dislike to make this request, and hope it will not be necessary to do so again.

BRO. J. F. WAGONER writes that he has lately visited Clinton Co., Ind., and that "nine were immersed into the all-saving name, and others almost persuaded. 'The entrance of thy Word giveth light.' God help us to let the truth be heard, and may his blessing attend its proclamation." We say, Amen.

A GERMAN poet has said, "He is happiest, be he king or peasant, who finds his happiness at home." We rather except to this. We think that a man who carries happiness into his home, must be happier than one who finds it there; because it is more blessed to give than to receive.

THE news from the coke region on the 8th was to the effect that 17000 coke ovens are shut down, and that notices have been posted with skull and crossbones, reading: —"All men who go to work prepare to meet your God." Indeed these are troublous times, and men show by the way they shake their heads that the outlook from a human standpoint discourages them.

A DISPATCH from London April 30, says that the bullet-proof coat invented by a Prussian tailor has just been tested before twenty of the war ministry, the general staff, artillery and engineers. Shots were fired at ten spaces and the trial was a complete success. From a human point of view this will necessitate another mode of warfare; inventive genius will be at a premium again. Some weapon will be wanted that will pierce the coat, and untold millions will be wanted to make the change. Will the people stand it?

THERE are still a few writers who deem it their special business to criticise. If, in the course of writing, a brother makes a statement they do not exactly agree with, instead of writing out their own views clearly and pointedly, they make a personal onslaught and wound the feelings of a friend and brother. Is this right? Is it Christ-like? Is it as you would be done by? But some one will say, Do not write if you are afraid of criticism. That is not the point. Each one who writes should do so with a purpose of doing some good to some one, and by presenting to others your thoughts and the result of your research, kindly and clearly, you are sure to benefit. On the other hand, personal mention, in harsh criticism, is meant to injure the work of another, consequently hurt them.

"THE Second Coming of Christ," which was the "Blessed Hope" of Paul and his brethren, was discussed by the Presbyterian Ministers' Club on Monday the 7th inst., but judging from the newspaper report of it, little divine testimony was presented; but the paper read by Dr. McGrifferth, of Astabula, dealt with the various views that had been advanced on that subject. In the discussion that followed, Dr. Hall said that probably ten thousand articles and books had been written on the subject, and scarcely two of them agreed. Ten thousand different views, and yet we can see that they are for that reason all human views. Oh, why not take the one Divine view, and settle it? Surely such preachers preach a long way from the Bible.

[illegible] and prayed, and prayed, and prayed, and prayed, and yet "would not give the afflicted one a farthing!" they ought to have read what the angel of God said to Cornelius, and saved themselves the trouble of praying and fasting and groaning for nothing: "Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God."

THE brotherhood in these trying times must be careful not to weaken and distract themselves by anticipating what might possibly be —things not yet in sight, and if they could be seen could not be changed. The duties of the hour will keep us busy, if faithfully done. The Lord knew all about it when he said, "Sufficient to the day is the evil thereof."

PRAY, pray, pray we often here enjoined; it is offered as a specific for every ailment, of every person, and of every class of persons. And we have no doubt it would sound very dreadful to be told that prayer will not, cannot give us an interest in Christ. A person out of Christ, has no interest in him; and prayer will not induct him into Christ. It is an awful position to be in, to have no one through whom prayers can be offered to God. This is the position of all who have not, after faith and reformation put on the Lord's Anointed in the adopting ordinance. Oh, how it pains us to hear sinners pray when we cannot make them see what they lack—an interest in Christ, and the way to secure it.

SAD sights have been witnessed in Cleveland of late. Only the most energetic measures could quell the thousands of rioters who were breaking factory windows and ordering all the operatives out. From five to ten thousand would listen to inflamatory speeches on the square and then visit all the works that were in operation, with their weapons in their hands, and several fierce battles have been fought during the week, and the rapidly falling batons and bleeding heads carry back to the dread riots in the old country fifty years ago. Things are in a bad state when granaries groan under their loads, while hundreds of thousands hunger.

"THE sun is the center of the movements of all celestial bodies in the solar system. It is from him that all the energies developed on the surface of the earth and on the other planets incessantly flow without draining their source, and yet all the action on our earth is carried on by the two thousand three hundred millionth part of the force radiated by the sun, for this is all that the earth can grasp of the sun's rays; and it is by this fraction of his mighty power that all the earth's work is done." Reading these lines of the astronomer Guileman we naturally think of him who said, "I am the light of the world." How much of his light and love and power do we comprehend? It is said that when Humboldt was dying, he said "Draw back that curtain, that I may see the sunlight once more." But [illegible] this groaning creation in its [illegible] of death, in its darkness of [illegible] and oppressions and cruelties [illegible] crimes, making even its goodness an object of pity should lustily say, "Draw back the curtain," that the sun of righteousness might shine forth, and lumine this dark vale of tears.

Death's Doings.

It is our painful duty to record the death of Sister Mary Bullock, beloved wife of Bro. James Bullock, of 808 Union Street, Cleveland, Ohio. For a number of years she had been occasionally suffering acutely from dyspepsia, and having in the past winter had a severe attack of la grippe, it aggravated her old trouble so that she could scarcely take any nourishment for several months, and so literally starved to death, while a score of loving hearts were ready to gratify her every wish. Her sufferings are all over now;—she fell asleep in Jesus on Thursday May 3rd, 1894, aged 62 years and one month, leaving the dear husband of her youth to struggle on to the end of life's journey alone. But happily he sorrows not without hope of a joyful reunion when the King in his beauty shall come. A number of years ago they both laid hold of [illegible] set before us, in the gospel and have experienced its sustaining power in all the trials of life.

It is gratifying to know that the dear deceased one not only gave intellectual assent to the truth; she believed with the heart; it so influenced her life that her friends and neighbors took knowledge of her that she had been with Jesus and learned of him. Her gratitude to God for the light that illumined her path induced her to labor faithfully with all who would listen to the joyful sound, with the hope that they too might fall in love with the Truth as it is in Jesus and finally share God's great salvation. We are hopeful that some of the seed found congenial soil.

While strength to express herself remained, it was blessed to witness the power of truth believed while consciously descending into the dark valley. She would sometimes seem to have an overpowering realization of the love of God and of Christ; and on one occasion while reading the 17th chapter of John to her, she exclaimed oh, brother, "why don't we love him more?" Yes; the calm assurance that her name was in the Lamb's Book of life, and that she would in a little while hear his voice and come forth to life free from sorrow and pain and apprehension of parting, was blessed to witness; and excited the wish of all who witnessed it, to die the death of the righteous. She had no long running account to settle with the Lord—no unfinished business on hand when she fell asleep.

The funeral services were held at the Church of the Blessed Hope on Sunday May 6th. It was filled with those anxious to show their love and esteem for one whose kindness of heart and Christian deportment endeared her to all who knew her. Profound attention was given to a discourse founded upon the words in the 27th and 28th verses of Hebrews ix.; we then bade her farewell till the trumpet shall sound, and tenderly laid her away in Lake View Cemetery.

Dear Brother Underwood:

I take pleasure in informing your many readers of the noble and praiseworthy efforts of brother S. R. Clinkenbeard, in proclaiming the unsearchable riches of Christ, throughout Fannin County. He is a man that has the courage of his convictions, and gives them the unadulterated Word with telling effect. The white settlers of the Indian country are calling for him to come over into Macedonia as it were. Yours in the one hope.

T. C. BLAKEY, M. D.

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed find draft for my subscription. I have been a reader of the paper nearly thirty-four years and feel that I cannot do without it. Among the many good letters from the brothers and sisters, I see many familiar names whose acquaintance I made when I first believed. It does me good to know they are alive and holding fast to that which is good. It gives me courage to go on trusting in God who in his own good time will reward the faithful. The time will be short to those looking for the appearing of our Lord from heaven who will redeem us and all mankind from sin and death. Until then we cannot expect anything good from the governments of earth. He will rule in righteousness and bless all as promised in the gospel.

Yours in hope.

S. D. FAHRNEY.

Editor Restitution:

Bro. D. M. Hudler visited the church at Dixon during the first part of April, holding over two Sundays. There is a growing interest in the truth here through his labors. He is very much in earnest, and as one sister says, "He keeps D. M. Hudler in the background and the Word of God in the front;" but his earnestness and love for the truth wins, and we must let people see that we are in earnest if we wish to arrest their attention. At the last meeting, after a very impressive sermon, Bro. Hudler made an earnest call to all to have their names written [illegible] Book of Life, a dear and intelligent lady came forward, thus indicating that she had made a start in the heavenly way, had steadfastly set her heart and mind on eternal things; looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith. Looking unto Jesus! Oh, dear ones, let us daily look unto Jesus. If we look to him we cannot be looking at worldly allurements. As Bro. Joblin says, "Preach Christ, brethren, his life, example, humiliation, suffering and death." Oh lovely theme, this is the only thing that unites us and answers the question, How shall we succeed? God bless you all.

Bro. Hudler started for Ashton, Ill., where he hopes to awaken an interest in truth. Will Bro. Joblin please tell us how Jesus learned obedience by the things which he suffered, and can his children thus learn? Yours in Christian love.

ALICE KERR.

Dear Restitution:

I would like to say a few words to the brothers and sisters through the columns of THE RESTITUTION, the best paper in the world. It is like so many voices speaking from state to state the same gospel and sentiments. I would like so much to meet you all, brothers and sisters, and talk of heavenly things. Let us try to be prepared to meet when Jesus comes. Let us build upon the Rock. Let us stand firm in the liberty wherewith Christ has made us free, not taking again the yoke of bondage, the bondage of sin. If we can have our names written in the Lamb's Book of Life it will be well.

Your Sister, in the Abrahamic faith, waiting for the coming of the rightful heir to David's throne.

SUE TAYLOR.

Editor Restitution:

Enclosed please find $1.50 for subscription to our most valuable paper, THE RESTITUTION, to be sent to some worthy brother or sister who is unable to take it. How sad it makes me feel to hear of any of like precious faith who are unable to have the paper sent to them, when they, like us, enjoy reading it so much, and in many instances it is the only preacher they have aside from God's Word. We wish we were able to send the paper to all such, but we are poor in this world's goods being dependent on day's work for our daily bread. We like many others are isolated from a church of our faith and deprived the privilege of hearing the gospel preached in all its fulness, but we are striving to live in such a way that we may inherit eternal life in the kingdom of God when Jesus comes to be admired in all his saints. Praying for the success of our dearly prized paper, and the cause it defends.

We remain your brother and sister in Christ.

C. E. & M. J. HATCH.

Editor Restitution:

These few lines will inform you of the death of Joseph Elcock, of West Concord, Dodge Co., Minn. He was for over thirty years a constant reader of your paper under the various names by which it has been known in that length of time. He was born in the County Armagh, Ireland, in the year 1813, and at the age of sixteen came to Canada and settled near Spencerville Greenville Co., at which place he married Eleanor Wilson in 1852. In July 1861 he moved to West Concord, Minn., at which place his wife died, Oct. 10, 1885. He died at his home near West Concord, on the 4th of April, 1894, at the age of 81 years. He was a firm believer in the doctrine advocated by THE RESTITUTION.

Yours, Respectfully.

EZRA ELCOCK.

Editor Restitution:

Please find enclosed $1.50 for my subscription. I am heartily in sympathy with the doctrines advocated in THE RESTITUTION, and I was especially interested in B. C. Simonds' article on "When and How are the nations blessed," It was so good and lucid. Bro. W. H. Wilson's "Coming Bride" is simply grand, and a few of us here can say, Amen! and shout glory! So can we to other doctrines advanced by your people, such as baptism by immersion, conditional immortality, no pre-existence of Jesus, the election of a class to rule over the nations, etc. But, brother, many false prophets have risen among us and are scattering the flock. We had several come out of Methodism and after being baptized and doing well for awhile were seduced by a brother who is an apostate to the "Age to come" doctrine. Some are following Russel's teaching, and others are now being led away by pamphlets called the "Flying Roll." In fact we are "sheep without a shepherd." Can you be anything for us? Will you not hear our cry, and "Come over into Macedonia and help us?" There is a great field opened here now for a good man to "earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints." I meet people everywhere who are dissatisfied with their churches and the Salvation Army. We started out to teach THE RESTITUTION doctrine in a nice tent put up by a well to do brother, and for a time had good success, but the adversary began his work, calling it the "Free Gospel Tent." Other preachers were allowed to come, Seventh Day Adventists, under the law, Latter Day Saints, no atonement, First Day, all prophecy fulfilled, Adventists, everything in the past, Flying Roll, man a fallen angel, and Millennial Dawn people, no Lord's coming, until it has become a perfect Babel. A few of us are disgusted, and do not know what to do. Brethren, pray for us. We can still "Delight ourselves in the Lord, knowing that he shall give us the desire of our hearts. * * * for yet a little while and the wicked shall not be, * * * but the meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace." "Now the God of peace that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, * * * make you perfect in every good work to do his will."

Yours in hope of the glory to be revealed at the coming of the Lord.

Bro. Underwood:

It is with great pleasure that I write to inform you that we have been made to rejoice by having a dear sister express a desire to put on Christ in baptism. We called on Brother Wagoner and he came and preached on Saturday evening April 28, and on Sunday morning, after which we went to the river and then Brother Wagoner buried our dear Sister Horner in baptism. After our preaching service in the evening another sister came and demanded baptism and Brother Wagoner baptized her, after which he went home rejoicing. This is in a new place. He has left a good feeling and a deep interest and our prayer is that it may be as bread that is cast upon the waters, bringing a good yield, is the prayer of your Brother in the faith.

DAVID FETTERS.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I am at Ripley, Ill., having just closed an interesting meeting with four more having put on Christ by baptism. The Campbellites began a meeting just two days before I got here, and they told that I was the man that had broken up some three or four of their churches. We asked them to have a friendly discussion which was denied us. We asked them to compare notes which was also denied us. I find many of our brothers and sisters hid away in the Christian church, paying out their money to preach a doctrine that they themselves do not believe. But, alas, the truth is not popular enough. Brothers and sisters there are so many of God's children wedded to a harlot. "Know ye not that your bodies are the members of Christ? shall I then take the members of Christ and make them members of an harlot? God forbid. What! know ye not that he which is joined to a harlot is one body? for two, saith he, shall be one flesh. But he that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit." 1 Cor. vi. 15, 16, 17. "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you. And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Cor. vi. 14–18. Brethren, before any one can come out from among them they must first be among them. Then come out, join himself to the one body, the Church of God, unto it living head which is Christ.

We have a number of good brothers and sisters in Ripley and Cooperstown, but they are nearly all of the class James speaks of in Jas. ii. 5. "Hearken, my beloved brethren, Hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him?" But God has raised up one at that place that seems to be able and willing to bear the burdens of them that labor in word and doctrine, Brother Isaac Fanning, while others are also to do what they are able to do. Sister Jennie Cox and her sister are always ready to do their share, and Dr. H. Bowman and invalid wife are always at their post. May God bless them all is my prayer. Amen.

JOHN POORE.

Editor Restitution:

In reading the various letters in your late issues, I have been encouraged to drop a letter in the drawer. I am living in a city called Troy in New York State with a population of sixty thousand, and it will compare if not go ahead of any city of its size for wickedness, although the city is well supplied with churches of nearly all denominations; and we have got sermons as thick as flies in summer time. We are trying to have them closed up and not allowed to carry on their nefarious business on Sundays. I do not know of any of Abrahamic faith here. I am here alone, and often times feel very lonesome. I am always anxiously waiting for THE RESTITUTION, every week loaded with all the good things, in fact lately we have been having a grand feast with Bro. Joblin's and Bro. Wilson's able articles, and the best of all is that they are in exact accordance with the Scriptures. My prayer is, that they may be spared many years to us to give us meat in due season, they will reap a reward here also in the future There are a few Adventists here who meet every Sunday afternoon at one of the member's houses. I used to attend their meetings till I could endure them no longer. Many of them are members of the orthodox churches. I have great inducements held out to me if I would only send my children to their Sunday schools and myself join their churches. Now how could I join their churches and become one of them, when they deny Christ and his sacrifice for sins? In fact I do not know any doctrines they preach that are in accordance with the Scriptures. They have a form of godliness, but deny the power. The gospel is the power of God unto salvation. Was not the death and resurrection of Christ a portion of the gospel? The Apostle Paul says it was 1 Cor. 15th chapter. Do the orthodox churches believe and teach this? Certainly not, for they do not believe in death. They teach that we are all immortal and live forever, either in happiness or misery. Hence by this teaching they deny the first principles. They have not got the Christ of the Bible, neither have they any sacrifice for their sins. How could I belong to such a body of disbelievers that deny my Lord, deny that he brought immortality to light through the gospel. I could not, nor do not recognize such people as brothers and sisters, and how people who have had their eyes opened and have been brought to a saving knowledge of the truth, and have become the seed of Abraham, can be members of these orthodox churches, or be in any way identified with them I cannot understand. There must be something wrong with them. Brothers and sisters, we must be either on God's side, which is on the side of truth, or we must be on the devil's side, which is on the side of untruth. There is no middle way. There are only two classes, the friends of God and the enemies of God. When we join an orthodox church we become identified with the enemies of God. Brothers and sisters, did you ever look at it in this light? Let us examine ourselves before it is too late. Yours in hope of eternal life.

OBITUARY.

Mildred T. Lippincott, nee Wood, was born near Culpepper Court House, Virginia, January 7, 1817, and there resided with her parents until Sept. 19, 1839, when she married Joshua C. Lippincott, the marriage taking place at her brother's in Warrenton, Va., and Mr. and Mrs. Lippincott commenced their journey in life, seeking a pioneer's home in the sparsely settled west, moving to and settling in Washington County, Indiana. Living there 18 years, and having been blessed with a family of two sons and five daughters, and burying one of their daughters, in her infancy in that time. Mr. and Mrs. Lippincott not being fully satisfied to make that place a home for their life time, they with their two sons and four daughters which constituted their family at that time, move to what was known in the early history of Nebraska as Corning City, living there four years, then moved on their present farm where the deceased so peacefully went to sleep to wait the resurrection.

Mrs. Lippincott is the mother of nine children, four sons and five daughters, and celebrated her golden wedding Sept. 19, 1889. The deceased was 77 years and 20 days old and leaves her loving husband and partner through nearly 55 years of her life, aged 83 years, and four sons and three daughters to survive her; the youngest child being 38 years of age. What a comfort to the loving mother and a blessing to the aged father that all their children were present to care for their loving mother in her last illness, with the exception of the eldest daughter, Mrs. Mary A. Fletcher, who was detained at home by sickness in her family. The deceased through all her life showed by her acts and admonitions to her children that she was a conscientious Christian and made the Bible her standard. Sister Lippincott had been a reader of THE RESTITUTION for at least 25 years. She was brought to the knowledge of the Kingdom through the labors of W. P. Shuckey, and died in the firm belief that her Master would soon return to call, when she would answer.

ALMUS ADAMS.

Died at her home in Irving, Ia., May 1, 1894, Mrs. Jeptha Edmonds in the 90th year of her age.

"Grandma" Edmonds was born at Homer, Courtland County, N. Y., in June 1804, consequently lacked only about one month of being 90 years old. She was first married to Abel Royce in 1824. Mr. Royce died in 1850 leaving her a widow with four children. She remained a widow for 7 years, providing and caring for the children until Sept. 1857, when she was again married. This time to Jeptha Edmonds. After 12 years Mr. Edmonds died in 1869 leaving her a widow again. During this time the family had moved from New York to Illinois in 1850, and to Iowa in 1854, and have lived in Irving ever since, excepting a short time at Marion.

During a number of years "Grandma" made her home with Mrs. Levi. Marsh, but of late years lived with her two daughters Mrs. Felker and Miss Hattie Royce where her home was when she died.

She was baptized by the writer in 1887, at the advanced age of 83 years since which time she has been a faithful member of the Church of God at Irving. She died in faith and sleeps in Jesus. We spoke words of comfort and hope to a large circle of friends; then we tenderly laid her to rest on a bright May afternoon in the Irving cemetery to await the future life and a crown of glory.

Opportunity.

Dear Opportunity, thou camest one day,
Was well to gain I could not see thy face,
I did not know of all thy gifts and graces;
I did not hail thee as a helper may,
I welcomed not, but sent thee on thy way.

If I had known! The moon in golden noon;
But—no—the fragrant lilies from sky and sun;
No room in Bethel, for those set out there;
Yet would I meet thee now with unveiled brow,
And on my knees for very gladness bow.

Upon what the dust snappered then,
Poised my right to overtake thine own;
In all thy name, so dear and tender grown,
Did then, feet gone beyond my voice and ken—
Ere thou had gone and came back again?

The Upright Shall Dwell in the Land.

"Do not err my beloved brethren. Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of light, with whom is no variableness neither shadow of turning." James i. 16, 17.

"Well, my reward in heaven at death friend, do you believe the inspired James when he makes the above assertion?"

"No sir; I believe we get our reward at death in heaven."

"But don't you believe David when he says in Psalms xxxvii. 9, 11, 22, 29, 34, that the upright shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever, when the wicked have been cut off; and the wise Solomon, who reiterates what his father David says in Prov. ii. 21; x. 30; xi. 31? But perhaps you would like to have some proof from the New Testament. Christ, in his sermon on the Mount, (Matt. v. 5) says; 'Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth,' and John, in his vision on the Isle of Patmos, in Rev. v. 10, promises us the same when he says: 'And hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth.' When? Why at his appearing at the last trump. 1 Thess. iv. 16. 'For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first.' Now, with all this proof that we are rewarded on earth, do you still doubt?"

"Yes sir, for I can cite Scripture which says our reward, treasure, house, hope, life, crown, inheritance and conversation are in heaven, and that we go there to receive them."

"All right, let me hear them."

"Well, Matt. v. 11, 12, says, 'Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven,' which proves that your reward is there. Then Matt. vi. 19, 20, also says: 'Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal. For where your treasure is there will your heart be also.' You see by that that our treasure is in heaven also. Do you believe these Scriptures?"

"Yes sir, I believe them. I reject nothing."

"Very well, then, we will see what Paul says in 2 Cor. v. 1: 'For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle was dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.' Then for proof of our hope in heaven read Col. i. 5: 'For the hope which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof you heard me before in the Word of the truth of the gospel.' The inspired Paul can also, in the same epistle (Col. iii. 2, 3), give us promise of life in heaven: 'Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. For you are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God.' In his epistle to Timothy (2 Tim. iv. 8) he says: 'Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness.' What more proof do you want in regard to the crown that is waiting you there? Peter, that inspired disciple of Christ, also promises us an inheritance, in 1 Peter i. 3, 4: 'Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you.' And lastly the reliable Paul says, in Phil. iii. 20, 'For our conversation is in heaven.' For proof that we go to heaven to receive these I will refer you to John xiv. 1 to 4: 'Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also. And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know.' Do you accept all these Scriptures I have quoted?"

"Yes sir. But, my friend, let us see if we cannot get further light upon this subject, beginning with the reward. Matt. xvi. 27 says: 'For the Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works.' When will he come? In the last days, at the sounding of the trumpet. 1 Thess. iv. 16. If we are to receive our reward here on earth, we will also receive our treasure here. And Rev. xxii. 12, says: 'Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his works shall be.' For proof that our house comes to us here, read 2 Cor. v. 2: 'For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed with our house, which is from heaven.' Then Paul says, in Titus ii. 13: 'Looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ.' Now, let us see what Paul in Col. iii. 4, says of our life: 'For ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God,' which you presented as proof of your position; but let us read on: 'When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory.' And I believe 2 Tim. iv. 8, can give us more light on the crown than you quoted. Let us see: 'Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing.' Let us finish your quotation of 1 Peter i. 4, 5, in regard to an inheritance: 'To an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time.' Now there remains only the conversation. We will see what we can do with it, by quoting all the verse you referred to to prove your side of it. Phil. iii. 20: 'For our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ.' It only remains now to prove that we do not go away for our reward, and we will do so by quoting all of John xiv. 1-4, and not leave out the most important part: 'Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also. And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know.' Now, my heaven at death friend, can you not accept what the inspired James says: 'Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights?' But when I raised my eyes he was gone, as the accusers of the woman brought before Jesus went out when he told them that he that was without sin should cast the first stone. Then came to my mind Paul's saying in 2 Tim. iv. 3, 4: "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables."

Matt. vii. 15, says: "Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves." Yes, "Ye shall know them by their fruits." In that great day of judgment many will say unto him (verses 22, 23): "Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils * * * And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you, depart from me, ye workes of iniquity."

Brethren, we must ever be on the watch and evade these false prophets, for many things will be done which if possible, will "deceive the very elect." We should be "thoroughly furnished unto all good works" (2 Tim. iii. 17), having on the "whole armor of God," as Paul admonishes us in Ephes. vi. 14-18, "Having our loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness, and our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, and above all taking the shield of faith, and the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God (the Bible), praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints."

Your brother in Christ.

BAPTISM.

"If ye then be risen with Christ"—"Buried with him in baptism"—"Planted in the likeness of his death"—"Buried with him in baptism unto death, wherein ye are also risen with him."

This powerful assemblage of passages showing the apostolic view of baptism, reveals as a search light, the papal origin of sprinkling—orthodoxy's substitute for the divine ordinance. Without the idea of immersion the Apostle's words become lifeless, insipid, thoughtless platitudes. Immersion is the basis, the vitality, the thought of each passage. The loss of sprinkling in connection with this evidence compels us to accuse Paul—remarkable for his thoughtful, apt use of words—of indulging in fancy sketches. And right here it is well to remember that in all the Apostle's writings we find that each sentence reveals an earnestness, a sincerity unparalleled for depth and intensity. Every expression, therefore, is apt, concise, striking. He leaves nothing for the fancy or imagination to supply—all is stated, and that powerfully.

Now, in the presence of all this powerful guiding light revealing what baptism is, how can any man, however befogged by theology he may be, plead ignorance of the true, the apostolic baptism? And how miserably little become the arrogant assertions of those who say that the record of Jesus' baptism by John in Jordon does not prove immersion—"That Jesus may have stood in the water," &c.

Do you require more evidence? if so, remember that if an angel of light were commissioned to explain the matter to you, he would have to use language suited to your intelligence, and none could be found plainer than Paul's.

In worldly affairs danger to a few dollars causes you to act with the utmost promptness. Will you while confronted by the grave trifle with God's Word?—remember, "It is for your life."

Stanley E. Bowdle.

"I am He that Liveth and was Dead."

In reading this text the other day several of the words seemed to capitalize themselves in my thought. The letter "I" had in it the echo of a joyous shout, a pean note from a song of victory. It would fain draw all eyes to the speaker—Jesus—look! "I am He!" "I am He that liveth!" "I am He that liveth and was dead!" Set now a corpse before you. Mark how utterly beyond all human help is that lifeless thing, but Jesus has been there. It is laid in the tomb and is covered from sight, but Jesus too has been in the tomb. Imagine then, if you can, that you see that corpse come out of the grave, let the cheeks again be tinged with the rosy lines of health, the step be firm and buoyant, the voice full of gladness, would not a shout go up from the lips of the resurrected one? But there is more than this in the words of Jesus; read on—capitalize the word "Forevermore," and then, you can put the joy into the letter "I" that Jesus has invested it with; you can see the word Liveth, glowing as if it were written with sunbeams, or as if set in silver on a plate of gold. "Behold! I am alive forevermore!" Follow the grand circle of eternity until the brain grows dizzy, and I learn there the meaning of the word "Forevermore!"

There is something in all this for you, dear saints of God, "Fear not," Jesus is the beginning and the end of redemption. All centers in him, he is the whole alphabet of salvation. The "Amen" between the closing clauses, is a shout from the lips of a conqueror,—from the lips of one who has conquered for you, for look you still farther "he has the keys—the keys of Hades and of death!" The sea shall give up its dead. All that are in the grave shall hear this voice of the Son of God. The sunken, sightless eyes will kindle with immortal light, lips that have been dumb for ages will shout, "Where now oh death thy sting? And where oh grave thy victory?" Remolded hands will clasp other remolded hands in unspeakable gladness, and something of the joy that Jesus felt when he said, "I am he that liveth and was dead," will fill the hearts of the resurrected ones, for they too can say, "We are alive forevermore!"

This is what it means to have faith in Christ. If the chains that held him in death have been broken they can be broken for others who are held in the darkness and silence of death. If to him has been shown the path of life, if he has the keys of hades and of death, if the dead are to hear his voice, and to come forth, we know that he has the means and the ability to bring about the resurrection of his people, and to invest them with immortal life.

Acts of the Apostles. Chap. 2.

1. And as the day of Pentecost was being fulfilled they were all with one accord at the same place;

2. And there occurred suddenly from out the heavens a sound of a violently bringing breath as it were, and it filled the whole house where they were seated;

3. And there appeared unto them tongues as though of fire being distributed; and it sat upon each one of them;

4. And they were all filled with sanctified spirit and began to talk with other tongues, even as the spirit gave them utterance.

5. Now there were dwelling in Hierousalam Joudaians, truly reverent men from every nation under the heavens;

6. And when this sound occurred the multitude came together and were confounded, because they each one heard them talking in his own dialect;

7. And they were all astounded and wondering, saying, Are not all these who are talking Galileians?

8. And how do we hear each one his own dialect in which we were begotten?

9. Parthians and Medes and Elamites and those who inhabit Mesopotamia, Joudaia and Kappadokia, Pontos and Asia,

10. Phrugia and Pamphulia, Egypt and the parts of Libus over against Kurene, and the Sojourners, Romans, Joudaians and proselytes,

11. Kretes and Arabians; how do we hear them talking in our own tongues the great things of God?

12. And they were all astounded and perplexed, saying to one another. What can this be going to be?

13. And others jesting said, It is because they are full of new wine.

14. But Petros standing along with the eleven lifted up his voice and sententiously addressed them as follows; Men, Joudians, and all ye who inhabit Hierousalem, let this be known unto you and may ye have marked well my oracular words;

15. For not as ye suppose are these drunken; for it is the third hour of the day;

16. But this is that which was oracularly spoken through the prophet Joel, namely,

17. It will be in the last days, saith God, that I shall pour out from my spirit upon all flesh, and your sons and your daughters will prophesy, and your young men will see in vision-ways, and your elders will have dreams, dreams;

18. And upon my bond-men and and upon my bond-maids in those days I shall pour out from my spirit and they will prophesy:

19. And I shall give prodigies in the heavens above and signs upon the earth below, blood and fire and a breath-vapor of smoke;

20. The sun will have been turned into darkness and the moon into blood before the great and manifest day of the Lord shall have come;

21. And it will be that every one who shall invoke the name of the Lord will have been saved.

22. Men, Israelites may ye have hearkened to these words, Jesous the Nazaraine, a man shown forth from God unto you with works of ability and prodigies and signs, which God through him wrought in your midst, even as ye yourselves know, him with the determined counsel and fore-knowledge of God delivered up through the hand of transgressors ye nailed and lifted up,

24. Whom God stood up, when he had loosed the woes of death, because it was not possible for him to be held by it;

25. For David saith in respect to him, I foresaw my Lord constantly before me, because he is at my right hand, that I should not be shaken.

26. Therefore my heart was made joyous and my tongue made glad, and moreover my flesh will pitch its tabernacle upon hope;

27. Because thou wilt not leave my soul in Hades nor allow thy Holy One to see corruption;

28. Thou hast made known unto me ways of life; thou wilt fill me with rejoicing with thy face.

29. Men, brethren it is possible to say with boldness to you concerning the patriarch Daveid that he both came to his end and was buried and his memorial-tomb is with us this day,

30. He then being a prophet and knowing that God had sworn to him with an oath that of the fruit of his loins, one according to flesh should sit upon his throne,

31. Foresaw and talked about the resurrection of the Christ, how that he neither was left in Hades nor in his flesh saw corruption.

32. This Jesous God stood up whose witnesses we all are.

33. Exalted thus to the right hand of God, and having received the promise of the sanctified spirit from the Father he hath poured out this which ye see and hear.

34. For Daveid hath not ascended to heaven; but he saith, The Lord said unto my Lord, sit thou at my right hand,

35. Until I have made thine enemies a foot-stool for thy feet.

36. Then let all the house of Israel know assuredly that God hath made this Jesous whom ye crucified both Lord and Christ.

37. And when they had heard they felt compunction of heart, and said unto Petros and the rest of the apostles, What shall we do, men, brethren?

38. And Petros said unto them, May ye have repented and may each one of you have been baptized in the name of Jesous Christ for a remission of your sins, and ye will receive the gift of the sanctified spirit.

39. For unto you and your children is the promise, and to all those affar off as many as the Lord our God shall call.

40. And with many other words he went through the testimony and exhorted them saying, May ye have been saved from this crooked generation.

41. Then those who had accepted his Word were baptized; and there were added that day about three thousand souls.

42. And they were continuing steadfastly in the teaching of the apostles and the partnership, the breaking of the bread and the votive-prayers;

43. And fear occurred to every soul and many prodigies and signs occurred through the apostles;

44. And all those who were experiencing faith were at the same place, and holding all things in common;

45. And their possessions and belongings they were selling and distributing to all even as any one had need; (or a use)

46. And day after day steadfastly continuing with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house they partook of sustenance with gladness and singleness of heart,

47. Praising God and having grace toward all the royal-people. And the Lord was adding those who were being saved daily at the same time.

COMMENT.

Compare 2nd verse here with C. V. and R. V. as the difference is material and fundamental.

"Being distributed" instead of "parting asunder" R. V.

"Filled with sanctified spirit" instead of "the Holy Spirit" or "Holy Ghost" R. V. C. V.

"Occurred" instead of "was heard" R. V.

"The great things" instead of "the mighty works" R. V.

"What can this be going to be" instead of "what meaneth this" R. V.

"Sententiously addressed" instead of "spake forth unto" R. V. That is, addressed them with pointed aporisms

"Oracular words" instead of "words" merely R. V.

"Oracularly spoken through" instead of "spoken of" R. V.

The 17, 18, 19, 20 and 21st verses are not blank verse either in the Old or New. This passage is here quoted verbatim from the Greek of the Old Covenant, and I don't think that Peter ever dreamed of it being poetry.

"From my spirit" instead of "of my spirit."

"In vision ways" instead of "visions" R. V.

"Elders" instead of "old men" R. V. Daniel was an "elder" at twenty-five or before. There is another word for "an old man."

"Bond-men" and "bond-maids" instead of "servants" and "handmaidens" R. V.

"Shall and will" all reversed here. This is prophesy.

"Prodigies" instead of "wonders" R. V.

"A breath-vapor" instead of "vapor" merely R. V.

"Manifest" instead of "notable" R. V.

"Invoke" instead of "call on" R. V.

"Will have been saved" instead of "shall be saved" R. V.

"Shown forth from God" instead of "approve of God" R. V.

"Works of ability" instead of "mighty works" R. V.

"Which God through him" instead of "God by him" R. V.

"With the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God" instead of "by etc." R. V.

"Delivered up through the hands, etc." instead of "ye by the hand etc." R. V.

"Ye nailed and lifted up" instead of "did crucify and slay" R. V.

"Whom God stood up" instead of "Whom God raised up" R. V.

"Woes" instead of "pangs" R. V.

"I foresaw" instead of "beheld" R. V.

"Pitch its tabernacle upon hope" instead of "dwell in hope" R. V. which destroys the very significant figure used here.

"Memorial-tomb" instead of "tomb" merely R. V. not unimportant here.

"One according to flesh should sit" instead of "he would set one etc." R. V. Omitting "according to the flesh" entirely.

"Whose witnesses we all are" instead of "Whereof, etc." R. V.

"Ascended to heaven" instead of "into the heavens" R. V.

"A footstool" instead of "the footstool" R. V.

"For" instead of "unto a remission, etc." R. V.

"May ye have been saved" instead of "save yourselves" R. V.

"Partnership" instead of "fellowship" R. V. as clearly taught in the context here.

"Votive-prayers" instead of "prayer" merely R. V.

"Occurred through the apostles" instead of "Done by the apostles" R. V.

"From house to house" instead of "at home" R. V.

"Grace toward all" instead of "favor with all" R. V.

"Day by day" is the same idiom as "from house to house."

Chas. Gardner.

"The Quality of Mercy is not Strained."

There was much more truth known and understood during the "Renaissance" or "Reformation" period, than is generally supposed. I see The Restitution quotes Hagenbach's "History of Doctrines" to show that the Socinians denied that immortality was the original endowment of man. Here is a quotation from the Encyclopedia Britanica, article "Calvin" by W. Lindsay Alexander, D. D., one of the Bible revisers. "Nor was Servetus the only errorist whom Calvin endeavored to confute. The Anabaptists of Germany had spread into France and were disseminating many wild and fanatical [illegible] among those who had seceded from the church of Rome. Among other notions which they had imbibed was that of a sleep of the soul after death. To Calvin this notion appeared so pernicious that he composed and published a treatise in refutation of it under the title of Psychopannychia. In this work he chiefly dwells upon the evidence from Scripture in favor of the belief that the soul retains its intelligent consciousness after its separation from the body."

The Servetus spoken of here was the gentleman that Mr. Calvin had burned to death at the stake at Geneva. The biographer of Calvin in the present instance claims however that he did not approve of burning him, but, "sought to substitute death by the sword" (decapitation) but, "that the decision of

The completion of the new Siberian railroad to connect St. Petersburg with the Sea of Japan will bring about great economic changes and possibly even greater ones of a political character. Probably before many years of the next century have elapsed this line will have opened up to civilization a considerable part of the vast natural resources of Southern Siberia and Central Asia and doubtless the greater share of the benefit will be reaped by the empire of the Czar. The section of country traversed by the line is far from being the uniformly barren waste it is widely understood to be. It contains vast stretches of fertile soil and rich mines of coal, iron, and other metals. The former can be cultivated up to the point of maximizing a large population and having a big surplus for export to other countries, while the mines may develop untold stores of mineral wealth to compete with the products of other countries than Russia in Europe. The gold product will swell the world's available supply, the iron ores will be melted by the aid of the coal, and the product fashioned into hundreds of shapes for use in manufacturing processes and transporation. There even may be a rush of migration not only from other portions of the great Russian empire but from distant lands to share in the prosperity of the new country, new in the sense of knowledge of its possibilities for comfort if not as a territorial discovery. The land which the original Aryan migrants left to the east of them when they turned southward towards Persia and India may prove to millions of their descendants one of the most attractive areas on the face of the globe.

Of course the new route of transporation will open up to old Russia and other countries in Europe a vast volume of commerce with the interior of China, capture much of the trade that now reaches Europe by the ocean route and the Suez Canal, and enlarge it by its increase of facilities for distribution to an augmented number of consumers. Russia thus will become a much more important fact than now in the world's commerce, and doubtless that will be accompanied by great internal changes of government, freedom of commerce being inconsistent with political despotism. The people of the new settlements will be better able to govern themselves than are those of the old ones, and historically this means that they will find out the way to do it. One may think of the possibility that the result of the development in Southern Siberia will be the establishment of comparatively free institutions like those of Australia and Canada if they do not rise to the breadth of liberty attained in the United States, that China thus attacked by the civilizing process on its northern border will become leavened with progressive ideas, and that the wave will spread southward to India, taking in on its way thither the interior countries that now are committed to the most conservative type of ancient orientalism in matters of faith and practice.

All this points to great changes in the control of vast areas of country, though it is difficult to guess intelligently what those changes will be. At the first blush it might be said that the long cherished ambition for Russian control of India is to be realized in a more complete fashion than would have been thought possible up to a few years ago, and that this will be led up to by a seizure of Constantinople and Russian dominance in the Mediterranean. But not necessarily this any more than the filling up of the dominion of Canada means or can mean an extension of British supremacy south of the present Canadian border. The change of conditions induced by the settling-up process may be so radical as not to minister to a spread of the Muscovite rule southward from Siberia, though the civilizing influence of the commercial change may be all the greater and more extensive. For aught any one can tell, the new Siberia may be nearly Asian in its form of government by the time the solidifying [illegible] for this is not lessened by the severity of the despotism now the rule in Siberia as in European Russia, for the greater the oppression the more likely an effort to get from under it when once a people are intelligent enough to appreciate the blessings of self-government.—Chicago Tribune, May 6.

Sow seed. Send THE RESTITUTION to some one who is a stranger to God's truths, and perhaps from this may grow a desire on their part to accept them.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

EVANGELIST FUND.

We whose names are hereunto subscribed, prompted by a love of truth, and prayerfully desiring the salvation of our fellow beings, agree to pay into the hands of our Conference Treasurer L. B. Boggs, Argos, Indiana, the several sums herein pledged as free-will offerings to a fund to be devoted to sounding out the Word of reconciliation by the tongue of the truest Evangelist. These contributions to be paid within one year from Nov. 18, 1893.

☞It is necessary once more to call attention to the "important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

Kansas Evangelist Fund.

This fund is raised for the purpose of sending an evangelist to isolated brethren that are desirous of having the Gospel proclaimed in their vicinity and are not able financially to bear the expense.

Those wishing to have an evangelist sent to them, can correspond with the Secretary, L. A. Chaplin, Ashton, Kansas. Those wishing to contribute to this fund may send the amount to the Treasurer, W. H. Bernard, Oxford, Kansas.

Announcement.

The annual conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will be held at Nevada, Story Co. Nevada is on the C & N. W. R. R. 20 miles west of Marshalltown and 8 miles east of Ames. This meeting will last ten days, commencing June 7, 1894, and will be the most important meeting we ever had. The Young Men's educational work, tent work, new hymn book, and other important matters will be considered. Brethren and sisters, we need your presence and counsel. We are living in a time when the cause of Christ demands that every one do his duty. It is true we have pleaded year after year and helped to carry the burden of work for our Master, but the burden was light and you found rest and peace in toil. But there are some isolated ones to whom this privilege has not come in many years, to you we say come to the meeting. We want to see your faces and hear your voices in our social meetings. As you shall tell us of your faith and hope. Make an extra effort, begin your plans now. It may be the last conference till Jesus comes. Come, spend a week in the tented grove with those of like precious faith. It will rest you, and strengthen you in the Divine life. A full program will be published in due time.

For the Committee,
A. J. EYCHANER.

The Third Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God in Neb. will be held at Moorefield, June 15 to 17, 1894. Moorefield is on a branch of the B. & M. R. R., 50 miles west of Holdridge. Any one coming by rail notify Bro. A. Shultz at least one week before the meeting and you will be received and cared for.

Although this meeting is not in as central a point as heretofore, still, by commencing now and making an extra effort all can get there. Meetings will be held in the big tent except the business meeting which will be held at Bro. Morgan's school-house at 2 P. M. on Saturday as usual.

All arrangements will be made for the next annual conference and other important business transacted. It is expected that a full attendance will be present.

ALBERT ADAMS, Pres.
J. J. CADY, Sec'y.

The North District Quarterly Conference of the Church of God, will be held, D. v., at Blair, Neb., commencing Friday evening, June 1st and continue over Sunday. Those coming from a distance should write to Brother John Mehrens, Blair, Neb., as to place of meeting etc. The State Evangelist is expected to be present to preach the Word. Brethren, you cannot spend two or three days more profitably than by attending this meeting. There is a large and prosperous Church at Blair and we feel assured that all who come will receive a kind welcome, a hospitable entertainment.

J. J. CADY,
Sec'y Neb. State Con.

Another year has nearly rolled around since the annual meeting of the Michigan Conference was held. Death has been doing its work among us, and some are now sleeping that were accustomed to [illegible] with us, how many more will lay their burdens down e'er another year will pass. God only knows, this we do know, that the left ones must work with still greater zeal and energy as the ranks are all the time being lessened, so let every lover of the Truth be at their post ready for duty at the old gathering place in Dutton, Kent Co., Mich. Meeting will begin Thursday evening, May 31st and continue over Sunday. Such a few hours to spend together, but we can do much if we all come with the one thought to further the cause of Christ. Not altogether to get good, but determined to give as much as we receive, then as is already predicted we will have a grand meeting. Those coming from the south on the G. R. and I. R. R. will be met at Carlisle Station in afternoon Thursday if they will notify me in time. The train reaches Carlisle at [illegible] 1 o'clock P. M. If any should wish to go on to Grand Rapids, the train will leave the city for Dutton at 5:20 P. M. Dutton is on the M. C. R. R. Those coming from the east, can reach here at 5:00 A. M. 1:15 P. M. and [illegible]

Brethren, the King's business is very urgent this year, and it is very important that all who possibly can will be in attendance from the first meeting. We expect several new converts present and want them to see that we are alive to the times in which we are living. Let each Church send at least one delegate with report of their standing during the past year. The ladies of the tithing society are doing considerable, let them be present with their report if they have not saved more than 50cts. It is the Lords and will be accepted by him. The friends here are prepared to keep all who may come, and we hope every bed, and couch, and rug, and corner will be full. Brethren awake, awake, and herald out once more the glad tidings of a coming King.

MARY A. WOODWARD, Sec.

The third quarterly conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith in Indiana, will be held at the Antioch meeting house five miles south of Plymouth, commencing on Friday June 8, 1894, and continue over the following Sunday. Invitation is extended to all of like precious faith and all others who wish to enjoy a good meeting. Come and may God bless our efforts.

None to Sit on the Throne of David.

A brother in Christ writes to me, saying, that some one is sending him a regular publication which advocates the doctrine that our blessed Lord Jesus is the son of Joseph according to the flesh, in place of being God's beloved Son. He sends me the magazine and requests that I write a word of warning against this doctrine, as it is probable that these papers are being circulated among other RESTITUTION subscribers.

Why should we warn the people? Because the above doctrine is adverse to every vital principle of our saving faith. If he is Joseph's fleshly son, he is not the Christ, and has no claim whatever, to David's throne, and hence the "Gospel of the Kingdom," is null and void as a saving faith. I will now submit to your Bible proof showing that I am correct.

In Jer. xxii. 29, 30, the Lord God issues the following proclamation to the "earth, earth, earth," concerning Jehoiakim, king of Judah:

"O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the Lord. Thus saith the Lord, Write ye this man childless, a man that shall not prosper in his days: for no man of his seed shall prosper, sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling any more in Judah."

The phrase: "No man of his seed," covers his entire posterity without an exception, like the sentence: "Ruling any more in Israel," covers all time.

I will now submit another declaration from the Lord God of heaven and earth confirming the above, and these messages coming to us from such a source, must be received without question.

Read Jer. xxxvi. 30: "Therefore thus saith the Lord of Jehoiakim king of Judah; he shall have none to sit upon the throne of David: and his dead body shall be cast out in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost."

The phrase: "He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David," is broad, comprehensive, and emphatic, and cannot possibly admit of a single exception.

Joseph is of the seed of Jehoiakim, in a direct line, and if Jesus is his son according to the flesh, he also is of the seed of Jehoiakim, and God positively declares: "No man of his seed shall prosper, sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling any more in Judah."

In proof that Joseph is of the seed of Jechonias, see his genealogy in Matt. i. 11-16.

"And Josias begat Jechonias and his brethren about the time they were carried away to Babylon: And after they were brought to Babylon, Jechonias begat Salathiel; and Salathiel begat Zorobabel; And Zorobabel begat Abiud: and Abiud begat Eliakim; and Eliakim begat Azor; And Azor begat Sadoc; and Sadoc begat Achim; and Achim begat Eliud; And Eliud begat Eleazar; and Eleazar begat Matthan; and Matthan begat Jacob; And Jacob begat Joseph the husband of Mary, of whom was born Jesus, who is called Christ."

In verse 16 you will find that it says, "and Jacob begat Joseph," but it does not say that Joseph begat Jesus, that is assumed by those who so teach without proof.

You will all doubtless observe that the above proof is straight, and to the point, it requires no special pleading, and twisting to bring it into line. Therefore, to be a fleshly son of Joseph carries with it no title to David's throne.

Whose Son must he be then? See Luke i. 32: "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his Father David." From this we learn that he must be "the Son of the Highest, and the Son of David. John repeatedly declared that he is "the only begotten Son of God," if he is God's "begotten Son," he is not Joseph's begotten Son, a man cannot be the "begotten son" of two fathers.

When the angel informed Mary that she should be the mother of this child, it was a question in her mind how this could be, seeing she was not a married woman. "Then said Mary unto the angel, How shall this be, seeing I know not a man? And the angel answered and said unto her, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God." Luke i. 34, 35.

Mary's difficulty was explained by being informed that that which should be born of her should be effected by the overshadowing power of the "Highest," and "therefore," or for that reason, he should "be called the Son of the Highest."

The prophetic vision of the Psalmist saw this day when he said: "I will declare the decree; the Lord hath said unto me, Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee." (not Joseph).

In John iii. 16, we read: "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (How would it sound to say God gave Joseph's only begotten Son, etc?)

The Father says himself, "Thou art my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." If such was the case, why didn't he say: Thou art Joseph's beloved son in whom I am well pleased?

In Mark xiv. we read: "The high priest asked and said unto him, Art thou the Son of the Blessed? And Jesus said I am."

In John xx. 31, we read: "These words are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God." If he were the Son of Joseph he could not be the Christ,—the heir to David's throne, "For no man of his seed shall prosper sitting on the throne of David, and ruling any more in Judah." God promised that throne to his Son, not Joseph's son, because his son would be Jechonias' seed, and "He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David," says the Lord God Almighty, whose Word never fails. Peter says, "We believe and are sure that thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Peter was quite "sure" about this matter, that he was both "the Christ," and "the Son of the living God." And also that on account of so believing "ye might have life through his name."

Therefore, if we would have "life through his name," he must be believed in both as "the Christ," and "the Son of the living God." If we believe in him as Joseph's begotten son, we cannot believe in him as God's only begotten Son," and also, if we believe in him as Joseph's son we cannot believe in him as "the Christ," because he would then be Jechonias' seed. Eternal life can only come through God's Son; Jechonias' seed or son can never give the life everlasting to fallen man.

Another thing we notice in regard to those who would make out Jesus to be of the seed of Jechonias, that they scruple not to erase from God's Word every passage which contradicts their God-dishonoring, and absolutely dangerous doctrine. Their procedure creates distrust, and destroys confidence in God's Word. A doctrine which requires a wholesale mutilation of God's Holy Word, you can safely set it down as a false doctrine.

As the blessed Jesus! the Christ! the honored Son of the Eternal Father! I would proclaim his name from the lofty mountains. I would have it ring through the valley, and echo over hill and plain, and re-echo from grove, vale, rock, and every high tower, until all the earth may join in a chorus of praise for this matchless Son of God's love.

That dear name is a foundation rock upon which we can safely build, it is a shield from the storm, it is a rich treasure filled with boundless stores of good. It is a sweet name that is rest to the weary, it soothes the wounded heart, it banishes fear, it is a precious name that is restful to contemplate. He bids the weak be strong, he turns darkness to light, he gives songs "for sighing," he will set the captive free, he will break oppression, he will rule in equity and justice, mercy and truth, will encircle his throne like a girdle of light.

"Mighty victor! reign forever;
Crowned with glory ever more;
Never shall thy people, never Cease to sing what thou hast done."

Acts of the Apostles. Chap. 3.

1. Now Peiros and Joannes were going up into the temple at the hour for the votive-prayer, the ninth namely,

2. And a certain man of prominence who was lame from his mother's womb was being carried; whom they were accustomed to place daily at the door of the temple, called the Beautiful (lit sensonable beauty) door that he might solicit alms of those going this way into the temple.

3. When he saw Peiros and Joannes about to enter into the temple he asked to receive alms (lit an act of mercy and he got it lit)

4. And Peiros regarding him attentively along with Joannes said, Look at us.

5. And he gave heed to them expecting to receive something from them.

6. And Peiros said, silver and gold are not mine, but that which I have I am giving thee. In the name of Jesous Christ the Nazraine walk.

7. And laying hold of his right hand he raised him up; and straightway his feet and ankles were strengthened,

8. And leaping he stood and walked, and entered along with them into the temple, walking and leaping and praising God.

9. And all the royal-people saw him walking and praising God,

10. And they recognized him as the one who was accustomed to sit for alms at the gateway Beautiful of the temple: And they were filled with awe and ecstasy at what had occurred to him.

11. And as he was holding onto Peiros and Joannes all the royal-people ran with them to the porch called Solomon's dumbfounded.

12. And when Peiros saw it he made answer to the royal-people, as follows: Men, Israelites, why do ye wonder at this or why do ye gaze at us, as though in our own ability or good reverence they had caused him to walk?

13. The God of Habraam, Isaak and Jakob, the God of our fathers hath glorified his child Jesous, whom ye delivered up and denied before the face of Pilatos, after he had decided to release him.

14. Ye denied the Saint and justified One and requested a man who was a murderer to be given you as a favor,

15. And slew the chief-leader of the life; whom God hath awakened from among the dead, whose witnesses we are.

16. And through the faith in his name, hath his name strengthened this one whom ye behold and know; and the faith which is through him hath given him this wholeness in the presence of you all;

17. And now, brethren, I know that ye acted ignorantly even as did also your rulers,

18. And God hath fulfilled in this wise the things which he foretold through the mouth of all his prophets his Christ would suffer.

19. May ye have repented therefore, and reformed, that your sins may be wiped out, so that periods of refreshing may have come from the face of the Lord,

20. And he may send Jesous the Christ elected for you,

21. Whom the heavens must entertain until times of restoration of all the things which God hath talked through the mouth of his saints the prophets since there was a breathing-space (or breathing time).

22. Mouses for instance said, A prophet will the Lord our God stand up from among your brethren, like unto me as it were: Him will (or shall) ye hear according to all that he shall talk to you;

23. And it will be that every soul that shall not hearken to that prophet will have been utterly destroyed from among the royal-people,

24. And all the prophets moreover from Samouel and from those on down after him, as many as talked also told of these days.

25. Ye are the sons of the prophets and of the covenant which God covenanted with your fathers, saying unto Habraam, and in thy seed will all the families of the earth have been blessed.

26. Unto you first God, when he had raised up his child, sent him blessing you, in case ye each one turn away from your wickednesses.

COMMENT.

"Man of prominence" instead of "a man" merely R. V.

"Walked" instead of "began to walk" R. V.

"They recognized" instead of "they took knowledge of" R. V.

"Which" instead of "which" R. V. This never was good English.

"The gateway Beautiful" instead of "the Beautiful gateway." I don't understand that the gateway was so named because it was more beautiful than the other gateways.

The idea of "seasonable" the literal meaning of the word translated "Beautiful" is very significant here in connection with this event narrated.

"Ecstasy" instead of "amazement" R. V. used with a special significance also here, it being the old term to indicate the prophetic state.

"The Saint and Justified One" instead of "the Holy and Righteous One."

"To be granted as a favor" instead of "to be granted" merely R. V.

"Chief-leader" instead of "Prince" R. V.

"Whom God hath awakened from among the dead" instead of "whom God raised from the dead" R. V. which is not the same thought by any means.

"Whose witnesses we are" instead of "Whereof we are witnesses" R. V. for the same reason. It does not convey the true thought of the text.

"And through the faith in his name" instead of "by faith in his name" R. V.

A whole system of theology might turn on this difference of translation.

Why say "wot" for "know" in these days in one verse and "know" in another verse?

"From the face of the Lord" instead of "from the presence of the Lord" R. V.

"Elected" instead of "appointed" R. V.

"Entertain" instead of "receive" merely R. V. It is in the Word.

"Through the mouth" instead of "by the mouth" R. V.

"Since there was a breathing-space" instead of "Since the world began" R. V.

Aion cannot mean "a world" by any stretch of the imagination. The writer here did not have in mind the creation of the world but the placing of mankind upon it, or the brent 'ag creation.

"Like unto me as it were" instead of "like unto me" exactly R. V.

"Will all the families etc." instead of "shall" R. V. This is prophecy.

"Child" instead of "servant" R. V. more significant here as well as literal, meaning born in the household of faith.

"Blessing you in case ye each one turn from etc" instead of "to bless you in turning away every one of you etc." R. V.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Dear Restitution:

I have been urged repeatedly by evangelists to report through the papers, as my old friends scattered abroad were inquiring for me, wishing to know whether I am alive, and still in the faith.

My old friends, all the way from eastern Maine to the far west and sunny south, have during the last few years been falling like the autumn leaves. There can be but few now living who remember the weary pilgrims they called Brother and Sister John Howell, and so warmly welcomed to their firesides, to their camp and other meetings while we were traveling through summer's heat and facing the cruel wintry blasts in trying to rescue the perishing. My husband fell with his armor on. After preaching his last sermon to a large congregation in Poultney, Vt., from Rev. iii. 4, 5, in closing with a thrilling exhortation, he remarked to his tearful listeners, "If I never preach again I am clear from the blood of souls." Since that time many friends who expected to live to see the coming of the "King in his beauty" have been obliged to meet and yield to the conquering power of the king of terrors, but, we have one friend who lives. One who can die no more. One from whom the tongue of scandal can never separate us, the tradacer never carries his foul messages to Jesus.

"He that was rich for our sakes became poor that we through his poverty might be made rich." Behold the royal and legal heir promised by the oath of Jehovah heir to David's throne, born in a lowly manger, and while dispensing blessings to the afflicted and suffering every where, had not where to lay his own weary head, not even the comforts of foxes and birds of the air. We find him always attending to his Father's business. In gloomy Gethsemene when he declared his "soul was exceeding sorrowful, even unto death, and sweating as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground." How short but full of blest submission his prayer, what a lesson it teaches us! If it be possible let this cup pass, nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt." His friends who he had chosen to watch with him through that awfully trying hour slept. While his agony was so great that an angel was sent from glory to impart strength for the trying ordeal before him. He was fulfilling Scripture at every step. He declared he "could pray the Father and he would presently give him twelve legions of angels, but how then shall the Scriptures be fulfilled—that thus it must be. The Scripture must be fulfilled, the obstacle to man's salvation on God's part must actually be removed, by the atonement of Christ through his sufferings and death, not by Omnipotent power but an apparatus of means. We behold him mocked before a haughty Herod. His sacred brow pierced by the thorny crown, scourged and condemned at Pilate's bar, then led forth to Calvary's rugged brow, and while suspended upon the cross by the cruel nails driven through the quivering nerves, in his bleeding hands and feet, listen to his prayer for his enemies, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do." Finally from dying lips comes the agonized wail "My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me?" and his sufferings are ended. Where is there a heart so hardened that it will not become broken and contrite by reflecting upon the character, the cross and sufferings of Christ. Even the sun was veiled in mourning and not permitted to shine upon the awfully solemn scene. Again in fulfillment of Scripture on the morning of the third day, he bursts the bars of death, Joseph's new sepulcher hewn out of a rock could not hold him. The great stone was rolled away. Bright messengers were there, not to impart strength to the fainting one, but to proclaim the sublimest message that ever saluted mortal ears, "He is not here, he is risen." O the glorious import of those three words. How they illuminate the dark portals of the tomb by presenting the hope of the gospel. "He is risen," and become the first fruits of the great harvest, because he lives we shall live also. The obstacles to our salvation are removed. God has by his atonement demonstrated his willingness and desire to save, but the best means must be used and applied. More than one hundred texts in the New Testament positively affirm it. The right use of the means is within the reach of all. Man's agency is used in affecting his salvation. God deals with us as with rational creatures. "He that believeth on him is not condemned, but he that believeth not is condemned already because he hath not believed on the only begotten Son of God." He said to his ancient people, "Cast away from you all your transgressions whereby ye have transgressed, and make a new heart and spirit, for why will ye die, O house of Israel?" "As I live saith the Lord God I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked but that the wicked turn from his evil way and live. Turn ye, turn ye, from your evil ways for why will ye die, O house of Israel." Again he says, "O Israel thou hast destroyed thyself but in me there is help." They would not accept the help. What earnest pleading! It would seem from the language as though the very heart of Jehovah was wrung with anguish because they would not turn from their evil ways and live, but they could be saved in no other way. Jesus said to them "I would have gathered you together as a hen gathereth her brood under her wings but ye would not." They had power to receive a Messiah or reject him. They did not receive him because they would not. In medicine the sick may be restored by the right use of means. The husbandman by sowing the seed may reap a harvest. The Lord is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance. As he requires the repentance the gospel imperatively calls upon all to use the means effectually. Sinners of all grades can come and find a cleansing fountain. Jehovah reasons with them, "Though your sins be as scarlet they shall be white as snow, and though they be red like crimson they shall be as wool." Paul declared himself the "chief of sinners," and in order to be saved was obliged to change his faith and course of conduct. Instead of persecuting the saints became himself one of the persecuted ones, and after that "keep his body under lest after preaching to others he should become a castaway." The word of God ascribes the destiny of those that are lost entirely to themselves. "This is condemnation that light is come into the world and men love darkness rather than light." "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life." God says in Ez. xiii. that the prophets that prophecy out of their own hearts have made the hearts of the righteous sad that he has not made sad, and strengthened the hands of the wicked that he should not return from his evil way by promising him life. "Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap, for he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption, but he that soweth to the spirit shall reap life everlasting." Let us be careful that we do not "sow to the wind and reap the whirlwind." Where are the children of the Christian parents who used to bow with them and us morning and evening around the family alter at their home firesides. Many of them must be living, though the parents that used to plead so earnestly before the throne for their salvation can plead no more, the loving hearts of many of them have ceased to beat, their voices are hushed in death. O ye dear ones shall those prayers be answered? "Behold now is the accepted time and now is the day of salvation." "Woe to him that striveth with his maker." Are you striving with your best friend? The willing and the obedient shall eat the good of the land." Beyond the cross is the crown. Beyond the night of weeping we see the dawning of the eternal day when this groaning earth shall no longer be filled with the cities of the dead. "For the earth shall 'cast out her dead." "The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose, and the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads. They shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." The prophet of Patmos saw a new heavens and a new earth the first had passed away and the tabernacle of God was with man." Tears all wiped away by God's own loving hand. No more tears, ye weeping ones. No more pain ye suffering ones, and that condition eternal. Will it pay to give up our sinful lives to obtain it? Our friends who sleep in Jesus will be there. Their record is in the Book of Life. It is just before us. Already we hear the rumbling of the distant thunders. "The breath of Elohim is rocking the world" with earthquakes, tidal waves, cyclones and floods. All nature seems convulsed. The hearts of strong men are failing them for fear of what may be developed in the future. They see dark clouds arising. Treasures are being heaped up for the last day. We are surely nearing the end of our rough and toilsome journey. The end of Daniel's long rest is drawing near. God will not forget his faithful patriarch. I long to behold him standing in his lot. O, blessed day. I had rather live at the present time than at any period since God said, "Let there be light," as it is more glorious to look forward to restitution than dissolution. How little we care for the honors of this world when our faith grasps the eternal. "Even so come Lord Jesus, and come quickly." Let our longing eyes behold the Lamb that was slain and lives again and is alive forevermore, and holds the keys of death and hell.

Jews in Palestine.

Bishop Blyth, the Anglican Bishop of Jerusalem, asserts in his annual report that "about 100,000 Jews have entered Palestine during the last few years, of whom 65,000 have come within the last seven years, and the arrival of a vaster host is eminent. No one can, he says, possibly foresee the extent of Jewish immigration to Palestine within the next seven years.

From Bro. Woodruff's Scrap-Book.

The Gospel of our day is the glad tidings of what God proposes to do. The Gospel of the "Age" is the glad tidings of the hour having come for the accomplishment of that purpose. It is a proclamation to the political world in general. It is a blunt summons to do something of which governments know nothing, except as cant. "Fear God and give glory to him for the hour of his judgment is come." See Rev. xiv. This strikes the keynote of the coming dispensation. It is the great difference between the present and the future age. In the Psalms we read of a similar admonition, and relating to the same hour of judgment; "Be wise now, therefore O ye Kings; be instructed, ye judges of the earth; serve the Lord with fear and rejoice with trembling; kiss the Son, lest he be angry and ye perish from the way when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in Him." It would seem that until the arrival of this hour of judgment, God, as it were, takes no notice. He keeps silence, and men suppose him unregardful, and every one is doing what seemeth right in his own eyes. But the day is appointed, viz: "He hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness. When the day arrives the world will be apprised of the fact and summoned to give attendance, as the symbol before us informs us. But the proclamation will not be heeded. The kings of the earth will set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together against the Lord, etc., not knowing who he is, and so their power will be broken as with a rod of iron, and dashed in pieces like a potter's vessel. The thrones being thus cast down through the breaking of their political power, the survivors who dissever themselves from the enemies of the Lord will find sparing mercy at his hand, to the sparing of their lives and their admission into the Kingdom of God as mortal subjects. Thus the remnant will favorably respond; but as regards the masses, the message falls on heedless ears, and the worshippers of the beast rush on to the torment in the presence of the Lamb, against whom they advance, and whose power comes terribly forth to their destruction.

There is a very great contrast between the scenes exhibited in the 13th and 14th chapters of Revelation. "Weeping endureth for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." The chapters in question, exhibits this fact in symbol, so far as concerns the class of whom Jesus said, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." We have the long, dark, distressful history of Europe under the papacy in chap. 13; and the inauguration of the joyous morning in the 14th, which brings light and hope and cheer after the gloom resulting from the ascendancy of the "Man of Sin." The history of the "Man of Sin" power is in reality an unbroken history from the apostolic age to the Lord's coming in power and great glory. Paul in his own day says "the mystery of iniquity doth already work, only that which hindereth must be taken out of the way;" "Then shall that wicked be revealed, etc." From the already working, in Paul's day, which no doubt refers to Paganism, it shows us the papal system, lasting till the Lord's coming. The 18th chapter shows us the shape and attitude of the power during the longest of the unbroken line. Chapter 14 shows us the glorious event at the end of the line, see 1st verse, "I looked," etc. We know who the Lamb is. "The Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world," Jesus the Son of God. Why did John see him standing at his coming, on Mount Zion? Zion was the seat of David's throne or government; so Jesus belongs to the throne of David. On that throne will he sit in the age to come, occupying this throne he must needs reign on Mount Zion. See Psa. cxxxii. With the Lamb is a great company; the symbolic number of 144,000. They had the Father's name written on their forehead. Does not this show that that great company consisted of enlightened persons? The forehead is the symbol of the understanding; and the name of the Father, the knowledge of God. Ignorance of the things of God have no place among the 144,000 whose chief characteristic is the knowledge of God. Jer. xvii. 3; Eph. iv. 19; Prov. ii. 2; 2 Pet. i. They sung, as it were, a new song; they had attained a mighty deliverance—deliverance from the feebleness of mortal nature, and from all the cares and evils that afflict the present life. It is a song of great and joyous exaltation. "Their voice," says John, "was as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder,—as the voice of harpers harping with their harps." This is a great change from the aspect in which he saw the same company in chapter 12 and 13. There they were a feeble community,—a remnant of the woman's seed, cast out and prevailed against. Here they are enthroned on Mount Zion in power and great glory. Their state of humiliation is over, and now they are exalted to the divine nature. The sufferings, the afflictions and reproaches of the present are over forever. They are in the arena of political power from which they will expel all rivals in the war of the great day of God Almighty. Their vocation is to reign with Christ in all the earth as "kings and priests unto God." It is the act of celebrating this preliminary festival of love and joy that John sees the 144,000 engaged in the opening verses of this chapter. No man can learn that song who does not constitute part of the assembly;—the subject matter of which is—"Thou hast redeemed us, etc." These are they which are not defiled with women, for they are virgins. This must be taken in a figurative sense. The name given to the woman is a symbol of Rome the Mother of Harlots. These harlots, no doubt, are the women with whom the 144,000 are not defiled. What are they? If Rome be the mother (and she is called so, in universal ecclesiastical usage, the Mother Church) the daughters must be recognized as her oil-shoots;—all of Roman parentage, and acknowledged Roman Catholics as fellow Christians are included in the phrase. To have fellowship with them is to be defiled with the woman of the Apocalypse.

The constituents of the 144,000 are all of them clean from this defilement. Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord. It will be a terrible epoch in the history of Europe when the devouring judgments are sent forth into all the earth from the presence of the Lamb and the 144,000. The people will then see and feel the heinousness of the offence of which they are guilty.

The faithfulness of those who have stood aloof in all ages, up to the last moment will then be fully vindicated, and their wisdom manifest. The prospect of it inspires the saints with patience: that is, the blessedness of the dead dying in the Lord will be manifest from this point of time;—when the dead having arisen, behold the judgment of God executed on the head of the wicked; and their own labors past and then accomplished in the benign administration of the world in the reign upon which they will enter with Christ. The passage teaches that the dead are dead, and that not until the coming of the Lord do they enter upon their blessedness as spectators and executors of the Divine judgments that precede the glorious establishment of the Kingdom of God. Then they enter upon the rest that remaineth for the people of God; then they receive according to their works. Thus we have the enthronement of the Lamb and the 144,000 on Mount Zion. Second, the summons addressed to the nations to fear God and give glory to him in view of the arrival of the hour of judgment. Third, its enforcement by the overthrow of Babylon; and Fourth, the issue of a warning to the world at large as to their attitude toward the Beast and its image, (v. 14) introduces us to the judgment itself to the end of the chapter. Seeing these things are soon to come to pass, "what manner of persons ought we to be in all manner of holy conversation and godliness?"

A CURE FOR BIGOTRY.

Take one ounce of intelligence; two ounces of commonsense; three ounces of modesty; four ounces of charity—mix well together, then boil slowly over the fire of self imperfection till the whole shall attain the consistency of impartial justice. When cool take in considerable doses, every hour till you shall begin to discover that there are others in the world who know something as well as yourself. This system will indicate convalescence, and you may continue taking in somewhat smaller doses till you shall recognize the right of every other person to think and speak as well as yourself. It will now be safe to leave your place of confinement and go out into society.

P. S. A cure always warranted when directions are followed—Price, a little self-reflection.

My Father's Business.

"And he said unto them, how is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" Luke ii. 49.

These are the words of the child Jesus, when only twelve years of age. His parents had been up to Jerusalem to keep the feast of the passover, and when they had fulfilled the days, and turned to go home, the child Jesus tarried behind in Jerusalem, unknown to his parents. But they supposing him to have been in the company, went a day's journey; and they sought him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance. And when they found him not they turned back again to Jerusalem seeking him. And it came to pass, that after three days they found him in the temple, sitting in the midst of the doctors (or teachers) both hearing them, and asking questions. And all that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers. And why? because the child waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom, and the grace of God was upon him. But the tender heart of his good mother was running over with maternal solicitude for her good boy. She said unto him, Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us? Behold, thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing. And why did the good boy act so strangely? Ah! He was filled with wisdom from on high, which taught him to try above all things else to do his heavenly Father's business. Which was to teach and do all the good possible. He came as the Light of the world, to enlighten men and women with the Word of Life. He came not to do his own will but the will of him that sent him. And on the occasion of his teaching the woman of Samaria at the well, who went into the city and told the men, Come, see a man which told me all things that ever I did; is not this the Christ? When his disciples prayed him, saying, Master, eat. But he said unto them, I have meat to eat that ye know not of. And in reply to their earnest query, said unto them, My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work. John iv. 32. 34.

This is the spirit and disposition of our blessed Master as manifested in all he did and said, from his childhood up, and we would do well to pattern after him my brother and my sister. He did not live for self, or the things of this world, and in this he did well, receiving the audible approval of his Father above, and marking out an example for you and me to walk in, that we may overcome, and at last sit down with him in his throne, as he thus overcame the world, the flesh and the devil, and is now set down with his Father on his throne. Paul says, "Let this mind be in you which was in Christ Jesus, and if any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his."

Report of Labor.

March 24th finds me on my way home, called by telegram from McBride by my daughter who is sick. The Elder staid over Sunday to baptize the four I mentioned in my last report. I staid with Effie two weeks, then as she was much better, we both go home on Monday, to clean house, do our washing, ironing and mending, and on Friday start again for Vicksburg, for the Lord's workers have furnished us with money for car fare and to help in paying hall rent for a little. And right here, dear ones in the Lord, let me give you an instance of answered prayer. It seemed almost impossible when we first began our meetings at Vicksburg to pay hall rent, there were so few to carry the burden, but I felt and said several times to the Elder if the Lord wants us to stay here he will provide money to pay the rent, and every night the required amount was found, and more than that while we were even praying for money to help along the work there, for needed tracts, Wiley Jones' ten sermons, with some of H. L. Hastings' tracts on Infidelity, a dear sister in Cal. had sent us $10.00 for that very work, and what seemed strange dear Sister Wince's heart was being moved for us and besides sending me $1.50 to use for the cause she had written the sister in Cal. concerning the work at Vicksburg, and Sister Russell had entered the P. O. to mail me her offering as she took Sister Wince's letter from the box. Truly "while we are yet calling he shall answer," why will we always go on our way doubting our Father, when he has said, "No good thing will he withhold from those who walk uprightly." May God richly bless those who are using their means for the blessed cause of truth.

Well, Friday evening April 18th finds us with our faithful Brother and Sister Barney, and as we start for the hall we meet several who greet us with words of welcome, glad of our return. We find those who were interested when we left four weeks ago still eagerly studying the Word, but it is so hard to part with the old ideas of the immortality, and its kindred errors, that instead of taking God at his word, they continue to hope they are right and jump at every straw they can find to support the devil's lie. We visit from house to house and answer questions, questions, questions until we wonder what the human mind will bring out next, but we are so glad to hear them asking about the wondrous story, for we know then they are thinking, and with God's help will finally conquer the enemy and accept Christ. Brothers and sisters, pray for them, you do not need to know their names, God knows all about that, but earnestly beseech him for their acceptance of him. One dear one, Sister Culp, came 14 miles to be adopted into the kingly family by baptism. Some of the older ones will recognize her as one of the daughters of our old Sister Scott, now deceased, who lived near Meaden.

On Wednesday April 19th, we reached home only to receive another message of death from northern Michigan—Hesperia, both come immediately, Sister Weaver is dead, it read. Friday morning at 8 o'clock we are up preparing to go. Remain there speaking in Weaver hall until Tuesday evening, reaching home Wednesday evening where are we now preparing for the conference meeting, after which we are again ready for whatever work the good Father has awaiting us. Yours working for truth.

Letter Drawer.

Dear Restitution:

I much regret my slowness in complying with Bro. Driggins' pleasing suggestion for each of us to share in the "Love Feast," which has proven a feast indeed to all lovers of the good things in the bond of union under one spirit. But I beg you not to indulge in the thought, that, on my part, it was for want of interest, or for want of genial love in the dearest and most precious of all to me, that which only satisfies the longings of the hungering and thirsting one.

Since Christmas I have had a goodly share of the ills that come to the lot of mortals to contend with, which have somewhat retarded my ability to do the work laid out for the hopeful good of others; but be assured, my chief delight is to dwell neath the approving smiles of our loving Father and reach out my arms to aid all others stumbling over error by presenting the Truth in the light of the Holy Spirit which Christ said he would send to guide us into all truth: therefore those who earnestly and prayerfully seek the Comforter (Holy Spirit) for light and knowledge will be taught of Divine things; for God is not slack concerning his promises to darkened mortality. I believe that the Word of God given us according to the translation of finite man, cannot be harmonized by the natural mind, and it requires the Holy Spirit's presence when we read and search the Word to correct all errors that it may read, when sifted out, one grand plan, which was the purpose of Christ when he made the promise; and sad indeed, that many, very many remain babes in Christ, not diligently searching the Word in the Spirit, growing in grace and knowledge of the Lord, being content to accept whatever their pastor presents to them as truth, then wonder over the mysteries the Bible contains, excusing themselves, that they are not for them to understand.

In my work of late, I have met with one of the surprises which come to us from time to time along the way, by being asked by a Spiritual journalist the privilege of publishing in his paper my letter written to a friend who was in deep anguish over the loss of her all and only daughter, and a young lady of promise. The extended letter was full of Scripture and many promises, as far from the Spiritualistic faith as the two poles apart, thereby my great surprise, and I hesitated at the first thought as to giving it into the hands of the enemy of truth, and then it came to me, why not? I know of no other more deluded religionists than they, that I could be happier to be able to even possibly reach out to them the glad light. Yours in the love of Christ.

MRS. J. F. COOPER.

Dear Restitution:

Please pardon our delay in remitting amount due you for renewal of RESTITUTION. Enclosed find bank draft for the same.

Reading matter in THE RESTITUTION is improving, viz., articles calculated to edify, to feed the sheep and suitable to hand to friends to read. We have enjoyed reading the articles of Brothers Benj. and Wm. Wilson, and hope for more from the pen of the former. Will Bro. Wm. Wilson explain the 7 seals? When opened, by whom and at what stages of time fulfilled? We ourselves believe they are after the advent of Christ, but some of our brethren think they are being fulfilled before—how is it brother? Will Bro. Chas. Gardner or any brother conversant with the original Hebrew language give us the correct rendering of Acts xx. 6, the word after. Was Paul with the brethren on the first day of the week of unleavened bread, 7th verse, beginning on the 14th Nisan? If so, is our first day of breaking bread correct? Was our Lord betrayed and crucified on the 13th of the month Abit or Nisan? Jewish Passover and Sabbath being on the same day, viz., 14 Nisan. Did our Lord partake of the Jewish passover? At what hour or watch? Instituting the supper in the night in which he was betrayed according to Paul, should we as Christ's followers imitate (being one of the all things taught, and for us to observe) and do likewise, observing the memorial in the evening and once a year, according to Paul in Acts xx. 6, if the word after is not correctly defined as before referred to.

Bro. Joblin's explanation of John xvii. being so ably and satisfactorily given in his article of Nov. 1, 93, we are pleased to see the controversy now ended. The editorials and good articles on the restoration of the Jews (spiritually) and about Jerusalem are instructive and enjoyed. Feed the sheep, brethren, you who are competent, like a Peter feed the sheep and lambs, and may the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven soon come and begin to heaven the whole earth, and peace so longed for, gradually become apparent as coming from the presence of our Lord.

Our daily prayer is that all of God's children who are in faith believing in his Son may be kept from the evils of the world and be accounted worthy to stand before him and not be ashamed in his presence. Your sister wanting and watching.

MRS. A. W. WOODBURY.

Dear Restitution:

Inclosed please find $1.50 for the current year's subscription to THE RESTITUTION. Hoping that the "Logic of events" will aid me in the effort to get a hearing through THE RESTITUTION, I have decided to make one more attempt in that direction. The accompanying M. S. I am sorry to know will conflict with Bro. Wilson's expressed opinion regarding the fulfilment of Rev. xi., but I cannot get my consent to remain silent when events of such startling significance are transpiring before our eyes. In an article published in The Truth (Feb. 1, 1892) I expressed the conviction that the "winds" (elements of destruction) would be loosed by 1893. Now in all earnestness let me ask you, Is there a government on the globe that has not been shaken to its foundation? The nations of Europe after well nigh exhausting their resources in preparing to demolish each other, for the time being, forget their mutual animosities and consider the propriety of forming an international alliance for mutual protection against anarchy! But what do we see at home? That this movement of Coxey is but the snowball that will end in an avalanche, I have not a shadow of doubt. Think of an army of men gathering from sections of the country with the avowed purpose of marching to the Capitol to make demands of congress that cannot and will not be granted! Who, not enlightened by the "sure word of prophecy," could predict the outcome?

Hope that you will insert in THE RESTITUTION what I have said in regard to the Parliament of Religions that the subject may be brought up for the consideration of your readers.

WORLD'S PARLIAMENT OF RELIGIONS.

Like all other prophetic events, up to the present, no one at the time of its sitting realized the startling significance of the Parliament of Religions held in Chicago in October last! Any one of intelligence knew of course that the Bible was completely ignored, God's Word nullified in that conclave, but who recognized in that event the "slaying of the two Witnesses" (the Old and New Testaments)? That such was a fact we firmly believe, and while we are sorry to differ with a Brother in this matter, we believe that a "day" in this—as in other prophecies—stands for a year, and hence in 3½ years from that time we may confidently expect the marvelous events recorded in Rev. xi. 11 to 14 inclusive. We can not believe that we are "adding to" this prophecy by this interpretation, and we believe that the 42 months and the 1260 days have all been fulfilled on the year-day theory. I remain yours fraternally.

R. D. LOGAN.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I am glad of the opportunity of giving my testimony on the lord's side. I have been a believer for several years, and have taken THE RESTITUTION ever since it it has been published. I am always anxious for its arrival, and always read the letter drawer first, for I think that the best part of the paper, although I like to read the good instructions that are in the rest of the paper. This is my first letter to the drawer and I have not seen any from this part of the moral vineyard for some time. I hope the brothers and sisters will pray for me and my family, that we may ever be found faithful and meet you all on the Evergreen Shore, where there will never be my more sickness and death, nor partings.

Yours in Christ.

MRS. N. M. LANG.

OBITUARY.

Died at his home in Camp Clarke, Neb., May the 6th, of chronic bronchitis and heart trouble, William I. Beebee, aged 56 years, 10 months and 7 days. He embraced the faith of the gospel some 27 years ago and was baptised by Bro. Ralph Carter. He was ever ready to give a reason for his hope and to show others the grand truths of the Bible. He preached here to the people till his health gave out. He leaves a wife, two sons and one daughter and little grand daughter to mourn for him, for our home is so lonely and desolate now that the enemy death has visited us. O, how I long for the life given to come, that we may meet our loved ones that have gone down under the power of the monster death. I can but exclaim, Come Lord Jesus and come quickly. Even so. Amen.

Let us so live that we may meet in the kingdom of God, is the prayer of your lonely sister.

MRS. W. I. BEEBEE.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

☞It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

Tourist Excursion Tickets

At reduced rates are now on sale, via The North-Western Line, to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Deadwood, Dakota Hot Springs, Denver, Colorado Springs, Manitou, Salt Lake City, Yellowstone National Park and all the lake and mountain resorts of the West and Northwest. Neenah, Wis.,

Situated on Lake Winnebago, on the Wisconsin Central Lines, is a delightful place to spend a summer vacation. There is good boating and fishing and the hotels furnish good accommodations at very reasonable rates. 'Tis here that the famous "Roberts Resort" is located, over-looking the lake and containing all conveniences necessary to make an "outing" healthful and enjoyable.

Located along this popular route are numerous other summer resorts, and those contemplating a summer outing will do well to drop a line to Jas. C. Pond, Genl. Passr. Agt., Milwaukee, Wis., and receive free copy of guide book, giving full information as to rates, hotel accommodations, etc.

This meeting will ... ten days, commencing June 7, 1894, and will be the most important meeting we ever had. The Young Men's Educational work, tent work, new hymn book, and other important matters will be considered. Brethren and sisters, we need your presence and counsel. We are living in a time when the cause of Christ demands that every one do his duty. It is true we have attended year after year and helped to carry the burden of work for our Master, but the burden was light and you found rest and peace in toil. But there are some isolated ones to whom this privilege has not come in many years, to you we say come to the meeting. We want to see your faces and hear your voices in our social meetings. As you shall tell us of you, faith and hope. Make an extra effort, begin your plans now. It may be the last conference till Jesus comes. Come, spend a week in the tented grove with those of like precious faith. It will rest you, and strengthen you in the Divine life. A full program will be published in due time.

The Third Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God in Neb. will be held at Moorefield, June 15 to 17, 1894. Moorefield is on a branch of the B. & M. R. R., 50 miles west of Holdridge. Any one coming by rail notify Bro. A. Shultz at least one week before the meeting and you will be received and cared for.

Although this meeting is not in as central a point as heretofore, still, by commencing now and making an extra effort all can get there. Meetings will be held in the big tent except the business meeting which will be held at Bro. Morgan's school house at 2 P. M. on Saturday as usual.

All arrangements will be made for the next annual conference and other important business transacted. It is expected that a full attendance will be present.

ALMUS ADAMS, Pres.
J. J. CADY, Sec'y.

The North District Quarterly Conference of the Church of God, will be held, D. V., at Blair, Neb., commencing Friday evening, June 1st and continue over Sunday. Those coming from a distance should write to Brother John Mehrens, Blair, Neb., as to place of meeting etc. The State Evangelist is expected to be present to preach the Word. Brethren, you cannot spend two or three days more profitably than by attending this meeting. There is a large and prosperous Church at Blair and we feel assured that all who come will receive a kind welcome, a hospitable entertainment.

J. J. CADY.
Sec'y Neb. State Con.

Another year has nearly rolled around since the annual meeting of the Michigan Conference was held. Death has been doing its work among us, and some are now sleeping that were accustomed to meet with us, how many more will lay their burdens down e'er another year will pass. God only knows, this we do know, that the left ones must work with still greater zeal and energy as the ranks are all the time being lessened, so let every lover of the Truth be at their post ready for duty at the old gathering place in Dutton, Kent Co., Mich. Meeting will begin Thursday evening, May 31st and continue over Sunday. Such a few hours to spend together, but we can do much if we all come with the one thought to forther the cause of Christ. Not altogether to get good, but determined to give as much as we receive, then as is already predicted we will have a grand meeting. Those coming from the south on the G. R. and I. R. R. will be met at Carlisle Station in afternoon Thursday if they will notify me in time. The train reaches Carlisle about 1 o'clock P. M. If any should wish to go on to Grand Rapids, the train will leave the city for Dutton at 5:20 P. M. Dutton is on the M. C. R. R. Those coming from the east, can reach here at 5:00 A. M. 1:15 P. M. and ...

...King's business is very urgent this year, and it is very important that all who possibly can will be in attendance from the first meeting. We expect several new converts present and want them to see that we are alive to the times in which we are living. Let each Church send at least one delegate with report of their standing during the past year. The ladies of the tithing society are doing considerable, let them be present with their report if they have not saved more than 50cts. It is the Lords and will be accepted by him. The friends here are prepared to keep all who may come, and we hope every bed, and couch, and rug, and corner will be full. Brethren awake, awake, and herald out once more the glad tidings of a coming King.

The third quarterly conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith in Indiana, will be held at the Antioch meeting house five miles south of Plymouth, commencing on Friday June 8, 1894, and continue over the following Sunday. Invitation is extended to all of like precious faith and all others who wish to enjoy a good meeting. Come and may God bless our efforts.

J. F. WAGONER, Pres.
A. C. ROBERTS, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of the Abrahamic faith will convene at the Union Church 12 miles northwest of Lanark, Ill., June 15, 1894, and continue over Sunday. We extend a cordial invitation to all who are looking for the soon return of our Savior, and a special invitation to our preaching brethren is extended. There are some isolated ones whom this privilege has come to in many years. To you we say, Come to the meeting, we want to see your faces and hear your voices in meeting, telling of your hopes and prospects for the kingdom of God. Now do make an extra effort to be at this meeting as we have a great work to do. This may be the last conference we may have the privilege of having before the return of our Savior.

Those coming from the east and south stop off at Lanark, Ill., and those coming from the west stop off at Mt. Carroll. Any wanting to stop at Mt. Carroll notify Bro. Andrew Fredrick, post office Mt. Carroll, Ill. He will meet you and take care of you. There will be a conveyance for all that will come here at Lanark to take them to the meeting.

Luxury in Travel.

The North-Western Line, embracing nearly 8,000 miles of standard railway, has long been known as one of the most progressive railways in the west, and it certainly merits this distinction, as we can testify from an extended trip recently made over a major portion of its lines. One of the handsomest trains we have ever traveled in (and nobody could wish for finer service) is the "North-Western Limited," leaving Chicago at 6:30 P. M. daily for St Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth. It is vestibuled throughout and lighted with gas, and has been justly described as the most complete and elegant train in the west, the Hon. T. B. Bryan, vice-president of the World's Fair Commission referring to it as "the finest on wheels." One has but to glance at the rich upholstering, tapestry, ornaments and carvings to confirm the fact that the highest degree of the car-builder's art has been employed in the construction of the handsome equipment of this North-Western flyer. The coaches, library cars, the Pullman palace sleeping cars and the compartment sleeping cars, each compartment being supplied with hot and cold water and lavatory, certainly seem to preclude the possibility of further improvement in making travel a luxury. Supper is served in the elegant dining car, and the buffet-library car is well stocked with reading material, metropolitan dailies, magazines and leading pictorial publications for the evening's entertainment. The management of the Chicago & North-Western Ry believes that perfect service is the strongest possible advertisement for securing passenger traffic, and we are told by one of its officials that its train service and accommodations are always carefully planned with this end in view. The results are so satisfactory that a person who once goes over the line generally selects it whenever and wherever he goes. M. 9 and 23.

Cheap Excursions to the West.

An exceptionally favorable opportunity for visiting the richest and most productive sections of the west and northwest will be afforded by the Home-Seekers' low rate excursions which have been arranged by the North-Western Line. Tickets for these excursions will be sold on May 8th and 19th, to points in northwestern Iowa, western Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Manitoba, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Montana and Idaho, and will be good for return passage within thirty days from date of sale. The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 6, 1894. NO. 21.

The Restitution.

The Restoration advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as a prerequisite to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for salvation.

Poetry.

Follow Me.

Be thou weary, worn and sore,
Troubled by sorrow, grieving so
Christ is knocking at thy door,
Arise and follow me.

Though thy darkness be as night,
Hope shall be passed from sight,
Christ himself shall give thee light,
Arise and follow me.

Though thou hast no friendly hand
To guide thy footsteps through the land
Christ himself shall by thee stand,
Arise and follow me.

In darkest hour of thy despair,
Be sure the Comforter is there,
Until eternity is near thy rest and peace will cease
Arise and follow me.

Though thy soul be steeped in sin,
And Heaven itself could never win,
Christ himself shall let thee in,
Arise and follow me.

IMMORTALITY.

"Who hath abolished death, and brought life and incorruptibility to light through the gospel." 2 Tim. i. 10. "By one man sin entered the world, and death by sin, and so death hath passed upon all men." Rom. v. 12.

Adam, the great primogenitor of the human race, being sold under sin, and consequently subject to death, could do no more than leave his posterity in the same helpless condition. The world can no more deliver itself from the bondage of corruption and death, than the stream can rise higher than its fountain. If the fountain be impure the stream must be corrupt. The father of the human race being mortal and subject to the extinction of life, his children must likewise possess a nature corresponding to the parent. Adam died and returned to dust, and so it is with the whole family of man; from the prison house of death they instinctively shrink back; but from the silence and darkness of the grave they cannot escape. "Dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return," is determined upon all.

A deliverer must come to the rescue, else the whole family of man must sooner or later gather around them the dark mantle of death, and sink down into eternal nothingness and oblivion.

The ablest minds of antiquity foresaw this much dreaded doom of man approaching; but being possessed with the faculties of reason and hope, and a warm attachment to life, they spared no pains to rob death of its terrors, and to persuade themselves to believe that life and existence was a lease of endless duration. Socrates, Plato, Cicero, and a whole line of Gentile scholars and philosophers, speculated upon this question not a little. But they could affirm nothing with any degree of certainty, as the expressions of doubt and fear which pervade their writings fully attest. The question, "if a man die shall he live again?" was too much for their philosophy. They were absolutely inadequate to make known the way of life. Their speculation about the immortality of souls was just so much vain philosophy; worse than worthless, because in a later day it has perverted the truth of God, by ignoring the mission of the Lord Jesus, and the resurrection of the dead. Indeed, how could the question of future existence be settled before the hero who could conquer sin and death made his appearance among men? Sin must needs be condemned in the flesh, and the shroud of death shaken off, and Joseph's new tomb burst asunder before the way of life could be fully made known. Jesus, the seed of Abraham, and Son of God, has overcome sin, and been raised from the dead, incorruptible and immortal, and has therefore, in the language of Paul, "brought life and incorruptibility to light, through the gospel."

What Gentile philosophy could not do, the gospel has accomplished. The wisdom of the world is defeated. The great hero and captain of our salvation has gained the victory, and triumphed gloriously. Death (prospectively) is abolished, and immortality brought to light through

THE GOSPEL.

But what is the gospel? This is an important inquiry. To be ignorant of the gospel is to be without hope and without God in the world.

The word gospel is a translation of the Greek word evangelion, signifying good news, or glad tidings. But what is it news of? Or in other words, what is the subject matter of the glad tidings? To know that the word gospel signifies good news, and ye not know what the good news is, would avail us nothing. In Luke viii. 1, we read, that "Jesus went throughout every city and village preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God." In Luke iv. 43 he says, "I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also, for therefore am I sent." The kingdom of God was the theme of his discourses wherever he went. Hence he announced to the nation of Israel, "that the law and the prophets were until John; since that time the kingdom of God is preached." Luke xvi. 16. He commissioned his apostles to preach the gospel, not only to the Jewish people, but to the Gentiles, and uttered a prediction concerning their mission, saying, "this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations." Matt. xxiv. 14.

Peter on the day of Pentecost preached the kingdom of God, showing that Jesus had been raised from the dead to sit upon the throne of David. Acts ii. 30. Philip went down to Samaria and preached Christ to the people. But what is it to preach Christ? Let the record answer. "When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were immersed both men and women." Acts viii. 5. To preach Jesus, as did Philip, is to announce to the people the things concerning God's kingdom and his Son.

Paul writes to the Romans that he was not "ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." Rom. i. 16. But what was it that Paul preached at Rome, which he termed the gospel of Christ? The answer to this question is plainly stated in Acts xxviii. 30, 31. "And Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him; preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ." This in brief is the record of Paul's preaching at Rome. In that great city, at that time the metropolis of the globe, Paul boldly proclaimed the kingdom of God, and unfolded the things concerning the name of the Lord Jesus.

Jesus and all his apostles had but one message to proclaim. This message is the same that God preached to Abraham, saying, "in thee shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." "To Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not to seeds, as of many, but as of one; and to thy seed, which is Christ." Gal. iii. 16. When Jesus preached the kingdom of God, he showed through what instrumentality God purposed to bless the nations, viz., through a kingdom.

This leads us to inquire, what is the KINGDOM OF GOD?

Having shown that the kingdom of God constituted the subject matter of the gospel, which Jesus and the apostles preached, it devolves upon us to show in the next place what is meant by this phrase. If we do not understand the nature and locality of the kingdom, all our investigations will avail us nothing. The Bible is an unintelligible book to all those who understand not the kingdom of God; while on the other hand, those who comprehend this question, find little difficulty in understanding the book upon which so many stumble and fall.

The kingdom of heaven, the kingdom of Christ, the kingdom of God, and the kingdom of Israel, are so many synonymous phrases, signifying the establishment of the divine government upon the earth. In other words, it is the setting up of a literal monarchy under the supervision of Jesus Christ, and his associate rulers,—the saints.

The foundation of this kingdom was laid when God chose Abraham, and called him to go into a land which he should afterward receive for an inheritance, and in which land he afterward established Abraham's posterity as a great people, and a mighty nation. This nation under the reign of David and his successors, constituted the kingdom of God. This state of things, however, was only preparatory to what should come to pass hereafter, when in the fulness of time, or in the world (aion, age) to come, Jesus, David's royal son, should occupy the throne and restore the kingdom to Israel. To this effect God made a covenant with David that he would raise up his seed after him, who should be of his body, and that he would establish his throne and kingdom forevermore. 1 Chron. xvii. 11-14. In harmony with the subject matter of this covenant, Deity pledged himself by an oath to David, that he should have a seed to occupy his throne. Psa. lxxxix. 34-36; Psa. cxxxii. 11. "My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips; once have I sworn by my holiness, that I will not lie unto David; his seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before me. It shall be established forever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven." What language could the Almighty have chosen to express more forcibly the perpetuity of David's throne and kingdom? On the day of Pentecost Peter referred to this oath of God to David, to prove to the Jews that Jesus had been raised from the dead. On that occasion he appealed to them. "Men and brethren, let me [illegible] unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day. Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit upon his throne. He (David) seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hades, (the grave,) neither his flesh did see corruption." Acts ii. 30, 31. This argument of Peter's was an unanswerable one, showing that according to God's oath it was impossible for Christ to be holden of death.

God's covenant could no; be nullified, nor his oath violated, therefore Jesus, David's great son, must take the throne and kingdom of Israel; "he came to his own and his own received him not." They rejected him as king, avowing that they had no other king but Cesar. At Pilate's bar he was asked "art thou a king?" Jesus confessed the truth, and denied not, therefore says Paul, he witnessed "a good confession." Accordingly Pilate inscribed on the cross, "Jesus of Nazareth, the king of the Jews." This was the expression of a great truth, to which all the prophets had borne witness. Isaiah had prophesied saying, "unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder, * * * of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it and establish it from henceforth, even forever." Isa. ix. 6, 7. This language of Isaiah is confirmed by the testimony of an angel from heaven. The angel said to Mary, the mother of Jesus, "behold, thou shalt have a son, and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i. 32, 33.

According to the above evidence, so plain and explicit, Jesus will yet occupy the throne of David and in the language of the prophet, will "reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously." Isa. xxiv. 23. To bring out all that the prophets have written concerning the reign of Christ and its glory, would require more space than we have to spare. The future glory of Jerusalem, Zion, Israel, and Messiah's reign, constituted the theme of their most eloquent predictions. No prophet has neglected to portray in glowing colors the splendor and power of Messiah's kingdom. Jeremiah who witnessed Israel's desolation and Jerusalem's captivity, and the nation's prostration at the feet of Babylon, nevertheless predicted, "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous branch, and a king shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is the name whereby he shall be called, the Lord our righteousness." Jer. xxiii. 5, 6 and xxxiii. 14-26. Ezekiel also foresaw the overthrow of Israel's kingdom, saying, "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it; and it (the kingdom) shall be no more, until he come, whose right it is, and I will give it him." Ezek. xxi. 26. Ezekiel foresaw the overturning of Israel's throne and kingdom. But not its eternal desolation. He limits the time of its overthrow, by saying, "until he come, whose right it is, and I will give it him." God has compared the perpetuity of David's kingdom to the sun in heaven. As well might a man seek to blot out the bright orb of day, as to seek to thwart the future restoration of Israel under Jesus their great king. God has purposed to establish his government on the earth through the kingdom of Israel, and for this purpose he hath anointed Jesus, both Son of God and Son of David, to occupy the throne, and reign over all the earth. The following propositions will express in outline the Scripture teaching concerning this subject.

1. The kingdom of God is a real government to be set up on the earth, possessing all the constituent elements of a kingdom; such as a King, Territory, Subjects, Capital city, subordinate rulers, &c. It is to break in pieces and consume all other kingdoms. Dan. ii. 44. Every people and nation are to submit to its authority. Dan. vii. 14. Psa. lxxii.

The king is the Lord Jesus Christ, who was born king, and as the Son of God hath been appointed heir of all things. Heb. i. 2. As the royal son of David he will restore the kingdom to Israel. Isa. ix. 6, 7; Isaiah xi. Amos ix. 11-17; Luke i. 32; Matt. xix. 28.

2. The territory of the kingdom will be the land promised to Abraham for an everlasting possession, lying between the Euphrates and Nile, will constitute the territory proper, while the surrounding Gentile nations will constitute the dominion of his kingdom. Daniel says, "I saw one like the son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, and there was given him a kingdom and dominion." Dan. vii. 14.

3. The twelve tribes of Israel restored to their own land, together with the Gentiles, will constitute the subjects of his kingdom. Jesus said to the twelve apostles, that in the regeneration, "you shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging (or ruling) the twelves tribes of Israel." Matt. xix. 28. The apostles could not judge the twelve tribes, if they were not restored into a national capacity. He will gather Judah and Israel from among all nations whither he hath scattered them. Isaiah xi. 10-16. They are to be no longer two nations. Ezek. xxxvii. They are to be planted in their own land, and be no more pulled up forever. Amos ix. 14, 15. "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that it shall no more be said, the Lord liveth that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt. But the Lord liveth that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither he had driven them; and I will bring them again into their land that I gave to their fathers." Jeremiah xvi. 14, 15. Such is the language of prophecy. None of the prophets leave Israel as a nation in a state of dispersion. "Behold, a king shall reign and prosper, and execute justice and judgment in the earth; in his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely." Jer. xxiii. 5, 6, and xxxiii. 10, 12, 14, 17. Judah and Israel, will be saved from their national dispersion and down trodden condition, and acknowledge Jesus as their Messiah. Jesus will bring them through the wilderness of the people, and plead with them face to face; he will purge out the rebels from among them, and the remainder shall enter into the promised land. Ezek. xx. 33-38. They will look upon him whom they have pierced and lost he themselves because of him. The Lord will pour out upon them the spirit of prayer and supplication, and there shall be a great mourning in the land of Israel; the nation will turn to him with their whole heart." Zech. xiii. 8-13.

Thus Zion, Jerusalem, and Israel, will be restored to more than their former beauty and splendor, and the state's presence will make them glorious. The twelve apostles, as the judges of olden time, will be exalted as rulers, and Israel as a nation, though the fewest in number of all people, will under the reign of Messiah become the first among the nations. After Israel's restoration and submission to the Lord Jesus, all the Gentile nations will become subject to Israel's king. He is to be king over all the earth. Zech. xiv. 9. "His dominion will extend from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth." All political, military and ecclesiastical power will be broken down, and all nations will be coercively subjugated and brought into subjection to the authority of Jesus and the saints. "They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him; his enemies shall lick the dust." Psa. lxxii. 9. "The nations shall see and be confounded at all their might, they shall lay their hand upon their mouth, their ear shall be deaf. They shall lick the dust like a serpent; they shall move out of their holes like worms of the earth; they shall be afraid of the Lord our God," Micah vii. 16, 17. The Lord Jesus shall stand as an ensign to the nations; to him shall the Gentiles seek, and his rest shall be glorious. Isa. xi. 10. "So shall he sprinkle (astonish) many nations; the kings shall shut their mouths at him; for that which they had not heard shall they consider." Isa. lii. 5.

The above testimonies we think are sufficient to show who are the subjects of God's kingdom. Christ is coming not to curse but to bless the nations; not to destroy, but to rule the world in righteousness. As the seed of the woman he will bruise the serpent's head; as the Son of David, and Son of God, he will restore the kingdom of Israel, and establish the government of God, and cause the will of Deity to prevail over all the earth.

The kingdom of God therefore will be a universal empire. The kingdoms and republics of men will fade away into eternal forgetfulness. "Behold, I create all things new," is the language of Jesus when seated on his throne. A new and divine order of things will beautify the earth and fill it with the glory of God. This is the great salvation with which the Deity has purposed to deliver the world from all its present ills. Its proclamation is therefore termed good news; or in other words, "the gospel of the kingdom of God."

Through this gospel Paul affirms immortality is brought to light. It is therefore termed "the word of life." It is emphatically the word of life, because it makes known the way of life to all those who believing become obedient. It involves the resurrection of the sainted dead,—their incorruptibility, immortality, and glorification. 1 Cor. xv. Rom. viii. The saints as subordinate rulers will have power over the nations, Rev. ii. 26; and reign one thousand years. Rev. xx. 4, 6. At the expiration of the one thousand years, Christ having put down all rule and authority, and destroyed death, he will deliver up the kingdom to God, the Father, and God shall be all in all. 1 Cor. xv. 28. During the reign of Christ all nations must submit or die. His enemies that would not that he should reign over them will be put to death,—destroyed from his presence.

From what we have said we deduct the following conclusions:—

1. Man in his present state is subject to sin and death, and would therefore in obedience to "the law of sin and death" cease to exist, and become extinct, if God in his infinite goodness had not interposed to save and rescue man from his lost condition.

2. The very nature of the case forbids, therefore, the popular idea of man's present immortality. God does not confer endless existence upon sinners. It is the very height of folly and absurdity to suppose that God in his infinite wisdom would share eternal existence with beings whom he foreknew would be his enemies, blaspheme his name, trample upon his authority, and morally pollute his universe, or some portion of it, for all eternity. God hates and abhors sin and it is unreasonable to suppose that a being all-wise and powerful would make sin, the very thing he abhors, endlessly perpetual, by creating man susceptible of sinning, and giving him immortality. In view of this, we look upon the popular doctrine of "the immortality of the soul" as derogatory to the character of God, contrary to the Scriptures of truth, and as belonging not to the Bible and Christians, but to the darkness of heathenism and idolatry, where it originated.

3. Immortality is deathlessness. It is life, and such life as only inheres in the being of Deity. He therefore who is severed from God by sin will die. Hence it is only the good and godlike who can live. Sinners must therefore be washed, sanctified, justified, and perfected in obedience to the will of God, before they can obtain immortality. Immortality cannot therefore be obtained without an effort. He who desires to live forever must labor for eternal life. He must be courageous and valiant for truth. In other words, he must believe the gospel of the kingdom of God, and put on the new man, Christ Jesus, by immersion into his name for the remission of all his past sins. Having thus become adopted into the family of God, he must continue to walk worthy of his high calling. Such an one will at the Revelation of Jesus Christ, put on the robe of immortality, and being changed will become like the Lord Jesus, deathless.

4. The hope of the gospel is therefore truly a good hope. Paul affirms "we are saved by hope." But let no one fancy that he has the hope of the gospel, if he does not understand what the gospel teaches. Being a member of some denomination, be it orthodox or heterodox, so called, is not to be a Christian. In order to be a Christian a man must believe the things concerning God's kingdom and his Son, otherwise his religion is vain. It is only by the gospel that immortality can be obtained, and therefore the necessity of believing the truth unmixed with the fables of men.—Rev. Moses Lard in Lard's Quarterly, 1 p. 7.

Boom in Modern Jerusalem.

The report of Mr. Dickson, British Consul at Jerusalem, on the trade of his district, contains several items of interest. Trade with Great Britain in 1893 showed some falling off as compared with 1892, but notwithstanding there has been a steady increase for several years past.

The Jaffa-Jerusalem railway hardly appears to carry as much traffic as might have been expected. There is a daily passenger train each way and also two goods trains. Still a considerable amount of merchandise is conveyed by camels between the two places, on account of both the Jaffa and Jerusalem railway stations being situated at some distance from the town. The railway company, in order to give further facilities to merchants, employ camels for the transport of goods from the warehouses to the stations. It is rumored that the line will be prolonged to Nablous and Gaza.

Buildings of various kinds continue to be erected in the vicinity of Jerusalem, and the city is fast outgrowing its former limits. On the western side houses have increased so rapidly within the last few years that quite a large suburb has arisen where formerly fields and vineyards existed. Every available piece of land is now being brought up by private persons or by the benevolent societies and missions, and already the name of "Modern Jerusalem" has been given to this new quarter. The latest enterprise suggested is the placing of a steam launch and lighters on the Dead Sea. If this were done the produce of Moab, which is a country rich in cereals, fruit, and cattle, could then be ferried across in a few hours in the lighters in tow of the steam launch instead of having to be conveyed by caravans round the north or south end of the Dead Sea, entailing a journey of from four to five days.—St. James Gazette.

☞ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

BROTHER L. E. CONNER wishes us to announce that he will attend the meeting to be held near Lanark, Ill., commencing June 15. Those interested will take notice.

BROTHER Hatch reports nine additions to the church at Argos, Ind. as a result of his recent meetings there. Labor on, brethren; there is plenty of cause for rejoicing.

BROTHER and Sister Woodward, of Michigan have promised to be at the meeting at Antioch, this county, over the second Sunday of this month. The meeting will commence at 10:30 A. M. June 8.

BROTHER J. F. Wagoner reports having held meetings over the last Sunday in May, at Scircleville, Ind. and "immersed six more into the all-saving name. God be praised for the power of his precious Word."

READER, how do you regard sin? Is it very sinful to you? The reason we ask that question is this: If your hatred of sin is shallow, your love to God is shallow. Do not forget this.

To rid yourself of bad habits, reader, adopt good ones and they will crowd out the bad ones just as the new life in a tree in the spring will push off leaves that have resisted the wintry storms.

THE Rev. Alex. Clark seems to have made a discovery. He says, "Theological Seminaries are in danger of turning out preachers as founderies turn out stoves—all of the same cast and pattern." He might have put it stronger than that. He might have said they had done, and were now doing just that.

IT is cheering to those who hold to the narrow way of life, to find our correspondents giving the trumpet a certain sound. There is a marked improvement in this respect; and we say, be not weary in well doing. It is the Gospel we are set for the defense of, let it ring out clear and distinct. We have to do it lovingly,—but we cannot modify it.

JUDGE Stern of Buffalo has to face the question, "Is the soul immortal?" This comes about through the contest over the will of a Mrs. Backus who died in January, after bequething all she had, one thousand dollars, to Nicholas Bushman, to be used for masses "for the benefit of my poor soul, and that of my deceased husband." She left seven children unprovided for, and they think they have not been rightly dealt with. Their lawyer holds that a soul has no standing in court,—is an intangible legatee, and that there is no competent evidence that either the woman or her husband possessed such a soul; and that if they had it is not proven that they can derive any benefit from the thousand dollars. The decision of the Surrogate is looked for with much interest.

A CORRESPONDENT of the London Daily Chronicle writing from Odessa, says, "I have gathered a few statistics to illustrate the power of the Jews within the pale of settlement in South Russia. If we take the city of Odessa as fairly representative of other towns within the pale, we find that of 350 doctors, 250 are Jews, and of 180 private and sworn advocates 147 belong to the same race. The six newspapers of Odessa are all either wholly or in part in the hands of the Jews. Prohibitive laws to the contrary, more than one-half of the agricultural land of South Russia is either owned or controlled by Jews, and from one land bank alone —the Bessarabia—Taurida Bank—about four million pounds sterling has been lent on estates nominally to the lords of Russians." The fat has gone forth that they take their silver and gold with them when they go; and this is as true as anything else which God has said, although the way seems dark at present.

"THE effects of 900 years of Adam's sorrowful life so wore him out that at last he breathed out, and had no strength to breathe in again."

JUST a word more—Is not Eternal Life as a gift offered to men? How then can it become their property before the offer is accepted?

A MAN'S happiness and success in life will depend not so much upon what he has, or upon what position he occupies, as upon what he is and the heart he carries into his position."

IT appears certain that from seventy to eighty per cent of crime, eighty to ninety per cent of poverty, and from ten to forty per cent of the suicides in most civilized countries are to be ascribed to alcohol; and yet it seems impossible to banish it.

WE once read that Senator Renand once paid a month's rent in advance, and was asked if he would take a receipt? He replied: "It is not necessary; God has witnessed the payment." "Do you believe in God?" replied the other. "Most assuredly," replied Renand; "don't you?" "Not I, Monsieur." "Ah," said the Senator, "in that case, please make me out a receipt!"

IT has been said that judgment is the greatest faculty of the internal senses of man, and should ever be nourished and protected by uncontrolled reason; for when once tyrannical prejudice becomes a venal slave, and man loses his charter as a rational being it is then that he is blown with the wind from one extreme to another, and with all his learning forms the conclusion of an idiot."

AS Eternal Life can only be obtained upon certain conditions, nothing can be more certain than this: That immortality and incorruptibility cannot be attained until the conditions are complied with." Say, you man, who thinks eternal death is so fearful,—do you know what makes you think so? It is the conviction that while you are organized capable of attaining to a divine,—ever-living nature, you are not complying with the conditions exacted, and are therefore hopeless, because godless. We have one in mind at this moment, we yearn to snatch as a brand from the burning. Oh why will he die, when endless life is within his reach? May the arrow of love and truth pierce his heart, we pray.

THE question about "Entire Sanctification" should not need an answer for one who has been set apart from the world by the Truth of God; although there are many, doubtless, who understand for themselves what they cannot explain to others. Those who talk so much about "Entire Sanctification," neither know what sanctification is, nor what the sanctifying power of God is. The word of Jesus for it then,—it is the Truth of God believed and obeyed that sets people apart for God. If a person will just believe and obey, he need not trouble about the sanctification; God will take care of that part, and no mistake about it. We understand that a man is either in and of the world, or he has been taken out of it, and is not of it. We can conceive of no one being both in and out of the world at the same time. If he is out he is not in. If he is in, he is not out. If he is still in the world he is out of Christ and God,—and is neither sanctified wholly nor in part. We want to impress this truth by these homespun remarks:—We can only be the Lord's at all, by being wholly his! He takes no partnerships in this matter of ownership. The idea that people can by extra devotional exercise get into an ecstatic state and, as it were, take the highest degree in the household of God, is without foundation in Truth. The gospel believed and obeyed saves from all sin; the blood of Christ will cleanse from all sin. The man who claims to have been pardoned of only his foulest sins is not pardoned at all. Is it not painful to hear men talking of pardon while ignoring the law of pardon? When men claim to be altogether different from the man God describes the formation of, and have another God, another Christ, another Gospel, another faith, another hope, another kingdom, and a pardon by installments, is it not the time of Entire Apostacy, instead of "Entire Sanctification?"

What is Lost in Adam? What is Gained in Christ?

In answering the questions:—"What have we lost in Adam?" and "What do we gain in Christ?" we give what we understand to be the truth in a suggestive way. Others may see it in a different light, as it is their privilege. First, then, we lost "the perpetuation of life in the natural body. Second, the society of angels. Third, the favor of God and Paradise. Now, "what do we gain in Christ?" First, never ending life in a spiritual body. Second, the atonement restores us to God's favor. Third, we gain more than the lost Paradise, for even the wilderness and desert are to be made like Eden, and the garden of the Lord. We think it entirely "a going beyond," to say "that a law of decay was implanted in Adam after he sinned," because if Adam was a natural body, the law of decay was already there, although held in check while he was sinless,—no longer. The threat of death in case of disobedience showed that nothing could effectually obstruct the law of decay after sinning. While it is true the descendants of Adam were in him, and therefore partook of his natural decay, we by no means attach the guilt of Adam's sin to all the unborn millions of the race. They inherited the effects of his condemnation. The force of habit may cause us at times to speak of these effects as the law,—indeed the effect is frequently put for the cause in the Scriptures. To say that the sentence "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return," was pronounced against every son and daughter of Adam, is to say there are no exceptions. There are exceptions. Enoch and Elijah did not die; the Son of Man did die, but did not return to dust; the faithful alive when Christ comes will neither come under the dominion of death,—nor return to dust, but their mortality will be swallowed up of life. Time was when these exceptions perplexed us, but not now.

We think it a mistake to apply the condemnation to the life instead of to the man formed of dust. Life is always manifested in or through an organism, be it animal or vegetable. All life is of God; He is the fountain of life; all live and move and have their being in him till the organisms are worn out by disease, or accident, or decay, and then the dust returns to the earth as it was before it was organized; and the spirit of life returns to God who gave it. There is no more life while a man lives than there is after he is dead, as we understand it. Giving neither impoverishes God, nor does withholding enrich him.

Must There be Wars?

The excitive question in Europe among leading men, both military and civic, has reference to the probabilities of war. Some believe that while there are armies so immense and so ready as those which every great nation has in hand, the chances for collision are small, because of mutual fear. Others argue from the same state of facts that war is, first or last, inevitable, and predict a struggle of tremendous magnitude. For example, Field Marshal Count von Blumenthal, a veteran survivor of the Franco-Prussian war, is reported to have said: "We feel the need (about every thirty years) of one of those great butcheries which sweep away thousands of men, pull down obstacles that had seemed strong enough to stand forever, and re-establish the equilibrium necessary to progress and the development of society." Yet he adds a trifle inconsistently: "Many years will have to pass, many events much more grave than those of the present day must occur, before war will take place." But no uninspired person can foretell what even a year may bring forth, so long as the immense standing armies of the old world are permitted to face one another, boastful of their comparative superiority in equipment and discipline. Seeing the imminency of danger which attaches to such a bravado, drawn-an-sir attitude of the European powers, the Emperor of Germany and the King of Italy have recently, we are told by "foreign correspondents," made overtures to the Czar of Russia suggestive of gradual disarmament on his part and on theirs, pleading the argument of economy chiefly, but also intimating that of humanity. If this be true, it is greatly to the honor of the two princes we have named, and constitutes a hopeful indication of the Christianization of that potent public opinion which must have prompted so humane a proposal. But the Czar has refused to entertain it, he not being able to see what is right except through the old barbaric eye not yet blinded, nor to believe that his country can be profited save by striking at its foes, or if occasion calls, at its friends, with the iron hand of battle: that it must continue to trust its destinies to no milder law than the brutal decree of force, which requires the return of evil for evil, or for hard blow a harder—a prime commandment in the decologue of hate.

In connection with this matter we call attention to a comparison which has been made between the sums of money expended by civilized nations for warlike purposes and for the pursuits of education. France perverts four dollars for war where she gives seventy cents for educating the people; England wastes three dollars and seventy-two cents for the former, while doling out sixty-two cents for the latter; Prussia throws away two dollars and four cents in keeping up her army and navy, while contributing fifty cents to her schools; and Russia disgraces herself by proportionately sinking two dollars in preparing to fight, and making three cents answer for teaching the arts of peace! And so it is throughout the entire world, or that portion of which it consumes all the laudatory adjectives in boasting of its enlightenment. The education of the masses is attended to once, while their destruction is provided for many times. We do not suppose that governments are worse than they have ever been, but their shame is that they are practically no better than they were a thousand years ago, and that the twentieth century shall open upon nations which have carried all the arts—even the art of war—to a point of higher perfection than the art of preserving life and its kindred art of dispensing the smiles of brotherly love. —Church Union.

The Recent Earthquake in Greece.

Greece has just had, or rather is just having, one of its most dreadful earthquakes. Other earthquakes of modern times have brought great disaster to certain parts of Greece; but considering the wide area covered by the present one, and the time of its duration, it appears at present likely to rank as one of the worst that Greece has ever suffered, either in ancient or modern times. One who has passed through it and felt it can hardly refrain from describing it.

On the evening of April 20th, as we had just begun our dinner, at five minutes before seven o'clock, the house began to shake violently. Our dining room is in the second story of the American School, and one can imagine the haste we made to go down the stairs and out into the garden. Probably we were out of the house in five seconds; but it seemed at least several minutes. It was several minutes before we could persuade ourselves to go in and resume our dinner. Meanwhile we saw our neighbors before their houses, crossing themselves and showing other signs of distress. When we did return to the table it was with little appetite. The rest of the meal was an empty "form through which the spirit breathed no more." As a token of the vibration which our strong building had suffered, I may note that we found each glass surrounded by a wet circle on the tablecloth a foot in diameter.

Sleep was at a premium that night, for the earth did not go to rest. Before bedtime there were two more shocks, and at least three more in the morning before the natural time of rising. One of these latter was strong enough to send us all once more out-of-doors. In this desire to get out of the house we found that we were not singular. Our neighbors were again doing likewise. At present (the afternoon of Sunday, April 22d) there have been about twenty shocks which everybody feels and fears, not to reckon others, which one counts for the sake of accuracy. For about forty-eight hours we have seemed to realize the import of the phrase "resting volcano." We shall always know how naturally the faintings and fears that one hears of in connection with earthquakes come about.

Since Attica has generally enjoyed immunity from the earthquakes that in recent years have done harm in other parts of Greece, as about a year ago in Zante and again later in Thebes, the Athenians have come to feel that the huge ribs of their land, Parnes, Pentelicus and Hymettus, protected them; and that while Greece is the most seismic land in Europe, their own part in such occurrences was likely to be limited to sharp watching for traces of them and to showing sympathy for their suffering neighbors. But in the present earthquake, although there have been no fatal or dangerous accidents in Athens, yet many buildings have been damaged, and at the Peiraeus several have been thrown to the ground. Not only do old people recollect nothing like it, but the papers say that it is more severe than any earthquake in Athens since the great one of 511 A. D., which did so much harm to the ancient buildings.

This long immunity of Athens in the midst of others' sufferings led everybody to suppose that now when Athens suffered we should hear of greater disasters in the provinces, and such news was not long in coming. All Greece was indeed shaken, even the islands of the Aegean. But the center of disturbance was in the region known in ancient times as the land of the Opuntian Locrians. The capital town of this eparchy, Atalante, suffered only the falling of a good many houses; but village after village in the neighborhood was leveled to the ground, and many people buried under the ruins. In one village twenty children perished in a falling church. The dismal catalog of disaster runs in the dispatches as follows: Libanatis—all the houses leveled to the ground; Skentavga—all the houses destroyed; Martinos—the place utterly destroyed, countless victims; and so on, through a long list of villages. The total number of deaths will mount up into the hundreds, and there are large numbers of wounded.

Detachments of the army have been sent from Athens with food and tents. Probably there are not many people in Athens who would not have been glad to be living in tents during the last forty-eight hours. Patriarchal simplicity had its advantages. Had the shocks in Athens been much stronger, the larger the house the greater would have been the danger. For a dreadful catastrophe would certainly have come.

Not being able to visit Locris, I got my most vivid picture of the effects of the shocks in the cloister of Daphne, about five miles from Athens on the Sacred Way to Eleusis. Here some cells of the cloister were reduced to a heap of stones and mortar. Fortunately the reports in the papers of serious damage to the venerable mosaics in the dome of the church, recently restored with so much pains, were almost pure fabrication.

It was not merely Locris that suffered heavy loss. The first shock rendered nearly every house in Thebes and in Chalkis uninhabitable. The people in both of those places are living in the open air. While in neither of these cities were there any deaths, there were some cases of serious injury. The magnitude of the disaster may be realized when we note that Chalkis is a city of about ten thousand inhabitants.

One imbued with the spirit of the ancient mythology can easily feel that wild giants and Titans are having their own way, and that Zeus must be called in to help. But what do we see? Here is the careless Greek turned devout, holding special service of prayer to the God of Israel to avert or stay the calamity.—Independent.

Religion is not in the purview of human government. Religion is essentially distinct from government and exempt from its cognizance. A connection between them is injurious to both.—James Madison.

Dear Brother Undercoat:

I will just say Bro. J. L. Prime and myself have just closed a united effort to enlighten the minds of the people here and have succeeded in having four intelligent persons confess their faith in the gospel as taught by Christ and the apostles. Three were immersed, and the other will be soon, at this time he was suffering with the mumps. There are others who are "almost persuaded." Those who came in were three young men and one lady. One of the young men was my youngest son the last of our family to come into Christ. We have seven in our family at home and all "hope for the soon coming of the kingdom." Brother Prime is an excellent workman, a good Christian, and respected by all who know him, he is fighting a good fight and I believe there is a crown laid up for him. We have 21 members.

Yours in hope of eternal life.

J. P GLENN.

Editor Restitution:

I just returned from Linn and Neosho Co. where I have been holding meetings. One sister at Walnut, and five at Pleasanton, Kan., put on Christ by baptism. You can see by this that I have not been idle. There is no time for idleness. Let every servant of Christ wake up and stand by the brave. Help the laborer in the vineyard. Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ. My labor is mostly among the poor and I do not get much for my preaching. I would love to go any place to preach where I could be paid or helped a little.

May God bless you is my prayer.

JOHN FOORE.

Dear Restitution:

After reading the request of I. H. in the April 18th copy for Bro. M. Joblin to give in catechism-like his explanation of all the pre-existence in the regard to the Christ, I would say I have been deeply interested in the controversy, and would love if the whole argument on both sides could be put in pamphlet form, so that the brotherhood could the better study the subject. I have not been able to read all the articles on "The Seed of the Woman," neither all of Bro. Wiley Jones' criticisms on the same. Therefore hope the whole matter in condensed form may come out. But as this no doubt would be too much work for Bro. Joblin, I would say let it all come out in pamphlet form as it has been printed in THE RESTITUTION, that is if it could be paid for by sale of the same. I really think no harm has been done by the controversy. While the two brothers stand just where they did at the commencement, others have been learning no doubt. I know I have learned somewhat, so let us never fear to have Bible study, avoid ruts.

WE glad to see a letter from Sister Florence A. Davis of Delaware, and would say that my sincere prayer for God's people in Delaware is, that they may have spiritual prosperity, and hope they, and all God's people everywhere may not forget to assemble themselves together. But let us meet often together not only to remember our Lord's death, but to speak to each other and study together God's blessed letter or letters to us. O, how we need to remember Peter's words 2 Pet. i 5, "And besides giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity." The above will give us an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Now, brothers and sisters, let us all try to serve our Master, for we are servants bought with a price. All we have and are, or may yet have belongs to the one who has bought us by his own precious blood. Soon our race will be run. Let us deny ourselves, have more meekness than pride, for it is the meek who will inherit the earth. Your brother,

CHARLES S. ALLEN.

OBITUARY.

On May 5th, 1894, near Dilbeck, Va., Sister Maggie E. Stephens fell asleep in Jesus, aged 33 years, 4 months and 12 days. She leaves a kind husband, who is also an esteemed brother in the Lord, and three children. We mourn not as those without hope for a few years ago she obeyed from the heart the form of doctrine delivered, and was immersed in the all-saving name of Jesus the Christ, by Elder H. F. Boyer who also spoke words of comfort at her burial. from 1 Thess. iv., calling special attention to the importance of being in the blessed condition, "asleep in Jesus"—so that when they wake they will be supremely blessed.

Our faith look'd forward to the day
We all can meet again,
Thy kingdom come, for which we pray,
Come Jesus, come and reign.

S. E. B.

John Taylor died March 10, 1894, after an illness of 106 days with typhoid fever, at the age of 40 years, 3 months, and 3 days. He was born July 13, 1853, in the state of Georgia, was married by the writer to Miss Cynthia Mitchell, March 27, 1878. Brother and Sister Taylor were baptized March 28, 1893. Bro. Taylor was a faithful husband and loving father and a good Christian, and highly esteemed by all that knew him. At the time of his death they could have no funeral preached, so it was put off until the 3rd Sunday in May. The writer spoke to the large number in attendance and good attention was given. Our brother leaves a wife, five children, a father, mother, five brothers, and one sister to mourn, but not without hope. May God bless them, and may they live so that they will meet all the dear ones in God's kingdom.

JOHN FOORE.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Kansas, will be held three miles northeast of Oxford, in Cowley County, at Bro. Thomas Jackson's schoolhouse. This meeting will last about ten days, commencing August the tenth, 1894. There is some important business to transact. Business meeting will be on Saturday at two o'clock P. M. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can bring tents and come prepared to camp. The brethren at Oxford are whole-souled, hospitable folks, but it is too much for women to have to work all the time and get no good of the meetings, so let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master. The commotion of the world indicates his coming is very near. All speaking brethren wishing any information correspond with Bro. S. C. Oliver, Attica, Kan. A full program will be published in due time.

Sabbath Props Examined.

We wish to examine some of the props that are used to prop up the Sabbath cause, which to say the least are very misleading.

"God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it." Gen. ii. 3. Yes, and Moses who tells us this much, also tells the reason why he did it. Listen to him—"because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made." It would have been just as easy for Moses to have said, because he designed it for Adam and his posterity, if it had been true? And do we not tell more than truth when we say that he did? And to say that Adam kept the Sabbath is saying more than we could prove, hence is false, an addition to the word of God. If it had been true, and of any importance, Moses would have been just as willing and ready to tell it as you are, I presume. Revealed things belong to us.

God condescended to come down upon Mount Sinai, upon the top of the mount and spake the ten words with a great voice; and he added no more. "Showing their importance." This statement has made a great many converts to the cause, and now most of its friends declare that it was Jesus the Son of God that did all of this, and more too, and yet they tell us he was no lawgiver. Well, well.

To me it seems very unreasonable that God the Supreme Ruler of the universe should leave his throne in heaven, and come down in person on Mount Sinai to speak the ten words to his people, when he has so many angels that go at his bidding, doing his pleasure. Then if you can believe the last testimony of a dying Christian, that was full of faith and spirit, it was an angel that spake the law on Mount Sinai. Speaking of Moses, he says, "This is he that was in the church in the wilderness with the angel which spake to him in the Mount Sinai, and with our fathers, who received the lively oracles to give unto us." Again he says, "Who have received the law by the disposition, (injunction, or command, Dia.) of angels and have not kept it." Acts vii. 38, 53.

Now if there is a lingering doubt in your mind about the testimony of the dying Stephen being true, will you hear and believe Paul, who comes to our aid by saying—"Why then the law?" It was appointed on account of transgressions. How long Paul? Till the Seed should come, to whom the promise related; having become instituted by means of angels, in the hand of a Meditor. Gal. iii. 19. Dia. Hark! Paul speaks again. Listen! "For if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward; how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him." Heb. ii. 2, 3. Paul puts the stress of importance, not on the law spoken by angels, but on this great and world-wide system of salvation, the gospel, God's power unto salvation to every one that believeth.

But, says one, "Stephen and Paul were both speaking about the ceremonial law, and not the moral law at all." Who said so? and how did you find that out? and who authorized you to come in with human terms and tell what inspiration means? Now if our authors meant what you say, why did they not say it? You would have said it of course, because your faith is different to theirs. But, the testimony and its connections utterly forbids any such a construction. Stephen was talking of a law the Jews had violated, had not kept it, in that they had slain the prophets, and had murdered the Just One. See the 52nd verse of 7th chapter of Acts. While Paul was talking about a law which had been transgressed and disobeyed, and its penalty had been executed in their punishment.

Was that your ceremonial law you talk so much about? was it? Then it is just as plain as the nose on a man's face, that the same Mighty One that spake the ten precepts with a mighty voice also spake through or by Moses the hundreds of precepts, which you are pleased to call the ceremonial law, or the law of Moses. See Ex. xx. 21 and onward, also Deut. v. 27 and onward, and be no longer faithless.

But, says one, when God had spoken the ten precepts to all the assembly with a great voice, he added no more. "thus proving that God's law was now given, and is now complete." It proves no such thing, as the same God went right on adding precepts after precept, but not with a great voice as before. While Paul tells us the law was added because of transgression, and you tell us this was the ceremonial law added to the moral law, who added it? Then you are convicted by your own testimony.

The reason the Lord did not continue proclaiming the law, or adding more law with a great voice is clearly seen in Israel's being stricken with terror, and requested that no more law be given in that manner. God heard and approved of their expressed wishes. Israel had no idea that the law was all given, and God did not so inform them, but he does tell Moses the reason he comes down in such an awe-inspiring manner.—"Lo I come unto thee in a thick cloud that the people may hear when I speak with thee, and believe thee forever." Ex. xix. 9.

Neither did Moses try to quiet the people by telling them that God was done speaking and the law was all given, the proper thing to do if it had been true, but he does tell them to fear not for God is come to prove you, and that his fear may be before your faces, that ye sin not. Ex. xx. 20. A Bible reason for any thing is worth more than hundreds of human opinions, and that I am correct in my conclusions about this, read the latter part of Ex. xx. and also Deut. v. 23 and onward. A similar use of language is found in the account of Israel's deliverance from Egyptian bondage. An angel of the Lord appeared unto Moses in a flame of fire in a bush. God called unto him out of the bush, and Moses hid his face for he was afraid to look upon God, and God said, "I am come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians," and this Moses whom they refused, did God send to be a ruler and a deliverer by the hand of the angel which appeared to him in the bush. Ex. iii. 1–10; Acts vii. 30–35. God did it by his agent or representative, for his name was in the angel that went before Israel. Ex. xxiii. 20 21. But, says one, the Sabbath must be binding as God placed it right in the very bosom of his moral law, thus making it a moral precept. Yes, yes, and do you know that the same God placed it right in the bosom of his ceremonial law, or the law of Moses, right in the midst of the feast-days, and yearly Sabbaths, thereby making it a ceremonial precept? It is a fact all the same. See the proof and doubt no more. Ex. xx. 21. and onward to the 23rd chapter. Be sure and read from the 10th to the 17th of the last named chapter, the 23rd. See Lev. xxiii. 1–8.

There are a few more little props that are used to prop up the Sabbath, that ought to come down. Its friends preach that all sin is a violation of the ten precepts, or is traceable to them as they are pleased to call it, which is both unreasonable and unscriptural, a human device to meet the exigency of the case. The first sin by the first man that was so very disastrous in its results, was not a violation of either one of the ten. It was a simple, positive law, as much so as ever was given to man, while you say the ten were all moral precepts. Could Adam violate a moral command by breaking a positive law? If so, then all law was moral law, and must all remain in force. Are you ready for such a conclusion, my brother, my sister? While Paul is decidedly against you, hear him.—"Nevertheless, death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude (or likeness) of Adam's transgression, who is the figure of him that was to come." Rom. v. 14.

Now, if Paul is right in saying that others had sinned, but not like Adam, then you are wrong in saying that Adam sinned like others, by violating the ten commands, or any part of them. No prevarication, sir.

The wise man says, "the thought of foolishness is sin." Prov. xxiv. 9. Paul says, "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." Rom. xiv. 23. And that we may sin against the brethren, and against Christ, in using our liberty, and eating in the idols' temple. 1 Cor. viii. And the Lord says, "if a man forbear to keep the Passover, he shall be cut off and bear his sin." Num. ix. 13, while James says, "But if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors." ii. 9. This law and this sin is not found in the decalogue, but is found in what some folks call, "Moses' law." See Lev. xix. 15, and Deut. i. 17. It was sin to eat blood, and why? because God forbid it, and because the life was in the blood, and it was a sin to kill, or violate any of God's commands, not the ten alone, but any and all of them, and yet, King Saul sinned and lost his kingdom because he did not kill as he was commanded to do. 1 Sam. xv. Again, our friends in their zeal to establish their theory, and prove the importance of the ten commands, over all others, tell us that they were placed inside the ark, while the book of the law which contained the first two greatest commandments, on which all the law and the prophets hung; and many other good precepts, also, were counted worthy of an inferior position in the side of the ark. Well, well, what next? It seems that such a foolish thought, such partiality in the law would be sin, and would confute itself. But, alas! Some people will catch at, and cling to a straw; like the spider they spin a fine thread, and make a fine web, in which to hide and catch the unwary. Here is a clincher for you. When King Saul went into the cave to cover his feet; David and his men were in the "sides of the cave, and David arose and cut off the skirt of Saul's robe privily." Now my brother or sister as the case may be, do you really believe that David and his men were hid in a hole on the outside of the cave? If so please turn and rend the account. 1 Sam. xxiv. 1–8, note the 8th verse, see David coming out of the cave, and hear him cry after Saul, saying, My Lord, the King. Be no longer faithless, but believe that when David was in the sides of the cave, he must have been in the cave in order to have come out of the cave. So, likewise, when the book of the law was put in the "side of the ark" it was inside, not outside.

Again, they want us to believe that Moses did not write the ten precepts in the book of the law. I wonder why he did not; well, it seems that God did not see fit to have him do so, and we presume he did not wish to have the man Moses to write his holy law in with his law of ceremonies that were not good. Well, well here it is again.

Moses can and did write in his book of laws—"Hear, O Israel! The Lord our God is one Lord; and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might, and thy neighbor as thyself." And "six days thou shalt do thy work, and on the seventh day thou shalt rest." Deut. vi. 4, 5; Lev. xix. 18; Ex. xxiii. 12. But God could not suffer him to write the ten commands in with his law. No sir. I wonder why God suffered Moses to rehearse the ten commands over and over to Israel, and if it lessened their importance somewhat? Now I happen to have in my possession a copy of the book of the law that Moses wrote, and I find the ten commands written in it; will you tell us who wrote them there? and more, if Moses did not write them in his book of law where did you find them?

But, says one, here is a prop you cant pull down:—"The ten precepts are by way of pre-eminence called the law of the Lord, and the law of God, while the other laws are called the law of Moses." The law of the Lord is perfect converting the soul. Honestly do you believe that the ten precepts alone will or can convert a sinful soul? If so, then why those ceremonies and sacrifices for sin? Now Luke the beloved physician dont talk like you do. He takes the heart right out of your positives, by using the terms law of Moses and law of the Lord, interchangeably, one for the other, and he talks so plain that we are not left to guess out his meaning. See Luke ii. 22 24. The old prophet teaches that the book of the law of Moses, and the book of the law of the Lord, and the book of the law of God was the same book, and that God's law was read in this book day by day. See Neh. viii. 1, 18; ix. 4, 10; xxviii. 29.

Inspired writers do not talk like you do on this subject, hence their faith must have been somewhat different to yours. Matthew says that Jesus said: "For God commanded, saying, honor thy father and thy mother; and he that curseth father and mother let him die the death." Matt. xv. 4. While Mark in recording this conversation of the Master says—"For Moses said, honor thy father and thy mother; and whoso curseth father and mother, let him die the death." Please notice there are two things that God said; and they are both not found in the decalogue, but God said them all the same, and also that Matthew said God commanded, while Mark said, Moses said, showing conclusively that they made no difference in the law. It was the law of God, and it was the law of Moses. This must be so or else one of them has made a mistake; which was it? I do not find one passage in the Bible that is plain and pointed calling the ten precepts alone the law of God, or the law of the Lord either, but I do find that Bible writers use the terms law of the Lord, and law of Moses indiscriminately, as being the same law, and all the assumption about this law or that law is simply an innovation, a play upon words.

God in concluding the Old Testament Scriptures, by his servant Malachi, says, "Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments." Mal. iv. 4. Now is the ten precepts to be remembered and included in this requirement, or does the law of Moses get all the honor? Look well to the house you live in. It is a fact that the Sabbath stands in the Bible connected, and classed with new moons and feast days. Proof—"Then Solomon offered burnt offerings unto the Lord on the altar of the Lord, which he had built before the porch, even after a certain rate every day, offering according to the commandment of Moses, on the Sabbaths, and on the new moons, and on the solemn feasts three times in the year, even in the feast of unleavened bread and in the feast of tabernacles." He appointed also the king's portion of his substance for the burnt offerings, to-wit for the morning and evening burnt offerings, and the burnt offerings for the Sabbaths, and for the new moons, and for the set feasts, as it is written in the law of the Lord." 2 Chron. viii. 12, 13; xxxi. 3. This testimony not only classes the Sabbath with new moons, and feast days, but it also classes the commandments of Moses, and the law of the Lord together, as the same identical law, and that this is the weekly Sabbath spoken of in the foregoing testimony see Ezek. xlv. 17; xlvi. 1, 3.

The Sabbath, new moons and feast days fell together at the cross. Proof—"I will also cause all her mirth to cease, her feast days, her new moons, and her Sabbaths, and all her solemn feasts. Hosea ii. 11. Now for the fulfillment of this prediction, which makes good my assertion. "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to the cross; and having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in it. Let no man therefore judge you in meat or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days; which are a shadow of things to come, but the body is of Christ." Col. ii. 14–17.

How plain is the Word of the Lord, that the Sabbath, new moons and feast days, those ordinances that were written by Moses in his book of laws, were blotted out, and done away, and you and I have no right to judge and condemn any man for not observing these rites, which rites will be restored and observed in the future age. See Zech. xiv. 16, and onward. Also Isa. lxvi. 23. Do I hear you say, that the weekly Sabbath was not written by Moses in his book of ceremonies? Then let me advise you to turn and read Ex. xxvi. 10–12.

Our Great Teacher and pattern, in all his public and private teaching never saw fit to plead for, and enforce the claims of the Sabbath on any man or woman. Neither has his chosen apostles, who were fully equipped and sent out to teach mortal men and women the way of salvation, ever saw fit to require any one to observe the Sabbath, or be lost, never. Neither have they ever reproved any one for not observing it. They never speak of the sin of Sabbath breaking, never, while they do overhaul most all other sins. We are constrained by the force of the evidence to conclude that Sabbath observance was no part of their commission, no part of the terms of reconciliation, no part of the gospel. Amen.

Acts of the Apostles. Chap. 4.

1. And as they were talking to the royal-people, the priests and the officer of the temple and the Sadducees,

2. Annoyed because they were teaching the royal-people and announcing the resurrection from among the dead in Jesous,

3. Laid their hands upon them and placed them in ward until the morrow; For it was already evening.

4. But many of those who had heard the word experienced faith, and the number of the men became five thousand.

5. And it came to pass on the morrow that the rulers and the elders and the scribes were gathered together in Hierousalem.

6. And Annas the chief-priest and Kuinphas and Joannes and Alexandros, and as many as were of the chief-priestly birth;

7. And standing there in their midst, they inquired, In what ability or in what name have ye done this?

8. Then Petros filled with sanctified spirit said unto them, Rulers of the royal-people and elders,

9. If we are being examined (a preliminary examination a legal term) to-day in respect to a benificent deed done to an enfeebled man whereby he was saved,

10. Be it known to you all and to all the royal-people of Israel, that in the name of Jesous Christ the Nazaraite whom ye crucified, and whom God awoke from among the dead, that in him this man standeth in your presence in good health.

11. This is the stone rejected by the builders, which hath become a head of a corner;

12. And there is no salvation in any other. For there is no other name given under the heavens among men in which it is befitting we should be saved.

13. And beholding the boldness of Petros and Joannes and apprehending that they were unlettered and unprofessional men, they wondered and recognized that they had been with Jesous.

14. And seeing the man who had been healed standing along with them they had nothing to say in reply.

15. But directing them to go outside of the Synedrion they conferred with one another saying, What shall we do to these men. For, that a recognizable sign hath occurred through their agency, is apparent to all those who inhabit Hierousalem, and we cannot deny it.

17. But that it may not be spread any more among the royal-people (or the laity) let us forbid their talking any more to any man in this name.

18. And summoning them they enjoined on them absolutely not to utter nor teach in the name of Jesous.

19. And Petros and Joannes answered them and said, Whether it is right in the sight of God to hearken to you or God, may ye have decided.

20. For we are unable not to talk of the things which we have seen and heard.

21. And having first threatened them they dismissed them, finding no way to punish (lit. to cut them off) them because of the laity (or royal-people) because they were all glorifying God for what had occurred;

22. For the man, unto whom this sign of the healing had occurred, was of more years than forty.

23. And when they had been dismissed they went to their own people and told all that the chief-priests and the elders had said to them.

24. And when they had heard it they lifted up their voice with one accord unto God and said, O thou sole Lord (despotes) thou who didst create the heavens and the earth and the sea, and all the things in them.

25. Thou who didst say through our father David thy servant's (child born in the household of faith) mouth through Sanctified Spirit, Why have nations waxed wanton and royal-peoples meditated vain things?

26. The kings of the earth stood by and the rulers were gathered together at the same place against the Lord and against his Christ.

27. For they were of a truth gathered together in this city against thy Saintly Child Jesous, whom thou hadst annointed, both Herodes and Pontios Pilatos along with nations and royal-peoples of Israel,

28. To do whatever thy hand and thy counsel had predetermined should occur.

29. And now O Lord, look upon their threatenings and give unto thy bond-servants to talk thy word with all boldness.

30. While thou dost extend thy hand to heal, and to have signs and prodigies occur through thy Saintly Child Jesous.

31. And when they had besought, the place in which they were gathered together was shaken, and they were all filled with the Sanctified Spirit and talked the word of God with boldness.

32. And of the multitude of those who had experienced faith there was one heart and soul; and no one said that ought of his possessions was his own; but they were all theirs in common.

33. And with great ability the apostles were delivering the testimony of the resurrection of the Lord Jesous and great grace was upon them all.

34. For there was no one among them in want. For as many as possessed places or houses, sold them and brought the prices of the things sold,

35. And laid them at the apostles' feet; and there was a distribution made to each one even as any one had need (or use.)

36. And Joseph who was also called Barnabas by the apostles, which is when interpreted a son of exhortation, a Levite, a Cyprean by birth, a field being his, sold it and brought the proceeds (lit, the use) and laid it at the feet of the apostles.

COMMENT.

"Officer" instead of "Captain" R. V. The word "Strategos" means any military officer and is not a specific term. Strictly speaking he is a military officer, but sometimes a chief-magistrate in civil affairs.

"Of chief-priestly birth" instead of "Of the kindred of the high-priest" R. V. All the descendents of Aaron were "cheif-priests" and one of these by election each year served as "the chief-priest" for that year. There was no such thing as a "high-priest." But "the chief-priests" was also called "a great-priest" or "the great-priest."

"In what ability or in what name" instead of "by what power or in what name" R. V.

"Then Petros filled with Sanctified Spirit" instead of "filled with the Holy Ghost" R. V. The Bible no where teaches "ghostly" ideas. This belongs to heathendom and superstition.

"Saved" instead of "made whole" R. V.

"From among the dead" instead of "from the dead" R. V.

"In good health" instead of "whole" R. V.

"This" instead of "he" R. V.

"A head of a corner" instead of "the head of the corner" R. V.

"Under the heavens" instead of "under heaven" R. V. Not the same idea.

"Is befitting" instead of "must" R. V.

"Unlettered and unprofessional" instead of "unlearned and ignorant" R. V.

"A recognizable sign" instead of "a notable miracle" R. V.

"Hath occurred through their agency" instead of "hath been wrought through them" R. V.

"They all" instead of "all men" R. V.

"Unto whom this sign of the healing had occurred" instead of "On whom this miracle of healing was wrought" R. V.

"Own people" instead of "own company" R. V. Own is plural not singular.

"O thou Sole Lord" instead of "O Lord" R. V. The term is "despotes." "Heavens" instead of "heaven." This is a distinctive term for another order of things and not the "canopy" here meant.

"Through Sanctified Spirit" instead of "By the Holy Ghost" R. V. Compare all this quotation marked here as the 20th verse in the R. V. —from the 2nd Psalm. It is quoted verbatim from the Greek of the Septuagint and is not blank-verse; neither is it literally rendered as it should be in the R. V.

"Against thy Saintly Child Jesous" instead of "against thy holy Servant Jesous" R. V.

"Along with nations" instead of "with the Gentiles" R. V.

"And to have signs and prodigies occur through the name etc." instead of "And that signs and wonders may be done through the name etc." R. V.

"But they were all theirs in common" instead of "they had all things common" R. V.

"Who was also called" instead of "who was sir-named" R. V.

Letters in the Faith:

I do love to scan the columns of this paper, and especially the "Letter Drawer" testifying to the faith and love of those in Christ. I deem it the most esteemed privilege to work for the Master. For while we walk with God in light, God doth our hearts unite. Life is short and time is fleeting, Oh! may it be spent to the best advantage. May we be industrious and improve each shining hour as doth the little busy bee. The opportunities of yesterday cannot be improved today as they could at the proper time. Our lives tonight are one day shorter than at the setting of the sun last night, that time is gone never to return. So many chances grasped or lost, which shall we say? Alas! perhaps too much the latter. Procrastination worketh charm for the present, but alas, for the future. Sorrow is the result of putting off till tomorrow that which we should do today; but pleasure, peace and joy to those that wait ready and prepared for the coming Restorer. Oh, what bliss as we close our eyes, wearied with sorrow, sickness, distress and misfortune, and imagine we can look ahead and see the new earth and new heavens, all purified and made glorious for the eyes to behold. Oh! what harmonizing scenes. How grand when the melodious strains of "Home on earth, good will to men," will again be wafted through the air as in the times of the Savior's birth. Can we not thank when God has promised us, if faithful, such glorious scenes? There will be no discord there, but every thing will work for the good of him that gave it. Let us be faithful and diligent to hasten and complete our work, less the Master should come only to find us weary and resting, and our work not done and we not prepared. Are our lamps filled and burning? Can we gladly expect the grand time when Christ shall appear? Yes, we love the news, we long for strength and power and courage to endure all and be faithful to the end. Then, what joy, splendor and peace will be ours. When the curtain shall be lifted, and we shall know as we are known. That joyful inheritance that fadeth not away, spoken of in Peter. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within bless his holy name. I am so glad he loves me, poor and weak as I am, that he has given such valuable and richest promises to us so unworthy. May my life be spent in willingly and obediently serving him, and doing his will, not my will be done; but thine, oh Father, the loving, submissive words of the dear Redeemer in the saddest moments of his blessed life. Could we learn to always say these words, that by considering his will in all things we will surely be rewarded in the near future: when the glorious words break forth. Come ye blessed of my Father and inherit the kingdom prepared for you. May we tell others of the glad times that are coming; the coming of the Lord to establish his own kingdom, to reign King of all the powerful, to have love, joy and peace in abundance on earth. Praise God from whom all blessings flow. Could all sing that from the depths of the heart, and let us be watching and waiting as we are exhorted in Rev. Put not our lamp under the bushel, but let it shine and be prepared.

Make us all in thee complete,
Make us all for glory meet;
Meet to appear before thy face,
Partners with the saints in light,
Call them all to each by name,
To the marriage of the Lamb;
Let us Jesus upon thy breast,
Love be there our endless feast.

Yours in Christ.

Announcement.

The annual conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will be held at Nevada, Story Co. Nevada is on the C & N. W. R. R. 20 miles west of Marshalltown and 8 miles east of Ames. This meeting will last ten days, commencing June 7, 1894, and will be the most important meeting we ever had. The Young Men's educational work, tent work, new hymn book, and other important matters will be considered. Brethren and sisters, we need your presence and counsel. We are living in a time when the cause of Christ demands that every one do his duty. It is true we have attended year after year and helped to carry the burden of work for our Master, but the burden was light and you found rest and peace in toil. But there are some isolated cases to whom this privilege has not come in many years, to you we say come to the meeting. We want to see your faces and hear your voices in our social meetings. As you shall tell us of your faith and hope. Make an extra effort, begin your plans now. It may be the last exhortation till Jesus comes. Come, spend a week in the festive grove with those of like precious faith. It will rest you and strengthen you in the Divine life. A full program will be published in due time.

For the Committee.

A. J. EYCHANER.

The Third Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God in Neb. will be held in Moorefield, June 15 to 17, 1894. Moorefield is on a branch of the B. & M. R. R., 50 miles west of Holdridge. Any one coming by rail notify Bro. A. Shultz at least one week before the meeting and you will be received and cared for.

Although this meeting is not in as central a point as heretofore, still, by commencing now and making an extra effort all can get there. Meetings will be held in the big tent except the business meeting which will be held at Bro. Morgan's school house at 2 p. m. on Saturday as usual.

All arrangements will be made for the next annual conference and other important business transacted. It is expected that a full attendance will be present.

ALMUS ADAMS, Pres.
J. J. CADY, Sec'y.

The third quarterly conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith in Indiana, will be held at the Antioch meeting house five miles south of Plymouth, commencing on Friday June 8, 1894, and continue over the following Sunday. Invitation is extended to all of like precious faith and all others who wish to enjoy a good meeting. Come and may God bless our efforts.

J. F. WAGONER, Pres.
A. C. ROBERTS, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of the Abrahamic faith will convene at the Union Church 12 miles northwest of Lanark, Ill., June 15, 1894, and continue over Sunday. We extend a cordial invitation to all who are looking for the soon return of our Savior, and a special invitation to our preaching brethren is extended. There are some isolated ones whom this privilege has come to in many years. To you we say, Come to the meeting, we want to see your faces and hear your voices in meeting, telling of your hopes and prospects for the kingdom of God. Now do make an extra effort to be at this meeting as we have a great work to do. This may be the last conference we may have the privilege of having before the return of our Savior.

Those coming from the east and south stop off at Lanark, Ill., and those coming from the west stop off at Mt. Carroll. Any wanting to stop at Mt. Carroll notify Bro. Andrew Fredrick, post office Mt. Carroll, Ill. He will meet you and take care of you. There will be a conveyance for all that will come here at Lanark to take them to the meeting.

J. D. RENNER, Sec.

The Church of God known as the Northern Nebraska and Southern Dakota Conference of the Church of God will hold their 3rd quarterly conference at the Rock Creek School House in Rock County, Nebraska, commencing on the 15th day of June, 1894, and hold over Sunday. All brethren are called to attend the conference. Brethren and sisters come one and all to the Master's call.

WM. H. BENSON, Sec. of Con.

The annual meeting of the Church of God at Shells Ferry, Oregon, will begin June 15 and hold over the following Sunday. All the brethren and sisters in Oregon and Washington are cordially invited to meet with us. If any wish to come from a distance please inform us, and teams will be sent to meet them at the International Hotel, Portland.

Another year has rolled away and been numbered with the past. How swiftly the time is flying; how very fast our years are being numbered and our life will soon be a thing of the past; all too soon it will have vanquished away like a vapor. Then let us once more have a good meeting, for we are one year nearer the return of our Savior than when we last met, one year nearer our eternal home, and may we all strive to live closer to our Savior's teachings in the year to come than we have in the past, striving more earnestly as we see the day approaching. My hope is to meet all the faithful ones in the Kingdom of God.

MARIA E. TROSDELL, Sec.

Czar Alexander's Diplomacy.

Russia needs peace in order to develop its internal affairs. It entered into relations with France, not in order to make war on Germany, but to form a counterpoise to the triple alliance and prevent France from embarking on a policy of adventure which might have dragged Russia against its will into war. Now that Russia is sure of the pacific intentions of France it is binding Germany to it by ties of interest. Thus it holds in its hands the policy of two great nations, which for nearly a quarter of a century have maintained a hostile attitude. If it is Alexander III. who personally directs the foreign policy of his empire it must be admitted that he is endowed with admirable diplomatic resources, for the game has been played so quietly and so surely as to be worthy the eulogium of future historians.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

Kansas Evangelist Fund.

This fund is raised for the purpose of sending an evangelist to isolated brethren that are desirous of having the Gospel proclaimed in their vicinity and are not able financially to bear the expense.

Those wishing to have an evangelist sent to them, can correspond with the Secretary, L. A. Chaplin, Ashton, Kansas. Those wishing to contribute to this fund may send the amount to the Treasurer, W. H. Bernard, Oxford, Kansas.

☞ It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some wit say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

Sow seed. Send THE RESTITUTION to some one who is a stranger to God's truths, and perhaps from this may grow a desire on their part to accept them.

Poetry.

On the Road Home?

It isn't the thing you do, dear,
It's the things you leave undone
That gives you a bit of a heartache
At the setting of the sun.
The tender word forgotten,
The letter you did not write;
The flower you did not send, dear,
Are your haunting ghosts at night.

The stone you might have lifted
Out of a brother's way;
The bit of heartsome counsel
You were hurried too much to say;
The loving touch of the hand, dear,
The gentle, winning tone
Which you had no time or thought for
With troubles enough of your own.

These little acts of kindness
So easily out of mind,
These chances to be angels
Which we poor mortals find,
They come to night and silence,
Each one, reproachful wraith,
When hope is faint and dagging
And a child has fallen on faith.

For life is all too short, dear,
And sorrow is all too great
To suffer our slow compassion
That tarries until too late;
And it isn't the thing you do, dear,
It's the thing you leave undone
Which gives you a bit of a heartache
At the setting of the sun.

Was Christ Raised?

There are thousands at the present day who discard all faith in the literal resurrection of Christ from the dead, and who still retain their church connections. When Christ is thus assailed by his professed friends, what may we not expect from his avowed enemies?

For the sake of establishing the minds of any who are wavering as to the truth of this sublime event, we subjoin a brief argument as follows:

The following facts in the case are acknowledged by friends and foes:

1. Jesus Christ frequently predicted the circumstances of his death. 2. He actually died. 3. Was buried. 4. Was missing from the tomb.

Now there are but three conceivable ways by which the body could be removed from the sepulchre. By his enemies, by his friends, or by his Father, as he had predicted.

If by his enemies, their motive must have been to produce the body, and thereby confront the apostles, and convince them of fraud in their Master. But the body was not produced by them.

If by his friends, we cannot tell for what purpose. The dead body could not prove to them or others that he was risen; but on the contrary, be a standing and visible proof against them.

It is true that his enemies reported that his friends had "stole him away." Matt. xxviii. 1, 16. But when their report is examined it will appear false.

1. So manifestly improbable is the report, that Matthew, though he faithfully records the whole, does not offer a syllable to refute it.

2. The disciples were few in number, and destitute of moral courage.

They were generally dismayed and terrified at the fate of their Master.

Hence, when he was apprehended, they all forsook him and fled. Peter followed him afar off; and when accused of being a disciple, denied it three times with vehemence and oaths. Not one attended him in the judgment hall. And when he was crucified, the only persons that ventured to stand near his cross were his mother, with two or three other women, and John.

It is not therefore probable that they would be found at such a work, especially at such a season; for,

3. It was the occasion of the great festival, the passover, when Jerusalem was full of people. It is also said to have been a time of the full moon.

4. It is not probable that all the guard would fall asleep at once, especially as they were in the open air.

5. If they were all asleep, they could not depose to anything that passed meantime. Sleeping witnesses! They could not know that it was stolen; or, if it was by whom.

6. It was certain death to Roman soldiers to be found sleeping upon guard. Hence, if they had been asleep, they would not have voluntarily confessed it.

7. If the soldiers had been believed, the rulers would have punished them. This they never did.

8. If the soldiers had believed their own story, they ever after would have reproached the disciples with it. This they were never known to do.

If, therefore, the body could be removed in no other way, it must have been by Divine power, as he had previously said.

The more direct evidence of this great miracle is contained in the following particulars:

1. There were eleven distinct appearances of Christ after his burial. These were at different hours of the day, at different places, and, on one occasion, to above five hundred persons.

2. He did not appear to them silently, but talked and ate with them, showed his hands and feet, made them handle him, &c.; held several long conversations with them, and at the last ascended up to heaven in their sight.

3. The witnesses, being a class of unlearned and despised men, were unequal to the task of imposition.

They were by no means credulous, but slow to believe in the resurrection of their Master.

5. There is a most remarkable change in the disposition and conduct of the disciples: from being the most timid of men they suddenly become courageous and undaunted.

They boldly preach that very Jesus whom, but a short time before, they had deserted in the greatest distress, and that, too, in the synagogues of Jerusalem.

And, although his crucifixion was fresh before their eyes, and they had reason to expect a similar fate, they still avow his resurrection.

6. The Lord's Supper was instituted as a perpetual memorial of his death, and the festival of the Lord's Day to commemorate his resurrection.

These memorials were instituted at the very time when the circumstances to which they relate took place, and have been observed in the Christian world ever since.

The resurrection of our Lord is thus established, and is proof sufficient of his Divine mission.

The Savior often appealed to his resurrection as the grand proof of his being sent from heaven; and his disciples constantly referred to it as the foundation of their faith.

Finally, this great event contains in itself the evidence both of miracle and prophecy. The prophecies herein completed are recorded in Psalm xvi. 10; John ii. 19-22.—A. Binney, in Our Rest, 1876.

The Outlook for the Boys.

An observant Englishman, talking recently of the changes which the last thirty years had made in the social conditions of this country, said: "You have now a large class of educated young men accustomed during their childhood to refinement and luxury, and tossed into the world without any assured income. What are you going to do with them? They correspond with the younger sons of our gentry, whom we find difficult enough to dispose of."

What to do with them? That is a problem which almost every household has to face, quite as vital as the silver question or Populist claims.

It would seem that the country which is big enough and rich enough to absorb and feed the hungry outcasts of every European nation ought to furnish support for her own educated sons. But does it?

No men among us must fight so hard for their livelihood as these well-trained, well-mannered American boys. What is the difficulty in their way?

Let us look into a single case and see if we can find an answer.

Forty years ago Mark Tyler was a country doctor in one of the Middle States. He was a man of gentle birth and good breeding, with ideas of courtesy and honor which now would appear a little overstrained. He had very few books; but he knew them thoroughly and loved them much: he had never heard an opera, but he sang with taste and feeling: he had never seen a good picture, but the mountains were his friends, and a quiet landscape under the setting sun would fill his eyes with tears. There was no bric-a-brac nor tapestry in his house; his wife had herself made the rag carpet in the dining room and draped the muslin window curtains; but they lived in it the life of gentlefolk, a life based upon a secure social position and full of hospitality, cheerfulness and repose.

Mark had one son, Joe, who was sent first to the village academy and then to a sectarian college, where some of the foremost scholars and statesmen of the country were trained. What time Joe could spare from his books he gave to the French horn, to the girls, to plowing, making hay, shoveling snow, or any other necessary work about the little home farm. It never occurred to him that this manual labor was a disgrace.

As soon as he was graduated he pushed out into the world. His father had a houseful of daughters and a small income. It was not the custom then for a sturdy young fellow in such circumstances to remain dependent while he studied a profession. Joe taught school by day, and pored over his Blackstone by night. When he was admitted to the bar he went to a newborn town in Ohio, bought a small body of land near it cheaply, and farmed while he waited for practice. He was healthy, and capable of many other kinds of work than pleading a case. His habits were simple; he had no expensive tastes. There was little competition, and living was cheap. He had a clear, easy road before him to success. He accumulated about a hundred thousand, which was a large fortune for those days, and married.

The reputation which by this time he had made in his profession warranted him, he thought, in removing to a large city, and there his boy Jack grew up, under very different conditions from those of his father's childhood.

Mrs. Tyler had a nice taste in art; she was an expert in old china, and music was her passion. The house was more delicately appointed than many a foreign ducal palace. Half of Joe's life was spent in Europe. The boy lived, there and at home, in an artistic atmosphere which made luxury a necessity to him. He was not effeminate nor a snob; but when the best art, the best music, the cookery of a French chef and clothes from old Bond Street have been the habits of a young man's life until he is twenty-five, he is likely to regard them as the essentials of life itself.

To provide these things for his wife and boy has taxed his father's strength to the outside limit. He has provided them; but he has not saved a dollar. Jack has gone through Harvard and spent two years in Heidelberg with as liberal an allowance as if he were the son of a millionaire. Now he knows that it is time that the burden was lifted from his father's shoulders. He must earn his own living. But how?

The professions in Eastern cities are overcrowded, and at best they require years of weary waiting. His father has neither family nor personal influence, and without them, when he asks his friends for a foothold on which his son can stand to honestly earn his bread, he meets as cordial a welcome as would a street beggar.

The younger sons of the English gentry usually try to get governorships, appointments, or they enter the Church, the army or the navy, or they go farm to pasture on the Indians or Egyptians.

But American men like the Tylers seldom interfere in the trade of politics, and our army and navy are too small fields to furnish food for any but a very small minority, and the country, thanks to God and its own honesty, has not yet robbed any weaker nations to furnish feeding grounds for its idle sons.

There are, it is true, the great careers of trade and railway operation nominally open. But the sanguine, penniless boy who goes into them, hoping to "work his way up," must begin at an early age, and when he reaches maturity he will find, as a rule, that the higher positions are all given, not to experts, but to the sons of the great capitalists who own and control the stock.

What is Jack to do?

There are, to be sure, the great West and Northwest where communities are still on the same stage of development which New York and Philadelphia had reached when Girard and the Astors found it possible to begin with a shilling and make huge fortunes by trade and speculation. But Jack's training has totally unfitted him for roughing it or grappling with the difficulties of such a struggle.

Now we come to the gist of the whole matter. It is his luxurious youth, the habit of indulgence, which has paralyzed the boy's strength and disabled him for the struggle.

"What then?" some indignant mother will ask. "Are we not to give our sons the education of gentlemen? Are we to deny them a knowledge of the best art and music and the highest social life in order to fit them for earning their living on a ranch or in a mining town?"

By no means. Jack's grandfather was probably as thoroughly educated a man as Jack. His tastes were as high and fine. Jack now himself would acknowledge him the better bred man of the two. But his happiness and social position did not depend on the outlay of money. He was used to a simple life and hard work, and content with them. He made no effort to keep up with the procession."

More than this, he belonged to the generation in which self-denial was reckoned the chiefest virtue, and indulgence in any kind of pleasure, "carnality."

Jack's generation boasts, justly, of broader and truer views. It sees that the comforts and luxuries of life are not vicious, but good things. But who clutch at them greedily, with both hands? Is not self-denial a better thing? Why give rank and precedence in this country only to the men who are able to buy luxuries? And why should Jack's father, with thousands of other poor gentleman, to gain this rank and precedence, try to live like a millionaire, and so make his life a miserable sham and lie? Could he not have quietly chosen to do without costly luxuries and based his claim to social status on something higher than his bank account? There are many such sane men yet among us, and they never fail of recognition and honor.

The Spartans were as rich a people as their luxurious, Athenian neighbors, when they voluntarily chose to live poorly and to train their children in habits of simplicity and hardship, in order to develop a nobler manhood.

Jack has been enervated and crippled by luxuries of which the seasons Athenian never dreamed. Perhaps he will teach his son, "Be the hardy Spartan, to do with it thou and to live above them.

Biblical Research.

In the London Times of recent date Mrs. Agnes S. Lewis, one of the sisters who made the important find of the Syriac Gospel in the library on Mt. Sinai, gives a detailed account of the deplorable condition in which that famous collection of manuscripts is found, and appeals to all the friends of Biblical learning and literature for financial aid in erecting a building where these treasures, consisting of many Greek, Syriac, Arabic and Iberian manuscripts, can be safely stored away. About fifteen or twenty thousand dollars would suffice for this purpose. The cloister of St. Catharine itself is too poor to undertake the erection of such a building; but the authorities have promised that if it is built by friends from abroad everything will be done to facilitate the use of this rich storehouse by scholars from all lands. At present the room of the Abbe is the only place where visiting scholars can work, and into this room scarcely a ray of light can fall. The monks lack all facilities and room properly to take care of their manuscripts. The most valuable of these are preserved in wooden chests. If at the hands of the Gardhausen Catalog of the Greek Manuscripts in the cloisters the student asks to see one or the other of these, the monks do their best to find it, but, says Mrs. Lewis, this is like hunting a needle in a haystack. The discovery of the Apology of Aristides in this cloister in 1889 and of the Syriac Gospel codex in 1892 is proof enough of the great value of the documents not yet examined. Among these are also some valuable Arabic codices of the New Testament. Recently an English scholar prepared a catalog of all the Semitic manuscripts, with the exception of a few Hebrew, in the cloister. It is claimed that when this catalog is published specialists will be astonished at the rich contents of this library, especially in the line of Christian apocalyptic literature.

Several years ago the German traveler, Edward Glaser, discovered a large number of Semitic inscriptions in Southern Arabia, and, when these were deciphered, it was discovered that they brought intelligence of the existence of Minean and Sabean kingdoms and of a knowledge of letters in those districts many centuries before Christ. In the interpretation Glaser was materially assisted by Dr. Hommel, of Munich, and Dr. Muller, of Vienna. On the basis of these inscriptions, Professor Sayce declared the visit of the Queen of Sheba to Solomon the most natural thing in the world. In addition it was also learned to a certainty that the representatives of the Semitic peoples in Africa, the Abyssinians, were originally established in Southern Arabia. Dr. Glaser has recently returned from a second expedition to those parts, and has brought with him copies of some eight hundred inscriptions and two hundred and fifty Arabic manuscripts, as also specimens of Arabian antiquities of various kinds. He has been helped in his research by the Bedouins, whom he had taught to make squeezes of inscriptions. These are able to penetrate regions practically inaccessible to the white traveler, and bring materials for research he could otherwise not get. The new finds have not yet been interpreted.

Some reports of the Sinjirli excavations by Dr. von Luschan have been made from time to time. Recently the Berlin "Mitteilungen aus den Orientalischen Sammlungen (1893 Heft XI), gave a lot of new details based on the new diggings made in these interesting remnants of Hittite civilization and literature in the Amanus regions north of the gulf of Antioch. In addition to a number of other valuable finds of historic importance in connection with Hittite architecture and sculpture, a large memorial stone tablet of the Assyrian King Esarhaddon has been found, in which in cuneiform inscription the king reports of his victory over the Ethiopian and Egyptian King Tirhaka (cf. Is. 37: 9). The vanquished king, whose physiognomy is that of a genuine Negro, is reported in the inscription to have been pursued into Egypt, his son, Usanukhara, falls into the hands of the victor and is put into chains. Memphis is captured, etc.

In the Brick Pyramid of Dashur attempts had been made for quite a while to discover some kings' graves, but without success. Recently de Morgan managed to discover these in the rocks on which the pyramid has been erected, where death chambers for a large number of royal persons have been hewn out. Of these a number have now been opened. Their existence had been suspected from the fact that a large number of valuable finds, such as jewels, gold ornaments and the like had been discovered in the pyramid. Brugsch-Bey, the brother of Heinrich Brugsch, who now has charge of the Museum at Ghizeh and is arranging these finds there, declares these are the most beautiful specimens of the kind ever discovered in Egypt.

Incredible Cruelty in Russia.

A story reaches London from Russia even more heartrending in its essential details than the story of the hero of "Les Miserables," which it closely resembles. Thirty-eight years ago a Russian lad 18 years old, Ivan Rykoff, who drank too much vodka at a wedding feast, entered a church and carried off the wax candles. Under the cruel laws of those days he was condemned to the Siberian mines. Several months later he escaped after fearful adventures and reached the City of Tomsk befriended by a farmer, secured the passport of a deceased workman, and became a good citizen. He married, prospered, and became locally prominent. Recently at a family reunion he told his wife and children the story for the first time. The walls must have had ears. Ten days later a gendarme entered his bedroom one morning and told Rykoff he was charged with escaping from Siberia. The gray-haired man turned pale. "Is it true?" asked the officer. "It is true enough, God be praised," replied the trembling old man.

"Very well, then, you are my prisoner."

Rykoff dressed himself and went to prison. By the advice of his lawyer he forwarded a petition praying to be released. His plea produced an impression on the officials and Rykoff was set at liberty, but only a few days. On further consideration it was decided to bring him to trial. In court he related the full story fully and frankly, throwing himself on the mercy of the Judges. Justice, however, was inexorable, and the law was allowed to have its course. Rykoff was condemned to be taken back to the mines of Siberia and kept in penal servitude a longer time than that fixed by the court which tried him when a boy. Before leaving the prison where he is now confined he is to receive a severe flogging of forty or fifty lashes. It seems incredible that such a sentence should be executed, now that international publicity has been given to the pitiful story. —N. Y. Sun.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 13, 1894. NO. 22.

The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." All a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the possession of the nations; the redemption of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the translation of the righteous; and the destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for last salvation.

An Exhortation.

"Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. ii. 10.

Cheer up dear faithful workers, perhaps our labors have not been appreciated, but never mind, this has been the common lot of all God's faithful toilers. As I look over the history of the heartless past I ask myself the question, am I better than others who fought the terrible battles of other years unappreciated? But dear fellow laborers, while souls are being lost we must not be idle, the watchword is faithful, faithful, faithful. How long? Unto death. What is the necessary sacrifice, I have given all for Christ, my hands shall minister to him, my feet shall run to carry his divine message of salvation, my tongue and my pocket book (the latter being so hard to consecrate to anything but self) my tongue shall speak his praise and minister words of comfort to the distressed, my means shall relieve and help poor suffering humanity, and push the cause of truth. O, dear fellow laborers, the prospect looks gloomy some times when after doing our best to bring out God's truth, we are met with cold criticism or fault-finding, but what are these trifles, when we remember others who had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea moreover of bonds and imprisonment, they were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword, they wandered about in sheep skins and goat skins, being destitute, afflicted, tormented, of whom the world was not worthy. They wandered in deserts, in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth. What a picture of suffering? Then that other company later on who met in caves and dens of the earth for fear of their enemies, and even taking joyfully the spoiling of their goods, knowing it was all for their loved Master's sake. What a contrast between then and now. No luxuriant couches, or plushy carpets from oriental looms, no downy pillows, no beautifully cushioned pews where God's professed children can recline and sleep while the Rev. D. D. says those smooth eloquent nothings. No: their bed the rack, their home the dungeon, their pillows the chopping block. What a strange, sad, unpopular company, the world never appreciated their worth, but God has marked every sacrifice made, every pain endured for him, not one thing forgotten, and when the pay day comes that little flock stands awaiting their reward, they are made up of the rejected of the earth, that strange unpopular people, but they are God's nobility and when he comes to claim his own they will say: "Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him and he will save us," and then says Christ: "I will confess your names before my Father and the holy angels," and then, O then, listen; never will more welcome words fall, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom," then to meet the church of the first born and an innumerable company of angels, and Jesus from his throne drops these welcome words, "Thou wast faithful over a few things, I will make you ruler over many things, enter into the joys of thy Lord. Then loved ones in the Lord, care-worn, discouraged companions, let us not tire for we are almost in sight of the blessed prize, soon every burden will be laid down and if we faint not a crown of life is awaiting us, for "he that overcometh shall inherit all things." Pray for me that my faith fail not.

THE Liberalists at the Presbyterian General Assembly seem to have scored the first victory by electing the Moderator. The case of Prof. Smith is to be decided shortly.

BROTHER Hatch writes us to announce that he will be at Argos the third Sunday in June, and at Gospel Grove the fourth Sunday in June. Meetings at each place to begin Saturday night before.

AT this time striking miners are preventing the mining and shipping of coal almost entirely throughout the United States. The military in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania are being called to suppress riots.

A DEAR brother in England writes that "it is a sad outlook there for many thousands of our fellow mortals, and the wretched state of things cannot be put right by mortal man; none but the hand of Omnipotence can do any permanent good."

MULAY Hassan, the Sultan of Morrocco, died suddenly June 7, and reports say there were evidences of poisoning. The unsettled condition of affairs in that country makes the situation little less than critical, and the nations of Europe will have to act in concert to prevent trouble.

THE meeting over last Sunday held at Antioch meeting house, five miles south of this place was in point of numbers and interest equal to the usual attendance here. The preaching was by Brother and Sister Woodward of Michigan, and Brothers Wagoner, Conner and Wince, of this state. The Secretary will make report for next issue.

THAT is a fearful indictment against the smart men of Chicago which Editor Sneed makes. He says that "everything that is illegal is assumed to be right, no matter how dishonorable it may be, no matter how infamous it may be, or how cruel it may be; so long as it is permitted by law, or so long as they can evade the law by any subterfuge, they consider they are doing perfectly right. They believe in the State, they have ceased to believe in God."

A JEWISH paper in Cleveland advices all Jews who are able to open their houses for the entertainment of delegates to the coming convention of the Christian Endeavorers, saying that Abraham invited strangers to his hospitality without asking what their creed was. We also see it announced that an old gentlemen is about to leave the "Montefiore Home for the aged" for Jerusalem, where he wishes his bones to lie.

Prof. Huxley on the Bible.

It may surprise some of our readers to know what the great scientist has lately written about the grand old Book. He says: "Greatly to the surprise of my friends, I have always set much store by the reading of the Bible, and the study of that most remarkable collection of books among the people. Its teachings are so infinitely superior to those of the sects, who are just as busy now as the Pharisees were 1800 years ago in smothering them under the precepts of men. It is so certain in my mind that the Bible contains within itself the refutation of nine-tenths of the mixture of sophistical metaphysics and old world superstitions which have been piled around it by the socalled Christians of later times. It is so clear that the only immediate and ready antidote to the poison which has been mixed with Christianity, to the intoxication and delusion of mankind, lies in copious draughts from the undefiled spring, that I exercise the right and duty of free judgment on the part of every man, mainly for the purpose of inducing other laymen to follow my own example." The Professor strikes the great Apostate system called Christianity a sledge hammer blow, here, surely.

We believe it was Emerson who wrote: "If your eye is on the Eternal, your intellect will grow, and your opinions and actions will have a beauty which no learning or combined advantages of men can rival."

ONE of the most beautiful gems of Oriental literature is quoted by Sir Wm. Jones in a page from the Persian poet Sadi, the sentiment of which is embodied in the following lines:—

"The soul, bound to perfection, like to virtue,
The eye that loves to Let man who hopes to be forgiven,
Forgive and bless his foe."

IN civilized society the receiver of stolen goods is considered as bad as the thief;—and if a person by evil speaking robs or attempts to rob another of his character by evil speaking, is not the receiver in that case too on a level with the thief? So it would seem to us, if he did not discountenance and reprove it. "A froward man soweth strife, and a whisperer separateth chief friends;" and one of the things the Lord hates is "he that soweth discord among brethren." "He that goeth about as a talebearer revealeth secrets, therefore meddle not with him that flattereth with his lips."

SOMEBODY says, "half the troubles of life are born of trifles." "Somebody" is pretty nearly right this time. As a rule man bears great misfortune with more equinimity than he does little annoyances. If a benedict loses the wife of his bosom the odds are that he will bear it well, philosophically; but if he misplaces his latchkey he may raise a storm. Many useful little articles have a way of keeping out of sight when they are wanted, and exasperate people who seem to have lots of patience and fortitude under more serious troubles. The latter peculiarity we attribute to mental discipline, the former to the want of it; apparently little things are left to take care of themselves, while big ones are calculated on and provided against.

How Jesus Learned Obedience.

Sister Alice Kerr wishes to know "how Jesus learned obedience by the things which he suffered?" Well, Sister, keep both teacher and scholar in mind, while you read Heb. xii. 2, "Looking unto Jesus (the scholar who learned obedience) the author (leader) of our faith, who for the joy that was set before him endured (bore with patience) the cross, despising the shame and (as the result of this) is set down at the right hand of the throne of God. For consider him that endured (bore with patience) such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds. Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, (as he did) striving against sin." The first verse speaks of a great cloud of witnesses who set a similar example, but the second directs us especially to Jesus—consider what inducement was offered him, and then that the same joy is set before us; and if we by heart belief and obedience are in h[im] we are joint heirs with him; but in the mean time have to suffer with him. The Captain of our salvation was made perfect through suffering, and so must we. He learned obedience to the things which he suffered, and so must we. In a word the suffering stood right across the road to joy, and it stands across our path just the same; there is no getting around it or over it,—we must go through it. He that will live godly shall suffer persecution. But if we suffer with him we shall also reign with him; one is just as certain as the other. From this it will be seen that not only can we learn the same lesson, but we must. He whose example we are told to consider says tenderly to us, "Be of good cheer, I have overcome the world;" and whispers from heaven to us that he will give to overcomers to eat of the tree of life and the hidden manna, and give them power over the nations, and make them pillars in the temple of of God, and to inherit all things, and sit with him upon his throne. Joy enough to set before us, blessed Jesus. And if we want to be overcomers, we would do well to make a golden text of the words in 1 John v. 4, "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

By examining the tongue of a patient, physicians find out what ails the body—earnest and thoughtful men closely watch the same little member to find out what ails the mind. Truly it is an unruly member, the instrument of all strife, the cause of division, the organ of error, of calumny and of lies. A slip of the foot is not half so serious an accident as a slip of the tongue. Hear what the Spirit says: "If any man among you seem to be religious and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain," James i. 26. "If a man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able to bridle the whole body."....."The tongue is a little member and boasteth great things." "Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth! And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity: so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course (or wheel) of nature, and it is set on fire of Gehenna....The tongue can no man tame: it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison." James iii. 5-8.

THE latest statistics relating to the drink traffic show that it has a terrible grip upon this country. As the number of sellers is more than 230,000 the drinkers must be reckoned by millions. For the year ending June 30, 1893, according to the report of the United States Commissioner of internal revenue, more than 1,171,000,000 gallons of liquor were withdrawn for consumption. This allows nearly 19 gallons to every man, woman and child in the United States. Estimating the number of women who do not drink and children too young to drink at 35,000,000, we have left about 28,000,000 of men and drinking women. But this includes all men who are total abstainers. Making allowance for these the population of drinkers is reduced to perhaps 20,000,000. This would raise the amount per capita, not taking account of the quantities diverted to mechanical, chemical and culinary uses, to somewhere between 50 and 60 gallons. The revenues distilled and malt liquors, last year amounted to nearly one hundred and twenty-seven and a quarter million dollars. The economical loss alone is something frightful to contemplate these hard times; but it is as nothing compared with the moral and physical disasters involved. What a monster evil! Oh, how we long to see the day when the corruptor of the earth is to be destroyed.

"Risen with Christ."

"Questioner" would "like just a line or two by way of explanation of the words "risen with Christ" in Col. iii. 1. Briefly, then, we understand that the Scriptures usually employ the words life and death literally, but sometimes figuratively, as in the above passage, and where Jesus says, "Let the dead bury the dead," Matt. viii. 22; and where Paul says, Eph. ii. 1 "And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins, wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the Prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience," etc. ....."But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he hath loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ; by grace ye are saved." This clearly indicates the nature of the death, and resurrection as well; so now we will look up the process. By reference to Col. ii. 12, we find still another death introduced. Remember the former condition of these saints was one of death—dead in trespasses and sins; but here they are represented as having another death, and this time it is not a death in sin, but a death to sin, or in the very words of the Spirit in Rom. vi. 11, "Reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God, through our Lord Jesus Christ." "Buried with Him, by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." Returning to Col. ii. 12, we read, "Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him[How?] through the faith of the operation of God who hath raised him from the dead." The burial with him must not be lost sight of; "for, if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him." Now the question comes up, what death did he die? The answer is, Rom. vi. 10, "For in that he died, he died unto sin once." Is this startling? Did he once die in sin, and have to die to it? No, dear Enquirer, He knew no sin. We understand that he died in resistance of sin; and when we die with him and are buried with him, it is a pledge that we, too, will die, before we will yield to sin. This condition of mind and purpose is set forth in the symbolic adopting ordinance on being raised from the grave of water, it is to walk in newness of life.

We have already written more than "a line or two" having given once more, that it is far easier to ask questions than it is to answer them; but we will try another word. This raising process is the operation of the Word of the Spirit. It begins with the reception of that truth, and proceeds as the believer grows, being nourished, and knit together, and increaseth with the increase of God," Col. ii. 19. Striking language this. In a word, it is a moral process that ends in physical perfection, in glory and honor, and majesty and power. May it be ours, together with "the dead" and the faithful of all ages to share this great salvation. But we may as well may better—understand that the moral process must go on. Perfection of character must now be diligently aimed after, or else perfection of nature will never be attained to.

The Time.

We have just received a pamphlet entitled the "Midnight cry." The author claims to have discovered that the "appointed time" for the return of Christ is Passover 1896. He says the prophetic papal period of 1260 years dates from 606 A. D. the decree of Phocas brings us to 1866; and to this he adds a tarrying time of 30 years, answering to the type of 30 years' delay in the deliverance of Israel from Egypt. He also makes the alleged "seven times" measurement of 2520 years to terminate at the same time, by dating it from before Christ 625,—the beginning of the Babylonian Empire under Nabopolassar. But we think, whatever consideration his calculations may be entitled to, that he is exceedingly presumptive when he dares to say that it "is the unerring finger of the Almighty God of Israel that is now pointing to 1896 for our deliverance, and the coming of the Lord, or else the types become dead letters and dirty blanks having no meaning whatever." Mr. Sykes never seems to realize that possibly he might err in reading those types, and yet the Scriptures be true. We have had many prophetic-date experts as dogmatic as he, since 1843, but where are they now? To our mind the solemn injunction to watch does not agree with the idea of definite time, and the signs of the times which all may discern, seem to explain, to some extent, why date calculations have failed. We regard the deep interest in the subject of dates in all parts of the world where the Bible circulates of itself a sign of the times. To reflective minds there seems to be something which says a crisis in the affairs of this age is impending, and great numbers are attempting to divine the time.

We firmly believe the Lord is at hand, and it thrills us through and through to think that possibly he may appear for those who are his long before 1896; and we are trying to keep in mind the fact that it is those who are ready who go in,—and that there is no time to get ready after he comes.

Beloved, when troubles like a flood roll over you, think of the sweet words of Jesus, Behold I come quickly, and that he is coming to inaugurate the long desired change. And what a change! Oh, what a state! Mortality is swallowed up of life. And what a home? And what a place!—the "brightest in the universe, garnished with wealth, hallowed by his presence, decorated by his skill, lighted by his glory, fragrant with flowers of Paradise, and beautified with trees of living green." But this is not all,—you will be like him; for you will see him as he is! What a lifting up that will be! What a glorious level: be like him; And oh, transporting thought!—See him as he IS! not as he was, pierced with grief, and saturated by sorrow, and nailed to the tree, and laid in a borrowed tomb! No, see him as he is, crowned with glory, a conquering hero, the King of kings. But amid the splendors of that day we see some of it is reflected from the cross. It is the Lamb that was slain that is in the midst of the throne; it is to the Lamb that was slain the victor's sing. It is the Lamb that leads to living fountains of water. It is the Lamb who stands upon Mount Zion surrounded with the host having his Father's name written in their foreheads. Blessed Jesus, we long to see thee! Soon return, O glorious Redeemer, Master, friend and brother; creation groans, and thy Bride weeps for thy return. Come Lord Jesus, quickly come.

Anointing with Oil.

According to promise we now take up the question: "Is the injunction contained in James v. 14 applicable to us of the 19th century?"

Some are quite sensitive on this point; but in answering a question we must speak what we understand to be the truth in the premises though some be hurt. We are certain of one thing, however: It will pain us, if we pain others. We write with the object of instructing, comforting and strengthening.

It is said that "there seems to be no limit, either to the command or the promise, and for that reason it must apply to the Church through all time." At first this appears to be plausible reasoning, but we have long since come to a different conclusion, and will as briefly state our reasons, as will make it reasonably certain they will be understood; and 1st, We hold that the truth of God must be both known and obeyed. But although obedience be the broadest of all principles, it is sometimes binding only on certain individuals, or in certain circumstances or a certain dispensation. No one will question that the practice of Christ and the apostles in temperance, patience, kindness, love, reverence, diligence, truthfulness and faithfulness are imperative in all ages. At the same time they practiced some things we are not expected to. Christ observed the Passover and other requirements of the Mosaic law. The apostles practiced fasting; were allowed to take nothing for their journey save a staff, no scrips, no bread, no money, nor two coats. No one feels condemned for setting aside these instructions now, or for not following their example, because Christ was under the law; it had not yet been nailed to the cross; and we are very differently circumstanced otherwise. We have either to take money or stay at home.

2ndly, We hold that the injunction and command in James v. 14, 15 apply only to apostolic times; because the elders were then of divine appointment, through the apostles, and not only they, but the whole congregations were endowed with gifts awanting now; and because while the oil in Judea was celebrated for its sanitive qualities, so that people scarcely ever took a journey without carrying it with them, as was the case with the Samaritan, Luke x. 34, we know of no such oil. It can scarcely be doubted that oil was in use as a natural remedy,—and if natural not miraculous. And then, if used as a natural remedy, for what purpose was prayer made unless it be that God would bless the means used. But although it distinctly says the prayer of faith shall save the sick we cannot believe this promise to have been absolute even in apostolic times, because Paul was not devoid of faith, certainly, and yet we find that he left Trophimus sick at Miletum (2 Tim. iv. 20). It is also evident by the deep concern of the Philippians because of Epaphroditus' sickness while in company with Paul, and also Paul's own apprehension in the matter,—see Phil. ii. [illegible] that none of them understood that infallible means of recovery were within their reach: and we have proof here that his recovery was due to a special intervention of providence, in mercy to Paul, lest, in addition to his bonds, he be overwhelmed with sorrow at the loss of his fellow soldier. Paul had infirmities of his own but whether mental or physical he did not use the means prescribed by James. And Timothy seems to have been troubled with dyspepsia or other stomach trouble, but he prescribes for him quite a different treatment, see 1 Tim. v. 23.

Besides this, if through the anointing of oil one attack of sickness could be cured, why could not another and another and another be cured by the same means? In that case when would they die? For those and other reasons we conclude that while it is both our right and duty to pray for our sick brethren and sisters, it is always subject to the will of God. When we see our blessed Lord in an agony of prayer in Gethsemane, and remember his assertions while standing at the grave of Lazarus, that his Father always heard him, it should teach us that while it is our privilege to pray, it is God prerogative to answer, and he never fails to do so when it is consistent with his Divine will.

We write what we believe, and do not presume to encroach upon the faith or experience of others; and while we admit that quite all the difficulties have not been removed, we think the opposite view far more inexplicable.

Dear Restitution:

I enclose $1.50, for which please send THE RESTITUTION to F. W. Thurston, for one year. I am recommending the paper everywhere because I believe in it, and the doctrine it advocates. I am a student of the doctrines taught in the Scriptures, and if there is one thing the people need today it is Scriptural teaching, taking heed to the doctrine. The Lord has heard my prayer, and sent us a preacher, Bro. W. S. Finn, formerly of Scranton, Pa. He preached Sunday in the tent on the text, "Preach the Word." It was good, and we all enjoyed it very much. He is over 80 years old and getting feeble. Cannot come out at night, but will preach on Sunday morning for us if the Lord will permit.

Yours in haste, and yet patiently waiting for the promises.

E. D. MCCLEES.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I thought I would write to THE RESTITUTION, which we have been taking several years, and we enjoy reading so much. It is a pleasure to know that so many are living close to the Savior. I have been serving the Lord for over a year. I was baptized by my dear father.

Your sister in the blessed hope of eternal life.

MATTIE HEADON.

Dear Brother Underwood:

I would be glad to say to W. H. Wilson, through your paper, that he gave the true explanation of Rev. ii. as far as he went. He has my hearty thanks. I greatly prize THE RESTITUTION. Will you permit me to ask Bro. H. T. Baker, if the King of the North, spoken of in the 40th verse of the 11th chapter of Daniel, is the same He that plants his tabernacle or his palace between the seas? If so, is he not the same power spoken of in Ezek. xxxviii? If so, is he not the antichrist of 2 Thess. ii?

Yours for the truth.

LEONARD DAVIS.

Dear Restitution:

I have a word to say to the brothers and sisters. I read with pleasure their letters in the letter drawer, also the articles written by B. Wilson, W. H. Wilson, B. C. Simonds, and others. I read them and then go to the Bible the Blessed Book of all, and there find comfort and joy no mortal can bestow. It is my resolve and determination by the grace of God to live the life of a Christian as near as I can. My faith is centered in Jesus who is able to save to the uttermost. I know when he shall appear we shall be like him, and our loved ones who are now sleeping in death shall awake to die no more, then to be with him in glory. Blessed hope, soon may he come. I know that he is nigh, even at the door, the signs of the times bespeak that our redemption draweth nigh. I ask an interest in your prayers that I may hold out faithful, and be permitted to enter that joy that is promised to all them that love his appearing. If the Lord will I expect to be at the conference at Nevada, Iowa. Brother Eychaner says this may be the last meeting before Christ returns, and wants us all to come. Let us go and have a feast of fat things.

Your brother, waiting and looking for our Lord's return.

The Election of the Jews.

"Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth," 2 Tim. ii. 15.

In our onward study of the Holy Scriptures we have selected Rom. xi. 28, for a few thoughts which says, "As concerning the gospel they are enemies for your sakes, but as touching the election they are beloved for the fathers' sakes."

We selected this verse and verse as the assertion that there are two elections. First, dispensing the blessings in the kingdom as rulers. Second, the election to receive the blessings in the kingdom as subjects.

To this second election we invite special attention, as the end to be obtained. The gospel is now calling out a people to make them rulers. Acts xv. 14. The election is now going on, and each one that has obeyed the gospel must see to it that he makes his calling and election sure, for if ye do these things ye shall never fall. 2 Peter i. 10.

The election to receive the blessing as subjects is also now going on but happily for the Jews they are beloved for the fathers' sakes to receive the blessing when the kingdom is again restored to Israel. Acts i. 6. The great blessing that is promised to the masses of the people was given to Abraham of old, saying, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Gen. xii. 3; xviii. 18; xxii. 18. This great blessing will come first to the Jews then to all nations. To receive this great blessing the Jews are cradled in it from the cradle to the grave. They are taught all their lives that their coming Messiah is to bless them, for only blindness in part is happened to Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. Rom. xi. 25. The blindness is only in part, and not in full. It cannot be said that they are blinded in full, then they never have been fully blinded, nor they never will for they are beloved for the fathers' sakes to the election to be blessed as subjects in the kingdom of God. This idea the apostle Paul has been holding up to the view all along through this eleventh chapter of Romans, and we find at the 5th verse even so then at this present time also there is a remnant according to the election of grace favor or love, and we find in the 6th verse if by grace then is it no more grace but if it be of works then it is no more work. The remnant is but a small part of the whole, so it was in the days of the apostles it was but a small portion that was elected according to grace, favor, or love, and the rest were blinded, hence this election is obedience to the gospel, and is the election of grace, favor, or love, and the other election is the election of works which will come on the masses of the people after the Lord comes, and in the 7th we find the apostle Paul saying, what then, and then goes on to tell Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for of course they have overlooked the election by grace which works by love, and look forward to the great blessing that comes through works, this election of the masses to be blessed as subjects of the kingdom of God stands out most prominent all along the line, and we want to so understand it for it is a part of the good news of the kingdom of God. The election of the masses to be blessed is one of the important subjects of the Bible, and ought to be thoroughly canvassed to our own satisfaction, before we give it up. God will bless the worthy ones that are subjects of the kingdom, not the unworthy ones by any means.

Poetry.

In the Heart.

If no kindly thought or word
We can give some soul to cheer;
If our hands, from hour to hour,
Do no deeds of gentleness;
If to lone and weary ones
We a welcome will deport—
Then 'tis winter in the year,
Yet 'tis winter in the heart.

If no smiles to lift the gloom
From a sick and loathsome life;
If we seek to foil the storm
On our fellow-mortal's sleeve;
If we bid all hate and wrath
From the up-rit to depart—
Then 'tis winter in the sky,
Yet 'tis summer in the heart!

Coming for his Bride.

The above words form the sweetest phrase the English vocabulary can afford. It not only causes the heart to sing for joy, but his precious waiting ones would even make the vaulted heavens ring with triumphant shouts of gladness. The thought is divinely sweet! Look to the East! Oh, look to the East! pure spotless Virgin! See the "day-star" rise! the horizon is gilded with omens of the "Bride's" "Beloved!" Oh, does not her heart grow fonder? Does she not yearn to fold him in her loving embrace? Are not her heart-chords touched by thoughts divine?

"Look up, and lift up your heads!" See! See! the clouds like burning billows, flash with glory! Oh, my Savior! there he comes! clad in robes of radiant light, seated upon his chariot of lightning, rolling out from the unfathomed depths of heaven's ether a blaze. "His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire; and his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and his voice as the sound of many waters. And he had in his right hand seven stars; and out of his mouth went a sharp two-edged sword: and his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength."

Oh, listen, what is that we hear? it is a trumpet's peal! it is the archangel's dead awakening blast! 'tis loud, 'tis deeper than the thunder's maddest roar! it pierces even the dark recesses of the silent chambers of the dead! the turbulent sea swells, and yawns, and from it spring the saintly sleeper. The grave bursts open and from it arise those who have so sweetly slept in Jesus. Yes, beloved "Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." Oh yes, "awake and sing:" why? Because the night of thy sorrow is past, yea, gone forever!

Listen again, I hear another voice filled with tenderness and love, it is an invitation from him who is "a shelter in the time of storm." He says: "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain: For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock. Thou shalt hide them in the secret of thy presence from the pride of man: thou shalt keep them secretly in a pavilion from the strife of tongues. O love the Lord, all ye his saints; for the Lord preserveth the faithful, and plentifully rewardeth the proud doer. Be of good courage, and he shall strengthen your heart, all ye that hope in the Lord."

What a happy meeting, who can possibly measure the ecstacy of joy the long-expectant Bride will experience when she meets her Beloved, for whom she has so anxiously waited. "And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia: for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white: for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints. And he saith unto me, Write, Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb. And he saith unto me, These are the true sayings of God."

It is a time to be "glad" and "rejoice," and give "honor" to God, because the time has now arrived for his beloved Son to be married. "His wife hath made herself ready," she is clothed in "fine linen, clean and white," yes, whiter than the driven snow, not a "spot" can be found, no, not even a "wrinkle" on those magnificent folds. Happy Bride! no more separation, but from this time forth she shall "ever be with the Lord." "I am my Beloved's, and my Beloved is mine." Oh, listen to a peal more joyous than when the sons of God shouted for joy at creation's birth! Oh, 'tis melody divine! it breaks forth like the "voice of a great multitude," and increases in intensity like the "voice of many waters," and culminates "as the voice of mighty thunderings," "saying, Alleluia: for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth."

Beloved, this is redemption jubilee! Oh, how I do love to hear about it, my mind loves to dwell upon it in sweet meditation, and when I do so, it seems to make life's burdens easier, my heart does sing for joy! My mind reaches forward in fond anticipation, to that grand assembly, and long to be with them, and shout: "Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth." Don't you, my brother and sister in the Lord? I feel assured that many of you can respond, heartily "Amen!"

Following this will be another event of momentous importance, and that is Christ's coming with his saints. Words fail me to picture the magnificence of this stupendous event. It will be a sight which will try mortal vision to behold. Remember for a moment the magnificent glory which will radiate from the person of the Savior alone, and consider how,

"The heavens shall glow with splendor,
But brighter far than they
The saints shall shine in glory
As Christ shall them array.
Then look up all the Saints
Shout the cry of
In the Coming day that's coming by and by."

It dazzled the eyes of Saul of Tarsus to the extent of depriving him of sight, and throwing to the ground his attendants as if felled by lightning. Inspiration informs us that the glory which attended our Savior on this occasion, outshone the sun at midday. When he shall appear in the heavens with his saints, it will be in "power and great glory," so much so, that the tribes (nations) of the earth will be terrified. It will be luminous as the lightnings flash from the east even unto the west. We also read that the holy city will have no need of either sun or moon (Rev. xxi. 23) to shine in it, for the glory of God and the Lamb will be its light. Why, even the moon shall be confounded and the sun itself ashamed, when the Lord shall reign in Mt. Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously.

His Bride will partake of the same glory. They shall be made like him when they see him, he will at that time change this body of our humiliation, and fashion it like unto his glorious body. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Yes, these righteous ones will shine as the "brightness of the firmament." And as star differs from star in glory, so also will it be with the risen dead.

Consider for a moment the magnificence of Christ's coming with his saints. Behold Christ luminous with glory, his Bride also shining as the sun, attended by angels magnificently arrayed in glory, the effect on the earth must be fearful to behold. This glory will cover the entire globe. "For as the lightning cometh out of the east and shineth even unto the west, (two extreme points of the compass) so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be." Again, "Then shall the tribes (nations) of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." The "tribes" or nations of the earth could not "see" this glorious coming of our Lord, if it was only visible in one locality. But "every eye" shall see him. This magnificent glory, illuminating the heavens like unto rolling billows of fire must remain visible for at least twenty-four hours, or during one revolution of the earth, else it would not be possible for "every eye" to see him.

Even the "Wicked" Antichrist he shall "consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming." It will be no wonder that they will hide themselves "in the dens and rocks of the mountains," and pray that they may fall on them that they may be hid from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb. "For the great day of his (the lamb's) wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?" One thing is certain, those who are ready when he comes "as a thief," will be "able to stand."

There are two classes who will not be "able to stand," viz: those who fail to make their "calling and election sure," and those who neglect to effect a change of relationship from "the first to the second Adam, by becoming obedient to "the faith" by baptism. "Abraham's seed" are the only ones the angelic reapers will gather. The great question which should concern us all is, Am I ready today for his coming "as a thief?" To-morrow may be too late. There will be nothing unusual to warn us, but it will be as sudden as a shaft of lightning from the clouds. Two farmers will be at work in the field as usual, the mechanic in his shop, the merchant in his store, women at their household duties, when quick as a twinkling of an eye the faithful will be snatched away. Did you ever stop to meditate as to how you would feel if you were left behind? May perchance several loved members of your family are taken, and "Oh, I am left alone!" Sad thought! Should you be left it will be your own fault alone, you can make it otherwise if you will. If any one is conscious that he or she is not ready, there is no time for delay, he may perchance come "as a thief" while you are reading these words, or even before you rise in the morning, we cannot tell, we must now look for him day by day, or even hour by hour. Hands will be wrung in bitter anguish by those who have known their Lord's will and done it not.

Remember, oh remember, that "the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels in flaming fire, (the magnificent glory attending the coming of Christ with his Bride) taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." "Watch" and "obey," are the watch words of the time in which we live. "Obey" the gospel, and "watch" your own lives. "The time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God, and if it begin at us, what shall the end be of them who obey not the gospel of God?" "Who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth?" Oh, dear

"Watchman, sound a louder measure,
For the people do not hear;
As a lovely song of pleasure,
Fell thy words upon their ear.
Watchman, watch the coming danger;
Blow the trumpet, warn the fated;
Wake the slothful, rouse the stranger,
Lest their blood be on thy head."

Acts of the Apostles. Chap. 5.

1. And a certain man of prominence, Ananias by name, along with Sapheira his wife sold a possession,

2. And robbed for his own use from the price, his wife also being cognizant of it, and laid it at the feet of the apostles.

3. And Petros said, Ananias, why hath Satanas filled thy heart to falsify the Sanctified Spirit, and rob from the price of the estate for thy own use?

4. While it remained, did it not remain thine, and when sold was it in thy official power? What is this thing that thou hast put in thy heart? Thou hast not lied to men, but unto God.

5. And Ananias hearing these words fell and expired; and great fear occurred to all those who were listening.

6. And the younger men arose and enshrouded and carried him out and buried him.

7. And then occurred an interval of about three hours, and his wife not knowing what had occurred came in.

8. And Petros answered her, Tell me, Did ye give the estate for so much? And she said, yea for so much.

9. And Petros to her: Why is it that ye agreed to test the Spirit of the Lord? Lo the feet of those who have buried thy husband are at the door and they will carry thee out.

10. And she fell down straightway and expired; and the young men came in and found her dead, and carried her out and buried her beside her husband.

11. And then occurred great fear to all the church and to all who heard these things.

12. And through the hands of the apostles there occurred many signs and prodigies among the royal-people, and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch.

13. And no one of the rest dared to join them; but the royal-people magnified them:

14. And all the more those who were putting faith in the Lord were added to them, a multitude of both men and women.

15. So that they were carrying their enfeebled down to the public squares and placing them on little couches and litters that the shadow of Petros might over-shadow any one of them as he was going by.

16. And the multitudes also from the cities round about Hierousalem came together, bringing their enfeebled and those annoyed by unclean spirits, all of whom were healed.

17. And the chief-priest arose and all those with him, they being the Sect of the Sadducees, and became full of zeal,

18. And laid their hands upon the apostles and put them in public ward.

19. But an angel of the Lord in the night opened the doors of the prison and leading them out said,

20. Go your way and stand and talk in the temple unto the royal-people all the oracular words of this life.

21. And when they had heard it, they entered into the temple at early dawn and were teaching; and the chief-priest and those along with him arrived and called together the Sunedrion and all the Council of old men of the Sons of Israel, and sent to the public-prison to have them led.

22. And when the subordinates arrived they did not find them in the prison, and returning they announced,

23. Saying, the prison we found shut with all security and the guards standing at the doors; but when we had opened it we found no one within;

24. And when the officer of the temple and the chief-priests heard these words, they were perplexed about them, at what this might turn out to be.

25. But a certain one arrived and told them, Lo the men whom ye put in the prison are standing in the temple and teaching the royal-people.

26. Then the officer went along with the subordinates and led them; not with violence, for they feared the royal-people, lest they be stoned.

27. And having led them they stood them in the Sunedrion; and the Chief-priest asked them saying,

28. Did we not enjoin on you not to teach in this name? And lo ye have filled Hierousalem with your teaching and intend to bring upon us the blood of this man.

29. And Petros answered and the apostles said, It behooveth us to obey God rather than man.

30. The God of our fathers hath awakened Jesous, whom ye took in hand and hung upon a tree;

31. This one hath God exalted to his right hand as a chief-leader and Savior to give repentance to Israel and remission of sins.

32. And we are witnesses of these oracular words and the Sanctified Spirit is, which God hath given to those who put faith in him.

33. And when they heard it they were sawn asunder and wished to destroy them.

34. But a certain one arose in the Sunedrion, a Pharisee by the name of Gamaliel, a teacher of law, one honored by all the royal-people, and directed the men to be put outside for a little.

35. And said unto them, Men, Israelites, Take heed to yourselves as to what ye intend to do to these men.

36. For before these days arose Theudas, saying that he was somebody himself, unto whom a number of men about four hundred inclined; and he was destroyed and all as many as put faith in him were disbanded and came to nought.

37. After him arose Joudas the Galilean in the days of the registry and he stood away a royal-people after him. He also perished, and all those as many as put faith in him were scattered.

38. And as to these things now I say unto you, stand away from these men and let them alone, because if this Council or this work be of men, it will have come to an end;

39. But if it is of God ye will not be able to take them down lest perchance ye be found God-fighters.

40. And they put faith in him, and summoning the apostles they flayed them and enjoined on them not to talk in the name of Jesous, and let them go.

41. Then they went their way from the face of the Sunedrion rejoicing that they had been accounted worthy to suffer dishonor for the name.

42. And every day in the temple and at home they ceased not to teach and to announce the good tidings of Jesous the Christ.

CORRECT.

"Man of prominence" instead of "man" merely R. V. men, instead of authorities here.

"To falsify the Sanctified Spirit" instead of "lie to the Holy Ghost" R. V.

"Was it in thy official-power" instead of "Was it not in thy power" R. V. Don't think the force of the negative was intended to be carried over to the second clause.

"And expired" instead of "and gave up the ghost" R. V.

"Younger men" instead of "young men" R. V. The word for "young men" is used later in the 10th verse—the distinctive term.

"To test the Spirit of the Lord" instead of "To tempt the Spirit of Lord" R. V.

"And through the hands of the apostles there occurred" instead of "And by the hands of the apostles were wrought" R. V. Not the same thought by any means.

"No one" instead of "no man" includes both sexes.

"Down to the public squares" instead of "into the streets" R. V.

"Little couches and litters" instead of "beds and couches" R. V.

No "at least" in the text as given in the R. V.

"The chief-priest" instead of "the high-priest" R. V.

"Zeal" instead of "jealously" R. V.

"life" with a small cap instead "Life" with a big cap R. V.

"The sunedrion and all the council of old men of the children of Israel" instead of "the council and all the senate of the children of Israel" R. V. They did'nt have a "senate in those days. The "sunedrion" and the "gerusia" in joint-council constituted the Supreme Court of Israel and did not correspond to our House of Representatives and Senate.

"With all security" instead of "in all safety" R. V.

"Officer" instead of "Captain" R. V.

"At what this would turn out to be" instead of "Whereunto this would grow" R. V.

"Then the officer along with the subordinates" instead of the "Captain with the officers."

"The royal-people" or the "laity" instead of "the people" R. V. which might include the Roman people, you see. The church people only meant here.

"The sunedrion" instead of "the council" R. V.

The 28th verse, first clause is a question not a declaration.

"And Petros answered and the apostles said" instead of "Peter and the apostles answered and said" R. V. That is Petros was spokesman for them all.

"It behooveth us" instead of "we must" R. V. One is obligation and the other is necessity, not unimportant here from a moral standpoint.

"Hath awakened" instead of "raised up" R. V.

"Whom ye took in hand" instead of "slew" R. V.

"Chief-leader" instead of "Prince" R. V.

"To give" instead of "for to give" R. V. which is not good English.

"Witnesses of these oracular words" instead of "witnesses of these things" R. V.

"And the Sanctified Spirit is" instead of "So is the Holy Ghost" R. V.

"Put faith in" instead of "obey" R. V.

"Were sawn asunder" instead of "cut to the heart" R. V.

"Wished" instead of "were minded" R. V.

"In the sunedrion" instead of "In the council" R. V.

"The registry" instead of "Enrollment" R. V. Literally the "copy of the registry." In those days under the Roman Empire it was customary to have copies made of all taxable, registered people in the different provinces of the Empire, these copies being taken from the local registers and carried up to Rome the seat of the Empire for the purposes of a tare or military levy, and this no doubt is what is referred to here.

"Come to an end" instead of "be overthrown" R. V.

Lit "to take them down" instead of "to overthrow them" R. V. This word is used of taking down a tent.

"God-fighters" is a compound word in the text and this the natural translation instead of "fighting against God" R. V.

"They put faith in him" instead of "They agreed to him" R. V.

"To announce the good tidings of Jesous the Christ" instead of "To preach Jesous as the Christ" R. V. A great deal of "preaching" so called is anything but good tidings of Jesous the Christ.

In Memoriam.

Inner Restitution:

As our beloved Brother John T. Shapter of Toronto, Canada, was personally known and an intimate friend (with his entire family) of mine; having partaken of their hospitality many times, under circumstances which my sense of gratitude, duty and Christian affection will not by any means allow to pass without special notice.

By his very kind solicitation and at his expense, I shared his hospitality and that of his family at Niagara on Lake Ontario, being present during a ten days' session of the Annual Bible reading class consisting of about 400 able educators assembled from the States and from Canada. From the meeting I was invited to his beautiful residence in Toronto; where, as a member of his family, I spent many interesting and happy hours in conversing with him on the state of the dead, and the coming and reign of Messiah on the New Earth.

He was a diligent reader, a close and careful reasoner, and quite fearless in expressing his conscientious convictions. His Advent Library was full of choice reading, and was the most extended and comprehensive of any private collection I have ever seen, except that belonging to our dearly beloved and much lamented Brother Chaplin. His sending for my own works (Coming Age and Eastern Question) was my first introduction to our intelligent and valuable Brother. Since that time our communications by letters and by personal associations have been many and interesting. He had received my last letter a few days before his demise and was speaking of its contents to his friends (so I have been informed). He retired from business with a competency. His residence, well finished and furnished, and tasty in its surroundings, had a commanding view of Lake Ontario. He was a loving husband, an affectionate and indulgent parent, social in his character, and highly esteemed by an extended circle of friends. But —they miss him at home! A wife doveled to him, a daughter at home, and a son married and living in the city. How lonely those halls! with the familiar face, and cheerful walk of its once happy occupant, now in silent repose.

My bereaved friends, you have our deepest sympathy, still you do not sorrow as those that have no hope; "For if you believe that Christ died and rose again; even so them that sleep in Jesus, will God bring with him. For this we declare unto you by the word of the Lord, that we who are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not go before those that are asleep: for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words." The Lord comfort you all in this sudden and sad bereavement.

J. C. Wetherbee.

The Secret of a Happy Life.

You sometimes see a woman whose old age is as joyous as was the perfect bloom of her youth. She seems condensed sweetness and grace. You wonder how this came about; you wonder how it is her life has been a long and happy one. Here are some of the reasons:

She knew how to forget disagreeable things.

She understood the art of enjoyment.

She kept her nerves well in hand, and inflicted them on no one.

She believed in the goodness of her own daughters and in that of her neighbors.

She cultivated a good digestion.

She mastered the art of saying pleasant words.

She did not expect too much from her friends.

She made whatever work came to her congenial.

She cherished her friendships, and did not believe that all the world was wicked and unkind.

She relieved the miserable, and sympathized with the sorrowful.

She retained an even disposition, and made the best of everything.

She did whatever came to her cheerfully and well.

She never forgot that kind words and a smile cost nothing, but are priceless treasures to the discouraged.

She did unto others as she would be done by, and now that old age has come to her and there is a hair of white hair about her head, she is loved and considered.

This is the secret of a long life and a happy one.

Nothing Remarkable.

An item is going the rounds of the press, to the effect that whiskey is now manufactured out of old rags. We see nothing remarkable about this. Every one knows that nearly all the old rags now in the country are manufactured out of whiskey, and there is no apparent reason why the process of conversion may not work as well one way as another; from whiskey to rags and from rags to whiskey. What a beautiful business it is!—New York Observer.

Mummy of an Ancient King.

M. de Morgan, the French director of the Ghizeh Museum in Egypt, has just reported the discovery of the mummy of King Horus of the twelfth dynasty and several rolls of papyrus. The searchers after tombs bore into the rock about the pyramids of Ghizeh in much the same way as Americans bore for oil and salt. If the drill drop into a hollow space it is explored with eagerness. The hunters for tombs have been able to reconstruct a good portion of Egypt's lost history and learning.

A young man cannot make a success in life unless he works. He cannot loaf around street corners and saloons. He must learn a trade or do some honest work; or, before he knows it, he will be a chronic loafer despised by all with whom he came in contact. Do something, no matter how small and you will eventually find yourself climbing the ladder of success. There are many obstacles to overcome, but toil, grit and endurance will help you to overcome them all. Help yourself and others will help you.

The Lord God is a sun and shield; no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly.

Keep your heart full of sunshine and God will soon give you a face to match it.

money order for [illegible] subscription to Restitution which is some time past due, thanks for the continuance. Also send $1.50 for paper to be sent as follows. . . . The paper has been full of interest to myself and family, particularly on the debatable point, and I was much interested in the Pine Woods Bible Class, which I am sorry stopped so soon. I have often times during my life had to give up views I held very dear on the subject of divine writ, when some new light has been produced, and have wondered why I could not see the point before, but that I presume is the experience of all of us. I wish to thank Bro. W. H. Wilson through the pages of The Restitution for the able exposition given as to time of crucifixion and resurrection of our Savior in Restitution of Feb. 7, that Wednesday was the correct time of the crucifixion has been my understanding for a number of years, with a few others, among whom was the late Elder H. R. Carter who was well known to a goodly number of The Restitution readers. Some time in the seventies the Elder while staying at my house in Indiana asked me this question: "Why do all Christians keep the first day of the week?" I replied with the ever-ready answer, Because our Savior rose from the dead on that day. Question, Can you produce any evidence? Ans. Plenty of it. Ques. Will you produce the evidence? I got my Bible and began to look up the proof for the resurrection on the first day, and after reading all of the supposed proof, I was much astonished. I could not produce any. In reading the narratives of the evangelists when the women went to the sepulchre to seek for the Savior, they were met with the acclamation, He is not here, he is risen. Then the question, When did he rise from the dead? We turn to Matt. xxviii. for an answer, In the end of the sabbath as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week there was a great earthquake, an angel of the Lord descended from heaven and came and rolled back the stone from the door and sat upon it. 5th verse, And the angel said unto the women, Fear not ye, for I know that ye seek Jesus which was crucified. 6th verse, He is not here, for he is risen. The conclusion I came to was Jesus rose from the dead near the close of the sabbath day, tak-Bible time the day closing at sundown, and to this would agree the language of the Savior. Matt. xvi. 21. From that time forth began Jesus to show unto his disciples how that he must go to Jerusalem and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day. See also chap. xvii. 23; and xx. 19; Mark ix. 31, and x. 34; Luke ix. 22, and xviii. 33. In every instance Jesus mentions his rising from the dead the third day from the time of his crucifixion, which if it occurred on Wednesday, Saturday or the sabbath day would necessarily be the third day, viz. Thursday 1st day, Friday 2nd, Saturday or Sabbath 3rd. If the first day of the week was the day of resurrection, then Thursday would be the day of crucifixion, such has been the conclusion I have arrived at from the above evidence. I submit this to you to do as you think best with. Myself and wife have been much edified in reading the various offerings in the Love Feast columns, the names of a number of the subscribers being familiar to us in days past. Let me say to all, let us endeavor to lead such lives, a careful and prayerful investigation of Holy Writ that we may be entitled to an admittance at the grand resurrection at the coming of the King.

So let our lips and lives express
The holy gospel we profess,
So let our works and actions shine
To prove the doctrine all divine.

Your brother in hope of eternal life.

Going west at 5:12 A. M., 9:55 A. M., 1:56 P. M., 6:05 P. M., 7:15 P. M. Time card will be ready soon.

Announcement.

The Third Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God in Neb. will be held at Moorefield, June 15 to 17, 1894. Moorefield is on a branch of the B. & M. R. R., 50 miles west of Holdridge. Any one coming by rail notify Bro. A. Shultz at least one week before the meeting and you will be received and cared for.

Although this meeting is not in as central a point as heretofore, still, by commencing now and making an extra effort all can get there. Meetings will be held in the big tent except the business meeting which will be held at Bro. Morgan's school house at 2 P. M. on Saturday as usual.

All arrangements will be made for the next annual conference and other important business transacted. It is expected that a full attendance will be present.

Almus Adams, Pres.
J. J. Cady, Sec'y.

The Annual Conference of the Church of the Abrahamic faith will convene at the Union Church 12 miles northwest of Lanark, Ill., June 16, 1894, and continue over Sunday. We extend a cordial invitation to all who are looking for the soon return of our Savior, and a special invitation to our preaching brethren is extended. There are some isolated ones whom this privilege has come to in many years. To you we say, Come to the meeting, we want to see your faces and hear your voices in meeting, telling of your hopes and prospects for the kingdom of God. Now do make an extra effort to be at this meeting as we have a great work to do. This may be the last conference we may have the privilege of having before the return of our Savior.

Those coming from the east and south stop off at Lanark, Ill., and those coming from the west stop off at Mt. Carroll. Any wanting to stop at Mt. Carroll notify Bro. Andrew Fredrick, post office Mt. Carroll, Ill. He will meet you and take care of you. There will be a conveyance for all that will come here at Lanark to take them to the meeting.

J. D. Renner, Sec.

The Church of God known as the Northern Nebraska and Southern Dakota Conference of the Church of God will hold their 3rd quarterly conference at the Rock Creek School House in Rock County, Nebraska, commencing on the 15th day of June, 1894, and hold over Sunday. All brethren are called to attend the conference. Brethren and sisters come one and all to the Master's call.

Wm. H. Denson, Sec. of Con.

The annual meeting of the Church of God at Shells Ferry, Oregon, will begin June 15 and hold over the following Sunday. All the brethren and sisters in Oregon and Washington are cordially invited to meet with us. If any wish to come from a distance please inform us, and teams will be sent to meet them at the International Hotel, Portland.

Another year has rolled away and been numbered with the past. How swiftly the time is flying; how very fast our years are being numbered and our life will soon be a thing of the past; all too soon it will have vanquished away like a vapor. Then let us once more have a good meeting, for we are one year nearer the return of our Savior than when we last met, one year nearer our eternal home, and may we all strive to live closer to our Savior's teachings in the year to come than we have in the past, striving more earnestly as we see the day approaching. My hope is to meet all the faithful ones in the kingdom of God.

Maria E. Trosbell, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Kansas, will be held three miles northeast of Oxford, in Cowley County, at Bro. Thomas Jackson's schoolhouse. This meeting will last about ten days, commencing August the tenth, 1894. There is some important business to transact. Business meeting will be on Saturday at two o'clock P. M. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can bring tents and come prepared to camp. The brethren at Oxford are wholesouled, hospitable folks, but it is too much for women to have to work all the time and get no good of the meetings, so let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master. The commotion of the world indicates his coming is very near. All speaking brethren wishing any information correspond with Bro. S. C. Oliver, Attica, Kan. A full program will be published in due time.

S. C. Oliver, Pres.
E. F. Randolph, Sec.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

☞ It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notice" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to The Restitution office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 20, 1894. NO. 23.

Original.

The Sabbath and the Gospel.

"The law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ." John i. 17.

The sabbath was an important part of the law of the Lord as given by Moses. It is the fourth commandment of the decalogue, which reads as follows:—"Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work: But the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man servant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it." Ex. xx. 8-11. The sabbath is first mentioned in Ex xvi. 23, in connection with the giving and gathering of manna. The people of Israel having come into the wilderness of Sin: which lies between Elim and Sinai, they began to murmur against Moses and Aaron, fearing starvation in the desert. "Then said the Lord unto Moses, Behold, I will rain bread from heaven for you; and the people shall go out and gather a certain rate every day, that I may prove them, whether they will walk in my law, or no. And it shall come to pass, that on the sixth day they shall prepare that which they bring in; and it shall be twice as much as they gather daily," verses 4, 5. An omer for each person daily, but on the sixth day two omers for each one. Then in verse 23 we read, "This is that which the Lord hath said, Tomorrow is the rest of the holy sabbath of the Lord: bake that which ye will bake today, and seethe that ye will seethe; and that which remaineth over lay up for you to be kept until the morning. 24. And they laid it up till the morning, as Moses bade: and it did not stink, neither was there any worm therein. (See verse 20). 25. And Moses said, Eat that today; for today is a sabbath unto the Lord: today ye shall not find it in the field. 26. Six days shall ye gather it; but on the seventh day, which is the sabbath, in it there shall be none." Read also verses 27-30. Because the Lord gave them the sabbath, on which to rest, he gave them on the sixth day the bread of two days. Notice the following points in relation to the sabbath.

1. The sabbath was first given to the congregation of Israel in the wilderness of Sin, in the second month after their departure from Egypt. Exod. xvi. 1, 23.

2. In the third month after their departure the Lord spoke the ten commandments from the top of Sinai, in the hearing of all the people, of which the sabbath was the fourth. Exod. xix. 1; xx. 8-11.

3. The words of the law and the judgments which are recorded in Exodus xx.—xxiii. which included the sabbath were written by Moses in a book, called "the book of the covenant," which Moses read in the audience of the people, and they promised obedience, and then it was ratified with the blood of slain victims. Exod. xxiv. 1-8.

4. Then the Lord called Moses up into the mount, and he was there forty days and forty nights, and he received "two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the finger of God;" and a law, and commandments, which he had written. Exod. xxiv. 12; xxxi. 18.

5. The sabbath law was written in "the book," and on the stone tablets, and subscribed to by the people; and it was further enforced by penalties—"every one that defileth it shall surely be put to death,"—whosoever doeth any work in the sabbath day, he shall be surely put to death," Exod. xxxi. 14, 17; xxxv. 2; Num. xvi. 32-36.

6. The sabbath was an holy day, a sabbath of rest to the Lord;—"on the seventh day thou shalt rest: in earing time and in harvest time thou shalt rest." "Ye shall kindle no fire throughout your habitations upon the sabbath day." Exod. xxxiv. 21; xxxv. 3.

7. The sabbath was a sign between Jehovah and the children of Israel for ever, throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant. Exod. xxxi. 12, 16, 17; Ezek. xx. 12.

8. The sabbath was to be kept as a memorial of their mighty deliverance by the hand of the Lord from slavery in Egypt: therefore neither they, nor son, or daughter, or servant, or stranger, or any animal was to do any work on the seventh day. Deut. v. 12-15.

9. The land of Israel was also to keep a sabbath unto the Lord the seventh year was to be a rest for the land. Lev. xxv. 1-7, 18-22.

10. The sabbath law was given to and for the children of Israel, to be observed by them in their own land: and was in force "till the seed should come;" or till "grace and truth came by Jesus Christ."

It is evident that Israel were informed and taught about keeping the sabbath for the first time, in connection with the gathering and the preparation of manna for the seventh day; and of the order given —"let no man go out of his place on the seventh day. So the people rested on the seventh day." Exod. xvi. 23, 25, 29, 30. And this law was given to Israel only, to be observed by them in the land to which they then were traveling. There is no historical evidence in the Bible, or out of it, that the sabbath was kept by any nation before this time, (A. M. 2500,) or after it, except by the nation of Israel. Jehovah through Ezekiel reviews the history of his nation as to sabbath-keeping from the time of the giving of the law. Ezek. xx. He says that he gave his sabbaths for a sign to them, that they might know him as the Lord who sanctified them. But they rebelled, and "greatly polluted my sabbaths." Verses 10-17. Then he called upon their children to walk in his statutes, and do them; "and hallow my sabbaths;" and they shall be a sign between me and you, that ye may know that I am the Lord your God." But they still rebelled; broke his laws, and polluted his sabbaths; then for a time he allowed them to walk in their own ways, and follow statutes that were not good, etc., that he might do to them what he swore in the wilderness, to make them desolate, to the end that they might know the Lord. Verses 18-26. For their rebellion they were to be driven out of the land amongst the nations, and the land lie in desolation, and the cities waste—"then shall the land enjoy her sabbaths, as long as it lieth desolate, and ye be in your enemies' land; even then shall the land rest, and enjoy her sabbaths. As long as it lieth desolate it shall rest; because it did not rest in your sabbaths, when ye dwelt upon it." Lev. xxvi. 31-35. The land rested for seventy years, even as long as it lay desolate, during the captivity in Babylon. 2 Chron. xxxvi. 21. And since then it has been in a state of desolation for eighteen hundred years, "enjoying her sabbaths," while her people have had no rest in the land of their enemies.

The question now arises as to whether the sabbath law is in force now, and binding upon Christians. I contend that it is a dead law, so far as we, the disciples of Christ, are concerned. It constituted an important part of that law which was written and engraven on stones, and called "the ministration of death," also of "the law of commandments contained in ordinances," which was taken out of the way, being nailed to the cross. Col. ii. 14; Eph. ii. 15; 2 Cor. iii. 7. The law was given by Moses to the children of Israel, yet none of them kept the law. John vii. 19; Acts vii. 53. They charged Jesus and his disciples, however, with breaking the sabbath law. Matt. viii. 1-8; Mark ii. 23-28; Luke vi. 1-5. But Jesus showed them that the sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath; and that the Son of Man is Lord also of the sabbath. And in order to show the Jews, and especially the self-righteous Pharisees, that it was right to do works of mercy on the sabbath day, he performed some of his miracles on that day, and even in the synagogues. Mark iii. 1-6; Matt. xii. 10-14; Luke xiii. 10-17; xiv. 1-5; John ix. 13-16; v. 1-16; vii. 21-24. He also taught in their synagogues on sabbath-days, and then commenced his mission at Nazareth. Luke iv. 14-21, 31-41; Mark i. 21-39. This was the way in which Jesus kept the sabbath, by preaching "the acceptable year of the Lord," going "about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil." Thus he "magnified the law, and made it honorable;" fulfilled it both in letter and spirit, and could truly say to his Father, "I have glorified thee on the earth; I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do;" and when on the cross after he had said, "It is finished," he bowed his head, and expired. John xvii. 4; xix. 30.

Paul declares that "Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth," Rom. x. 4: so "that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit," viii. 4. Again, he says, "sin shall not have dominion over you; for ye are not under the law, but under grace," vi. 14; for "now we are delivered from the law, that being dead wherein we were held; that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not serve in the oldness of the letter," vii. 6. We all know that the sabbath was a binding institution upon every fleshly Israelite, it being an essential part of the law of works under which he lived, and which he was bound to obey. Yet none of the Jews kept the law; consequently all came under its penalty, "for it is written, cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them." Gal. iii. 10.

Why seventh day people should be so zealous of the law, and yet claim to be Christians, seems very inconsistent. "The law is holy, just, and good;" but there is no mercy in it for the sinner. "No man is justified by the law in the sight of God." Even the ten commandments—the fourth of which was the sabbath-law—was called "the ministration of death;" and the apostle James says, "for whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." Jas. ii. 10. Where is the seventh day man who is able to keep the whole law, or even one-tenth—the fourth commandment? "The law entered, that the offence might abound;" and "it was added because of transgressions, till the Seed should come;" and "was our schoolmaster until Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster; (or the law). For ye are all the children of God, through the faith, by Christ Jesus," Gal. iii. 10, 23-27. When Christ came, the great teacher of whom Moses wrote, the Israelites were to hearken to his words; and in the scenic vision of his transfiguration, when he appeared in glory with Moses and Elias, the three favored disciples—Peter, James and John—heard a voice, saying, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleased; hear ye him." Moses and Elias, who represented the law and the prophets, laid their honors at the feet of the Son of God. Peter remembered that vision on the holy mount, (2 Pet. i. 17, 18,) and that voice from heaven, saying, "hear ye him." A voice from heaven once proclaimed the law to Israel, but now since the Great Prophet had come, they were commanded to hear him; hence Peter's words to the Jews in Acts iii. 22-26. All the apostles had been disciples of Moses but they left Moses and the law for Christ and his gospel. Jesus sent them to preach the gospel, both before his death and after his resurrection, and they did so. They never preached either the law or the sabbath. Moses had those who preached him in the synagogues every sabbath-day. Acts xv. 21. So when the apostles and elders met at Jerusalem to consider whether it was necessary for believing Gentiles to keep the law, after due deliberation, they sent letters to them by Paul and Barnabas, Judas and Silas, with their decision, as follows:—"For it seemed good to the Holy Spirit, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things; that ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication; from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well." Acts xv. 28, 29. Mark well! There is no sabbath observance enjoined in this decree sent out by the apostles, under the sanction of the Holy Spirit. And though there were then, even as there are now, some teachers zealous of the law, subverting the souls of some weak in the faith, the apostle Paul's advice to believers is—"Let no one rule you in food, or in drink, or in respect of a festival, or of a new moon, or of sabbaths, which are shadows of the future things; but the body is Christ's." Col. ii. 16, 17. Those things were of the old law, and therefore not binding upon those under law to Christ.

The seventh day sabbath was given to Israel only, and for a sign between them and Jehovah for ever. It was a sign or type of future rest. They did not enter into God's rest through unbelief. But we who have believed do enter into rest, even now; we rest from our own works, as God did from his; and are looking by faith for that rest that remaineth to the people of God. Heb. iv. Israel on account of unbelief, and polluting God's sabbaths, have been scattered among the Gentiles, and will not be permitted to re-enter the land for permanent occupation until all the rebels have been purged out. Ezek. xx. 23-25; 33-44. But it may be asked, Has there not been a change of days made for the sabbath,—from the seventh to the first day of the week? There is no positive command given for such change. The sabbath was given to Israel, and was to be kept in the land, with the other feasts and statutes of the Lord. But when on account of sin they were cast out of the inheritance, their sacrifices, festivals, and sabbaths, could not be observed, and therefore ceased. Hos. ii. 11. And will not be re-established, until the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob. Isa. i. 26-28; lix. 20; Rom. xi. 26. The sabbath was a national institution, and belonged to the nation of Israel only, and passed away with their polity; no other nation could possibly occupy their place, and keep the sabbath as a sign and a remembrance of their deliverance from Egyptian bondage. Nor would it be right, reasonable, or consistent for the ecclesia, those who have been called out by the gospel from the bondage of sin, to be "a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people," to take the place of Israel in observing their seventh day rest. It is their duty rather to "show forth the praises of him (Christ) who hath called them out of darkness into his marvellous light." 1 Pet. ii. 9. We read that both Jewish and Gentile believers met for worship on the first day of the week, but no law was given for it to be kept as the sabbath. The order of worship is given in Acts ii. 42; and that the day on which the disciples assembled was the first of the week is certain from Acts xx. 7 and 1 Cor. xvi. 1, 2. Jesus had requested his apostles to remember him in an ordinance, which is called "the Lord's Supper," in Acts xi. 20, and also called "the breaking of the bread" in Acts ii. 42; xx. 7; an institution given to the apostle Paul by special revelation, and was delivered by him to the congregation at Corinth. See 1 Cor. xi. 23-26. This fact alone is very significant, and full of importance to Christians, who ought to continually remember "Christ, our paschal lamb, who was slain for us." 1 Cor. v. 7. Paul praised his brethren at Corinth for keeping the ordinances he delivered to them; but not for their irregular conduct in partaking of the Supper. Verses 2, 20-22. No mention is made of Jewish or Gentile believers observing this ordinance in memory of their once crucified but now risen and living Lord, on the sabbath day. It seems more appropriate to meet for this purpose on the first day,—the day of his resurrection. On that day he met with his disciples, at least twice after his resurrection and proved his identity: John xx. 19, 20, 26-29. On that day also he gave them authority to preach and baptize in his name; and he told them to wait at Jerusalem for the Holy Spirit of power before entering upon their mission. They did so; and that Spirit came upon them when "they were all with one accord in one place," on the day of Pentecost, another first day. Lev. xxiii. 15. The primitive Christians met on the first day for worship, whether Jew or Gentile. The believing Jew, though delivered from the law of Moses, was inclined through custom to keep the law; but the believing Gentile was not under it, and never kept the sabbath law; and was not required to do so. The world at large are not under law to Christ, until they receive him; and those under law to him are not required to keep the seventh day, or any part of the old law, except what is enjoined in Acts xv. 29.

Acts of the Apostles. Chap. 6.

1. And in those days while the disciples were multiplying, there occurred a murmuring of the Hellenists against the Hebrews, because their widows were being disregarded in the daily deaconship-service.

2. And the twelve calling together the multitude of the disciples said, It is not best for us to leave the Word of God in abeyance to do deaconship-service at tables;

3. Do ye then brethren take the oversight of seven men of influence of our number, who are testified to, full of spirit and wisdom whom we will establish over this need (or use).

4. And we will continue steadfastly in the votive-prayer and deaconship-ministration of the Word.

5. And the Word was pleasing in the sight of all the multitude: and they elected Stephanus a man of influence full of faith and sanctified spirit, and Philippus and Prochoros and Nikanor and Timon and Parmanas and Nikolaos, a proselyte of Antioch;

6. Whom they stood in the presence of the apostles; and when they had offered votive-prayer they laid their hands on them.

7. And the Word of God grew and the number of the disciples was greatly multiplied in Hierusalem and a vast multitude of the priests became obedient unto the faith.

8. And Stephanos full of grace and ability was causing prodigies and great signs among the royal-people.

9. And certain ones from those of the synagogue called the synagogue Libertines and Kuremaians and Alexandreans and those from Kilikia and Asia were discussing with Stephanos.

10. And they were not strong enough to withstand the wisdom and the spirit with which he talked.

11. Then they subarned men of influence who said, we have heard him talking blasphemous words in respect to Mouses and God.

12. And they conjointly stirred up the laity and the elders and the scribes, and withstanding him they seized and led him to the Synedrion;

13. And stood false-witnesses who said, This man doth not cease taking words against this sacred place and the law,

14. For we have heard him saying that Jesous this Nazoraine is going to take down this place and change the customs which Mouses delivered to us.

15. And as all those seated in the Synedrion steadfastly regarded him they saw his face was as it were an angel's face.

CHAS. GARDNER.

"And he shall judge many nations, and shall rebuke many peoples: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Isa. ii. 4.

The Restitution.

THE RESURRECTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." And means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Day of Pentecost.

To-morrow (June 10) Israelites everywhere will celebrate Shabouth (Pentecost) or the feast of weeks. The Occident, in writing of its import, says: "The feast had many significations during the many eras of Judaism. It has been brought down to our day simply as a feast for celebrating the event of the receiving of the law on Mount Sinai. Owing to the Rabbinical calculations orthodox Judaism has devoted two days to its observance. Modern and reform Judaism celebrate only one day to this feast. In all modern reform congregations it has become the custom to induct its youths and maidens into the history and religion of Judaism in the presence of parents and congregation. Such services are usually highly impressive, while soul-stirring sermons and musical anthems and hymns are an integral part of the services. The communicants in their respective temples will present themselves for examination on Sunday morning, June 10, at 10:30A. M."

Great epochs have ever marked the beginning and ending of periods of time in the unfolding of God's design concerning man and the place of his abode. Today (Sunday, June 10), is celebrated as the day of Pentecost, a day measuring the beginning of two great eras of time each, of them ever dear to the heart of both Gentile and Jew. At this time the Jew celebrates the anniversary of the receiving of the laws on Mount Sinai. It is a day in which they instruct the young in the history and religion of Judaism. It is a day in which they preach soul-stirring sermons and enliven the services with anthems and hymns. These Jewish memorial services which have ever been kept year by year from the time of their reception to the present time to this day are indisputable evidence that the Bible is the Word of God.

This day should be dearer to our hearts than to the Jews. It marks the beginning of another and grander period than the giving of the law on Sinai. At this time the disciples were all together "with one accord, in one place," waiting to be endued with mighty power from on high to qualify them for the grandest mission ever entrusted to mortal man. Being thus invested with the mighty power of the Eternal Father, they sent home the truth that they had wickedly slain and crucified him whom God had sworn with an oath should sit upon the throne of David. Being thus convicted, they were cut to the heart, and cried out in anguish of mind, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Peter told them that there was only one way out of the difficulty and that was, they must reform and be immersed for the pardon of sin. The result was three thousand gladly received the message and were buried beneath the yielding wave, and from that time forth "continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine," were unmovable fixed in the Word of the Lord, they continued also in "fellowship, and in breaking of bread and of prayers." This day is the anniversary of these events, which is still to culminate in another and still grander period, and as these two preceding grand periods started on the day of Pentecost, may not the third also? These things are not mere happenings, a blessed design permeates it all.

W. H. WILSON.

The man who spends his entire time in criticism, snapping, clawing, and biting at all who come in his way, does very little harm, perhaps, but what a miserable time he has of it! If God could but sweeten him up so that grace would flow from his lips, he would find life full of a new blessedness.

READER, did it ever come home to you that those who are strangers to the promises made to Abraham are godless? This is even so. Abraham was called the father of the faithful, and became heir of the world through believing what God promised. You cannot think the Head of the faithful family will be saved in one way and his children in another. •

THE people are being taught what a miserable failure human governments and rulers are, and how thoroughly incapable man is to cope with the evils of this groaning creation—how utterly powerless he is to bring about that peaceful epoch when war shall be no more. Not until the Prince of Peace conquers a lasting peace will the troubled waters be "like a sea of glass, calm and placid." •

THE Rev. Dr. J. E. Gilbert says:—"All nations agree that the home of the good is above. The old prophet was taken up in a chariot. Jesus ascended. Stephen looked steadfastly up into heaven. Paul was caught up into the third heaven. The Christian at death goes to be with Jesus because the Master said, 'I will come again and receive you unto myself.' It hardly seems credible that men who claim that one immortal soul is worth more than a thousand worlds should risk so valuable an article on such flimsy testimony. Do they not know there is no proof at all in these statements, that the Christian at death goes to Jesus? Would they take such statements as positive evidence in a case involving twenty-five dollars? Do they not know that they believe in going to Jesus at death before they find these Bible statements? Why do "all nations" agree that the home of the good is above, when Moses, the Prophets, the Psalms and Jesus plainly testify that they are to be "recompensed in the earth," Prov. xi. 31, and "dwell therein forever," Ps. xxxvii. 9, 11. 22, 29, and possess forever the "kingdom under the whole heaven," Dan. vii. 27, and "inherit the earth," Matt. v. 5, and "reign on the earth," Rev. v. 9-10? These Scriptures ought to teach them that "all nations have gone out of the way God planned and revealed in his Book. Is it not singular the words of Jesus to his disciple, standing close by his promise to come again, should not be noticed, "Where I go ye cannot come?" •

JAMES T. Fields says "the man who tells me an indelicate story does me an injury." •

READER:—

Christ is coming! Do you believe it?

Christ is coming! Do you expect it?

Christ is coming! Are you awaiting him?

Christ is coming! Will he receive you?

"THEREFORE we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip." Heb. ii. 1. This is always a word in season. We are always in danger of letting them leak out. Leaks are commonly near the bottom, and often very costly. There is only one leakage of divine truth that should be tolerated, and that is over the top. We think it would be well to keep pouring in till it runs over, and then some one may be everlastingly benefitted. •

"WHILE the gospel calls for inflexible integrity, and fortitude which despise pain and trample pleasure under foot, and an independence that no scorn can deter, it also calls for sympathy which melts over others' woes, a disinterestedness which finds pleasure in labors for others' good, and a humility which loves to bless unseen, and forgets itself in the performance of the noblest deeds; a piety which refers events to the will of God, a love which counts no service hard, and a trust which protracted suffering will not break." These are sublime heights to which we are invited to climb. Just one perfect life is given us as a model—the life of Christ. But while at best we follow a long way off, we must aim high. We must not settle down satisfied with our present position or attainments, or else we shall certainly lose ground. If the war between our members be not kept up the flesh will soon be in supreme control. We must either feed and grow or shrivel and die. It is not enough to eat just what will keep us alive; we must feed liberally in order to gain strength, either physically or morally. Nothing will help us upward and onward in the divine life keeping the mark of the prize of our high calling in view, watching the motions of the flesh, frequent prayer, and close attention to the Word of the Spirit. •

THE writer who thinks "The outward man is the mortal body and the inward man is the immortal soul" must be somewhat confused. Try again friend, and perhaps it might dawn upon you that if that were so, the inward man would hardly need renewing every day; if it did it would have little advantage over the outward man, and there is no knowing what might happen to it if it were renewed a day or two. We think the writer will materially modify his statement after examining two or three other passages besides 2 Cor. iv. 16. In Eph. iv. 22, 23, he will see that Gentiles generally were alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that was in them, were past feeling and had given themselves over to lasciviousness and their alienation and ignorance and uncleanness are presently styled the old man which is corrupt according to deceitful lusts. But the saints at Ephesus had been brought nigh by the blood of Christ, and they were exhorted to put off the old man, and be renewed in the spirit of their mind; and also in Rom. xii. 2 we have the same lesson "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." Also we find it stated that the new man is renewed in knowledge, so the new man is the new mind or disposition, because the mind is certainly the seat of knowledge; and in Rom. vii. 22, 23 we have absolute proof that the inward man also means the mind; it says, "For I delight in the law of God after the inward man, but I see another law in my members warring against the law of my mind." Here Paul's members are the outward man, and his mind his inward man, and this is an infallible explanation of the inward man of 2 Cor. iv. 16, which was renewed day by day; it is in this respect we are told that "if any man be in Christ Jesus he is a new creature; old things have passed away." •

It would seem from the words of Jesus Luke x. 20, that the fact that their names are written in heaven is the greatest source of joy to the saints. At any rate the power to tread on serpents and scorpions was nothing to compare with it. What unspeakable glory that implies if they only prove faithful to the end? Written in heaven! What unsearchable riches it ensures? What honor and power. •

"Is it wrong to do this or that?" Pray do not ask that? The fact of your asking proves that you know you are nearing the danger line. What do you want to drive such a close bargain with the Lord for? When the good God has done all that infinite wisdom and love could devise for you, and even spared not his Son but delivered him up for us all, why do you itch to indulge in everything that has no "Thus saith it" written above it? Why not say, "Lord what wilt thou have me to do?" And the ready response from heaven will come to you: "Love not the world nor the things that are in the world." And "avoid the very appearance of evil." •

Items of Interest from the Old World.

From a correspondent of the Belfast Evening Telegraph we get a description of a new dynamite gun now being manufactured at the works of Maudsley, Son and Field, Westminster, London. The air pump is first described as a huge piece of machinery held up by four strong pillars, and from this we may take it for granted that compressed air is to be used instead of gunpowder. Then come the bomb cases, nearly three feet high, and one foot in diameter, made of thin steel and hold six hundred pounds of dynamite. The gun itself is forty feet long, and is to fire one 600 pound shot a minute. One man can turn and elevate it with ease. It is to be tried in the Isle of Wight in a few days with a charge of sand. The machine is said to be so perfect and simple that the gun can be moved in any way and fired without the gun moving, and with more ease and quicker than a 20 pound cannon of the ordinary type. The effect of a shot from it, it is calculated, will be that a 600 pound bomb will be carried through the air three miles in thirty seconds, and as soon as it strikes it will explode 600 pounds of dynamite, and will blow an ironclad into the air; and if fired into a town will destroy every building and every living soul within a mile.

The bullet-proof coat has been tested in England, in thorough fashion. The German inventor put it on and was quite unharmed by bullets from the most improved rifles. It is exciting and puzzling the military authorities not a little, and the feeling is deepening that the wonderful improvements now being made, will have a tendency to make the great powers cautious about precipitating war.

The northern provinces of Greece have been well-nigh ruined by repeated earthquakes, although only about five hundred lives were lost; yet it is painful to state that ten thousand lives were recently lost by earthquake in Venezuela.

The editor of the Faith says the Spiritualists in England are becoming very bold, and that Miss Florence Marryatt is lecturing through the country under the caption of "There is no death:" and that

Mrs. Besant has returned from her Indian tour well-nigh a Buddist,—with claims more extravagant than ever.

He also gives it as a suggestive sign of the times full of promise as to the near advent of Israel's people and Israel's King, that the line of railway to run from Acre and Haifa on the Mediterranean across the Jordan near Galilee, to Damascus, the oldest city of the world, will be opened to the Jordan this year. It will be 150 miles long, and will accommodate a present population exceeding a million. This more clearly shows than anything else, that new life is being infused into the trade of Palestine; there is change in the air; things have touched bottom there, and a better day is already dawning.

A young man in England who recently found out that immortality is only to be obtained as a gift from God, prepared an article which he thought calculated to do the Wesleyan Endeavorists good; but it was objected to because it was in direct contradiction to the Methodist creed. It contained what the young man called an "ungainsayable argument," which was as follows: "There could never have been any atonement if Christ had to suffer what orthodoxy says is the punishment for sin, viz., eternal torture, because it would take an eternity to work out the atonement: thus man could never be redeemed, as we could not be saved till the atonement was effected." •

"Occupy Till I Come."

These words are more than a suggestion, more than good advice. They are a positive command. The result of failing to occupy as depicted in Luke xix. 12-27 proves this. Every child of God has to work together with God. Rev. ii. 26, 27 shows that it is those who keep Jesus' works unto the end who reign in power by and by. It is according to the works of each the reward is bestowed. And as we write the solemn impression comes over us that to do nothing is to disobey the command of Jesus: to do nothing, then, is to do evil, and to do evil is to forget that we were purged from our old sins and reap a the old account. It is very certain that there will be no reward without work. And when Jesus will say, "I must work the works of him that sent me while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work:" ought not we to look about us for employ? The chilly and silent night when no man can work is coming on apace and will soon envelop us unless it be intercepted by the glorious appearing of the Great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. And we shall never hear the welcome plaudit, Well done, good and faithful servant, from the Lord who bought us, unless we occupy till he come; but

With the hope of entering the eye and the attention of some loved ones who have never made a covenant with him never entered the Master's service, we want to say, that a covenant with him is a covenant for life and eternal glory; and not to have made a covenant with him for life, implies, practically, a covenant with death. All who are not the servants of righteousness are the servants of sin, and the wages of sin is death. When the pay day comes the wages may be objected to, but that will avail nothing; it will have to be taken by those who have earned it. Reader, whoever you are, we plead with you to consider on whose pay roll your name stands. It is a heart searching question; but if a person has intelligently covenanted with God he knows it; and one intelligent in the truth knows it if he has not covenanted with God. Oh, what about that pay-roll and the Book of Life? The Paymaster can only pay those who have entered by the door, and legally and formally entered the service. We plead that you look this matter straight in the face. You can afford to run no risks. Examine your faith and hope to see if they rest upon the immutable Word of God; if they do not there is a flaw in your title-deed! Time is on the wing! The night cometh! •

No More Sacrifice for Sins.

"For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries. He that despised Moses' law, died without mercy under two or three witnesses; of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace?" Heb. x. 26-29.

A brother writes me from the East, requesting that something be written with regard to the death of Christ being of a sacrificial character, as there are those which trouble the precious flock of Christ, declaring that Jesus died solely as a martyr, and not as a "sacrifice for sins."

The above teaching is purely a legitimate child of Josephitism and rank infidelity. I never knew a person to so teach, unless he was in the first place a Josephite.

The entire Unitarian denomination are Josephites, and as a denomination they deny the sacrificial character of the death of Jesus. It is a very dangerous doctrine, as by tampering with it you may cut yourself off from the life eternal. Heb. x. 26, plainly teaches that there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins," in the case of those who indulge in wilful sin after having "received the knowledge of the truth." The phrase, "no more sacrifice for sins," indicates that there had been a previous "sacrifice for sins," made effective in the case of the person who placed himself by his acts in a position that there could be "no more sacrifice for sins."

What think you of individuals going about the country professing to be Christians, and teaching that "the blood of Jesus Christ (does not) cleanse from all sin," as the Scriptures affirm?

There certainly is a sore punishment in store for those who "hath counted the blood of the covenant wherewith he was sanctified an unholy thing." "Esteemed as a common thing" the blood of the covenant by which he was sanctified, and insulted the spirit of favor." (Dinglot's.) Those who deny the sacrificial character of the death of Jesus, regard his blood as a "common thing," or in other words nothing better than the "common thing," of any other martyr." All such have "insulted the Spirit of favor."

Refer to 1 Cor. v. 7, for positive proof that the offering of Christ was sacrificial: "Purge out therefore the old leaven that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ, our passover is sacrificed for us." This passage as you will observe refers back to the Israelitish passover, where previous to the slaying of the passover lamb, they were required to "purge out therefore the old leaven." Those Israelites who used the blood of the sacrificial lamb (which was to be without blemish) as they were required to do were passed over by the death angel on that terrible night. They were hid behind the sacrificial blood of the spotless lamb. Now, beloved, we have a rich provision of protection. "Inasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers; But with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot."

In like manner, all who are hid behind "the precious blood of Christ, as a lamb without blemish and without spot," will not be "hurt of the second death," when the black angel of death shall pass through the land. Because we have the protection of "Christ our passover" sacrificed for us. All who do not have "Christ," as a "passover," on that eventful day, will be "hurt of the second death," and there is no help for it.

Oh, never was such an utter reared. Gaze as it as pictured by Montomery:

"At Golgotha
Behold the literal Christ! Upon the cross,
Upon the cross, his body limbs are stretched,
And every nerve and vein is racked and wrenched
In agonies unspeakable; and, see!
Where through his palms the hammer'd nails have pierced,
And through his bare and sore-blistering feet
The red wounds gape and pleach! stupendous scene
Of awful pain—the sinless Lamb of God
Upreared upon the cross to save the world!
Approach! and gaze! and wonder till ye weep!
Clamorous lines of torture gnaw his face,
And flutter o'er his breast!—the veins unroll
In loose and languid stretch, and from his brow
The lukewarm life-stream trickles slowly down,
And clots beneath his feet! His head is bent
Blood-matted o'er his shoulder; while his eyes
Dim-grow and hollow with the rack, look meek
Upon his butchers round the cross, who howl.
And o'er his garments cast their lots.
And lo! with eyes upturned in voiceless woe,
His virgin mother! All a mother's pangs
Of pity for her tortured son upheave
Her bosom, and convulse her bloodless cheeks!
Not can the deadly riot of his pain
Chill the warm current of his filial love;
Adown, with tender gaze of truth, he looks,
And to the beaten partner of his toils
Consigns the worshiped Mary,—to a man!
But see, it comes, hath struck a closer way.
And lighted! A pall of darkness veils
The land of Palestine;—a stilly gloom
More dreadful than the deepest night. The hills
Heave affrighted; the rivers roll, or lie in death!
And men, with quailing limbs and drooping lips,
Come forth, and stare, stupefied, upon the skies!
And hark! from the cross is heavily heard,
In piercing tones of death, 'My God! my God!
Oh, why hast thou forsaken me?'
'My God! my God!—the blood red eye—the sin'd and shut
Within its socket!—'gainst his weary breast
The lost heart pulse hath beat; and now, behold!
With unseen limbs, and gore wreathed locks, and lips
Whit, sweet compassion printed on their curve,
The christ—a sacrifice for lost mankind!
O! never since the infant beam of time
Gleamed on the new-born world, was such an hour!
The temple's veil was rent in awful proof!
The sun of heaven; the eternal curse
Was Idolatry, cut with holy blade!—earth quailed
As though some power of the skies had come
To heave her huge foundations! Every rock
And mountain shook, while o'er the muttering deep
The air-mad waters roll'd—as if they fear'd!
And last, the graves unlock'd their numbers, and Shades
Shadowed not, and flitted through the quaking town
And dwelled by the living, like faint gleams
Of fairy moonlight on a pallid wall."

Beloved: "Christ being come an high priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building; Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood, he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us. For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh: How much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?"

Oh, it is a fearful matter to count the blood of the covenant wherewith you "was sanctified," a "common thing," spurn such teachers as you would a viper, lest there be "no more sacrifice for sins," for you.

W. H. WILSON.

The Spirit in Man.

"Lord if thou hadst been here, my brother had not gone to heaven." John xi. 32. Revised Translation.

If death is the gate to glory, sin is a blessing and a necessity—for death is the result of sin.

Had there been no sin, there would have been no death, and if no death, no glory. Consequently when sin ceases to be, glory also ceases, the righteous and evil-doers alike perishing eternally, for sin when finished bringeth forth death.

Again, if death is the gate to heaven, then all who die go to heaven.

Christ said the righteous would be rewarded at the resurrection of the just, Luke xiv. 14, and give account at the day of judgment, Matt. xii. 36, i. e. first resurrection then judgment, then reward. A day is appointed for this judgment, Acts xxviii. 31, and this is at the harvest at the end of the world, Matt. xiii. 39, after the last trumpet sounds, Rev. xi. 18. When the Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father—then shall he reward every man according to his work. Matt. xvi. 27.

The soul (nephesh) does not go to heaven at death, because it dies with the body—"What man is he that liveth and shall not see death? shall he deliver his soul from the hand of the grave?" Psa. lxxxix. 48.

"None can keep alive his own soul." Psa. xxiii. 29.

"He spared not their souls from death." Psa. lxxviii. 50.

But, perhaps the Spirit (ruach) is the conscious man and goes to heaven for "the Spirit returns to God who gave it," Eccl. xii. 7, but the same writer tells us that (in this respect at least) there is no difference between the Spirit (ruach) of man or beast, both go to one place, both have the same breath (ruach) Eccl. iii. 19, so that if this spirit of man returns to heaven, that of the beast goes there also and both must have pre-existed or they could not return.

God said to the Adam who sinned, "dust thou art and to dust thou shalt return," for the immaterial Adam (if any) was not dust and could not return thither.

If it was then the material Adam who sinned, logically it must be the material Adam that is to be resurrected and judged and consigned to heaven or gehenna.

The Scriptures invariably assume that the man that dies is the responsible man. "In death there is no remembrance of thee, in the grave who shall give thee thanks." Psa. vi 4.

It is the man now in the grave who was formerly capable of remembrance and thanks, not an immaterial entity elsewhere.

"David is both dead and buried, his body is with us to this day. David hath not yet ascended into the heavens." Evidently this can only refer to a fleshly material David, who expressed his belief that he would be satisfied, when he awoke with the likeness of Christ, and the use of the word yet shows that at some future time this same fleshly David is to receive his reward.

Abraham gave up the ghost, Gen. xxv. 8, i. e. at death Abraham parted with something, his ghost, spirit, or breath, (ruach,) they separated. The Abraham in whom we and the Jews are interested died and was buried, verse 9, in the Cave at Machpelah, he died not to go to heaven, but is there yet. The Jews claimed this, John viii. 52. It was of this Abraham Christ said God was the father. If there was any other Abraham that went to heaven at death the Scriptures entirely ignore him.

This being so, and the real man capable of prayer, of remembrance, of resurrection and judgment returns to the dust at death together with the soul (nephesh) as shown before, it follows that the spirit (ruach) that returns to God and which spirit (ruach) is possessed by all other animals as well, has no separate conscious existence and would be much more properly represented by the word "life" or "vitality" or "breath." for the original word (ruach) literally means the vital air we breathe.

The Lazarus who had been dead and was stinking, was the Lazarus Martha, Mary, and Jesus commanded to "come forth," not "come down from heaven."

Christ on the third day rose from the dead. We are not told that he came down from heaven, on the contrary he himself states after his resurrection, that he had not yet ascended into heaven.

If in the face of all this the belief is yet entertained that the spirit is the real man and goes to heaven at death, then that spirit shares its heaven in common with all other living beasts, and must have no conscious knowledge of existence if the Scriptures are correct, unless it has a distinct personality apart from the real man of which it was formerly a part, and on this point the Scriptures are silent.

Politics of Prophecy, or the Iron Rod and the Iron Rule.

Being a brief compilation of Scriptural doctrines and sentiments relating to the Fifth Universal Government or Kingdom to be set up by our Lord Jesus Christ at his second coming, which is to subdue, break in pieces, and destroy the present governments of the world, and stand forever.

1. There is to be an Iron Rod Government and Rule over the nations.

"Ask of me and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession; thou shalt break them with a Rod of Iron, thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel."

Rev. 12th chap. "And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with a Rod of Iron, and her child was caught up unto God and to his throne."

Rev. 19th chap. "And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations and he shall rule them with a Rod of Iron."

2. Our Lord himself is to be the King and Head of this Government.

Rev. 11th chap. "And the seventh angel sounded and there were great voices in heaven, saying, the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever."

3. The followers of Jesus are to be associated with him in the Government of the nations.

Matt. 19th chap. "Then answered Peter and said unto him, we have forsaken all and followed thee, what shall we have therefore?"

"And Jesus said unto them, verily I say unto you, ye which have followed me,"

"In the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory, then shall ye also sit on twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel."

Rev. 3d chap. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne as I also overcame and am sit down with my Father on his throne."

"He that hath an ear let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

Rev. 2d chap. "And him that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations and he shall rule them with a rod of iron, as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers."

"He that hath an ear let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

4. To enable and prepare them to reign with Christ, these are to be raised from the dead, who are dead when Jesus comes.

Rev. 21st chap. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ and shall reign with him a thousand years."

5. The identity of our Lord at his second appearing, as the Son of Man.

Acts 1st chap. "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

Jesus himself, when speaking of his second coming, often, and we think always, calls himself the Son of Man.

"When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all his holy angels with him, then shall he sit on the throne of his glory."

"The Son of Man shall send forth his angels and gather out of his kingdom all things that offend and them that do iniquity and cast them into a furnace of fire," &c.

He ate and drank with his disciples after his resurrection.

And at the last supper he said unto his disciples, "I will no more drink of the fruit of the vine until I drink it anew with you in my Father's kingdom.

"I appoint unto you a kingdom as my Father hath appointed unto me,"

"That ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel."

Jesus during his exaltation at the right hand of the Majesty on High, has not lost a particle of his identity as the Son of Man.

He will appear the second time the very same Jesus that was taken up into heaven.

6. The government of our Lord is the Fifth Universal Government or Kingdom to prevail on the earth.

Four Governments or Kingdoms were to precede it; the Babylonian, the Medo-Persian, the Grecian, and the Roman. The last Government or Kingdom was to exist in a divided form, some of its parts weak and some strong. In some of its parts were to be the strength of the iron. These divided portions of the Roman government now exist. All attempts to unite and cement these divided parts together have failed. They must exist in their divided form until the God of heaven sets up a Kingdom which shall break in pieces all these kingdoms, and stand forever.

The fourth kingdom has been in existence much longer than the three that went before it. In its various forms it has stood about 2,000 years. It certainly is time, we should think, to be looking for and expecting the setting up of the Fifth Universal Kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. "Let thy kingdom come."

MESSAGE OF DANIEL THE PROPHET TO THE KING OF BABYLON.

"Thou, O king, art a king of kings: for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory.

And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the heaven, hath he given into thy hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all. Thou art this head of gold.

And after thee shall arise another kingdom, inferior to thee, and another third kingdom of brass, which, which shall rule over all the earth.

And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron: forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things; and as iron that breaketh all these, shall it break in pieces and bruise.

And whereas thou sawest the feet and toes, part of potter's clay and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided; but there shall be in it of the strength of the iron, forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay.

And as the toes of the feet were part of iron and part of clay; so the kingdom shall be partly strong and partly broken.

And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men: but they shall not cleave one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay.

And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever."

7. The way and manner in which idolatry is to be abolished among the nations.

"Enter into the rock, and hide thee in the dust, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty.

The lofty looks of man shall be humbled, and the haughtiness of men shall be bowed down; and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day.

For the day of the Lord of hosts shall be upon every one that is proud and lofty, and upon every one that is lifted up, and he shall be brought low;

And upon all the cedars of Lebanon, that are high and lifted up, and upon all the oaks of Bashan,

And upon all the high mountains, and upon all the hills that are lifted up,

And upon every high tower and upon every fenced wall,

And upon all the ships of Tarshish, and upon all pleasant pictures.

And the loftiness of man shall be bowed down, and the haughtiness of men shall be made low; and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day.

And the idols he shall utterly abolish.

And they shall go into the holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth.

In that day a man shall cast his idols of silver, and his idols of gold, which they made each one for himself to worship, to the moles, and to the bats;

To go into the clefts of the rocks, and into the tops of the ragged rocks for fear of the Lord and for the glory of his majesty, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth."

8. Some of the principles which are to prevail and be enforced during the reign of Jesus over the nations.

"But with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth: and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked.

And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins.

For he shall deliver the needy when he crieth; the poor also, and him that hath no helper.

He shall spare the poor and needy, and shall save the souls of the needy.

He shall redeem their soul from deceit and violence: and precious shall their blood be in his sight.

He shall judge thy people with righteousness, and thy poor with judgment.

He shall judge the poor of the people, he shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressor.

They shall fear thee as long as the sun and moon endure, throughout all generations.

He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass; as showers that water the earth.

In his day shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth.

He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth.

They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him; and his enemies shall lick the dust.

The kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall bring presents: the kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer gifts.

Yea, all kings shall fall down before him; all nations shall serve him.

For the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted.

I will declare the decree: the Lord hath said unto me, Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee.

Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession.

Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron: thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel.

Be wise now, therefore, O ye kings; be instructed ye judges of the earth.

Serve the Lord with fear and rejoice with trembling.

Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him.

Those mine enemies which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither and slay them before me.

But the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs; they shall consume, into smoke shall they consume away.

9. The reason why the creation is called upon to rejoice before the Lord when he cometh to judge the earth.

Rom. 8th chap. "For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God.

Because the creature (or creation) itself shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.

For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now.

And not only they, but ourselves also which have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body."

Acts, 3d chap. "And he shall send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you.

Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things which God has spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began.

The Apostle Paul in his farewell letter, says, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only but unto all them also that love his appearing.

Say unto God, how terrible art thou in thy works! through the greatness of thy power shall thine enemies submit themselves unto thee.

All the earth shall worship thee, and shall sing unto thee; they shall sing to thy name. Selah.

O worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness: fear before him all the earth.

Say among the heathen, that the Lord reigneth: the world also shall be stablished that it shall not be moved: he shall judge the people righteously.

Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad; let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof.

Let the field be joyful, and all that is therein: then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice

Before the Lord: for he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth: he shall judge the world with righteousness, and the people with his truth.

O let the nations be glad, and sing for joy; for thou shalt judge the people righteously, and govern the nations upon earth. Selah.

Advice to Young Men.

And remember, my son, you have to work. Whether you handle a pick or a pen, a wheelbarrow or a set of books, digging ditches or editing a paper, ringing an auction-bell or writing funny things, you must work. If you look around my son, you will see the men who are the most able to live the rest of their days without work are the men who work the hardest. Don't be afraid of killing yourself with overwork. It is beyond your power to do that on the sunny side of thirty. They die sometimes, but it's because they quit work at 6 p. m. and don't get home until 2 a. m. It's the interval that kills, my son. The work gives you an appetite for your meals, it lends solidity to your slumbers, it gives you a perfect and grateful appreciation of a holiday. There are young men who do not work, my son; but the world is not proud of them. It does not know their names, even; it simply speaks of them as old So-and-so's boys. Nobody likes them; the great, busy world doesn't know that they are there. So find out what you want to be and do, my son, and take off your coat and make a dust in the world. The busier you are, the less deviltry you will be apt to get into, the sweeter will be your sleep, the brighter and happier your holidays, and the better satisfied will the world be with you.—Burdette.

Conference Report.

The Church of God in Indiana met at Antioch Meeting House according to announcement June 8, 1894. There being no business to dispose of the conference meeting was omitted. The treasurer reported amount on hand at beginning of quarter $134.22. Amount received $40, paid out $40, remaining $134.22. The weather was pleasant throughout the meeting and Sunday brought the usual large crowd, characteristic of these meetings. Bro. and Sister Woodward of Michigan were present and did most of the preaching which was received with much interest, and we trust may cause some to see the error of their ways and turn to the Life Giver. One sister started in the noble cause by being immersed in his holy name. Yes, a noble cause, a high calling. Oh, that we could only realize more fully what a favor is conferred upon us that it is possible for us to attain to such a high calling, that we may be partakers of our heavenly Father's divine nature, yet it is ours if we will accept it. Let us keep this in mind and our burdens will be lighter and our trials more easily borne.

Brothers Wines, Wagoner and Conner were present and helped proclaim the words of life. Each gave a report of his labors which was very encouraging, saying that they never before saw the interest manifested in the truth from those outside that there is now. There were a few from abroad among whom were Bro. and Sister Grant from Rensselaer.

At the close of the meeting Bro. and Sister Woodward went to Argos where they preached of evenings until Thursday when they went to Plymouth to be with the brethren at their Thursday evening prayer meeting. There were no arrangements made for the annual meeting, but it will be announced later on.

Report of Conference.

Another Annual Conference of the "Church of God" in Michigan has come and gone. What its results will be only God knows; we heard several declare it to be as good or better than any we have had for some years. The prayer and social meetings were indeed feasts of good cheer.

We were sadly disappointed in every effort to obtain any helpers in the ministry from abroad, still in spite of it all, the meetings were very satisfactory, speaking was done by Brothers C. Winchester, R. W. Woodward, F. L. Austin and Sisters Perkins and M. A. Woodward, Geo. Driggins in a letter telling us of his sickness, consequently his inability to attend the conference, suggested that we trust not in human agencies for our blessing at this gathering, but believe the Lord able and willing to dispense his blessings to us in spite of all our disappointments, and his words proved true. Our officers were all at their posts of duty from the first, the attendance of workers from different points was large, and all seemed to come filled with good thoughts for each others' benefit. On Sunday one sister requested baptism and on Monday another weepingly declared her desire to live for Jesus. May God help them both to keep their vows for right as long as life is given them. The evangelists reported, 205 sermons preached, baptized 18, married 4 couples, preached nine funeral sermons, and traveled 6022 miles by rail, received $147 for their years' work. The officers for the ensuing year are H. Hammond pres., Wm. Moses vice pres., A. Richardson treas., and F. L. Austin sec. Thanks to the dear ones for giving me this year to rest from the secretary's work. Please remember dear ones all, and address all church communications to my son F. L. Austin, Kalamazoo, Mich, (Office Dewing Sons). Ah, loved ones, the year has all gone with every good or bad act registered on high. What the record has been, God knows, but let us try and improve on it the coming year, is my prayer.

Report of Ladies' Evangelical Aid Society.

The ladies are glad to report very favorably of their work, only organized at the last October quarterly conference, with a membership not exceeding 25, they have raised over $30 for evangelist work. This proves that a system in work will accomplish much. They resolved to give one-tenth of all monies coming into their hands for private use, or to give as the Lord should prosper them. The young ladies willingly deny themselves the luxury of gum or candy, or an extra ribbon or lace, and add that to the fund, "Many littles make a muckle," which we have found true. Any one wishing to join this society will correspond with

Dear brothers and sisters:

It seems a hard matter for me to write for THE RESTITUTION, and yet, I am glad to read the short letters from others, and I say continue them. I look for the obituary notices and see that one after another of us are dropping all along the line, and it proves that there is no escape from the enemy, death, and if it was not for the hope beyond the grave the outlook would be dreary indeed. But we can look beyond and see our dear ones clad in immortality and ready to possess the kingdom prepared for all the faithful. God appeals to all, rich and poor alike, and the door stands open to receive all who believe and obey the gospel. Be of good cheer, walk uprightly in all God's requirements.

Report of Discussion.

On the 7th of May I closed a discussion with Elder Starbuck, a prominent Seventh Day Adventist. This discussion was held in our church building at Schull's Ferry, Oregon. The result seemed to give general satisfaction in our favor.

Elder Starbuck had held a series of meetings in the church giving six discourses on the law. In closing his meetings he expressed a willingness to defend his views in discussion. I regarded his statement as a challenge and accepted. The following are my opening words as I decided, and will explain the situation.

"We have just finished this discussion on two propositions:

1. Does the Bible teach that the seventh day of the 4th commandment is to be observed by all Christians? I have denied during four sessions.

2. Does the Bible teach that at the second advent, Christ and his saints shall reign over literal Judah and Israel restored, and over the Gentile nations to whom probation shall be continued for one thousand years. I have affirmed during two sessions. This discussion was originated by a challenge from Elder Starbuck having a new or never phase in it. Elder Starbuck interrupting said, "I do not understand that I challenged." "Very well; others so understood it, but if he was not correctly understood there can be no misunderstanding as to whether this is a challenge.

I now return his compliment by giving him challenge to meet me before his brethren, and on the same propositions, at Portland, Beaverton, or Hillsboro. I give him the opportunity to arrange the time himself, and make the following suggestions:

1. Six sessions of two hours each shall be given to each question.

2. A competent reporter shall be secured, each party assuming half the expense.

3. Each or either party may publish the discussion.

4. No changes shall be made in the manuscripts before publication except in grammar and that by mutual consent and examination.

If Elder Starbuck will not accept I challenge their conference to select and produce a man."

Our challenge was not accepted and I have no hopes that it shall be.

Announcement.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Kansas, will be held three miles northeast of Oxford, in Cowley County, at Bro. Thomas Jackson's schoolhouse. This meeting will last about ten days, commencing August the tenth, 1894. There is some important business to transact. Business meeting will be on Saturday at two o'clock P. M. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can bring tents and come prepared to camp. The brethren at Oxford are wholesouled, hospitable folks, but it is too much for women to have to work all the time and get no good of the meetings, so let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master. The commotion of the world indicates his coming is very near. All speaking brethren wishing any information correspond with Bro. S. C. Oliver, Attica, Kan. A full program will be published in due time.

A Child of God.

To be a child of God means more than simple form, something more than a mere profession of faith. It means an actual change of mind and purpose, a turning right about, leaving the pathway trod in sin, and walking in the strait and narrow way. This is the kind of religion our Savior admonished us to possess. A religion that cleanses and purifies. A religion that puts a fire in the heart, that burns until all dross is consumed. Envy, hate, malice, evil-speaking, covetousness, adultery, wrath, strife, etc., these cannot abide where the spirit of God dwells, but love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, meekness, temperance, these are the fruits of the Spirit. This is what pure religion will do for us. It will take away the evil desire and make out of us a new creature in Christ Jesus. By trusting, obeying and living near to the Lamb of God, our feet will be lifted out of the miry clay, and set upon the Solid Rock. Oh, how beautiful, how grand is this religion that throws a hallow and light around the true child of God, that causes us to delight and find joy, and comfort, and peace, and rest, in his service, that puts a new song on the lips, a new light in the eye, and shows to the world that we are indeed a child of God.

The Humble Exalted.

God chooses the humblest instruments. He passes by the tempests, and waters the fields and gardens with his imperceptible dew. He passes by the great elephant, and bestows the hues of sapphire and amethyst upon the tiny humming bird. He passes by the lofty pine and hugs elm tree, and lavishes blossoms and perfume on the violet. All history teaches the same truth. Moses was the son of a poor Levite; Gideon was a thresher; David was a shepherd-boy; Amos was a herdsman; the apostles were ignorant and unlearned; Zwingle was a shepherd; Melancthon, the great theologian of the Reformation was an armorer; Luther was the child of a poor miner; Fuller was a farm servant; Carey, the originator of the plan of translating the Bible into the language of the millions of Hindustan, was a shoemaker; Morrison, who translated the Bible into the Chinese language, was a last-maker; Dr. Milne was a herd-boy; Adam Clarke was the son of Irish cotters; John Foster was a weaver; Jay of Bath was a herdsman, the apostles were fishermen, and Jesus of Nazareth was a carpenter.

Reduced Rates to Denver.

Unusual low rate excursions are being announced this year by the Pennsylvania Lines, and long distance journeys over them may be made at slight expense. For this summer exceedingly cheap excursions to Denver will be run over these Lines. The rates will be the lowest in effect for years and will enable persons to visit the West at slight cost. The dates and return limits for these special Denver excursions will be as follows:

On June 22nd and 23d, account of the National Republican League Convention, good to return until the latter part of July.

On July 20th and 21st, good to return until the latter part of August, account the meeting of the Mystic Shrine Order.

On August 9th and 10th, account annual meeting League of American Wheelmen, good returning until the middle of September.

Although the low rates have been made for meetings of organizations, the sale of tickets will not be confined to members, but the public generally may take advantage of the low fare. The return limits will be ample for side trips in the West. Details may be obtained by applying to any Ticket Agent of the Pennsylvania Lines, or by addressing F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

4th of July rates on the Nickel Plate Road are one fare for the round trip. Tickets on sale July 3rd and 4th, good returning until the 5th.

...and Subtraction.

Man under the law, adding to or taking from the Word was forbidden by the Lord. Ye shall not add unto the Word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the Lord your God which I command you. Deut. iv. 2; xii. 32. Agur's words are, "Add thou not unto his words, lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar." Prov. xxx. 6. The prohibition under the law relates to the commands or precepts. Such presumptions treatment of the law would interfere with that complete obedience to his will which the Lord required of his chosen people that they might be a peculiar treasure unto him above all people. Ex. xix. 5. In Rev. xx. 18, 19, are found these words: "I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book: and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book. This passage according to its wording relates specially to John's prophecies as contained in this book of Revelation; and in connection with it are the penalties for such wicked and unwarranted handling of this portion of Sacred Writ. Adding to this prophecy would be to insert uninspired words, merely human words, and pass them off as a part of God's revelation, and claim for them equal authority with the inspired words of the prophet. To take away from this prophecy would be to leave out or take out portions of it and then set up the claim that what remains is all that God intended to convey to his church. Rome has laid herself liable to the charges of both adding and diminishing, and, consequently liable to the penalties written in this book. Others than the popes of this church, no doubt, in the early centuries had a hand in this work of marring Divine Revelation. This mischevious treatment of God's Word could be practiced only to a limited extent. The contending sects into which the professed Christian church was divided served to prevent designing and wicked men from doing this work to any great extent. In the history of the church when writing was the only medium of transmitting the Bible to future generations manuscript copies of the whole or portions of it were multiplied: these when collected together, and compared by scholarly men serve to show where there are inspired words left out and where human words are added. A very learned and noted author on the Credibility of the Scriptures says that the infidels were the first to collect together all the manuscripts of the whole Bible and of portions of it, with a view to proving as false the claim that it is a Divine book. For the sake of the test and the triumph which they expected would crown their labors, they admitted that God anciently spoke to men through prophets and that his words were written by scribes, but that these words had passed through so many translations, had been copied so often and subjected to so much of human handling that the thoughts of God were lost, and the church, in consequence, had no authoritative revelation. All their labor, and pains and expense were lost, even worse than lost to the cause of infidelity. What they did, proved the opposite or led the way to its proof. It resulted in their discomfiture, but in gain to the friends of the Bible. Leaving off the foregoing line of thought I will raise the question here: Does the passage quoted here from Rev. xx. 18, 19, apply to any man who fails to grasp the truth couched under symbols? or fails to see that another writer, no more honest and fair than himself sets forth the truth of symbolic prophecy? To make the matter plainer: There are writers in our church, as there are in the popular churches, who honestly hold and teach that certain measures of time connected with the symbolic prophecies of Daniel and John and stated in the terms "days" and "weeks" and "times" and "months" and "an hour" should be understood as standing for longer periods of time than they denote in common usage: that the 2300 days, for instance, (Dan. viii. 14) denote 2300 years, each day representing a year. Now do I add to God's Word by believing and teaching that these 2300 days stand for just this number of years? Yes, says a writer in one paper a few months back. If I am guilty of adding to God's Word by the statement of my honest convictions concerning these "days" of Daniel I am liable to the penalties written in Rev. xx. 18, 19. The writer alluded to would say I was running a fearful risk. I confess that I am if he is right in his application of this passage. I say kindly, he has misapplied this Scripture. The Holy Spirit intended no such use to be made of these words. Up to this moment I am not deterred from holding and teaching that these "days" mean years. My reasons for so doing are amply sufficient. But says the objector, it reads "days," and why should you say days mean years in this prophecy. I know that a day in the Scriptures commonly means twenty-four hours, but there are exceptions to this rule even in verbal passages. Christ said: Abraham rejoiced to see my day. This means more than twenty-four hours. The day of judgment covers a long period of time and "one day is with the Lord as a thousand years," says Peter. There is in the Scriptures quite a latitude in the use of this word. In the symbolic visions of the prophets what is more natural and in harmony with the fitness of things than that long periods should be scaled down to short divisions of time. The whole vision in all its parts and features is but a panoramic view of things. Small animals as a lion, a bear, a ram and a goat and their characteristics and actions and movements, trifling in themselves apart from their symbolic meaning, are made to represent great empires and kingdoms and the conquests, exploits, victories and defeats of military chieftains. These symbolic actors in brief periods representing great human governments ruled by a long succession of kings extending sometimes through hundreds of years: thus scaling down the great to the dimensions of the small. If in inspired symbolism a small animal and its little predatory movements are made to shadow forth the important movements and maneuvers of great kingdoms why should it be thought a thing incredible that long periods should be measured on the scale of days? One writer says that we have no use for the year-day theory. How hasty the statement! Divine inspiration had use for it, and shall uninspired men ignore it. Daniel uses a day for a year as a measure of the time between the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem, unto the Messiah (the Christ) the Prince. It is written "seven weeks, and three score and two weeks." For wise reasons the period is divided into two parts 7 weeks and 62 weeks equal 69 weeks. 69 literal weeks are out of the question here; but multiply 69 by 7, number of days in a week and the result equals 483 days, equals 483 years, 483 literal days or little more than eighteen months would be no measure of the time of Medo-Persian rule dating from the 20 year of Artaxerxes reign when the decree was issued and several years of Roman history down to the baptism of Christ 483 years—a day for a year—span this stretch of time. The literalist is obliged perforce of facts to have use for the year-day scale in this case. He knows that at the first end of this measuring line a decree was issued granting the Jews the privilege to rebuild their ruined capital; and at the other end they find the fact of the Christ baptized and ready for his manifestation to Israel. If the 69 weeks are 483 years, are there not good grounds for holding that the 2300 days equals 2300 years, inasmuch as they cover the whole time of the vision which foreshadows under symbols, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome as she comes into view on the prophetic field and stands in the relation of despoiler of God's chosen people? Here is too much time, too much history to be covered by 2300 literal days. These days taken in connection with the vision, and of which they are a part I conclude stand for as many years, and reach on from Daniel's time to the consummation.

☞ It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund" the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittance to The Restitution office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipt will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be left of amounts of donations and disbursements.

We whose names are hereunto subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the sum set opposite our names into the hands of the Treasurer of the Conference, to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

The Everlasting Gospel.

"And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, Say [illegible] with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters." Rev. xiv. 6, 7.

The Apocalypse being mainly a book of symbols, it requires a great deal of caution and careful examination of those symbols, in order to obtain a correct understanding of their import. The beloved John was in spirit on the Lord's day, and was directed by the "Alpha and Omega, the first and last," to write the things he should see in a book, and send it to the seven congregations in Asia. These things are defined as follows—"the things which thou hast seen, and the things which are, and the things which shall be hereafter," or after these. Rev. i. 10, 11, 19. The things which are include the letters to the seven ecclesias, in Rev. ii. iii.; and the things after these, those which John saw in heaven, when in spirit, beginning with Rev. iv. to the end of chap. xix.

In chapter xiv. 6-20 we have a general view of certain events to transpire during the short reign of the leopard and lamb-like beasts of chap. xiii., until the vine of the earth was gathered and trodden in the wine-press of the wrath of God. The details of these judgments are given in chapters xv. and xix. The time of these events is during the sounding of the seventh trumpet, and the prevalence of the third woe. Rev. viii. 13; ix. 12; xi. 14. The last or third woe will terminate when the last vial of wrath is poured into the air, during the blast of the last trumpet. We are informed in Rev. x. 7, that "in the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God should be finished, as he hath declared to his servants the prophets." The Apostle Paul connects the sounding of the last trumpet, with the descent of the Lord himself from heaven, the resurrection of the dead, and the change of the living saints to immortal life. 1 Cor. xv. 52; 1 Thess. iv. 16, 17. It is during the sounding of the seventh trumped that the man child is brought forth, who is to rule all nations with a strong sceptre; Rev. xii. 1-5; ii. 26, 27; and John hears a loud voice in heaven, saying, "Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ," etc., xii. 10. In immediate connection with this, and before its full accomplishment, is what John saw and heard in Rev. xiv. 6, 7, as quoted at the head of this article.

This angel which John saw flying in mid-heaven proclaiming glad tidings to those that dwell on the earth, is symbolic of chosen messengers sent forth with Divine authority, publicly and loudly commanding every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, to "fear God, and give him glory, because the hour of his judgment is come." The gospel or good news is said to be everlasting or age-lasting. It is evidently concerning the age to come, and the immediate coming of the kingdom of God, and the reign of his Anointed One. When the offer of the kingdom was made to the Jewish nation, by Jesus and his apostles, calling upon them to "repent, and believe the good news" (Mark i. 14, 15; Luke iv. 18, 19, 43; viii. 1; ix. 1-6; x. 1, 9,) nationally they refused to hear, and rejected both their King and the kingdom. Read the parable of the vineyard in Matt. xxi. 33-44, as illustrative of this. Hence as the people were not ready for a king of God's choice, and a kingdom of righteousness, they were were left under Cæsar's rules and both they and their city have been trodden under Gentile feet ever since, and will be, until they are willing to receive Jesus as their king. Matt. xxiii. 37-39. In the meantime, God has been taking out of the Gentiles, by the gospel, a people for his name. Acts xv. 14-18. This people will be the royal priesthood of the coming kingdom. 1 Pet. ii. 9; Rev. i. 6; v. 9, 10; xx. 6. Having been begotten by the word of truth, they become a first-fruit of his creatures,—a first fruit to God and to the Lamb. Jas. i. 18; Rev. xiv. 4; and therefore are of the first or chief resurrection.

"The gospel of the grace of God" which the risen Jesus authorized his apostles to offer to all nations, comprised "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ," on the belief of which, men and women were immersed in water for the remission of sins. Acts xxviii. 31; viii. 12; x. 38; v. 42, 43. "This gospel of the kingdom," said Jesus, "shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." Matt. xxiv. 14. Whether the end here spoken of was at the termination of the Jewish polity, when Jerusalem was destroyed, or is yet a future event, may not be necessary to determine. It may have a double application, however as type and anti-type. There is a certain end many times referred to in the Book of Daniel; as "the time of the end," "the end of the indignation," "the end shall be at the time appointed," "the end of these wonders," and his book closes with these significant words —"But go thou thy way till the end be: for thou shalt rest, and stand in thy lot at the end of the days." The prophet is yet resting, consequently the end is still future. There was an end reached in A. D. 70, when the Roman armies came against Jerusalem and the temple, and the end came with a flood. (Dan. ix. 26;) and was referred to by Peter when he said, "the end of all things is at hand," 1 Pet. iv. 8, 17; and which was described by him so graphically in 2 Pet. iii. Before this end was reached, "the gospel of the kingdom" had been preached to every creature under heaven, according to Paul. Col. i 6, 23; Rom. x. 18. And now over eighteen centuries have passed since that end came, and Jerusalem has been trodden by aliens, and her people outcasts among the nations; but the signs of the times indicate that "the times of the Gentiles" are nearly fulfilled, when the Lord will "have mercy upon Zion," and "inherit Judah his portion in the holy land, and choose Jerusalem again." Psa. cii. 13; Zech. ii. 12. This dispensation and Gentile times will terminate together; but before the final end, and "the times of restitution" are inaugurated, there will be a transitional period, called "the hour of judgment." This warning is given in connection with the last gospel message. Judgment is preceded by mercy. When Jesus was reading the prophecy relating to himself in the synagogue at Nazareth, as recorded in Isa. lxi. 1, 2, after he had read these words, "to preach the acceptable year of the Lord," he closed the book. Then he said, "This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears." Luke iv. 17-21. But Isaiah adds, "and the day of vengeance of our God." Truly "grace and truth came by Jesus Christ." He came to call sinners to repentance, and to offer them eternal life. The proclamation of the day of vengeance was held in abeyance, until he should take his great power and reign. But it will most surely come. The goodness and forbearance and long-suffering of God, which should have led to repentance, have been despised, therefore "the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God" is at hand, when "tribulation and anguish will come upon every soul of man that doeth evil, of the Jew first, and also of the Gentile." Rom. ii. 1-11.

When the Kingdom of God was overturned in the days of Zedekiah, on account of the wickedness of its rulers, it was foretold that it should be no more, "until he come whose right it is." Ezek. xxi. 25-27. Mortal men, of David's line, proved themselves unfit for the high honor of sitting on the throne of the Lord. They ignored the heavenly law given to David, —"He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God." 2 Sam. xxiii. 3. David, as a ruler, feared God, and kept his law, therefore the Lord made an everlasting covenant with him, "ordered in all things and sure." But his children who broke the law, were visited with the rod, and their iniquity with stripes. Psa. lxxxix. 3, 4, 30-32. While there was apparent breaking of the covenant with David, by the overthrow of the kingdom, profaning his crown, and casting his throne to the ground, yet Jehovah has said, "My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of [illegible]," etc., verses 34-37 in the interval between the overturning and the rebuilding of the tabernacle of David, the reigning power was transferred, and has been in Gentile hands. First it was given to Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon, the head of gold, to whom "the God of heaven gave a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory." Dan. ii. 37-45. The Babylonian empire was succeeded by those of Medo-Persia, Greece, and Rome all unjust, tyrannic, and oppressive governments—paganized and blasphemous, even to the last phase of Roman rule, symbolized by the wild beasts of Rev. xiii. and xvii. Human government, whether conducted by Jew or Gentile, has proved a complete failure; God has not been glorified, nor his creatures benefited; therefore their kingdoms and power will be taken away, and the God of heaven shall set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed. The kingdom and throne of David will be given to the righteous Son of David and of God, according to the covenant and promise. Luke i. 32, 33; 2 Sam. vii. 12, 13. This kingdom will be one of righteousness and peace, because Jesus Christ, "the Lord our righteousness," will be the king and judge. Paul announced this when preaching the gospel to Greeks, philosophers at Athens. Acts xvii. 31. The God-appointed day for the reign of righteousness is the millennial day, when the saints shall possess the kingdom, and all nations shall be blessed in Abraham's seed. As the time has now come for judgment, all nations are now warned by the angel preaching this everlasting gospel. The reign of our Lord and his Christ is at hand, when he will reward all his servants, and destroy them which corrupt the earth.

As this angelic announcement of glad tidings and of judgment will be made before the end has fully come, an opportunity is given to all who will heed the message, even at the eleventh hour, to repent, believe, and obey the gospel. It is very probable that as the gospel at the first was attended with signs and wonders, and gifts of Holy Spirit, so also will be this last offer of salvation. During "the last end of the indignation," or "the time of the time of end," we read of "two witnesses," "two olive trees," and "two candlesticks, standing before the God of the earth," Rev. xi. 4; Zech. iv. 11-14; Isa. xliii. 10-12. These witnesses are prophets, and work miracles for 1260 days of their testimony. Are these witnesses for the truth the same as the angel who preaches this everlasting gospel? They antagonize the decree of the two-horned dragonic wild beast, the prophet of the beast that ascends out of the abyss, and who deceives all but those who receive the angelic message. Rev. xiii. 11-18; xvi. 13, 14; xix. 20; 2 Thess. ii. 8-12; Matt. xxiv. 24. This preaching of the gospel of the kingdom arouses violent opposition and persecution on the part of the resurrected wild-beast, which carries the woman of Rev. xvii. 3-8. This beast represents the last phase of the Roman government, in its final attempt of obtaining universal dominion, and is in close connection with the Papacy. A powerful confederacy is formed ten kings give their power and strength to the beast, Rev. xvii. 13; but they shall not prosper. The Psalmist foretells this in the second Psalm; also Isaiah, in chap. viii. 9-15. This coalition of the State and the Papacy appears to prosper for awhile forty-two months or 1260 days power is given to make war with the saints of that time, both Jewish and Christian, and to overcome them. Rev. xiii. 5-9. Those who refuse obedience to the beast, or to receive his mark, will be liable to suffer death, or be prevented from doing business. Verses 12-17; Dan. xii. 10. But at last the witnesses finish their testimony, and are killed by the beast. Then follows the second angel, saying, "Babylon is fallen, is fallen." The cause of this fall is probably twofold: first, the enlightenment of the people by this last authoritative proclamation of the gospel, and the command to "Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come." And second, because the ten kings who agreed with the beast to carry the harlot turn against her, "eat her flesh, and burn her with fire. For God hath put in their hearts to fulfil his will, and to agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, until the words of God be fulfilled." Rev. xvii. 16, 17; xviii. Then the third angel follows, proclaiming the doom of those who worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark. Chap. xiv. 9-11. A blessing is pronounced on those who die in the Lord from that time. Verses 12-16. There will be many martyrs for the truth, and a great multitude of those who "keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus." This is called "the harvest of the earth," the product of the good seed of the kingdom sown by the angelic proclamation: the same company which John sees, and is described in Rev. vii. 9-17. These are clothed with white robes, and they carry palms of victory, ascribing their salvation to God and the Lamb; but they are not of the royal priesthood, the Lamb's wife. The sealing of the 144,000 of the tribes of Israel, and the gathering of this unnumbered company out of the nations, occurs after the Bride has joined her Lord.

Much more might be written upon this subject, but let this suffice for the present. If the reader will read the references quoted, a clearer and better understanding will be obtained. I refrained from quoting at full length, because it would make the article too long. Don't think it will be lost time to open the Bible and read the references given; it will not, but you will be profited thereby.

B. WILSON.

Future of the Jewish Church.

"In the latter days many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased." The pleasant sketches of "Marion Harland and Mrs. Clinton Locke" afford both Gentiles and Jews much interest; the descriptions are both truthful and vivid: none of the "travelers' tales" of former years enter into their account of what they see and hear. How it must make them desire the day of restitution, when the former beauty and fruitfulness of Palestine will be restored, those Bedouin Arabs chased away and the Moslem's cruel reign be a thing of the past!

The early dawn of that bright time may be perceived at present, in the progressive movement of the Jewish mind, where prevails a desire to return to the law and the testimony, the only guide of their forefather's faith, who declared that "the law was a lamp to the feet, a light to the paths, which giveth wisdom unto the simple and converts the soul. The righteousness of thy testimony is everlasting: it is richer than gold, yea than much fine gold, sweeter than honey and the honeycomb, and in the keeping of the laws there is great reward."

We read that reverence for Scripture among the ancient people led them to carefully count the very letters for fear of misconstruing the least word. They would certainly disapprove of the "modern inspiration," which has often "adorns a period" in the oratory of the present day, and still more so, the rejection of such portions of the Word of God as are adverse to the fallacies so rife among us, forgetting "that men should know that Thou whose name is Jehovah art the most high over all the earth."

It is pleasing to find that the society for Jewish publication proposes printing English translations of Jewish Scriptures. This action will lead the once chosen race to appropriate to themselves their own very large share of the rich and glowing prophecies of the future. We can easily discern from them that "the times of the Gentiles being fulfilled," the Jews will resume their old position, not in pride or a haughty spirit, but "the consummation shall overflow with righteousness," and the evangelization of the nations will be finished by them. The Gentile students of the Old Testament see perhaps more clearly than the Jews themselves the immediate approach of a "nation being born in a day," returning and building the temple for which they have already the plan and specifications in the prophet Ezekiel. The wonder is that the Greek, and especially the Lutheran, churches do not disseminate among their people more magnanimous feelings toward a nation whose enemies are threatened with such dire denunciations and vengeance in the latter days, but unfortunately although the Bible may be called an open book, the chart of the churches history

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 27, 1894. NO. 24.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisite to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life, as essential for final salvation.

his followers for lost lives! Yea, lives lost to earthly pleasure, society, ambition, public opinion, above all to self-love—lives lost for his sake, that some day they may be gloriously found in him, for is it not written, "Whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it?" —Christian Alliance.

ITEMS.

Some people who are too honest to steal, will borrow and never pay back.

Make but few explanations; the character that cannot defend itself is not worth vindicating.

We never graduate in religion: because the nearer we are to God, the more we see there is to be learned.

The agnostic creed contains but one article: "There is a sort of something concerning, which we can know nothing."

Seek not great things for yourself, but serve the Lord faithfully in "any little corner" of the vineyard here he sends you.

He that hath tasted the bitterness of sin, will fear to commit it; and he that hath felt the sweetness of mercy will fear to offend it.

It is not by looking at our experiences, or our feelings, but by "looking unto Jesus" we conquer. Let us thank God for the blessed experiences of the past; let us trust him and go forward.

It was once sharply said by Dr. Blodgett at a meeting of the American Board, that "we hear a good deal about 'Old Faiths in New Lights;' what we need most is Old Faiths in new lives."

The Evangelical Messenger thinks many forget the words of the Lord Jesus, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," and count it better to wheedle money out of sinners than to give themselves for the Lord's work.

"I feels a movin' in my heart," sings our good, pious, old colored woman, "Becky" as she bends over the washtub and ironing board. It is a fine thing to "feel a movin' in my heart," but, come to think about it, and apply it to white folks,.... would it not be even better if we should "feel a movin' in our feet?" "Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in" (Luke 14: 23).

God has revealed himself, and yet the light that has come to men is as the light that streams through the shutters. Every limitation explains why the Bible teaches all to be humble. There is an impression that humility is a kind of sycophancy; the most humble man on earth is he who stands the straightest and keeps his head up, but bows his heart and knees before the incomprehensible wisdom of the allwise God.

Spiritual Tom Thumbs are not the glory of the kingdom of heaven; and, at any rate, we have so many of them that they cease to be a show, and may become a plague. In enlisting and donning his regimentals, the recruit has but commenced the soldier's career; now he submits to drill and discipline, in order that the power in him may be rendered effective.....Likewise, undeveloped Christians cannot be the men nor do the work which these stirring and critical times so urgently demand.

That man has learned a great lesson who has learned to accept himself as he is given to himself. We may build a thousand airy castles as to what we would do if we had the genius of a Milton or of a Newton; but nothing will ever come of such airy castlebuilding. The real question that should interest us is, what work can we best do, without the genius of a Milton or Newton, but with ourselves as we are. Remember it is written, "He gave to every man his work" (Mark 13: 34).

Much of the work of the world is done by men who are not conscious of their own powers. They are not self-centered, but God-centered. They are not thinking of themselves, but of the work they have to do. They are not trying to be great, but to be faithful. They are not trying to be heroes, but to be true. They are not trying to be saints, but to be servants. They are not trying to be anything, but to do everything. They are not trying to be anything, but to do everything. They are not trying to be anything, but to do everything.

You can afford to disregard what people think or say about you if you know you are pleasing God.

WE will be under obligation to any one who can inform us of the present address of T. J. Hall, formerly lived at Elizabeth Springs, Mo.

A LETTER from Bro. Corbaley tells of the great damage done in the Northwest by floods, and there being still much snow in the mountains, more danger is threatening.

BROTHER or SISTER, waiting for the right time to commence the saving business, is worse than waiting for the right signs of the moon before planting. You have no time to lose in that way. The planting season will soon be past.

IF the believer can always and everywhere realize that he is not his own; that he exists morning, noon and night and then again to-morrow as one who has nothing, and is nothing apart from Christ, it will be a wholesome restraint indeed.

THE injunction to grow in God's favor and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ implies that we might know God and Christ, and yet know very little about them; that there are heights and depths, and breadths and lengths of divine truth inviting our attention and offering rich reward.

PRESIDENT Carnot, of France, was assassinated last Sunday evening at Lyons, while on his way to a performance in his honor. He was riding in a carriage, and saluting the people on either side, when the murderer sprang upon the carriage step and stabbed him. He lived about three hours. The assassin's name was Cesare Giovanni Santo, an Italian aged about 25 years.

"WHATSOEVER ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men;" or, as the Diaglott renders it, "Whatever you may do, work it from the soul, as for the Lord, and not for men, knowing that from the Lord you will receive recompense of the inheritance, for ye serve Christ the Lord." Sincerity of heart would seem to express the meaning of the word heartily. A hearty worker does not hesitate when a plain duty confronts him; he begins at once, and works with a will; and it is hardly necessary to say that that is the only service the Lord will accept.

"DEAR RESTITUTION:—Please tell us through our paper whether the exhortation to the Gentiles, Acts xv. 19, 20, about not eating things strangled, or of blood, is binding on us now? J. N." In our judgment it is. We read, verses 28 and 20, "For it seemeth good to the Holy Spirit and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things, that ye abstain from meats offered to idols and from blood, and from strangled things, and from fornication." We do not understand that abstinence from those articles of food in use by the brethren, and fornication, formed the whole of Christian duty, but that they were in circumstances which made them peculiarly liable to commit these offences; and this being addressed to Gentiles after the law had expired by statute or limitation, goes to show, that eating of blood was, always, like fornication, essentially, wrong in itself both before the enactment of the law and after it vanished away. The blood represents the life to those who have become Abrahamic children, and of course no one could partake of things strangled without partaking of blood. If we are correct in our opinion that it was morally wrong to eat blood and therefore "necessary," to abstain from it in apostolic times, it is still necessary,—we live in the same dispensation with them.

HAPPY indeed must that brother or sister be who can guide a fellow mortal without discouraging him, and warn him without repelling him.

SCIENTIFIC men are constantly puzzling their brains to find out what it is that produces life in an animate body; but they make no progress, because they seek to solve it without God. There is only one source of information on that subject and that is God's Revelation. It tells of the breath of life by which the earthly, lifeless creature became a living creature. The Spirit of Jehovah by which he creates and explodes all things was in the breath he gave by man. He is the source of all life whether of man or beast, for lies all inanimate breath. It does not come in the form of an intelligent entity itself, but in a form which gives intelligence or the power of evolving ideas from organized, inert matter such as the substance of the man formed out of the dust of the ground. If, as some think, electricity is the life producing agent, we are no wiser than we were before. We do not know its nature—can only see its effects; and must therefore be content to know that life in man enables him to think and act, and that it has been imparted to him in order that he might glorify God by perfecting his moral character now and finally attain to divine nature.

WE see by English papers that a deep-seated feeling of dissatisfaction exists among the Welsh people because the so-called Liberal Government seems in no hurry to pass the bill it introduced to disestablish the church in Wales and confiscate its property. Out of 34 members for Wales 31 are Liberals; this result was brought by the promise of disestablishment, but there being no prospect that it will be passed this session, the members are revolting, and withholding their support from the government, and discussing the question before large gatherings of excited people who are sick of supporting an establishment they have no use for. On the other hand the English Church Union is making strenuous efforts to prevent the passage of the bill. Circulars are sent out to district unions denouncing the whole thing as a wholesale plunder of the church, and urging the need "for uncompromising resistance on the part of all who prefer religion and justice to the exigencies of political party." Religion and "justice" sound well; but while a false religion in some cases may be better than none, for saving purposes it is worthless. Between the mother church and its eldest daughter there has always been a striking resemblance, but of late years little difference is observable between high churchism and catholicism; and, from present appearances, it is likely that the mother church would soon absorb the daughter if it is put in competition without state patronage.

A RECENT speaker at a meeting in England told the story of a boy who explained his falling out of bed by saying, "I presume I went to sleep too near where I got in." "Many people fall out of the church" continued the speaker, "because they go to sleep too near where they get in." We may learn a lesson from this as it stands perhaps. But would it not be better not to go to sleep at all in this sense? Does not that kind of sleep often prove a fatal lethargy? So it would appear from heaven's admonition in Rom. xiii. 11, 12, "The night is far spent the day is at hand; let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light." And "Knowing the time that now it is high time to awake out of sleep; for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed." The lesson would seem to be, that as in the physical so in the spiritual sense, there is life during sleep, but there is no activity,—it is comparatively a useless life—a profitless existence. On the other hand, while sleep is said to be nature's sweet restorer, there are no spiritual repairs going on while a person is slumbering spiritually. The motive to arouse, used by the apostle is this:—"For now is our salvation nearer than when we believed." It is safe to conclude from this that it would be extremely dangerous for the day of salvation to find us asleep. We close these random notes by reference to 1 Cor. xv. 34, where the Spirit thus addresses the Corinthians:—"Awake to righteousness, and sin not." The context shows that evil associations had blunted their moral perceptions; they were awake to sin but as to righteousness asleep.

The First Day of the Week and the Sabbath Day.

WRITTEN.

I have often been glad we had the conversation on the one topic which seemed to possess mentions, it has caused me, ever since, to look into God's Word for evidence and guidance in this, as in all other things pertaining to religion, and I can truly say, the more I read, the clearer it all appears.

God has had times, and cycles, and seasons, for all things past and will have for all things to come. It was in accordance with divine arrangement that the resurrection occurred on the first day of the week. Under the law, a sheaf of the first-fruits of the harvest was waved before the Lord on the morrow after the sabbath typical of Christ, "the first fruits from the dead." Lev. xxiii. 10, 11. Thus was the first day made an important day under the law; on it was made the promise of a resurrected Savior, and of an after harvest of resurrected ones, typified by the new meat offering waved on the morrow after the seventh sabbath. Lev. xxiii. 16, 22.

It was on the evening of his resurrection that Jesus met with his disciples and after eight days he met with them again. Both meetings were on the first day of the week. Just before his ascension he commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem but wait for the promise of the Father, which ye have heard of me. See also John xiv. 16, 17. Obedient to their Lord's command they were with one accord in one place when the Spirit of Truth was sent and received.

God's glorious plan of salvation was now complete and the apostles whom he had sanctified in the truth, and whom the Savior had sent into the world were ready and empowered to proclaim it. This was the day of Pentecost, the fiftieth day counting from the day the wave sheaf was offered.

So we see on a morrow after the sabbath the proclamation of a crucified, resurrected, and coming Savior began. We must ever remember that the apostles were inspired men, sent by the Savior, and the very fact of their meeting on the first day and again on the fiftieth day proves that the law of types was understood by them; and also shows there was divine appointment and recognition of the time, being selected and sanctified, for and by the giving of the miraculous working spirit. At Troas where Paul abode seven days, upon the first day of the week when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them ready to depart on the morrow.

This evidently marks the stated day for breaking bread, and then they received religious instruction. There are two other instances, strongly inferential, bearing upon the assembling to commemorate the Lord's death on the first day. See Acts xxi. 4, 5; xxviii. 14.

The first day is spoken of in a very direct manner in 1 Cor. xvi. 1, 2, "Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches (congregations) of Galatia, so do ye. Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come."

When they met as they did at Troas, was a very convenient time to gather their liberality for the saints at Jerusalem, and the offerings as on the typical day were made on the morrow after the Sabbath.

"And they continued steadfastly in the apostles doctrines, and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." This evidently has reference to the worship of the congregation; the time is not stated here, but that is given in other connections.

"Not forsaking the assembling of yourselves," is another passage from which the inference may be drawn that the early Christians kept up the existing practice of meeting on the first day of the week.

For he who sins wilfully in thus forsaking the assembling of the saints, is worthy of sorer punishment than was he who despised the law of Moses and perished without mercy. He neglects the memorial covenant of the broken body and shed blood.

The seventh day as a day of rest and worship is nowhere enjoined upon Christ's followers.

The Savior did not keep the day after his resurrection, nor leave any command for us to keep it.

The apostles have not enjoined its observance, nor attached any penalty to its violation.

Our beloved Savior was Master or Lord of the sabbath. See Matt. xii. 8. Luke vi. 5.

On one sabbath day he healed the man with his right hand withered, and on another he said to the woman who was bowed together so that she could not lift herself up, "thou art loosed from thine infirmity." When the ruler of the synagogue told the Lord that in six days men ought to work, his reply made his adversaries ashamed. Notice too how the Jews talked to the man who was unable to walk for thirty-eight years, when the beloved Master had healed him, and when they found out that it was Jesus they persecuted him and sought to slay him, because he had done these things on the sabbath day. But Jesus answered them: "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work."

Very many of the miracles of Jesus were done on the sabbath day evidently to show to the Israelites to whom only the sabbath law was given, that Jesus who was born "King of the Jews," was Lord of the sabbath.

Under the Mosaic law the offerings were types of the true, but Christ is the Mediator of a better covenant which was established upon better promises. Heb. viii.

The first covenant has been superseded by the second. No portion of the old law has been incorporated into the new unless love is at its root.

Paul says all the law is fulfilled in one word; "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Christ fulfilled the law, and has become the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth.

"Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus," says Paul and he also says, "We brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise," that is of the new covenant, but the covenant from Mt. Sinai genderedth to bondage and answers to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children; but the other, or new covenant, answers to Jerusalem which is above, which is free.

"Cast out the bondwoman and her son, for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the free woman."

Likewise the Scripture says, "My brethren ye are become dead to the law, by the body of Christ, that ye should be married to another, even to him who rose from the dead that we should bring forth fruit unto God. For as many as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ."

"For in him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily, and ye are complete in him, who is the head of all principality and power, in whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ; buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead, and you being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses; blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way nailing it to his cross; and having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them, openly, triumphing over them in it."

Let us be like Paul, not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; because it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. He shunned not to declare all the counsel of God. In him we have a precedent for our walk, not that he taught different from the inspired writers of the Christian dispensation, for they were not divided, but more of his work is written for our instruction, admonition and correction than any of the others. The first thing needful is to get into Christ, that is, obey from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered us. Then walk in God's commandments and ordinances blameless, pressing toward the mark of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, that we may be worthy of acceptance at the coming of the Lord from heaven.

In hope of eternal life.

Editor Restitution:

I am at home after a two weeks' absence. Was at Bosworth and Bite Mound. I found the brethren glad to meet me, and wide awake to the truth.

At Bosworth we had a basket meeting on the 24th of May with a large attendance. The call for another meeting was so strong that we left another appointment for the first Sunday in August, and we hope the scattered brothers and sisters will make a note of this and come.

On Saturday in company with Bro. Bowen we started to his home where we partook of his hospitality, after which we went to the Baxter School house where we met a number of the brethren and sisters, and had a pleasant time with them. On the first Sunday in June I preached two discourses in the church, and the result was that one more came out and was immersed in the all-saving name. I am to meet with them the 2nd Sunday in August, in a beautiful grove, and we also agreed to break bread with them at this time.

Brothers and sisters let us awake so that we may be permitted to wear a crown. May God bless you all.

Yours in hope.

JOHN POORE.

The Love of God.

We wish to find out something of the strength of God's love, and upon whom it is bestowed. We can get no idea of this wonderful love except by comparing it with the love of man.

In John xv. 13, we read, "greater love hath no man than this that he lay down his life for his friends." Is God's love greater than this?

In John iii. 16, we find the words, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Was it God's friends for whom Christ died? Oh, no. Christ said in Matt. ix. 13, "I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." Thus we see that God gave his son to die, not for his friends, but for those who had disobeyed him and sinned against him.

The love of God is contrasted with that of man in Rom. v. 7, 8. It reads, "For scarcely for a righteous man will one die; yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die. But God commendeth his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us."

What a wonderful love is this! After we have heard the truths of God's Word what must we do in order to claim a share in this love?

In John xiv. 23, Christ says, "If a man love me he will keep my Words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him."

This is all that is required of us. Let us accept of the easy conditions offered, and like Paul, "Be persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Rom. viii. 38, 39.

Conference Report.

According to previous notice the Church of God in Iowa assembled at Nevada, June 7 to 17, 1894, and held their yearly conference. The preaching brethren present were A. J. Eychaner, A. Hipsher, P. M. Princmer, G. M. Myers, J. Garton, Brother A. Adams of Nebraska was present and preached several discourses which were highly appreciated by all present.

Evangelist Treasurer made report with summary as follows:—Amount on hand beginning of the year, $97.09. Paid in during year, $372.50. Total, $469.59. Expenses $251.48. On hand beginning of year $215.21.

State Contingent Fund:—On hand beginning of year, $52.80. Received during year, $21.93. Total, $84 73. Amount paid out during year, $13.11. Balance in treasury, $71.38.

Educational Fund:—On hand at beginning of year, $43.81. Received during year, $2.00. Paid out, $57.10. Balance on hand, $88.71.

State Evangelist, Bro. A. J. Eychaner made splendid report of labor during year. Worked 67 days, held 70 meetings, preached 64 sermons, for evangelist work. Work done outside, as follows:—Preached at Gladbrook, 30 sermons, Irving, 15 sermons, Hickory Grove, 16 sermons, Clarksville, 6 sermons, Funeral sermons 4. Total 70. Sermons preached during the year 134. No of persons baptized during conference year 49.

On June 15, conference met and organized "The Iowa Tract and Missionary Society," and elected officers as follows:—Miss Ettie Appleyard, President, Miss Hattie White, Sec'y, Mr. Wm. Fish, Treas.

Letters of admonition and encouragement were received and read from Brother and Sister Wince of Indiana, Sister M. A. Woodward of Michigan, Brother and Sister Steffa of California, and they were highly appreciated.

Five were immersed into the all saving name during the meeting.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted, "That this conference of the Churches of God in Iowa, assembled at Nevada do humbly ask the Editor of THE RESTITUTION to publish the address of its correspondents, that we may know where to find them for the purpose of correspondence for mutual benefit, and the advancement of the cause of Christ, and not in the interest of any other paper."

It was the desire of the Conference that the letters of declaration of faith received from brethren abroad be sent to THE RESTITUTION for publication.

Officers elected for ensuing year:—Pres. G. M. Myers, Sec'y. O. J. Allard, Cor. Sec'y. Mrs. A. J. Eychaner, Treas. Sam'l White.

Thus ended one of the best meetings that it was ever our privilege to attend. Oh, how our hearts were made to rejoice and take courage while we listened to the testimonies of the "old soldiers," of the cross as they expressed their hopes and faith in God's dear Son. Yes, we rejoiced together in the hope of soon seeing Jesus, of soon sharing in the honors and glories of that Kingdom for which we are earnestly praying. A few more struggles, a few more meetings perhaps, and we will enter into that rest prepared for the people of God.

O. J. ALLARD, Sec'y.

[We publish addresses of correspondents on their request. Some do not wish their address published, and we have no right to do so against their wish. Hence to avoid all trouble on this score, we make a rule to publish only what is requested.—ED.]

MARRIED.

ROBSON - SANFORD. Married by Evangelist Joblin at the Church of the Blessed Hope, Cleveland, Ohio, June 20th, 1894, Mr. Edward Thomas Robson and Miss Nettie Sanford both of Cleveland.

They are children of believing parents, and having first given themselves to the Lord, and then to each other, we reasonably hope for them the happiness the relation is designed to impart, and at last go in to the Marriage Supper of the Lamb. It was an interesting and joyous occasion, the church being filled with brethren, sisters, friends and relatives; and many were the fervent prayers that they may be faithful to the end of life's journey, and that the blessing of our Father in heaven may ever attend them.

M. JOBLIN.

OBITUARY.

G. W. Ham, of Cedar View, Miss. died May 1, 1894, after an illness of eight weeks, aged 55 years, 2 months, and seven days. He leaves a wife, five daughters, and three sisters, with many other kindred and friends to mourn, but not as others who have no hope, for he believed that the Christ died and rose again, and he and the writer were baptized in the faith after being instructed in the way of life, by J. R. Ham, Dec. 31, 1878, who died in the spring of 1880, leaving a companion, five daughters, and three sons. These brothers were as kind and as indulgent husbands and fathers as ever I knew, and we feel to say, "help Lord, for the godly man ceaseth, and the righteous perisheth, and no man layeth it to heart, and merciful men are taken away, none considering that the righteous are taken away from the evil."

Oh, dear uncle how we miss you.
When we re-ata those hills of yore,
Talking how we've learned together
Of the everlasting shore.
Ours to watch, and wait, and wonder,
While to rest till Jesus comes,
Ours to keep lamps trimmed and burning,
There to meet in "home, sweet home."

Fretting and Waiting.

Toilers who fret
Lest the next hour be set
With sudden grief or care,
Promise seems never to let
And hope, a stranger, stand,
Make not the heart beat fast,
Fear paralyze, like dart
Toilers who fret.

Toilers who wait
Content, as contemplate
Their progress day by day,
Time comes, however fair
Days of the future to mark
The hour, the golden hour,
Peace-come—though it come late,
Toilers who wait.

Jaffa to Damascus.

BEYRUT, May 8.—We left Jerusalem in a howling tempest of wind and rain on our way back to Jaffa, where we were to take ship for Beyrut, on our way to Baalbec and Damascus. The wretched railway cars leaked like a sieve, and we had to sit with our feet up on the seats in order to keep out of the puddles. We passed through Lydda, whence St. Peter was called to Joppa, and soon were back in the hotel in Jaffa, a gloomy, dirty caravansera, where we were to be cooped up for three days, for no boat could possibly land in that dangerous port in such a sea.

The bright, beautiful morning which greeted us in Beyrut, and the lovely view of the busy city which greeted us from the water, smoothed our ruffled tempers, and we were soon plunged in the preparations for the start to Damascus. Three carriages were required, and we contracted with a man to disembark us, sleep us, eat us, guide us, cheat us, and reembark us for $75 a head. It was not very cheap, nor was it very dear, and it relieved us of all care. The carriages were like our mountain wagons, with a canvass cover and three horses harnessed abreast.

Soon we were slowly creeping up the hillside, up to whose base stretch the gardens and villas of Beyrut, and more and more charming became the view as we mounted higher and higher, the glittering sea, the fertile plains of Beyrut, the beautiful shades of red, green and gray which the different rocks and crops gave the ground, and in the distance the snow-capped mountains. The road is splendid. I know no road in the United States equal to it. The limestone was all there to make it, and a wonderful piece of engineering it is as it winds like a serpent in and out, and up and up, among the canons and the steep inclines. Do not think the Turkish authorities did it. They are not capable of anything as fine, and in all their dominions this is the only first-class road. It was built by a French company, who have a concession and levy a toll on every carriage, horse, camel, donkey, or man that travels on it.

Soon we lost sight of the green plains of Beyrut, and plunged into the barren gorges to the sides of which we seemed to be clinging like flies, so narrow the road space, so precipitous the decline. Far below us we could see little green spots here and there among the rocks, each with its village of flat-roofed one-story adobe or stone houses, which would be as comfortless to us as the interior of a Colorado stable.

Higher we climbed, each turn bringing a new scene of wonder and beauty before us, until at last we reached the region of eternal snow, for I may safely use that term about a place where never, even in the heat of summer, does the snow entirely disappear from the highest peaks. It lay very thick around us now, and white and cold it looked as we went spinning down the other side of the mountain into another fertile valley to a roadside inn in a little stone village called Sturn, where we spent the night. Crowded, indeed, it was. Two of the ladies slept on the dinner table, and all night long the dogs barked, the mosquitoes sang, the wagon-drivers gabbled, and the smells went up. But early in the morning we were out of it and climbing the mountains again, hot and bare in the glaring sun but full of splendid views. It takes about seven hours from Sturn, and it is only during the last hour that the road is sheltered by one tree. Then you find yourself in the groves of poplars and fruit trees which stretch around Damascus, and the swift-flowing waters of the Abana make everything green around you.

It is no wonder that Arabs living in the thirsty desert, with nothing but limestone rocks to meet the eye and the cruel sun burning out their very lives, should have thought the narrow valley in which Damascus lies a paradise, and that their poets should celebrate it in high flown Oriental verse; but to us Americans, accustomed to see the smallest village embowered in green and enameled with lovely gardens, there is nothing wonderful in the surroundings of Damascus. It is green and nothing more. The gardens are not well kept. The mud walls which fence them in are a great eyesore, and the poplar is a stiff and ungraceful tree. I had read the guide book's gush about the lovely view of golden minarets bathed in the sunlight, and domes and graceful buildings, and was prepared for something really grand, quite in the style of the Arabian Nights, but there was nothing of the kind. Over a dusty, level road, past very commonplace buildings, the carriage rolled into Damascus and drew up at the door of a rambling, unattractive two-story building well known as Dimitri's Hotel.

If ever a man was utterly and totally disappointed in a city I was in Damascus. I had read about it, and imagined it a perfect vision of beauty, and I found it a dirty, disgusting, commonplace city. There is not one building of even passable architecture within its walls—and such walls! a company of good stout American boys could kick them down. The streets are for the most part mere lanes, filthy beyond description. Although it has more than a hundred thousand people, there is no gas, and only one or two street lights. There used to be one fine building, the great mosque, which Justinian built for the worship of Christ, but last autumn that took fire and the whole inside was gutted. The domes all fell in, so that nothing but the blackened and shattered shell remains.

One very interesting spot to me was the road along which St. Paul must have ridden to enter Damascus. Of course, the exact point where the lightning flash blinded him cannot be identified, but the road can be, and this is quite enough. The road runs along the cemetery where are interred the thousands of Christians who perished in the terrible massacre of 1860, when the Turks of Damascus rose against their Christian fellow-citizens and put them to the sword. It has been estimated that over 10,000 perished in that awful massacre, which the Turkish authorities did very little to check and are accused of having even instigated. Even now the hate only smolders between the two religions, and the presence of a large garrison is always necessary to keep the peace between them.

If you only judged from the outside of the house, you would say there was not one in Damascus, but that would be a very wrong conclusion. You go up a filthy lane, holding your nose by the way and carefully picking your steps over all kinds of garbage. You knock at an old tumble-down door in a mud wall. You pass through it into a dirty, narrow corridor, and emerge into a beautiful courtyard paved with white and black marble and shaded by lovely orange and lemon trees. The court is bordered by splendid apartments. I say splendid, not tasteful or comfortable in any way. Imagine a grand drawing-room, wainscoted with exquisitely carved marble, the execution of which must have cost $20,000, paved with costly tiles, a graceful marble fountain in the center, and mirrors in frames of carved cedar-wood all around, stained windows shed a soft light on the costly furniture of mother of pearl. On the carved tables are coarse worsted flowers, such as you might see in a cabin in the pine forests of Michigan. On the walls are cheap, 25-cent engravings, and the rusty pipe of a common sheet-iron stove goes out of the fine windows. Gilding but no taste, expense but no beauty. And in came the mistress of all this gorgeousness, a fat woman, badly dressed, and walking on pattens inlaid with mother of pearl, which raised her up to the height of a giantess and made her look so funny that it was with the greatest difficulty we kept from laughing; and when you go beyond the one or two show-rooms you find nothing but ugliness and dirt. The domestic arrangements are often unspeakable, the sleeping-rooms comfortless, the kitchen and dining-room common and far from clean. The servants never undress themselves at night, but roll up in a rug and drop down anywhere, and the masters are not much better. They wear European clothes, but underneath there is no European cleanliness. We went to a bath-house to try a Turkish bath, but a regard for our skins sent us home again. We could not risk it.

Striking objects in the street are the white apes. They often cost $1,000, and their hides are shaven in the drollest way, forming triangles and geometrical figures on their bodies, bracelets on their legs, and necklaces around their necks. They are objects of envy, and we all wanted to carry one home.

The bazaars of Damascus are far famed, but in richness of goods they are far beneath the bazaars of Cairo. They are extensive and dirty, and you have to be careful where you walk. The crowd surging through them is a motley one indeed, and affords the wondering American the most intense amusement and interest, he in turn being equally an object of curiosity. If we stopped to make a purchase any number of boys and men assisted, gave advice, took sides, and showed the greatest interest in the bargaining. I am so unfortunate as to possess two gold teeth, and these teeth were the objects of the greatest attraction that day in the bazaar. My dentists will be gratified to hear how highly their work was appreciated. Being a good-natured man I gave dental exhibitions every five minutes to large audiences, for which I asked no backsheesh, and when I closed the show I left a large and disappointed crowd.

The cook-shops were remarkable. I never was in a place that seemed so given over to eating. I counted thirteen different kinds of bread. I saw what I thought was a clothes-horse full of towels drying, but it proved to be a variety of bread. There was a cake which looked like a large washbowl of white chinn veined with red, and there were pretzels by the cartload. An obliging baker took me through his establishment. It was about twelve by fourteen. There was an earthen oven with a brick floor. He lifted a little bit of straw and put it on the oven floor, and then plastered on the oven wall a sheet of dough. It was baked in a moment or two, and was sold hot. The cakes looked tempting and I invested in some, but they were too sweet and rich, and the pastry was all rank with mutton fat. You get very sick of mutton in Syria. Every day you have it at least twice. The cries of the street venders are very funny, the flower-sellers call out: "Buy and appease your mother-in-law." It evidently is the Damascus idea that this formidable personage can be mollified by flowers. Damascus is old and has much experience, and I recommend the plan to any troubled with an obstructive mother-in-law. But all this novelty did not make one love Damascus. I was glad when the hour of departure came, and still gladder when we were back in Beyrut, and gladdest of all when we were on board the steamer bound for Athens.—Clinton Locke.

Sin, repentance, and pardon are like the three vernal months of the year, March, April, and May. Sin comes in like March, blustering, stormy and full of bold violence. Repentance succeeds like April, showering, weeping, and full of tears. Pardon follows like May, springing, singing, full of joys and flowers. Our eyes must be full of April with the sorrows of repentance and then our hearts shall be full of May with the true joy of forgiveness.

The work of another, however much better it may be done than we could do it, will never cancel our own obligations.

Letters to Indiana Conference.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

Are you "lifting up your head" to-day? It is a somewhat peculiar expression,—it implies a stretching of the neck, a lengthening of the person to its utmost height so he can see afar, and that is just what we want. We want to reach the utmost height in Christian character, we want to be as near perfection as it is possible for mortal men and women to be.

The "lifting up of the head," is only possible to those who understand God, and have drawn near to him in loving service. The hopeful, expectant longing attitude, the "looking up" is only possible to those servants who know, and are doing the Master's will, and the command comes to us who are living now, in these last days of the Christian dispensation, when all things, political, social, and physical would look darkly ominous to worldly eyes, then we were to rejoice, our redemption would be near. The toiling, suffering days would be about over. The gladness of the home-meeting with dear ones in the kingdom of God, would be at hand. We see just such a state of things all over the world as the Savior predicted. All agree that it is "a time of trouble" and rapidly growing worse. We hear murmurings of discontent all around us. Men and women are trembling with fear, and finding fault with God.

The long-continued rains and the frosts fill them with foreboding. The low prices, the rising of the people, and the marching in organized bands as if it were a preconcerted movement, speak of more dreadful times ahead for all who make the arm of flesh their stay, but to us who are looking for the Anointed King of Earth to come, it is no cause for fear. "We know in whom we have believed." And just at the time when it seems as if there was no help—no escape, we shall be "caught away to meet the Lord in the air."

I am looking up; I am lifting up my head; I am rejoicing in view of the nearness of the Advent. This buoys me up above all trouble. I rest on the promises of God. It is sweet to rest there, to feel that whatever comes of famine, pestilence, persecution or war, I am safe in Jesus' hands. Do not let your love grow cold. I entreat you to be faithful a little while longer. "Endeavor to the end." Fight the battle to the finish. Fight along all lines. Have no fear. Our Father is as rich as he ever was. Pray, and give, and work with earnestness and zeal. If the Master were coming to-morrow you would warn, you would give your all to save the precious souls around you, hold back nothing now. Oh, may the dear God of our strength be with you all through this meeting and may you not only be built up in the faith yourselves, but may you also be able to bring others to understand God, and to obey and rejoice in him, looking for salvation when Jesus, who is our Life shall appear.

My heart and my prayers are with you.

S. ROXANA WINCH.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Conference Assembled:

Ever since I read the notice of the conference in THE RESTITUTION I have felt a desire to be with you in that meeting, and as the time of it draws nearer that desire has become a longing.

The last opportunity that I have had of meeting with our people in divine service was in Plymouth three years ago. I rode from Sister Taber's with Brother and Sister Roberts. I wanted very much to return to the afternoon meeting but was too ill to do so. Oh, how many changes have taken place since then. Sister Roberts, Bro. Madison Barnhill, the saintly Bro. Chaplin, and others whose names I cannot now remember, have been gathered to their rest, to await in quiet slumber, that has no pain, the fulfillment of that blessed hope, the coming of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

I have thought how sad the little church of Plymouth must have felt the first time they assembled after those dear ones were laid to rest. But they sorrow not as those who have no hope, for "When he shall appear, then shall they also appear with him in glory." Sister Roberts and Father Chaplin lived so close to God, and had cultivated that disposition of mind that we call spirituality, so closely that it seemed to me that it illuminated their countenances and made their presence felt long after I had parted from them. Bro. Chaplin's face was always an interesting study to me—so pure and honest as if a thought of sin had never lingered in his mind long enough to leave an impress. I have often compared him in my mind to the apostle John on the Mount of Transfiguration, and sometimes I imagined that it only needed the raiment white as light to complete the illusion.

But why should I write of these things now? I can not tell unless it is because these two are so closely associated in all my memories of the meetings at Plymouth and Antioch.

I see by THE RESTITUTION that the sisters are making a commendable effort to put an Evangelist in the field. I would be very glad to help with this and other efforts for the Master's cause if I were able, but my sickness has so far exhausted my capital stock that I am barely able to meet my necessary expenses.

In thinking on the subject of evangelizing, this question has presented itself to my mind. Has the church in Indiana received an adequate return for the money spent in evangelistic work, and whether more good would not have been accomplished if the same money had been used to keep pastors over the churches already organized, and to publish literature for the children, and to maintain schools to educate the young in the things that we believe the Bible teaches in regard to our salvation? I hope now, that no one will hastily conclude that I depreciate the work of the Evangelist; or that I mean to insinuate that the work has not been faithfully done. On the contrary, I believe that it is an important part of the work, and that the labor has been faithfully performed and in some cases at pitifully low salaries, but what would you think of an husbandman who would labor to cultivate a piece of ground until he had gotten it in just the right condition to yield the fruit of his toil, and then abandon it to the weeds, and commence to break new ground?

It seems to me that is about the way our evangelistic work has gone. I have been so pained to see churches that were organized with so much promise of future good and ran well for a season, scattered after a few years, like a sheep without a shepherd, all because they had no head.

The apostle has aptly called Christians when first received into Christ, "babes," and the figure may consistently be carried further than some people have been wont to think of applying it. Now babies require special diet and careful nursing, and judgment and intelligence are necessary in order to a proper administering of their food and nursing. Occasionally we find a church that will struggle nobly, and manfully, and against all odds, and will keep together though they seldom gain in numbers, and I believe that those who have been the most successful in holding their members in this way will admit that it is a monotonous unsatisfactory way, and is lacking in the spirit and potent energy that attends the work of an intelligent church, under the leadership of a live pastor. I was visiting in a town a few years ago, where we have a congregation that has made a heroic effort to keep up an interest by breaking of bread every first day and holding social meetings; a good brother asked me to lead the meeting the following week, and when I tried to beg off he said, "We have each by turn led so many times that we can not think of any new subjects and we have nothing to offer on the old ones."

There has been so much of the time since I have been sick that I could not read, therefore I could not keep pace with the conference work, but I am heartily in sympathy with any movement that will assist us in teaching the principles of our faith to the coming generation before their minds become imbued with what seems to me the false teachings of theology. It has always worried me to see how strangely indifferent our people are about the religious education of our children and young people. They will read and if you do not furnish them books and papers they will find them for themselves. We need a young people's literature, and a children's literature.

I am an invalid from spinal trouble, in the fifth year of my sickness and I suffer all the time, and am very feeble. I am at the National Woman's Relief Corps Home, Madison, Ohio, about 40 miles east of Cleveland. I often think of Bro. Joslin, but am not acquainted with him. There is no one here who has any sympathy with our faith. I saw the announcement of the conference at Antioch. Oh, how much I would enjoy meeting with the brothers and sisters again, and hear the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, but I never shall. I am confined to my bed and wheel chair, and will probably never be on terra firma again until I am carried to that "bourne from which no traveler e'er returns."

With much love, I am yours, in hope of the kingdom. May it soon come is my prayer.

MOLLIE W. BABCOCK.

Bro. Underwood:

For many days I have been thinking of the meeting at Antioch, and of all the dear brethren and sisters that would be there, but cannot see any way that I can come this year. Be assured you are not forgotten. As Paul said to the Philippians, "I have you in my heart, and I thank God upon every remembrance of you, and pray that you stand fast, with one mind, striving for the faith of the gospel."

When I look back to the many good meetings there, and the dear friends that have enjoyed them who are now asleep, I feel more than ever that the time for us to work is short. I hope we may all be accounted worthy to be with that "multitude which no man could number, and that God shall wipe away all tears from our eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain." "He that overcometh shall inherit all things"

God grant that you and I may be of that number.

In hope.

HARRIET M. LINDSEY.

Goody, Goody Folks.

"There it is raining again! It rains all the time. We shall never get our crops out. One can't plow when the ground is kept completely soaked. We shall starve, for there won't be anything raised. How can there be when it freezes in the middle of summer? We have to come into the world without our consent, and must stay here and suffer. I can't see any justice or mercy in it."

"But you can't help its raining. It has rained many a spring and crops have been sown and a bountiful harvest reaped. And many a spring the frosts have fallen from heaven and delayed the growth of early sown vegetables. Yet, you have never starved. If you could but learn that God's time is best, and will keep together though they God's time!" Even the birds in the wheat have learned in their singing this song to repeat.

"Sorrowful tears may besprinkle the years,
But over the woe and over the fears,
All 'mounteth the rhyme, the perpetual chime
God's time is best; God's time!"

If the corn could be planted in the time of the rainfall and frost, it would come to eating time in the drouth, or the rain might fall when the ground needed stirring, and then, it would be choked by the weeds, or eaten by the worms; wait and be quiet."

"Oh yes! it does to preach, but you goody, goody people, have to take it just the same. What does your serving God avail?"

"Yes, we take it."

"'He sendeth his rain on the just and the unjust.' He sendeth it: it comes not of itself. It is His rain and it is sent on all alike, because he loves all and would do even his enemies good."

"We take the seeming evil with you, but we look at it in a different light. We do not murmur because our Father knows. He knows and he cares.

"We've always been provided for,
And we shall always be."

He is preparing the ground for the heats of the summer. He is filling it with the cool, sweet moisture that plant-life will need by and by. And though our seed be unsown, or the precious wheat destroyed by the beating hail or the cruel cyclone, 'God's hand is not shortened that it cannot save. And the millennium is coming by and by. The curse is to be taken off the earth, then rains will not hinder the ploughman, nor frosts blight the fruit of his toil."

"But we shall all starve before the millennium comes."

"You have always had bread, a plentiful store. Have you ever thanked God for what he has already given you? No wonder you are murmuring and taking anxious thought for the morrow, for you feel no sense upon, or of trust in God. You have not that calm, peaceful, untroubled feeling of security, that alike in storm or calm is the heritage of the child of God. Does it avail nothing to serve him? Oh it does! it does!

"We leave it with Him,
We're more dear to his heart
Than lilies that bloom,
Or than flowers that start'
'Neath the snow, neath the snow!"

I would that you understood God that you could know him as the kind provider for all your wants, and more than this, as one, who is all-wise and can forecast the future,—could know him as your God; as the strong friend; —the Omnipotent,—who wants you saved, and has made a way whereby you can be saved. I pity you that you do not know him, that you will not make his acquaintance, nor believe his Word. You find fault with husband and children and friends, because they are not unselfish and considerate and loving. You want them to leave off the cross, snappish words; you want them to do for you when you are ill, and to be helpful when you are well. Do you know that this is just what God wants? that this is what the Bible is given to us for? You do not want to be a Christian; you hate religion and goody, goody folks; you want your dear ones to have the very character that God wants them to have, and that religion would give them! But they will never attain to that high standard of holiness without the grace of God. You may look and long in vain for a genuine change of heart unless they give those hearts to Jesus. It is only God in the home that can make a happy home. You are like the restless waves of the sea, nothing satisfies. You wish you had never come into the world, you can find no happiness here; what a dreadful state to be in! Yet how easy could all this be changed if your eyes, so blinded to the goodness of God, could be opened. He didn't create you to suffer. He gave you life that you might know the bliss of being. He gave you unfailing springs of happiness, but you will not drink. Sources of the highest, purest joy are around you, but you spurn them. You go to the muddy waters and cry because they are not sweet. You run after pretty, transient bubbles, and they burst. The everlasting love, the eternal riches, you think not worth the seeking. But there are prettier things in the kingdom than you have ever dreamed of. You want things fixed up;—they will be fixed there. The kind, soft words, the grateful praise you crave will be yours if you get into God's land of light and love and song. He wants you there. He is not willing that you should perish. You may come, "Whosoever will may come." But you don't will to take the road that will leads you home, it isn't broad enough. Poor, misguided child! life is passing swiftly, the judgment coming, and you so far from God. Why not leave all the sad troubling things and find rest and joy in Jesus? Why not lay all your burdens down at his feet? You would be happy then for how could you be sad with the sure prospect of coming life and glory before you? It is all freely offered,—pardon, and life and an everlasting home, take it and be satisfied.

S. ROXANA WINCH.

Dear Restitution:

Please say through the paper that I held meeting last Sunday at Beirclerville, Ind., and four were immersed on Sunday afternoon, and on Wednesday another called on me to go to the water and immerse him, making five in all. To God be all the praise.

J. S. HASON.

Young Christian.

"A few evenings ago," says a writer in The Congregationalist, "as we sat by the library fire, a young friend who was our guest entertained us with some experiences of his country home life. Among other things he said:

"'We had great fun last Fourth of July. Another boy and I got up at midnight and we roamed through the town. All the gates we could get off the hinges we carried away as far as possible, and piled boards against the doors of one of the houses. When we came to the pond we saw a wagon which some boys had drawn there and backed into the water, and we pushed it in still farther until it sank entirely out of sight. It was such fun to see the seat and other things that were in the wagon floating around on the water: but, I tell you, they had a job of it, getting that wagon out the next day.'

"I was amazed at the utter indifference the young man showed as to the result of his foolish pranks. The worry and labor attendant upon the recovery of the wagon made no impression upon him. That the farmer's only summer holiday had been spoiled and his property injured, if not ruined, was to him a matter of no concern. Yet this young man is a member of the village church, is active in Christian Endeavor and temperance work, and one of the main-stays of the weekly prayer-meeting. The error in this case was only that of thoughtlessness. In his eagerness for fun the youth thought only of himself. If he could have seen the matter as it appeared to us he would have been shocked.

"Now is there not something wrong in the education of a boy, who, after the most careful training in a Christian home and constant attendance from his earliest years at Sunday school, can still find it in his heart to so wrong a neighbor? We teach our children the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount. We teach them, too, to loathe all the heinous sins, such as drunkenness, murder, theft, etc., but the one great doctrine of love, which is above and beyond all others, is not given the prominence it should receive. The kingdom of God will never be established on earth until each and every professed follower of Christ is willing to strive to do unto others as he would have others do unto him, and to show that he does, in very truth, love his neighbor as himself."

We should say that this "thoughtless young Christian" needed. First, a decent bringing up, with a liberal admixture of birch sprouts. Second, plenty of hard, honest work, to earn his bread, and make him too tired at night to engage in such devilry as this. Third, a sound conversion to God; that would make him a Christian instead of a mere "Endeavorer."

"We aim to make a good paper," said an editor.

"Why don't you fire?" was the pertinent response. Aiming and endeavoring is not enough.

We remember listening to the jovial remarks of some athletic young men who told with much glee of the fright of some old women whom they had run down or imperilled by their bicycle performances. Such persons may be main-stays of the weekly prayer-meetings, but the prayer-meetings had better stay themselves on God rather than upon such supporters.

Talk about questions of the day! There is but one question, and that is the gospel. It can and will correct everything needing correction. My only hope for the world is in bringing the human mind into contact with divine revelation.

"Maran Atha"—the Lord cometh (1 Cor. xvi. 22)—should be the watchword of all the soldiers of Christ in all their encampments, and from every watch tower, through all the long and dreary night. Let it, dear brethren, be our strength and the joy of our eyes.

Announcements.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Kansas, will be held three miles northeast of Oxford, in Cowley County, at Bro. Thomas Jackson's schoolhouse. This meeting will last about ten days, commencing August the tenth, 1894. There is some important business to transact. Business meeting will be on Saturday at two o'clock p. m. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can bring tents and come prepared to camp. The brethren at Oxford are wholesouled, hospitable folks, but it is too much for women to have to work all the time and get no good of the meetings, so let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master. The commotion of the world indicates his coming is very near. All speaking brethren wishing any information correspond with Bro. S. C. Oliver, Attica, Kan. A full program will be published in due time.

S. C. OLIVER, Pres.
E. F. RANDOLPH, Sec.

The National Educational Association, convenes at Asbury Park, N. J., July 8th to 13th. Special low rates via the Nickel Plate Road. Passengers are offered choice of routes and can go via Albany and the Hudson River steamers in both directions if desired. For information call on Agents of the Nickel Plate Road.

☞ It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

For the Christian Endeavor Convention, at Cleveland, the Nickel Plate Road offers a rate of one lowest first class fare for the round trip and a splendid passenger service. Tickets on sale July 9, 10, 11. Return limit Sept. 15th.

Do you want them?

"Future Probation, is that awaiting any of the unrighteous?" A book of 348 pages, by Wm. Glen Moncrieff. Reduced from 25c to 12c post paid. $1.20 per dozen. Send to this office for them.

4th of July rates on the Nickel Plate Road are one fare for the round trip. Tickets on sale July 3rd and 4th, good returning until the 5th.

Excursion Rates via Pennsylvania Lines for Fourth of July.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, July 3d and 4th, special excursion tickets will be sold from all ticket stations on the Pennsylvania Lines to any station on those lines within two hundred miles from station where ticket is purchased. Return coupon will be good until July 5th, inclusive. Tickets will not be sold to adults for less than twenty-five cents, nor to children for less than fifteen cents.

Summer Tours.

The Nickel Plate Road has on sale a very extensive and complete line of tourist tickets to the summer resorts of the East, including St. Lawrence River points, the Lower Canadian Provinces, the resorts of the Atlantic Coast and the mountains of New York and New England. All tourist tickets will permit holders to visit Chautauqua Lake and Niagara Falls without extra charge. A Tour Book, giving routes and rates, may be had by addressing B. F. Horner, G. P. A., Cleveland, O.

Reduced Rates to Denver.

Unusual low rate excursions are being announced this year by the Pennsylvania Lines, and long distance journeys over them may be made at slight expense. For this summer exceedingly cheap excursions to Denver will be run over these Lines. The rates will be the lowest in effect for years and will enable persons to visit the West at slight cost. The dates and return limits for these special Denver excursions will be as follows:

On June 22nd and 23d, account of the National Republican League Convention, good to return until the latter part of July.

On July 20th and 21st, good to return until the latter part of August, account the meeting of the Mystic Shrine Order.

On August 9th and 10th, account annual meeting League of American Wheelmen, good returning until the middle of September.

Although the low rates have been made for meetings of organizations, the sale of tickets will not be confined to members, but the public generally may take advantage of the low fare. The return limits will be ample for side trips in the West. Details may be obtained by applying to any Ticket Agent of the Pennsylvania Lines, or by addressing F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Remember the recent reductions in rates via the Nickel Plate Road and its unexcelled passenger service of through trains equipped with finest coaches and buffet sleeping cars between Chicago, Cleveland, Buffalo, New York and Boston, when next you are traveling East or West.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Brethren:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 4, 1894. NO. 25.

Original.

Acts of the Apostles. Chap. 7.

1. And the chief-priest said, Are these things so?

2. And he said, Men, brethren and fathers, may ye have hearkened. The God of glory appeared to our father Habraam when he was in Mesopotamia, before he took up his abode in Charran;

3. And said unto him, Come out of thy land and thy kindred into the land which I am going to show you.

4. Then going out of a land of Chaldaians, he took up his abode in Charran; from then after his father had died he removed him into this land in which ye now are dwelling.

5. And he gave him no inheritance in it, not even a place to set his foot: And he had promised to give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when he had no offspring.

6. And in this wise had God said, namely, That his seed should be a sojourner in another's land and that they should serve it as bond-servants and that they would ill-treat them for four hundred years;

7. And the nation which they should serve, will I judge, said God; And after that will they go out and serve me for hire in this place.

8. And he gave a covenant of circumcision; and in this wise he begat Isaak and circumcised him on the eighth day; And Isaak Jakob, and Jakob the twelve patriarchs;

9. And the patriarchs becoming jealous of Joseph sold him into Aiguptos (Egypt); and God was with him,

10. And delivered him out of all his tribulations, and gave him grace and wisdom in the sight of Pharao king of Egypt, and he established him a leader over Egypt and over all his house;

11. And a famine came upon all Egypt and Chanaan and great tribulation: and our fathers did not find food for their stock;

12. And when Jakob heard that there was grain in Egypt he sent our fathers first;

13. And the second time Joseph made himself known to his brethren; and his race became manifest to Pharao.

14. And Joseph sent and summoned Jakob his father and all his kindred to the number of seventy-five souls;

15. And Jakob went down into Egypt; and came to his end there he and our fathers;

16. And they removed him to Suchem and placed him in the memorial-tomb which Habraam had bought for a money-price from the sons of Emmor in Suchem,

17. And even as the time of the promise drew nigh which God had confessed to Habraam, the laity (royal-people) had increased and become multiplied in Egypt.

18. Until another king arose over Egypt, who did not know Joseph.

19. This one outwiled our race with sophisms and ill-treated our fathers to the extent of causing their newly-born babes to be exposed so that they should not propagate;

20. During which period Mouses was begotten, and he was a promising child for God, and he was nurtured for three months in the house of his father;

21. And when he had been exposed, the daughter of Pharao took him up and nurtured him for herself for a son;

22. And Mouses was brought up in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was a man of ability in his words and deeds;

23. And when his forty years of time had been fulfilled it came up upon his heart to take oversight of his brethren the sons of Israel,

24. And seeing a certain one suffering wrong he warded it off and executed requital for the sufferer, and smote the Egyptian,

25. And he supposed that his brethren understood that God through his hand was giving salvation to them; But they did not understand;

26. And on the following day he appeared to them while they were fighting and undertook to reconcile them to peace, saying, Men, brethren, ye are brethren, Why are ye wronging one another?

27. But the one who was wronging his neighbor, thrust him away saying, Who constituted thee a ruler and a civil-judge over us?

28. Dost thou intend to destroy me in the way thou didst destroy the Egyptian yesterday?

29. And Mouses fled at this word, and became a sojourner in a land of Madiam, where he begat two sons.

30. And when forty years had been fulfilled, an angel appeared unto him in the wilderness of Mount Sina in a flame of fire in a rumble-bush.

31. And Mouses when he saw the sight wondered, and as he was approaching to view it closely, there occurred a voice of the Lord,

32. I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Habraam and Isaak and Jakob; and Mouses trembling did not dare to view it closely.

33. And the Lord said unto him, Loose the sandal off thy feet, for the place upon which thou standest is hallowed ground.

34. I have seen the ill-usage of my royal-people in Egypt and have heard their sighing; and have come down to deliver them; and now come hither: I will send thee into Egypt.

35. This Mouses whom they denied saying, Who constituted thee a ruler and dicast, (civil-judge) him God sent both as a ruler and a redeemer together with the hand of the angel who appeared to him in the rumble-bush.

36. This one led them out after that he had caused prodigies and signs in a land of Egypt and in a Red Sea and in the wilderness for forty years;

37. This is the Mouses, who said unto the sons of Israel, a prophet will God stand up for you from among your brethren like unto me as it were.

38. This the one who came to be in the church in the wilderness with the angel who talked to him on Mount Sina, and with our fathers, and who received living oracular words (or oracles) to give us.

39. To whom our fathers were not willing to become obedient but thrust him away, and turned back in their hearts into Egypt;

40. Saying unto Aaron, Make for us gods, who will go their way before us: For this Mouses, who led us out of a land of Egypt, we know not what hath become of him,

41. And they made a yearling-bullock (a muscho) in those days and offered a sacrifice unto the idol, and rejoiced in the works of their hands;

42. And God turned away and gave them up to serve the army of the heavens for hire, even as hath been written in a book of the prophets, namely: Did ye not offer unto me slain victims and sacrifices for forty years in the wilderness, O ye house of Israel?

43. And ye took up the tabernacle of Moloch and the star of the God Romipha, the types which ye had made to worship, and I am going to transport you over beyond Babulon.

44. The tabernacle of the testimony was your fathers, in the wilderness even as the one who talked with Mouses directed him to make it according to the pattern which he had seen.

45. Which also our fathers with Jesous when they had through him received it, brought into the possession of the nations, whom God thrust out before the face of our fathers until the days of Dawid;

46. And he found favor in the sight of God, and asked if he might find a habitation for the God of Jakob:

47. But Solomon built a house for him;

48. Though the Most High doth not dwell in places made with hands even as the prophet saith;

49. The canopy is my throne and the earth a foot-stool for my feet: What sort of a house have ye built for me? Saith the Lord or what place is there for my final rest? (Kulupausis not Anapausis which means interval rest)

50. Did not my hand create all these things?

51. Ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in your heart and ears, ye do always withstand the sanctified spirit, as did your fathers, do ye also.

52. Which of the prophets did not your fathers persecute? And they slew those who had pre-announced concerning the coming of the Just (justified) One, whose betrayers and murderers ye have now become;

53. Ye who received the law in ordinations of angels and did not watch to guard it.

54. And as they heard this they were cut (lit. sawed) through their hearts and gnashed their teeth against him;

55. And he being full of sanctified spirit and looking attentively into the heavens, saw God's glory and Jesous standing at God's right hand;

56. And he said, Lo I behold heaven opened and the Son of Man standing at God's right hand.

57. And shouting with a great voice they stopped their ears and rushed with one accord upon him,

58. And casting him outside of the city were stoning him, and the witnesses had placed their outer-garments at the feet of a young man called Saulos,

59. And they were stoning Stephanos invoking and saying, Lord Jesous receive my spirit

60. And kneeling he cried out with a great voice, Lord, charge not this sin to their account. And having said this he lay down to sleep.

CHAS. GARDNER.

"My God, My God why hast Thou Forsaken Me?"

It has been a puzzling question, even to the Christian heart, and much more so to the world, why God should seemingly forsake his own dear children, who have all their lives been faithfully serving him. Why should they suffer the extremity of mortal anguish? Why be eaten by the painful cancer, or killed by the ponderous train? How can such things be reconciled with the thought of a special providence watching over and guarding and providing for his people? Why is it they are left in poverty and in tears? Why die more painful deaths, than wicked men? Why? Ah! but God does care. He does watch and guide and bless his own. The dear Savior abides with all the faithful ones. There is comfort for every sorrowing hour. God makes all their beds in their sickness, and hope, blessed hope cheers them on. "Earth hath no sorrow heaven cannot heal." The Christian may seem to be left, but God is there, though his face be hid. No pain, no seeming desertion can come to the child of God that will outweigh the pain, the heart-breaking agony of the Master's heart as he hung on the cross dying for men. We can never, never fathom the woe that wrung that cry from his lips—"Why hast thou forsaken me?" Remember the agony of Calvary, you who doubt the goodness of God, when ever, even by the calamities of this present evil state. He hid his face for a moment from his own beloved Son, how should he not hide it from you? It is all done to make you pure, to fit you for the coming kingdom. Let the house and its treasures go; the glory is coming by and by.

S. ROXANA WING.

"My Mouth is as Good as Anybody's."

"I am not going to save the good things for company to eat,—my mouth is as good as anybody's," said a woman when her husband was trying to persuade her to lay by some of her fruit for her friends.

He felt ashamed when there was nothing in the house to set before his guests. Can the young people guess what kind of a little girl this woman must have been? A very selfish one no doubt, one who wanted the one turn-over that mother had baked, the large piece of pie, the first ripe strawberry, the one golden orange, just brought from town.

She was a selfish child and she has grown up to be a selfish woman. She will make no sacrifices for the dear ones of the home-circle. The husband's clothes may go unwashed and unmended, what does she care? And not having learned to make sacrifice of time and strength, and pleasure for the happiness of kindred, she will make none for God. She can never make a Christian until her heart is changed and she becomes ready to "freely give," having received so much from God. Self-denial is one of the crowning Christian Graces. It is what sends out missionaries to distant lands. Love to God and love for man puts self out of sight. It esteems others better than itself. It gives and toils and studies to save.

S. ROXANA WING.

Dear Restitution:

I am now with the family of my dear uncle, J. R. Ham, who died Feb. 16, 1880. But not without hope, for he believed that Jesus died and rose again, and that all that love and serve him will rise and meet him at his second coming when he will make all things new, and fill the earth with the knowledge and glory of his Father. "The times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Acts iii. 19–21.

At the beginning of that glorious age the dead in Christ will be raised incorruptible, and the living changed in a moment and caught up together to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall they ever be with the Lord. See 1 Thess. iv. 13–18; 1 Cor. xv. 49–55.

"But the fearful and unbelieving and the abominable, and sorcerers, and murderers, and whoremongers, and idolators, and all liars shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death. See Rev. xxi. 8.

We pray the Lord to help us hasten the time when the people shall all learn righteousness, and iniquity shall have an end. Amen!

A few of us here tried as best we could to attend to our Heavenly Father's business. On Wednesday night we had a good meeting near Donaldson, at the home of Brother Wm. Long, and on Thursday night at California School-house, near Emore, and tonight we are to meet at Center Ridge School-house, and next Sunday at the Bramley School-house, where considerable interest has been manifested, thence to the loved ones at home.

Yours in hope, awaiting the redemption of Israel.

T. A. HARRAWAY.

Is There Alcohol in Root Beer?

That is a question often asked. Its answer is important, inasmuch as said drink is becoming very popular. One manufacturer reports the sale of nearly three million packages last year.

There are several things in the market called root beer, and some, if not all, claim that they contain no alcohol. This is litterly true of those which consist of dried roots or herbs, for alcohol is always a liquid. But the dried herbs are merely the flavorings, and when the directions are followed, adding water, sweetening and yeast, and letting it stand to ferment, you make the alcohol. The claim therefore, of no alcohol, is one of the numerous deceits so common in all this alcohol business. Most of the root beers are now sold in the form of extracts. Some of them are recommended to be mingled with water and used before fermentation, and in one of these, claiming to be free from alcohol, this poison was found by the testing apparatus.

We hear occasionally of temperance people who drink fermented root beer, not knowing that the fermentation of sweet liquids always produces alcohol. We have known it to be recommended as a temperance drink by the leading professional men in the community, men who are trusted to think for such people as will not take the trouble to inform themselves. This fact is a direct refutation of the claim that the people already know these facts of temperance science.

So we say, Spread the light. Talk about the alcohol even in root beer. Tell how it is made, and how its use will create or arouse an appetite for stronger drinks. Tell what the brewer and liquor dealer themselves say about it and about us for drinking it. Use your ingenuity to get these facts before the people. They cannot be expected to do better than they know. Nat. Temperance Advocate.

The Hasty Word.

To think before you speak is so wise an axiom, that one would hardly think it needful to emphasize it by repetition. And yet in how many cases the hasty word flashes out in the hasty word, and the latter does its work with the precision and the pain of the swift stiletto! Singularly enough, the hasty word oftenest wounds those who love one another dearly, and the very closeness of their intimacy affords them opportunity for the sudden thrust. We know the weak points in the armor of our kinsman and our friend; we are aware of his caprices, and ordinarily are tender and compassionate over of his vanities and his small fancies and whims; but there dawns a day when it is written in the book of fate that we shall be as cruel as we are loving. We are cold, or tired, or hungry. We are anxious over unpaid bills, or our expected letters have not arrived, or one of the children is ailing, and we dread the outcome of the malady. Our politeness fails us, fortitude is vanquished, philosophy is in abeyance, and we say that which we repent in sackcloth and ashes. But though the hasty word may be forgiven, it is not at once forgotten. It has flawed the crystal of our friendship; the place may be cemented, but there is a shadowy scar on the gleaming surface. O, if the word of haste had been left unspoken; if the strong hand of patience had but held back the sword as it was about to strike!—Harper's Bazar.

Moses excused himself because he was slow of speech. There were many who were better talkers, but it was not so much talk that the Lord wanted, as it was character.

What, Really a Sparrow?

"Certainly Christ was only speaking figuratively and poetically when he discoursed of 'two sparrows sold for a farthing,' and not one of them falling to the ground without your loving Father's notice." So says the objector to what has been stigmatized as "picayune providence." But Christ really meant what he said. Are not millions of sparrows hatched every year, and are they not as a matter of fact, fed? Certainly; and take comfort in the fact, O, fearful Christian, just as Christ intended you to do. Read again the sweet words of the Savior; "Behold the fowls of the air; for they sow not neither do they reap or gather into barns, yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they? Matt. vi. 26.

The following sweet story is translated from the French: "Two men were neighbors, and each of them had a wife and several little children, and only his labor to support them. One of these two men was troubled in mind, saying: 'If I die, or if I fall sick, what will become of my wife and my children?' And this thought never left him. It gnawed his heart as a worm gnaws the fruit in which it is concealed.

"Now, although the same thought had come to the other father, he had not dwelt upon it; 'for,' said he, 'God, who knows all, will also watch over me, and over my wife, and over my children.' And this one lived peacefully, while the first did not enjoy an instant of rest or inward joy.

"One day, when he was working in the fields, sad and cast down on account of his fear, he saw some birds enter a bush, fly out again, and then soon come back again. Having approached the place, he saw two nests placed side by side, and in each one several little birds, newly hatched and still without feathers. And then he returned to his work; but from time to time he raised his eyes and watched these birds, who went and came, bearing food to their little ones.

"Now, at the moment when one of the mothers was returning with her beak full, a vulture seized it, bore it upward, while the poor bird struggling vainly under its grasp, uttered piercing cries.

"At this sight the man who was working felt his soul more troubled than before; 'for,' thought he, 'the death of the mother is the death of the children. Mine have only me to depend on; what will become of them if I fail them?' And all the day he was gloomy and sad, and during the night he did not sleep. The next day, on his return to the fields, he said to himself: 'I wish to see this poor mother's little ones. Several, without doubt, have already perished;' so he crept toward the bush, and looking in, he saw the little ones in good health; not one seemed to have suffered.

Astonished at this, he hid himself, to observe what happened. After awhile he heard a slight cry, and saw the second mother bearing in haste the food that she had gathered and she distributed it to all the little ones impartially, and there was enough for all, and the orphans were not abandoned in their misery. And the father who had distrusted Providence recounted in the evening to the other father what he had seen. And the other said to him: 'Why make yourself uneasy? God never abandons His children. His love has secrets that we know not of. Let us believe, let us hope, let us love, and let us pursue our way in peace. 'If I die before you, you will be the father of my children; if you die before me, I will be the father of yours. And if we both die before they become of age to provide for their necessities, they will have their father the Father who is in heaven.'"—Watchword.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 4, 1894.

☞ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

We will be thankful to any one who can give us the present address of Mrs. John Goodrich, whose former address was Estherville, Iowa.

An explosion took place in a Welsh mine on Saturday June 23rd with the frightful loss of 250 men, many of whom were mangled beyond recognition. On the Monday following crowds of crazed women who had not slept since the explosion still surrounded the pit.

On Monday June 25, news came from Paris, France to the effect that Sadi Carnot, president of the republic had been fatally murdered in his carriage at Lyons, by Cesare Giovanni, an Italian anarchist, 21 years old. The president had just left the chamber of commerce banquet given in his honor, and was on his way to the theatre when the assassin sprang upon the step of the carriage and stabbed him in the abdomen. Giovanni was seized at once, and but for the troops would have been torn limb from limb by the excited mob. The archbishop was sent for, and "Extreme Unction" was administered, and death took place within three hours of the fatal stab.

The load of hereditary tendency to evil is something terrible. Oh how it has grown, and how it is growing. Is it any wonder that worse and worse is the order of the times? Is it any wonder that one human expedient after another fails to lift humanity to a higher plane of existence? They all fail to touch the seat of the trouble—the biased, warped, twisted mind or heart of man. Only the truth of God believed and obeyed has power to purify hearts. Human devices may do some repairs and whitewashing, but as long as men are alienated from the life of God through ignorance of the truth, the tendency of the moral status will be downward. There is no good hope of moral improvement in the world till God's judgments are abroad in the earth; then its inhabitants learn righteousness. We hail the happy day, with delight. Soon may it come.

We recently mentioned Editor Smead's indictment of Chicago alderman who corruptibly make from $15,000 to $20,000 a year each; but this is hardly worth mentioning beside the disclosures made by the State Senate committee in New York. It is said that the Tammany Hall crew have been making ten million dollars a year corruptly. The method practiced is explained by a witness who, just released from the penitentiary, wished to open a disorderly house. In order to do this he was compelled to pay an initiation fee of $800, and something like $[illegible] a month ever after. And when a raid was to be made on those houses the police notified him to close up that night. The same corrupt practice was carried on with gambling establishments, and immoral amusement houses. With a government rotten to the core as that of New York City evidently is, it is surprising that society holds together.

Bro. Perry Pearson writes:—"Bro. Underwood, Please give through THE RESTITUTION the correct definition of the Greek word rendered world in James i. 27 and obliged." The word world in James i. 27 is from the Greek word Kosmos, and was used by the Greeks to denote, order, regularity, ornament, the world or universe, the different members of the universe, the heavenly bodies, earth, etc., and later it was used to denote the inhabitants of the earth, mankind, so says Liddell and Scott's Lexicon. This is all we are asked to do, but it may not be amiss to refer to a few Scriptures which show that the Spirit employs the Greek language as the Greeks themselves did. In John iii. 16 the word certain denotes the whole Race, or World of Mankind. In 1 Peter iii. 3 it is used for adornment. In Mark xvi. 15 it would seem to apply to the whole earth. While in Rom. i. 20 it applies to the whole universe or creation, if we are not mistaken. And in John xviii. 2 it appears to refer to this present order, constitution or arrangement of things. And we are persuaded that Jesus and his apostles employ the word Kosmos in a way of their own, when it says in John xvii. 11 of the disciples, "they are not of the world," meaning the masses of mankind who were not in his fold; as also in 1 John ii. 15, where we find the words, "Love not the world;" meaning its spirit, disposition, objects, aims, and pleasures.

Josephitism.

A letter from the Northwest enquires of us about Josephitism, what we "think of it." We think it a fraud to insist upon ignorance, conceit, assumption and unbelief; and that it can only be held by those who mutilate Moses and the prophets and the Psalms, as well as Jesus and his apostles. We hope all our readers will understand this; and so proceed to give some reasons for our opinion.

1. We hold that the promise that the Woman's Seed would bruise the serpent's head was the first gospel to disobedient man, and contained the germ of all subsequent promises. See Gen. iii. 15.

2. The masculine third personal pronoun HE is proof that the promised Seed of the woman was to be ONE particular person to be born of woman.

3. The promises of God to man are made with a view to the exercise of justifying faith, that he might ultimately partake of Divine nature, Rom. v. 1; 2 Pet. i. 4.

After these three reasons for our opinion it becomes necessary to ascertain how long after disobedience man was left in a hopeless state; was any gospel announced to Adam and Eve, and his immediate descendants? If so, what was offered them, and on what conditions offered. Our first reason for our opinion answers these questions; but it lacks proof that the same Savior offered to us was wrapped up in the promises of Gen. iii. 15.

We would not waste our time trying to prove anything to Josephites, because whenever they come to a passage that stands in their way, they cut it out: we write for those of our own people who may not readily detect the sophistry and cunning and assumption and unbelief of the diabolous which has lately come upon the scene with such zeal as to scatter its literature with a "lavish" hand.

1. The head of the serpent is to be bruised, and 1 John iii. 8 identifies the devil which the Son of God was manifested to destroy the works of, as the devil that sinned from the beginning. And in Heb. ii. 14 we see that Jesus will destroy him that had the power of death, that is the devil, or fail of God's purpose. If he fail, there may be a chance for the Josephite theory. If HE succeed in putting away sin, Josephites will have labored in vain. If he succeed he will demonstrate that he was the predicted Woman's Seed. Observe it is THE Devil, not one of several devils. If Christ as Seed of the Woman bruises the head of the serpent, there will be no head to be bruised by a Savior introduced by Josephites two thousand years later, because the work will be perfectly—completely done.

2. We read in Rom. xvi. 20 that "The God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly" and it is abundantly proven elsewhere that he does this by sending Jesus for that purpose; and we will not burden the article with proof texts familiar to all.

3. The name of the Bruiser, "Seed of the Woman," or "her (the Woman's) Seed," is unique. We doubt if the whole realm of literature furnishes another instance of its use apart from this subject; because of the universal principle in nature as expressed by the Spirit in 1 Cor. xi. 8 "For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man." Having nothing but experience to guide him, it could never enter the mind of man to conceive of a man being made of a woman. Only the God of nature and the Bible could employ such phrase.

The apostles of Josephitism affect to despise the miraculous conception because it is so unnatural, and so contrary to their experience, and because it has been scoffed at by skeptics. But if they give up all that skeptics scoff at they will have little left. For our part we do not see that it is any more miraculous to make a man out of a woman than it was to make the first man out of dust of the ground, —or than to make the first woman out of the first man. We do not know that Josephites have objected to this, as yet, but there is no telling when they may reach that point in repudiation at the rate they have travelled of late.

4. God did send forth his Son made (produced or born) of a woman. Gal. iv. 4. On the supposition that Joseph was the father of Jesus what consummate folly to think that God would thus speak of one—just ONE out of all the countless millions that had been made by the law of procreation, and take pains to tell us that HIS own particular Son was made or born of a woman when the whole race, save the first pair, had been made the same way. It strikes us forcibly that Paul's Galatian audience understood the natural or ordinary process without any instruction, and that this passage is therefore powerful evidence of miraculous conception.

5. Common sense should teach one that a man made of a woman without the intervention of man would all the same be Son of man, because made of a woman who was OF man, but we are not dependent upon common sense alone; the Spirit in Is. vii. 14 predicts that a virgin shall conceive, and Matt. i. 18-25 and Luke i. 26-35 show the fulfillment of it. We will defend the authenticity of these passages at the proper place, if life and health be vouchsafed us.

If Josephites say these passages simply make God a creator, and Jesus a creature but not a son, we remind them that the genealogy of Luke which they claim to be that of Joseph, makes Adam a son by creation. We are aware they have a way of disposing of the prediction in Isa. vii. 14, and expect to review that also, later. We hold that the phrases "Seed of the Woman," "made of a woman," "Son of God," and "Son of Man," are explained by the conception of the virgin as predicted.

6. We hold that the Mosaic account in the 3rd chapter of Genesis positively proves that the system of Redemption from sin and death was instituted before man was expelled from Eden. Something was promised the first pair, and from what we know of God's dealings with men we are warranted in saying that their participation in the blessing promised would depend upon belief of the promise. And the fact of the promise to them proves they were eligible to the blessing, and faith in it would make them candidates for it. Without faith it is impossible to please God; and they could have no faith in God unless they heard the Word of God. And what beside the Word promising that the Woman's Seed should bruise the serpent's head, had they heard, since they needed a Savior?

7. We have evidence that this gospel of the Woman's Seed was accepted by some of the immediate descendants of Adam; and this is strong presumptive evidence that Adam taught the Glad Tidings to his children, and this again would imply that he himself had believed.

Of Abel we read that he "Brought the firstlings of his flock, and of the fat thereof, and the Lord had respect unto Abel and his offering," as if he worshipped by a prescribed formula.

The words addressed to Cain, whose offering was not respected, clearly intimate that he also should have, but did not worship by the divine formula:—"If thou doest well shalt thou not be accepted? And if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door." We see from this that Cain took his own course, and Abel that of God.

We read too that Enoch walked with God, and this shows that God had introduced a saving system and Enoch had accepted it and regulated his walk by it. And the Spirit in Jude 4th verse tells us that he predicted the coming of the Lord with his myriads of saints to execute judgment, showing up the very gospel we have believed.

We also learn from Gen. vi. 1 that among God's sons by creation, there were sons of God in another sense; that is, through faith and obedience, and were distinguished as sons of God and sons of men: the sons of God in antediluvian times being the household of faith, as at present.

In addition to this we find by 2 Peter ii. 5 that Noah was a preacher of righteousness. This proves a rule in force for right doing,—a divine rule for becoming righteous before God; and this implies a crown of righteousness at last,—not of merit, but of favor; and with this in mind we come to Romans v. 15-18 where we are told that the gift by favor is by ONE man, Jesus Christ. Could we have clearer evidence that the gospel of Christ is now and ever has been the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth?

The only other proof that the gospel of Christ in outline was preached to the Antediluvians we will offer at this time, i. e., that animals were offered in sacrifice from the very infancy of the race. As we know that their blood could not put away sin, for what purpose were they slain if not typical of the great offering of the Woman's Seed—the sacrifice of himself? As only the promise of the Woman's Seed had been made, it is safe to say it contained the germs of all subsequent promises.

Josephites will not have it that the promise in Gen. 15 relates to Christ, and date the beginning of the gospel two thousand years later. If this be true, it follows (1), that for two thousand years God discriminated in favor of the early sinners, and allowed them to obtain salvation without gospel or discipline, or, (2), Saved by another gospel that for some reason was abandoned, or (3), That through the wrath of God the whole human family was disfranchized for 2000 years and allows to become worse and worse till they wallowed in pollution, and became a moral stench in his nostrils, before he made any attempt to save them; all or either of which would be extremely derogatory to the God of infinite love, and wisdom, and goodness, and justice.

Josephites who once taught the truth, the whole truth in outline have apostatized—entirely abandoned the first chapter of Redemption's story because it annihilates the human conception that Joseph was the father of Jesus. And it does not stop there. The whole book of God is wantonly mutilated to make that monstrous idea look feasible.

Editor Restitution:

I have just written what I had intended as a private letter to a dear friend, but it is on such a very important subject I thought perhaps it might do some good if others could read it, so I send it for publication, withholding my name, and hers that no one will know who it is written to. Please publish if you think it worth a place in our paper, with my love to all, hoping we may all be found worthy in that day when he comes. A.

Dear Sister and Friend:

Several times it has seemed to me that you openly advocated merry-making even in these dark and perilous last days. It has also seemed to me that you did it more to please or for fear of offending the young and gay, than because your heart was in it. Forgive me if this is untrue, for I am sorry to seem to rebuke one whom I love and hold in such high esteem, and one who I know is far wiser than I am, but this is sent in love, and is just between you and I, not for others to hear. Now, I say, is not this just what the worldly church of today is doing? Making themselves attractive to the young and pleasure-loving. I wish I could make it plain that I do not believe in cultivating sadness and gloom. Surely it ought to be joy, not sadness, to be watchfully, diligently, prayerfully, and faithfully striving to use every golden minute in the service of such a dear loving Father as is ours. Now mind, I do not claim that I have lived up to this high standard, but it is what I wish to attain to. I cannot believe there is one of us but would like to have Jesus when he comes find us engaged in that way. There is some difference between a hearty laugh at something irresistably amusing, and the common habit of laughing and chaffing even in a seemingly harmless way, and seeking continually to turn everything into a joke. It drives away serious subjects and wastes the precious moments of life we have left in which we might do much good by a faithful word spoken in season. It is idle words I and worse and not like the yea and nay, that the Savior recommended saying, "whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil." Look at the prophets of old how they were hated for having a sad countenance and warning the world around them. Jesus our pattern, did he advocate by example or precept a jolly good time? Oh, no! Never! He went about his Father's business. A man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, and are we not left behind to fill up the sufferings of Christ? Shall we shrink from it. Of course the gay world does not like to see a sad countenance, it is a reproach to them. They know they are on the road to ruin, but it annoys them to be reminded of it. They hate to hear the cry of alarm of the watchman. They do not want to be disturbed. Sleep is so pleasant, but dare we let them sleep, dare we encourage their cry of peace and safety? Far from it. No matter how they despise and mock, "if I must weep with thee my Lord, thy will be done." Oh, I tell you, this death to the world is not natural. It requires faith to grasp the unseen before we can consent to let go of the things that are seen. Let us watch. We cannot afford to be deceived or lulled to sleep, there is too much at stake. The prize is too great. Oh, let nothing less than the high calling satisfy us. Eternally to be with Jesus, to follow him whithersoever he goeth, to be ever with the Lord. Oh, how could we endure the loss of this. Do not let us undervalue our glorious birthright. Let us hold fast and firm to the end and not mind the gloom it wont last, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes. Joy cometh in the morning. I will add a few texts and then close, hoping to heed them better myself in future.

"Dead flies cause the ointment to send forth a stinking savor, so doth a little folly him that is had in reputation for wisdom and honor."

"Nor foolish talking, nor jesting."

"If any merry let him sing sing psalms. Be sober and watch unto prayer because your adversary the devil goeth about."

"Giving none occasion to the adversary."

Work for the night is coming. In season, and out of season, "giving all diligence."

I am sure you know I could find more texts like these if I tried but I have already written more than I intended. I do not want to see you sad and I long for the time when the redeemed shall come to Zion with everlasting joy upon their heads, and sorrow and sighing will forever flee away and gladness will be the portion of those who have suffered with Jesus, and I wish it for the others too, but I cant promise much to them out of Christ. They will certainly do some weeping before they are saved in my opinion. With much love I remain your friend, and sister.

Dear brothers and sisters:

While I was reading of the Conference now in session at Antioch, it reminded me of the time I was permitted to be there with you; and my heart is sad when I think of the dear ones who were with us then, who are now sleeping in the dust; but we feel that a blessed immortality awaits them when our Life-Giver comes. Most gladly would we be with you to-day, but we are sitting here in our home far from all of like faith. We have had some meetings since we moved back here, but there is no interest in anything but pride and popularity and it is discouraging to try to stem the tide of error and evil. The gospel was preached here years ago, and the people fought it then and settled down on their old traditions. Two that fought it the hardest have gone into silence and their account is sealed up for the judgment. O, it seems to me to be a fearful thing to fight against God and truth! It is astonishing how few there are converted to these days to the truth, but it rejoices my heart to read of some who are converted under the faithful teaching of our dear brothers and sisters; and whenever any young person embraces the truth it is a matter of rejoicing truly. I have just been reading Sister Florence A. Davis' letter from Delaware. She is quite young, but I am rejoiced to know that she is holding firmly to the faith and that she is letting her light shine; am glad she is exhorting others to diligence and duty in the cause. I am sorry that they do not keep their meetings up, though they have no preacher they should meet and exhort one another. Paul does not say anything about preachers or preaching; any one can exhort if they are living consecrated lives as they should be. There is a great need of more exhorting in this day. It is not enough to believe the gospel, but we should talk it, and live it out every where. I know it is hard work when there is so much unbelief and worldliness all around us; and O, how the cares of this life oppress us, and take our precious time laboring for the meat that perisheth. The Lord help us to take heed lest that day come on us unawares.

There are very few of our faith in the New England States; but there are large bodies of Adventists scattered all over the states, but they do not believe in the restoration of Israel to their land, as plainly predicted by all the prophets. They believe Jesus is coming to reign on the earth, but reject what the angel says about his "reigning over the house of Jacob for ever," strangely inconsistent is such a belief, like very many others. O, for a faith rooted and grounded in the Word of God. "Give me understanding (I pray as David did) that I may live." I pray the God of Israel to bless all who are permitted to attend the conferences that you may let your light shine all around you when you go back to your homes. Don't forget to pray for the isolated and lonely ones, is the request of your sister.

ABBIE A. HOWARD.

Dear Restitution:

I am in the land of the living and contending for the faith once delivered to the saints.

I would like to say through THE RESTITUTION for the encouragement of the older brethren that are scattered abroad, who once met at old Antioch to listen to the proclamation of the good news of the Coming Kingdom that the writer had the pleasure of proclaiming from the same stand the same everlasting truths from the 18th to 20th of May, to an attentive assembly that listened eagerly to its glorious news. I shall return Sept. 6th to hold meeting until eighteenth the house is in a good state of preservation. I went from there to Chicago to attend a Congress of Religious Societies, said to be called by the Jews of Chicago, but it was to be seen when the congress convened on the afternoon of May 22nd that the Jews were not the leaders of the move, but such men as the so-called Dr. Thomas of Chicago and Savage, Swing and the great Apostle of free thought B. F. Underwood, Dr. Judy, a Unitarian minister of Davenport, Iowa, Dr. Gear of Rockford, Ill., the lights of our age who call themselves higher Critics or advanced orthodoxy. For three days discussions were carried on defining the new religion as they called it, proclaiming nothing but what Jesus, the apostles and prophets had taught two and three thousand years ago to be the true religion of which those modern moguls seem to be entirely ignorant, and are going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves to the righteousness of God. There was considerable discussion about the name for the new society, and who should be admitted to membership, and the test of fellowship, the agreement was that Theopathist, Spiritualist, Universalist, Infidels, Unitarians and such other socities, the teachings of such leaders as Dr. Thomas, Savage, and Swing of modern thought or as I would call it Fatalism instead of Liberalism, for not one word of encouragement was given in all the discussions of a future life by a resurrection through Christ.

How true has been Paul's words of warning to Timothy that the time would come when men would heap to themselves teachers having itching ears, and turning away to fables, and teaching for doctrine commandments of men, making void the commandments of God.

In conclusion let me exhort those who have the truth to hold fast your profession and fight until the end, that no man take your crown, for in due time we shall reap if we faint not. Yours continuing for the truth

D. M. HOWELL.

Report of Conference.

Pursuant to call the third quarterly Conference of the Church of God in Nebraska, met at Moorefield, June 15th. The interest increased from first to last. Brothers Adams and Prime were present to divide the Word of Truth. The sermons, with the exception of two on "Jesus as he was, as he is, and as he shall be," were on "The Gospel of the Kingdom." These discourses were concise, logical, and ably delivered. As below stated the meetings continued a few evenings longer and the result was eight persons believed the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, and expressed a willingness to leave the pleasures of the world and accept Christ as their Savior and elder brother. Seven went straightway as in the days of old, and were baptized for the remission of sins.

At the meeting on Saturday the usual routine of business was translated. The treasurer being absent no report was made. The receipts as shown by the secretary's book for the quarter was $198.92.

The Evangelist made the following report: amount received for labor $201.92, expenses $35.70; amount less expenses $166.22. No. of discourses 62, No. baptized 26. Assistant Evangelist's report: received $17.50, expenses $5.84; amount less expenses $11.76. No. of days employed 12, discourses 7, No. baptized 4.

It was decided to withdraw the tent work after the Moorefield meeting for the summer on account of hard times and poor crop prospects. The place of holding the next annual Conference was duly considered, and by a unanimous vote the Park at Cambridge was decided upon as the best place for the next meeting, Sept. 14th to 24 is the date fixed for said meeting. In order to advertise the meeting the secretary was instructed to procure 1000 bills about four weeks before the meeting for thorough distribution. On motion Bro. Jason Welton was elected president and Sister W. A. Moore secretary of Tract Association to fill vacancy caused by the resignation of Bro. Jas. Hammond, and Sister Dora Harlan. Vice presidents in the different localities please take notice.

After the usual "hand shaking" and "good byes" were said, the brethren departed for their homes feeling that another profitable and successful meeting had been accomplished. Bro. Adams remained to continue the tent meetings through the week. Submitted in love.

Who Authorized the Change?

Some time ago, W. A. Phillips, D. D., Pastor of the Western Avenue Methodist Church Chicago, preached a sermon on Baptism which has been printed, and is being circulated among the people. A copy was handed to Sister E., and Sister gave it to me for the purpose of review. I call attention to a few extracts from the above sermon.

"Our three former discourses have brought us in this discussion of the sacrament of baptism, to the consideration of its mode. And in this very outset let me say that this is a question over which there ought to be no controversy. And the fact that there is, is due, as we believe, to two unwarranted and unscriptural assumptions, viz: that the mode is an essential, in the place of an incidental part of this sacred rite, and that the New Testament teaches only one way for its proper administration—by immersion. * * * * Now, they are right or wrong. If they are right, then I, who was sprinkled in my baptism, am deluded, and was not, as I thought, baptized; nay, more, I am not a member of the visible church, nor is my ministry to which I have been set apart by ordination, authoritative, and therefore, everything done by my office is invalid. Grave indeed, is this question of how we are baptized, if to the mode God has attached such importance as this; if how I am baptized, determines whether I am a member of his church, and whether I may, or may not commemorate the death and sufferings of my precious Savior, then I cannot afford, nor can you to be ignorant of what "saith the Lord" about this matter.

We have before said that as Methodists we give candidates wishing baptism their choice of the three modes, believing that they are all valid.

But as "it is an outward sign of an inward grace," we believe that when done by sprinkling, or pouring, these symbols best represent that which is symbolized. What is water baptism? We have shown, in a former discourse it is not a saving ordinance. What is it then? Simply and purely a symbol of the cleansing power of the Holy Ghost. It is true it implies other things, but this is the great thing signified. Keeping in mind that baptism was instituted not to represent the burial and resurrection of Christ, but the work of the Holy Spirit."

The pastor teaches his flock that it is an "unwarranted and unscriptural assumption" to affirm "that the New Testament teaches only one way for its proper administration—by immersion." As a scholar it would have been best for him in the first place to have ascertained whether the word baptize admitted of one or several diversified methods. As to the meaning of the word, I will quote from eminent Greek scholars in the Methodist, and Presbyterian churches, etc., and will carefully exclude all testimony from Baptist sources, that the charge of bias may be avoided.

John Wesley, (Methodist) "Buried with him,—alluding to the ancient manner of baptizing by immersion."

Adam Clarke (Methodist) on Rom. vi. 4. "It is probable that the apostle here alludes to the mode of administering baptism by immersion, the whole body being put under the water, which seemed to say the man is drowned—is dead, and when he came up out of the water, he seemed to have a resurrection to life; the man is risen again, he is alive."

Calvin, (Presbyterian) institutes. "The word baptize signifies to immerse, and the rite of immersion was observed by the ancient church."

Bean on Mark vii. 4. "Christ commanded us to be baptized, by which word it is certain immersion is signified.

Vitringa. "The act of baptizing is the immersion of believers in water. This expresses the meaning of the word.

Scholz on Matt. iii. 6. "Baptism consists in the immersion of the whole body in water."

Bossuet. "To baptize signifies to plunge, as it is granted by all the world."

Dr. Campbell, (Presbyterian) "The primitive signification of baptisma is immersion, of baptizein, to immerse, to plunge, to overwhelm."

Dr. Chalmers (Presbyterian) on Rom. vi. 4. "The original meaning of the word baptism is immersion."

Moses Stuart Bib. Rep. 1833. "Bapto—baptizo. mean to dip, to plunge, or immerse into a liquid. All lexicographers and critics of any note are agreed in this."

Charles Anthon, L. L. D., (Episcopalian) professor of Latin and Greek in Columbia College, N. Y. "The primitive meaning is dip or immerse. Secondary, if it has any, refers to the same leading idea. Sprinkling is entirely out of the question."

Dr. Augusti, (Lutheran) "Baptisma denotes plunging, dipping and the like."

Martin Luther. "Baptism is Greek. In Latin it may be translated immersio, since we immerse anything into water, that the whole might be covered."

Dr. Trenon, (Catholic) "Plunge into the water. Baptize strictly conveys this signification as all the learned are agreed."

Macknight on Rom. vi. "Christ submitted to be baptized, that is, to be buried under the water, by John."

Schoettg. "He who is baptized is entirely under the water, and no longer seems to live.—Bloomfield's Critical Digest, V. p. 637.

The following is the testimony of eminent lexicographers as to the meaning of the word baptize.

Stockius. "Baptizo: Proprie est immergere ac intingere in aquam. Properly to immerse or dip in water."

Robertson's Thesaurus. "Baptizo: Mergo, lavo; to dip, to wash."

Schleusner's Thesaurus. "Baptizo: Immergo, intingo; to immerse, to dip."

Morel. "Baptizo: Mergo, immergo, aqua obruo; to dip, to immerse, to overwhelm in water."

Greenfield. "Baptizo: To immerse, immerge, submerge, sink; in New Testament, to wash, perform ablution, cleanse; to immerse, baptize, administer the rite of baptism. Baptismus: Properly what is immersed; hence immersion, baptism, ordinance of baptism."

Bass. "Baptizo: To dip, immerse, or plunge in water: to wash, bathe oneself: to be immersed in sufferings or afflictions."

Ising. "Baptizo: To baptize, to plunge in water."

Wright. "Baptizo: I dip, immerse, plunge, saturate, baptize, overwhelm."

Grove. "Baptizo: To dip, immerse, immerge, plunge; to wash, cleanse, purify; to baptize, to depress, humble, overwhelm."

Sir D. Sanford, Greek extracts. "Baptizo. I dip, I wash, I sink."

Scapula. "Baptizo: Mergo seu immergo, item submergo, item abluo, lavo. To dip or to immerse; also, to sink under, to wash clean, to wash."

H. Stephanus. "Baptizo: Mergo seu immergo. To dip or immerse."

Schrevelius. "Baptizo: Mergo lavo: I dip, I wash."

Dr. G. Campbell, (Presbyterian) Lectures on Pulpit Eloquence, says, "I have heard a disputant, in defence of etymology and use, maintain that the word rendered in the New Testament baptize, means more properly to sprinkle than to plunge; and in defiance of all antiquity, that the former was the earliest and the most general practice in baptizing. One who argues in this manner never fails with persons of knowledge to betray the cause he would defend; and though, with respect to the vulgar, bold assertions generally succeed as well as argument, and sometimes better, yet a candid mind will always disdain to take the help of falsehood, even in the support of truth."

Testimony like the above from eminent Greek scholars connected with denominations who practice sprinkling, and call it baptism, (which it is not) can be continued to almost any extent desired, but enough has been given to serve our purpose; but on the other hand not one eminent Greek scholar can be found who would risk his reputation by translating the words bapto or baptizo by the word sprinkle. I challenge the Western Avenue pastor to produce one.

He says: "As Methodists we give candidates wishing baptism their choice of three modes," which are Immersion, sprinkling and pouring. It is certainly a strange thing to call those three things baptism, when the Holy Spirit in the Divine Word uses a distinct word for each action, and never uses those words interchangeably. We know this is also the case in English. If our Methodist pastor should immerse a candidate, he would never suppose for one moment that he had sprinkled him; or if he had poured water on his head, would he say that he had sprinkled him. Yet, he commits this folly with the Greek language, where the meanings of these three words are just as distinct as they are in English. See Lev. iv. 6, 7: And the priest shall dip (bapsei) his finger, then he shall sprinkle (rhanei) before, (pros ranei) and then perform the third action pour out (ekcheei) the blood. See Lev. xiv. 6-8: He shall take the scarlet, wood, and hyssop and dip (bapsei) them, then he shall sprinkle (ranei) of the blood. In verse 15 and 16 we have the three actions. First, he shall pour out (ek cheei) the oil into his left hand; second, he shall dip (bapsei) his right finger in the oil. Third he shall sprinkle (ranei) it with his finger.

Bapto and baptizo are never in a single instance translated sprinkle or pour, neither is rhino or rantizo, ever translated, dip, immerse, or plunge. A noted scholar speaking of these words, says: "we have rhino and rantizo, to sprinkle or disperse, and bapto or baptizo, to dip, plunge, or immerse. Now, as in English, we never use to dip to signify the same as to sprinkle, so never does rhino in the Greek signify bapto, nor bapto rhino.

Says Joseph Merle: "There was no such thing as sprinkling or rantism used in baptism in the apostles days, nor many ages after them."

A candidate comes to this Methodist pastor and says: I want to be ("dipped"—Calvin) he performs three actions. First, pour (cheei) water into the font. Second, dip (bapsei) his fingers in the water. Third, sprinkle (ranei) water upon him. He claims that these three actions, are three different modes of baptism, hence he baptized the font, his fingers, and the candidate, each by a different mode. In fact he baptized his fingers, but practiced rantism upon the candidate.

He says: "If they are right, then I, who was sprinkled in my baptism, am deluded, and was not as I thought baptized." I now requote the above sentence and supply the original meanings of the words used.

"I, who was sprinkled (rantized) in my baptism (a word from the Greek baptizo of bapto, I dip or plunge.—Chambers,) am deluded, and was not as I thought, baptized (immersed)." Of a truth you were "deluded," they practised rantism on you, and you supposed you were baptized. In like manner you are deluding those who treat you. You practise rantism on them, and say you baptize them, which you do not. For in English we never use the word dip to mean the same as sprinkle, neither does the Greek word rhino mean the same as bapto, nor bapto rhino. You cannot tell them that bapto and rhino mean the same, without deluding them, for as a scholar you know better. You would not dare tell them that the English words dip and sprinkle mean the same, because they know better. Now, how comes it, seeing bapto and rhino in Greek don't mean the same thing, any more than sprinkle and dip do in English, that the churches persist in calling sprinkling baptism?

WHO AUTHORIZED THE CHANGE?

I will call upon Calvin, the founder of Presbyterianism to answer. In his comments on Acts viii. 38 with regard to the baptism of the eunuch, he says: "We see, from this instance, what was the baptismal rite amongst the ancients; for they plunged the whole body in the water. Now, 'tis the custom for the minister to sprinkle only the body or head." By way of explanation he further adds: "It is certain that we want nothing which maketh to the substance of baptism. Wherefore the church did grant liberty to herself since the beginning to change the rites somewhat, excepting the substance of baptism." Calvin testifies "that the church did grant liberty to herself since the beginning to change the rites somewhat." What church "did grant liberty to herself" "to change the rites?" In the first place the Catholic church did this. Says Dr. Trenan, an eminent scholar in that church: "Plunge into the water. Baptize strictly conveys this signification as all the learned are agreed." As scholars they admit this, but claims the "liberty to herself," "to change the rites." The Protestant denies her right to this "liberty." Yet the Presbyterian Church did this at Westminster. They took a vote on the question, and by a majority of one "did grant liberty to herself" "to change the rites." What right have men to vote on changing God's ordinances. He will certainly hold them responsible for their presumption. Since then other Protestant denominations have taken "liberty to change the rites somewhat." The Catholics charge it home upon them that they have borrowed the "change" from them, and tell them that "All the learned are agreed, that baptize "strictly conveys" the signification of "plunge into the water," but the change was made by the authority of the Roman Catholic Church.

To further illustrate that these churches had no warrant to take the liberty "to change the rites" let me refer you to the "diverse washings" (diaphoreis baptismois) and sprinkling (rantismoi) practiced by the Jews as recorded in Heb. ix. 10, 13, 19, 21. In verse 10 he uses the words diaphoreis baptismois (diverse baptisms) verse 13 ranti ousa (sprinkling) verse 19, errantise, (he sprinkled) verse 21. errantise (he sprinkled). Grotius, Whitby, and Macknight are eminent Greek scholars members of churches who practice sprinkling and call it baptism. They translate Heb. ix. 10, as follows: "And diverse immersions (diaphoreis baptismois) and ordinances concerning the flesh, imposed until the time of reformation."

Now, if sprinkling is simply a mode of baptism, why is it the word for sprinkle and baptism are not used interchangeably in the Divine Word? And why is it eminent Greek scholars members of churches who sprinkle and call it baptism, recognize the difference, and do translate them by different words, every time, if the difference does not exist? Calvin was right when he said: "the church did grant liberty to herself since the beginning to change the rites somewhat."

I will now briefly call attention to an extract or two from the sermon of this Western Avenue pastor to show the species of reasoning that must be resorted to to sustain the "change" which they took the liberty to make.

"Philip had not only taught him (Eunuch) the nature and significance of the ordinance, but the mode of its administration, which the sacred text they had just read said was by "sprinkling." And when he was converted to Christ as the promised Redeemer and saw the beauty and appropriateness of baptism as a gospel symbol, they suddenly came in that desert place to water, and the Eunuch asked if he might not then and there be baptized. And Philip assented. When the chariot was stopped they got down and went to the water, and he was baptized. Oh, but says the immersionist, give the record as it reads in Acts viii. 38, and you will see "they went down both into the water, both Philip and the Eunuch, and he baptized him."

"Now I shall not detain you as I might by a critical and I believe conclusive argument to show that the Greek preposition "into" might, with perfect justice, have been translated "to" or "at" the water, but will content myself and I hope satisfy you, by some obvious considerations, leaving all controversy over Greek particles to the classical scholars."

He thinks the Greek preposition (eis) into might be changed to the word "in" or "at" the water. Those words would doubtless suit the "change" the church "did grant liberty to herself" to make. I will quote a few passages, inserting this pastor's "change" to show how it will work. The mariners cast Jonah near "to" but not into the sea. The swine run down "to" or "at" the sea, but not (eis) into the sea. The Egyptians were drowned not in the Red Sea but near "to" or "at" the sea. Jonah was three days and three nights not in the whale but near "to" or "at" it. Noah and family was saved not in the ark but near "to" or "at" the ark. Lazarus was not in the grave but just near "to" or "at" the grave. Murderers, adulterers, fornicators, etc., have their part near "to" or "at" but not in the lake of fire. Daniel was cast close "to" or "at" the lion's den. The Hebrews were cast close "to" or "at" but not (eis) into the furnace of fire. The righteous shall have an abundant entrance not (eis) into the kingdom of God, but just close "to" or "at" it. I presume this pastor would prefer to retain the preposition (eis) into this case, but substitute "to" or "at" when it comes in connection with the word water. It would be difficult to learn how they could come up (ek) out of the water, if they only went down "to" or "at" the water, in place of (eis) into the water.

Let me call attention to another extract which refutes itself in the mind of every thinking person. 1. "Now notice, Saul was baptized in a house, where he could not be immersed. 2. He was baptized "forth with," which precludes his delaying to go out and find a river." 3. He was baptized standing—for he "arose," which posture is appropriate for sprinkling and impossible for immersion." Says Moses Stuart, Bib. Rep. 1833. "Bapto—baptizo mean to dip, to plunge or immerse into liquid. All lexicographers and critics of any note," as authority. The pastor's "No. 1" would read as follows: "Now notice, Saul was baptized (immersed) in a house where he could not be immersed." 2. "He was baptized (immersed) forthwith, which precludes his delaying to go out and find a river." No. 3, is absolutely funny. He says, "He was baptized standing." I have baptized a good many people in my time, and in every case they "arose" and placed themselves in a "standing" "posture" in the water before I immersed them. I am sure I never immersed one sitting down.

What strange reasoning is resorted to because "the church did grant liberty to herself since the beginning to change the rites somewhat?"

W. H. WILSON.

OBITUARY.

In Roseland, La., on Sunday, May 27, 1894, at half past 5 o'clock P. M. Miss Edith Adela Martha Wilson, aged 18 years, 1 month, and 27 days.

Miss Edith was the eldest daughter of Bro. Thos. Wilson, former Editor of THE RESTITUTION, and, although a resident of Roseland a little more than a year, yet she was highly esteemed and loved by a large circle of friends, for her beautiful traits of character. She was a true Christian, a devoted daughter, and a friend to all.

The funeral services were held in the Congregational Church on Monday, at two o'clock P. M., Rev. H. Kendall officiating. An eloquent sermon was preached from the text, "I am now ready to be offered," or, as the revised version gives it, "I am now being offered." A quartette sang in a touching manner the songs which had been selected—all of them being favorites of the deceased. A very large concourse of sympathizing friends were present, and followed the remains to the grave. When the grave was completed, every inch was covered with exquisite flowers, as the dear girl was extremely fond of these heavenly gifts. There we left her, her grave wet with the tears of loving companions, and covered with fragrant flowers, with hundreds of birds singing praises to the Creator. She rests in peace, asleep in Christ, awaiting the dawn of the resurrection morning, when she will arise glorious and incorruptible from the dusty bed where she now lies. Our hearts cry out "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly. Amen."

Thomas Baker was born June 9, 1795, and had he lived 10 days more would have been 99 years old.

He was a native of Brookfield, N. H. Married in 1814. Moved to Canada in 1830, afterward to Illinois, then to Iowa.

He was baptized by the writer about one year ago, at the advanced age of 98 years. He told me a few days before he died "I was happy that day and have been happy ever since." He sleeps in the quiet grave-yard waiting the morning of a brighter day. We laid him tenderly beside the companion of his youth, as we read the promise of Jesus, "Because I live ye shall live also."

How strange are the ways of providence! After nearly a century of wandering this weary pilgrim has found a resting place far from his boyhood home. He had outlived all his ancestors—no father or mother or uncles or aunts or brothers or sisters—all gone and this aged patriarch like a lone tree that has survived all its companions for centuries, was grand in his loneliness.

Be tenderly considerate of the aged one, for you should remember that his life is in the past and his companions are only the pictures of loved faces whose forms are now lost, but which hang as sacred mementoes in the hall of his memory. A kind word or act to him brings back pleasing recollections of scenes in which he mingled in the long Ago.

A. J. EYCHANER.

Force of Example.

We have read of a young infidel who was one night in bed contemplating the character of his mother. "I see," said he, within himself, "two unquestionable facts.

"First. My mother is greatly afflicted in circumstances, body and mind, and I see that she cheerfully bears up under all by the support she derives from constantly retiring to her closet and her Bible.

"Secondly. That she has a secret spring of comfort of which I know nothing; while I, who gave an unbounded rein to my appetites and seek pleasure by every means, seldom or never find it. If, however, there is any such secret in religion, why may I not attain to it as well as mother? I will immediately seek it of God."

Thus the influence of Christianity, exhibited in its beauty by a living example before him, led Richard Cecil to know Christ himself, and to glorify him by a life of most successful devotion to his service.

Conference Report.

As per call in THE RESTITUTION, the conference held at the Union Church, N. W. of Lanark, Ill., met on Friday night. Brother Conner spoke to an appreciative audience, and on Saturday met again with a goodly number of Brothers and Sisters present. Most of the local churches were represented, Adaline, Dixon, Lanark, Plum River, Yankee Hollow, and Union.

It was unanimously agreed to engage an evangelist for another year for Northern Ill., and a committee was appointed to solicit funds of the several churches.

Brothers Hudler and Conner both preached, and we remained all day having had dinner prepared in the basement for all present. At night the heavy but needed rain prevented having any meeting, and the glorious rain kept up all day Sunday. But for all that a goodly number of brethren and friends came out to enjoy the meetings.

On Monday five put on Christ by baptism, and preaching continued Monday and Tuesday nights, leaving the brethren and many friends much built up in the most precious faith.

J. D. RENNER, Sec'y.

The Church of God, known as the Northern Nebraska and Southern Dakota Conference met at the Rock Creek School-house in Rock County, Neb., June 16, 1894, being their third Quarterly Conference. The business before the same was transacted, and arrangements will be made to hold our annual conference in September next, for which due notice will be given through THE RESTITUTION.

Smoking By Boys.

That the essential principle of tobacco, that which gives it all its value to the smoker, is a virulent poison, is universally admitted. It is agreed also that its primary effect is upon the brain and spinal cord, with a paralyzing tendency. Even Board who defends the moderate use of tobacco, admits that its effects are disastrous on some classes of persons. "It witherssome" he says, "while fattening others: causes in some dyspepsia and constipation, while upon others it has a contrary effect. It is nothing to some, but induces in others all the horrors of extreme nervousness." He adds that among the brain-working class of our population the proportion of those who can use tobacco with impunity is yearly diminishing, as a nervous tendency more and more prevails among us.

Now, whatever may be urged in favor of moderate smoking later in life, intelligent persons who have given the subject attention, unite in condemning the use of tobacco by the young.

Young persons do not know whether they belong to the class most liable to be injured by tobacco. No one denies the danger of its excessive use, and the young have neither the intelligence nor the self-control to resist the tendency of smoking to grow into an uncontrollable habit. Further, the brain and nervous system of youth are susceptible to the baneful influence of the poisonous principle of tobacco.

That commanding medical authority, the London Lancet, says: "It is time that the attention of all responsible persons should be seriously directed to the prevalence and increase of tobacco smoking among boys. Stunted growth, impaired digestion, palpitation, and other evidences of nerve exhaustion and irritability have again and again impressed the lesson of abstinence, which has hitherto been far too little regarded."

It cites a case which lately came before the coroner for Liverpool—death from a fatty change in the heart, one month to smoking cigarettes and cigar stubs and adds:

"This, of course, is an extreme example. It is, however, only a strongly colored illustration of effects on health which are daily realized in thousands of instances. Not even in manhood is the pipe or cigar invariably safe. Much less can it be so regarded when it ministers to the unhonored whims and cravings of heedless urchins."

Announcement.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Kansas, will be held three miles northeast of Oxford, in Cowley County, at Bro. Thomas Jackson's schoolhouse. This meeting will last about ten days, commencing August the tenth, 1894. There is some important business to transact. Business meeting will be on Saturday at two o'clock P. M. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can bring tents and come prepared to camp. The brethren at Oxford are wholesouled, hospitable folks, but it is too much for women to have to work all the time and get no good of the meetings, so let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master. The commotion of the worm indicates his coming is very near. All speaking brethren wishing any information correspond with Bro. S. C. Oliver, Attica, Kan. A full program will be published in due time.

E. F. RANDOLPH, Sec.

The National Educational Association convenes at Asbury Park, N. J., July 9th to 13th. Special low rates via the Nickel Plate Road. Passengers are offered choice of routes and can go via Albany and the Hudson River steamers in both directions if desired. For information call on Agents of the Nickel Plate Road.

☞ It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important Notice" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Mt. Pisgah knows to his sorrow. Some can say "I have sent bills in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can send bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

Special Low Rates to Fort Wayne via Pennsylvania Lines.

On June 30th, July 4th, 9th, 10th, 13th, 14th, 16th, 17th, 18th, 21st and 24, excursion tickets to Fort Wayne will be sold at one fare for the round trip from Van Wert, Warsaw and intermediate ticket stations on the Pennsylvania lines account the "Last Days of Pompeii," the grand spectacular attraction. Tickets will be good returning by regular trains until the day following the date of sale.

For the Christian Endeavor Convention, at Cleveland, the Nickel Plate Road offers a rate of one lowest first class fare for the round trip and a splendid passenger service. Tickets on sale July 9, 10, 11. Return limit Sept. 15th.

Reduced Rates to Denver.

Unusual low rate excursions are being announced this year by the Pennsylvania Lines, and long distance journeys over them may be made at slight expense. For this summer exceedingly cheap excursions to Denver will be run over these lines. The rates will be the lowest in effect for years and will enable persons to visit the West at slight cost. The dates and return limits for these special Denver excursions will be as follows:

On July 20th and 21st, good to return until the latter part of August, account the meeting of the Mystic Shrine order.

On August 9th and 10th, account annual meeting League of American Wheelmen, good returning until the middle of September.

Although the low rates have been made for meetings of organizations, the sale of tickets will not be confined to members, but the public generally may take advantage of the low fare. The return limits will be ample for side trips in the West. Details may be obtained by applying to any Ticket Agent of the Pennsylvania Lines, or by address ing F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Remember the recent reductions in rates via the Nickel Plate Road and its unexcelled passenger service of through cars equipped with finest coaches and Sleeping cars between Chicago, Cleveland, Buffalo, New York and Boston, when next you are traveling East or West.

Seashore Excursion.

On July 7th, 8th and 9th, low rate excursion tickets to Asbury Park will be sold via Pennsylvania Short Lines, account National Educational Association meeting. Asbury Park is adjacent to Ocean Grove, Long Branch, Atlantic City, Cape May, and other delightful resorts on the New Jersey Coast. Excursion tickets will be good going and returning via Baltimore and Washington, with stop-over privileges. This will be an excellent opportunity for a vacation trip to the principal summer resorts of the east at slight cost. For details apply to nearest Pennsylvania Line Ticket Agent, or address F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Y. P. S. C. E. Souvenir.

An edition of the Souvenir maps of the Y. P. S. C. E. convention to be held July 11th to 14th, at Cleveland, O., has been issued to the Nickel Plate Road, the shortest through passenger line between Buffalo and Chicago. Any person who expects to attend this Convention and desiring one of these maps can have the same forwarded to his address free, with the compliments of this popular low rate line.

Requisition should be made on the Advertising Department of the Nickel Plate Road, Cleveland, O., B. F. Horner, General Passenger Agent. m. 23 j. 6, 13, 20, 27.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest furth that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will reduce the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be issued and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1894, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

Poetry.

Hoeing and Praying.

Said Farmer Jones, in a whining tone,
To his good old neighbor Grey,
"I've worn my knees through to the bone,
But it ain't no use to pray.

"Your corn looks twice as good as mine,
Though you don't pretend to be
A-shinin' light in the church to shine,
An' tell salvation's free.

"We've prayed the Lord a thousand times
For to make that crop grow;
An' why some wheats it on, and thinks,
I'll give a deal to know."

Said Farmer Gray to his neighbor Jones,
In his quiet and easy way:
"When prayers get mixed with lazy bones,
They don't make farming pay.

"Your weeds, I notice, are good and tall,
In spite of all your prayers;
You may pray for corn till the heavens fall,
If you don't dig up the tares.

"I mix my prayers all in a little toil,
Along in every row;
An' I work this old brain into the soil
Quite vigorous with a hoe.

"So while I are prayin' I are my best,
An' do my level best
To keep down the weeds a-long each row,
An' the Lord he does the rest.

"It's well to pray, both night and morn,
As every farmer knows;
But the place to pray for thrifty corn
Is right between the rows.

"You must use your hands while praying though
If an answer you would get;
For prayer worn knees and a rusty hoe
Never raised a big crop yet.

"And so I believe, my good old friend,
If you mean to win the day,
From plowing, clean to the harvest's end,
You must work as well as pray."

Original.

The Translation of the Saints.

There seems no adequate Scripture support for the belief that prior to Christ's coming the "Saints" or "Bride" will be secretly removed or translated unknown to the world at large.

Christ's second coming is always spoken of as visible, as his presence, his appearing, his manifestation, his revelation or similar phrases.

The terms used As in the days of Noah, As in the days of Lot, As lightning, As a thief, As a snare, imply a sudden and unexpected return, but not necessarily secret or unperceived by the world generally.

On the contrary the direct proof lies the other way. Peter's statement that "the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night" (2 Pet. iii. 10) is followed by the announcement that "the heavens will pass away with a great noise" which dispels the idea of secrecy; and in Revelations iii. 3, the explanation following, "I will come on thee as a thief and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee"—warrant no other assumption than surprise.

In Luke xxi. the word snare is explained by the caution "lest that day come upon you unawares"—nothing is said of a "secret rapture."

What the Scriptures do say however, is that the coming of Christ will be visible to all on earth, accompanied by manifestation of great power, majesty and glory, and that this coming is the hope of the saints, and the time of their reward and translation, and no reference seems discoverable to any other coming or mode of return.

"Behold he cometh with clouds and every eye shall see him and they also which pierced him." Rev. i. 7. "For as the lightning cometh out of the east and shineth even unto the west, so also shall the coming of the Son of Man be." Matt. xxiv. 27.

"And then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory, and when these things come to pass, then look up and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh." Luke xxi. 27, 28.

"Our God shall come and shall not keep silence—a fire shall devour before him and it shall be very tempestuous round about him—he shall c'l l.. the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people—Gather my saints together unto me, those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." Psalms iv. 3-5.

"He shall send his angels with the great sound of a trumpet to gather his elect from the four winds (four quarters of the globe) from one end of heaven to the other." Matt. xxiv. 31. (with a long-sounding trumpet) Emph. Diaglott. And the previous verse tells us that this will be after they have seen the Son of Man "coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."

This trumpet is the "last trump," "for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible and we shall be changed." 1 Cor. xv. 52. For "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of an archangel, and with the trump of God and the dead in Christ shall rise first, then we that are, etc." 1 Thess. iv. 16, 17.

The elect in verse 31 Matt. xxiv. have been, by some, supposed to refer to the Jews, but is just as likely at least to refer to his elect Bride or possibly both.

"And the seventh angel sounded and there followed great voices," etc., and this is the time "that thou shouldst give reward unto thy servants the prophets and to the saints (in the Greek Kai tois agiois, and thy holy ones) and them that fear thee, small and great." Rev. xi. 15-18.

Besides the followers of Christ were told (Acts i. 11) that the Lord would return in "like manner" as he had departed; that is openly and visibly and in propria personæ.

Again in Matt. xxv. 1, "And at midnight there was a cry, Behold the Bridegroom cometh, Go ye out to meet him. Then all those virgins arose and trimmed their lamps," etc.

Here the noise of the crying was heard by all, the unprepared as well as the prepared (the non-elect as well as the elect) for there was no surreptitious advent, but a great cry and tumult and no doubt music, dancing and singing. The trouble with the five foolish virgins was that notwithstanding they had actually believed in and made preparations for the coming of the Bridegroom, they had become weary in well doing, and had fallen asleep, as most Christians do now-a-days; but they saw the Bridegroom as well as the wise virgins and even had conversation and attempted exculpation with him.

There seems nothing in any of the above quotations to suggest secrecy and if that had been intended to be conveyed the writer believes that, with a view to publication he could have expressed this idea more clearly, but if an open, visible, majestic, awe-inspiring, unprecedented, superhuman advent of omnipotency was intended to be announced then the language of the Scriptures is unsurpassed in clearness and dignity of expression. The prayer of Habakkuk chap. iii., in spite of all the mutilations of a bad translation, can hardly be read without emotion, and for grandeur is unsurpassed by anything written in any language.

That this open coming is the time of the rewards of the saints is assured, 1st, because the Scriptures say so plainly, and 2nd, because they never allude to any other coming or manner of coming.

"And when the Chief Shepherd shall appear ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." 1 Pet. v. 4.

"Behold I come quickly and my reward is with me." Rev. xxii. 12.

"At his appearing and kingdom." 2 Tim. iv. 1.

"The grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ." 1 Peter i. 13.

"Keep this commandment until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Tim. vi. 14.

"For the Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father (not secretly) and then he shall reward every man according to his works." Matt. xxi. 21.

"Looking for the blessed hope and the glorious appearing (not secret) of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." Titus ii. 13.

"To present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy." Jude 24.

That the angels, saints, or holy ones spoken of as coming with the Lord are his raised or translated saints is more assumed than proved, and seems contradicted by the descriptions given.

"And the Lord my God shall come and all the saints with him." Zech. xiv. 5-7.

The marginal reference to Joel iii. 11, "Cause thy mighty ones to come down O Lord," and which refers to his coming, fails to support the belief that the risen saints are alluded to.

"Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints." Jude 14. Here the Greek is "en agaiois muriasin autou" or "with holy myriads of himself," and these myriads may be, probably are "all the holy angels" which is the authorized translation of "Kai pantes oi angeloi" and all the angels (messengers), of Matt. xxv. 31 King James' version, as also,

"Rest with us when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels," 2 Thess. i. 7, which we are told will be "when he comes to be glorified in his saints," verse 10. The Greek word "elthee" comes, or more properly "may come" signifying an advent.

"So as to establish your heart blameless in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of the Lord Jesus with his saints." 1 Thess. iii. 13, meta pantoon toon agioon autou" i. e. "with all the holy ones of himself."

Here it is evident the saints or holy ones are not the risen Bride as the latter are watching in expectancy.

The word "agioios" translated "saints" in 1 Thess. is really "holy ones" while in Jude the word translated "saints" is "myriads" (murioisin) signifying vast numbers, prefixed by the word agioi, i. e. holy.

That there is any thing in these expressions peculiarly applicable to the risen saints is mere assumption apparently unsupported by evidence.

The prophecy of Christ (Matt. xxiv.) whilst partially fulfilled at the destruction of Jerusalem, refers to a more complete fulfilment at the end of the age, because it is carried up to the coming of Christ as judge.

Therefore the warning to his followers to flee from danger when they see the signs of the great tribulation yet holds good, but would be altogether superfluous was it his design and intention to remove them from that trial by translation before his manifestation.

The trouble here foretold is a Jewish tribulation. Dan. xxi. 1, Michael is to stand up then to deliver Daniel's people the Jews, and even if not confined to the Holy Land and adjacent territory, is probably limited to the confines of the Old Roman Empire, and there would be plenty of places of refuge for Christians on the watch, as they are solemnly and repeatedly warned to be.

The chief nations outside these limits are Britain, her colonies and chief dependencies, America, Russia, Scandinavia, China, Japan and most of Africa.

At the time Rome drew her armies out of England a formal written release of all allegiance to the Roman Empire was given.

France, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Greece, Bulgaria, Egypt, Morocco, Turkey, Persia, Afghanistan and as far east as the Indus river, which is the western boundary of British India, are all within the limits of the old Roman Empire and will be the seat of Anti-christ and the great tribulation.

Great Britain has it in true a hold on some of this territory, as in Cyprus, Malta, Aden, Gibraltar, Suez, Beluchistan and the passes beyond the Indus and elsewhere, but they are all held mainly as strategic points or outposts in the enemies country, and with a view to attack and defence in coming trouble.

It may be inferred therefore,

1st, That the translation of the Bride will be preceded by a visible appearance in power and glory of the Lord Jesus.

2nd, That the angels, myriads and holy ones spoken of as accompanying him as he descends are not the risen Bride.

3rd, That this coming in power is the hope of the saints and the time of their reward.

4th, That the injunction to watch has a double meaning, a temporal application as well as spiritual, for all Christians in all time, as it had to Christians in the time of Titus and Vespasian.

H. T. BAKER.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

I am requested by Bro. Underwood, "to give an explanation of Dan. viii. 14. 1st what sanctuary spoken of or means. 2nd, when did the 2300 days or years begin? 3rd, when and what will be the fulfilment of this prophecy, etc."

The above question covers a large extent of ground in prophetic study, and that the question may be made intelligent, it will be necessary to first enter into a study of the prophetic dates of Dan. xii. And with a view that this matter may be made plain, I have concluded to call a special session of Pine Woods Bible Class to aid me in this study.

Leader. Dear class, I have called you together today, that you may aid me in the study of the prophetic dates of Daniel, which I know you will cheerfully do. I must say that in my study of these dates, I have been exceedingly perplexed in the past, not but what they are really stated in a very clear and explicit manner in the Holy Book. I will read them. Dan. xii. 11-13.

"And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days. Blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days. But go thou thy way till the end be: for thou shalt rest, and stand in thy lot at the end of the days."

What could be plainer than the simple statement that between the taking away of the "daily sacrifice," and the setting up of the "abomination," 1290 days would elapse? and also that those people are blessed, who wait for the termination of the "1335 days," and that Daniel should "rest" and stand in his "lot at the end of the days."

Lad. I was perplexed in the same manner, with these explicit and plain statements. I was told that "days" meant years in the book of Daniel, although not the least evidence was ever given me from the book itself that such was the case. Accepting the explanation, however, as being true, I studied history that I might find out the date when the "daily sacrifice" was taken away, that I may be informed as to when the "abomination" should be set up, for Daniel said just "1290 days," (years I was told) would elapse between the two events. I read in Josephus' works in Book vi. chap. 2. page 28, that in A. D. 70, the 17th day of Panemus [Tamuz] the sacrifice called the daily sacrifice had failed, and not been offered to God, for want of men to offer it, and that the people were grievously troubled at it." Now, that I had found out the date when the "daily sacrifice" had been taken away, I took my pencil and paper and figured that "1290" years dating from A. D. 70, when the sacrifice ceased, would end in the year 1360, and knowing well, that no such event took place in 1360, I closed up my book discouraged, not knowing what to think about the matter.

Leader. Well, Carrie, what have you to offer?

Carrie. I sympathize with Lad very much, I had the same experience, but then I thought perhaps some other power beside the Romans might have taken away the "daily sacrifice," at some other time. I read in Daniel viii. 8-12, that out of one of the four divisions of the Grecian Empire should arise a "Little Horn," (ver. 11) "and by him the daily sacrifice was taken away."

Leader. That is to the point, please tell us who the "Little Horn" is? We must determine that in order to locate his taking away the "daily sacrifice."

Carrie. Well, I was taught that the "Little Horn," symbolized popery, and in reading history I found popery took its rise about 508, and still I was sorely perplexed, for at that date I knew the temple was burned up, the city was in ruins, and its people in exile. So there was no "daily sacrifice," to take away as that was already done in A. D. 70.

Leader. Still we are in the dark. Elias, can you help us?

Elias. Well, the statement is clear in Daniel, "by him (the Little Horn) the daily sacrifice was taken away." Perhaps our teachers are wrong in their teaching that the "Little Horn," is synonomous with popery.

Leader. Your suggestion with regard to our teachers may be correct. But we have ascertained one fact, that the "Little Horn" is the party to whom we must look for the taking away of the "daily sacrifice." Arlon, can you indicate about the time he will rise?

Arlon. It is indicated in Dan. vii. 24. Here we are told that he shall arise "after" the "ten horns," or "ten kings" out of the fourth beast,—"which shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth."

Leader. That is another point—"after" the "ten horns." That necessitates finding out when the "ten horns" should rise, as the "Little Horn" who takes away "the daily sacrifices," cannot rise until they have appeared. It is a circuitous route, but never mind, it will pay if we thereby arrive at the truth. Lucy, what have you to say?

Lucy. For hundreds of years people have been making out lists of the "ten kingdoms," but they differ very much as to the kingdoms which should compose the "ten;" out of six lists that I know of, eighteen different powers are named, just eight too many. This shows it to be largely guess-work. If we should follow the Bible description of the "ten" which should arise we would not make so many mistakes. See Rev. xvi. 12: "And the ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings, which have received no kingdom as yet; but receive power as kings one hour with the beast." They have "received no kingdom as yet," and when they do "receive power," it is not as real crowned monarchs, but only "as kings," and their power "as kings," will be only for "one hour with the beast," a very brief period of time. A person who acts "as" a king, is it not a real king, he simply acts in that capacity during the time which the power is delegated to him. And in the case of the "ten kings," the original manuscripts indicate that they never were crowned monarchies from the beginning to the end of their career. The Alexandrine manuscript omits the words, "as yet," from the phrase "received no kingdom as yet." S. P. Tregelles, L. L. D., says: "And the ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings who received not a kingdom," etc. He says the words "received not," are "found in the most ancient copy, and some versions." In the lists of the supposed "ten kingdoms," we find mighty crowned monarchies named, who have received kingdoms, and who never did reign simply "as kings," but were kings such as England, France, Spain, Italy, etc. It is a certain fact that history does not furnish us with a single instance in which a confederacy of ten powers ever did exercise power "as kings" on the old Roman territory. As the "ten kings" have not yet made their appearance, the "Little Horn," who is to take away the "daily sacrifice," has not either, because he is to arise "after" them, as we are told by the sacred Word of God.

Leader. Very good Lucy. Albert, at what time will the "ten horns" appear?

Albert. As the ten toes of the image is the last portion of the image, so the ten kingdoms are last of all human governments. See Dan. ii. 42-44. "And the toes of the feet were part of iron, and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong, and partly broken. And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men: but they shall not cleave one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay. And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever."

Here it is distinctly affirmed that "the God of heaven" will set up his kingdom "in the days" of this ten-toe kingdom.

Leader. Will Agnes please tell us how long this ten-horned confederacy acting under the leadership of the Little Horn will exercise power?

Agnes. Not longer than seven years. See Dan. ix. 24, 25: "Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people and upon thy holy city, to finish the transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up the vision and prophecy, and to anoint the Most Holy. Know therefore and understand, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem unto the Messiah the Prince shall be seven weeks, and three-score and two weeks: the street shall be built again, and the wall, even in troublous times."

Here "seventy weeks" are measured off, at the end of which period, the Lord will "make and an end of sins," "finish the transgression," "and to bring in everlasting righteousness."

Leader. What are we to understand by the period of time known as "seventy weeks?"

Agnes. The Bible recognizes weeks of days and weeks of years. In this case the facts indicate that weeks of years are meant. Verse 25 shows that sixty-nine of these weeks would end at the first coming of "Messiah the Prince," dating from "the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem."

Leader. There were two commandments, about fourteen years apart, which shall we date from?

Agnes. Both of them. Lieut. Totten measured one of them by solar time, and found that exactly sixty-nine weeks ended at "Messiah the Prince." He then measured the other one by lunar time, and that also ended at "Messiah the Prince," both at exactly the same time. So this is doubly confirmed.

Leader. Will Elias please tell us something about the seventieth week?

Elias. The seventieth week will be the most remarkable of all the weeks which have preceded it. It will indeed be filled with momentous events, moving in rapid succession. There is a necessary period of time which will elapse between the sixty-ninth and seventieth week, a preparatory period, in which things are being shaped and prepared for the grand culmination in which sin will fill up its measure, and then will the Lord "make an end of sins," "finish the transgression," and "bring in everlasting righteousness."

Leader. Arlon will you tell us something about this last week of Gentile times?

Arlon. I will read it to you from Dan. ix. 27: "And he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week: and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease, and for the overspreading of abominations he shall make it desolate, even until the consummation, and that determined shall be poured upon the desolate."

This Little Horn here called a King of Fierce countenance will make a covenant with the Jews for a week of seven years, and under this covenant, the Jews will again offer sacrifice, but in the middle of the week he will break his covenant, and "he shall cause the sacrifice and oblation to cease for the overspreading of abominations." And right here is the period of time spoken of in Dan. xii. 11-13, to which we referred in the beginning of our lesson. Let us read it again: "And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days. Blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days. But go thou thy way till the end be: for thou shalt rest, and stand in thy lot at the end of the days."

It is in the middle of the seventieth week that the "daily sacrifice" here spoken of is to be taken away, and from that time, "1290" literal "days," (not years) will elapse between the taking away of the daily sacrifice, and the setting up of the abomination, and also at the end of the "1335," days Daniel will stand in his lot. In this way the matter is made plain and harmonious, without the necessity of changing "days" into years.

Leader. We close our lesson right here to-day, and will resume it at this point, next week.

W. H. WILSON.

Dear Restitution:

I desire to inform the brethren and sisters of the good work that has been going on in this part of the vineyard. I had Bro. T. E. Adams come to my place some 200 miles, and preach six sermons for us, and two sermons in the Chickasaw Nation, in the neighborhood of my son-in-laws, and we had the pleasure of seeing him immerse five into the Name of our Blessed Master. The Lord be praised. Two of my daughters and their husbands, and the widow Lawson. We have now 12 or 13, that have been baptized, and we have the 1st Sunday in July appointed to meet and set up house-keeping for our Master. Give us your prayers that we may be faithful unto death. We need a preacher very much. Our brother worked up a good interest here which could be augmented I think by some more good preaching as the people seem anxious to hear the Word, as some never heard it before. As I expect Bro. Adams will give us a report of his travels, and a report of his work while here I will close by saying, Glory to God, and the Lamb that was slain from the foundation of the world.

M. L. ADAMS.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION of which the Lord "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Acts iii. 21 is a witness to this end the restitution must be of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and his immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the resurrection of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Restitution.

EDITORIAL STAFF:
Director of the C. P. Association.
H. JOBLIN, Corresponding Editor.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 11, 1894.

☞ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

As we prepare our forms for the press, the outlook for settlement of the trouble that exists in many places is not very bright. If the men who first had trouble with Mr. Pullman had cause of grievance, that point is lost sight of in the license that is taken by drunken mobs to kill and destroy. In many localities it amounts to anarchy, and the disposition now manifested by the authorities to put down such offenders, even to the extent of declaring martial law, is the most encouraging sign of settlement. That this step is necessary in this land is an indication that the hearts of men may well fail them for fear of the things that are coming. The solution of all such troubles will be the coming of the rightful King, and for this event we pray.

THE differences between coal miners and operators were scarcely arranged when the trouble between labor and capital broke out in two other places. Business in this region is now further paralyzed by a strike among iron ore miners in the North; and the strike of the American Railway Union is assuming vast proportions, and causing tremendous losses to many industries in the West, and threatens to do the same in the East. Troubles follow each other in rapid succession, and ever increasing severity. We sigh for a new and permanent administration of affairs.

THE church which cherishes the blessed hope in Cleveland, never forgets the church scattered abroad when they come around the table; and we often think how it would warn, and warm and upbuild them if they could hear the stirring exhortations and face to face talks that we are favored with. As our heart burned within us while listening last Sunday we thought of the lonely ones, loved of the Lord, and made up our mind that with the Editor's consent we would send them some notes from the addresses delivered. They will be found under the head of "At the Breaking of Bread."

DEAR RESTITUTION,—Will you please paraphrase that part of Revelation xiv. 4, which says, "These are they who were not defiled with women?" I think I get the sense of it, but I want to be able to give the sense in other English words if I can."—S. E.

We suggest the following, as it expresses what we understand it to mean:—"These are those who were not polluted with false systems of religion."

DEAR Bro. Joblin, how would you sum up our needs, so as to round up our characters as Christians or followers of Christ?"—ANDREW.

As it would take a long article to do justice to that matter, and that not being practicable just now, we merely suggest that we need "nobility of character, loftiness of purpose, purity of motive, moral courage, and earnestness, and energy, and conscientious devotion to duty, and meekness, and patience, and reverence, and integrity, and gentleness, and love to God, and faith."

God did not unfold his purpose all at once. The unfolding of his purpose has been compared to the opening of a rose-bud. It is all in the bud, but we do not see it till it is unfolded. Or, we may say it is like the painting of an artist. He first draws the outline, and then fills in the color and detail. God's brief outline is, "As I live, saith the Lord, the whole earth shall be filled with my glory." This is the bud; it contains the whole, but we have to wait while he deliberately unfolds it.

Jewish Colonization.

Under the head of "A chat with a Director of Baron Hirsch's Scheme," the Westminster Gazette gives some interesting facts concerning the Jewish Colonies in the Argentine Republic, which we summarize as follows:

"The Millionaire Mosee, as Baron Hirsch is called, has put down a capital of £2,000,000 or $10,000,000 for the benefit of his suffering kinsman. The colonists, although not of the better classes, are showing great aptness for agriculture, and are beginning to thrive, and appear perfectly happy and contented with their new surroundings and would not go back for anything. In three years they have been entirely acclimatized. The majority of colonists in the Argentine are Italians, who are on the most intimate and friendly terms with the Jews; so much so, indeed, that the Jews took up arms last fall to help defend their neighbors against the plundering natives. The Jews are neither trading nor manufacturing, and hence do not come into competition with the so-called Christians. The colonists are given a house, and garden to grow their vegetables, besides a large plot of some 200 acres of arable land. They are supplied with seeds, machinery, and cattle to start with, provided they are industrious and try to get on, and when they are prospering they begin to pay back to the Colonization Society what they have received, and thus the Association gets back its capital with profit and the scheme is extended thereby. The climate is said to be perfect, but the plagues of locusts that sometimes destroy whole harvests are a great drawback; although they have found out how to check the locusts, to a great extent with wheat. By sowing early enough the stalk is too hard when the locusts come; but with corn they have not gotten over the difficulty."

What interested us most as a believer in Abraham's God on reading this lengthy account, was, that this director confessed, that while as a philanthropist Baron Hirsch has done a magnificent thing, he has failed to do what he thought to do. To quote his own words, he said:—"He has not solved the Russo-Jewish question; nor will he solve it either in the Argentine or any other new country; for there are 5,000,000 oppressed Jews in Russia, and we have now some 3,000 in Argentina. To solve the problem of the mass of Jews in Russia requires other means than any private individual, even so great a philanthropist as Baron Hirsch could produce." It took but a short time to find out their mistake, and we think that this will stop them from forming more far-away colonies, and bend their energies to settle them in their own land. If they only had faith in the God of their fathers they would soon find out that he has already solved the Jewish question, and this would greatly accelerate matters.

At the Breaking of Bread.

"Although affliction cometh not forth of the dust, neither doth trouble spring out of the ground; yet man is born unto trouble, as the sparks fly upward." Brethren and sisters, is this true, do we all know and believe it to be true? Do we all talk and act as if it were true? Answer, No indeed we do not. We often talk and live as if the very opposite were true, as if we were born to quiet and peace and comfort, and when we do not find ourselves under these conditions, we are not satisfied, and when in trouble we mourn and lament more or less according to our disposition. Now as we are born unto trouble, where and how do we get the idea that we should not have any? And be continually remarking it and continually trying to avoid it. I say as it is true that we are born unto trouble, where do we get the thought that it is not ours? Why do we talk as if it came upon us, and why do we plan till our heads throb, and work till our bones ache to rid ourselves of it?

Some may be thinking because trouble is a burden, an oppression, a weariness, it makes life scarce worth living. Did you ever read in God's book that trouble is a burden, an oppression, a weariness that makes life scarce worth living? We all know what the mind or will of the flesh is. It is that which led or commanded us before we knew and believed and obeyed the will of God. It is the mind of the flesh which says that trouble is a burden, etc, etc. With the book of God before me I tell you that trouble is more valuable to us than anything we possess, if we make the proper use of the trouble.

The value of trouble has been dawning on me for years, the full sunrise has not yet reached me, but I am here with you among the living, in the place of hope, and we may all yet learn more of the precious value of trouble, and be able to more fully understand what is contained in these few words. "Man is born unto trouble as the sparks fly upwards." Perhaps it may be concluded from what has been said, that it is a good thing to have a stock of trouble on hand. Indeed that is a most wise conclusion,—providing that the trouble comes from our earnest efforts to carry out the life work set before us in the gospel. My beloved brethren, is it because you live godlike in Christ Jesus that you are troubled today? Beloved sisters, is it because of your faithful Christian conduct your hearts are disturbed today? I know that you will answer me, and I know that you will say with me, I wish that this were so. O that my only troubles were those that come upon me because of my love and zeal for my God, my Savior and my fellowmen. What does this answer prove? It proves, brethren, what our Bro. Joblin said a few weeks ago, "that we have troubles and cares that we have no business to have," and it proves that we are to some extent hearers and not doers of the Word.

I here confess to you loved ones. I will date back six years. I had then (to quote Bro. Joblin again) a deck-load of trouble that I had taken on, besides what I was born unto that would certainly have sunk me, but my Father in heaven, who has never failed me came to my rescue, I seemed to realize that there was no help in man nor myself. I laid the whole matter before God in Jesus' name. O what a relief that was, since that, by keeping God's counsel before me I have tried to avoid all troubles except those that belong to me, and I have none today that I am ashamed to carry to my God.

I hope you will not misunderstand my confession, brethren and sisters. I do not say that I have no trouble, that I do not err and blunder and come to grief, but I can and do cast my burdens on the Lord, and realize as far as I can what Jesus means in his gracious invitation, Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest, and I have found that rest often. Man is born unto trouble, as the sparks fly upward. Though this is a truth, brethren, it is not a thus saith the Lord, these are some of the words that one of Job's friends, Eliphaz the Temanite, heard in a dream. He believed in dreams, some of you may, I don't. He is telling Job what he heard, and applying it to Job. He made a serious mistake in his application as God afterwards told him. I think all dream-believers make great mistakes. Let us, however, try to comprehend the truth of these words, Man is born unto trouble as the sparks fly upward, and let us as believers of the gospel understand our position with regard to trouble.

Do we read in God's rich and precious promises, Come my sons and daughters keep my word and you will have lots of fun, or obey my voice and you will have much pleasure? Does Jesus say, Follow me and all your troubles will vanish like a dream? God speaking by the man Solomon, to whom he gave more wisdom than to any other man, says Eccl. vii. It is better—observe better—to go to the house of mourning than to the house of feasting, for that is the end of all men: and the living will lay it to his heart. Sorrow is better than laughter: for by the sadness of the countennnce the heart is made better. The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning; but the heart of fools is in the house of mirth. Eccles. xi. Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth, and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of the heart, and in the sight of thine eyes; but know thou that for all these things God will bring thee unto judgment.

Remember now—not some other time—now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say I have no pleasure in them.

Listen to Solomon's own experience. Eccl. ii. I said to my heart, I will prove you with mirth. Now enjoy pleasure. I gave myself to wine, and to lay hold on folly, that I might see what the sons of men called good things. I made me great works, builded houses, planted vineyards, made gardens and orchards, pools of water to water the trees. I got me servants and maidens, had servants born in my own house. I had great possessions of cattle, above all that were in Jerusalem. I gathered silver and gold. I got men singers and women singers, musical instruments of all sorts that delight the sons of men. I was great and increased more than all that were before me in Jerusalem. Also my wisdom remained with me. And whatsoever mine eyes desired I kept not from them. I withheld not my heart from any joy.

Happy, happy, happy Solomon, what endless joys and pleasures by day and night, that is the voice of the flesh, but does Solomon say so? Listen again. Then I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought and on all the labor that I labored to do: and, behold all was vanity and vexation of spirit—why was this, brethren and sisters, why? because he was born unto trouble like other men. O my Father who art in heaven, is there no respite, is there no rest for the weary, is it ever double, double toil and trouble? is there, is there balm in Gilead? Yes, thank God there is. 1 Pet. iii. 12, The eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open to all their cry. Job v. He will deliver thee in six troubles, yea in seven. He says I will never leave thee. John xiv. Jesus speaking for his Father and himself says, Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself: that where I am, there ye may be also.

Ye shall weep and lament, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy, now ye have sorrow, but I will see you again. And the result? I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice. How is it, brethren and sisters, does this lift your burdens? But again, Your heart shall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh from you. Thanks, thanks, blessed Lord.

In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world. These things have I spoken unto you that in me ye might have peace.

REMARKS BY OTHERS.

I trust we will all profit by our brother's earnest address, and be reconciled to our lot wherein it is beyond our power to change it. In one respect at least, our own times resemble those of Job. Troubles everywhere abound, and where they cannot be removed it is well that they be borne with fortitude, Christian patience and resignation, knowing that such a condition is the common lot of man; but we should not forget that all the ills of life spring from one cause. The symptoms may differ widely, and men of the world are ever ready to prescribe human remedies, but how ever varied the type, the root is the same. It is sin. That explains why "the whole creation groans." Sin brought death into the world and all our woes. For this there is only one divine remedy, and you all know it. John, the Lord's forerunner, pointed it out when he saw Jesus coming unto him, and said, "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world."

Let us rejoice in anticipation of the complete eradication of sin, and sin's consequences. Our mortal bodies may ache with sore and grievous pain and we may sometimes be depressed in mind as well as body, but let us remember that the trials of the present life are disciplinary,—we are going through a system of education—training for a higher life, and these are some of the means God employs for our sanctification. Take comfort then afflicted ones, the Deliverer will soon appear, the signs betoken his coming near. Your redemption draweth nigh. If faithful that will end all troubles, no more pain, no more sickness, no more sorrow, no more heart-rending partings, no more death. Hail happy day! "And they that were ready went in." May we all be ready

Another said, "Oh loved ones, while listening to the stirring addresses this morning a number of golden texts came to my mind, one of which I will quote. It begins at the 7th verse of the 5th chapter of Peter's epistle and reads like this: "Casting all your care upon him for he careth for you." Oh, what a power for help there is in these words. We are invited to cast all our care upon God,—every bit of it, for he careth for us if we are his. I make it my practice every day to lay away at least one golden text of Scripture for use when called for, and I earnestly recommend you all to do it if you have not already been doing it, especially would I urge our younger brethren and sisters to do it; it will fortify them against the wiles of the devil and walk more and more in the spirit. I trust we shall ever remember that while no affliction for the present seem th joyous but grievous, it afterward yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness to them that are exercised thereby. And also remember that the God of all grace who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ, after we have suffered awhile, will make us perfect, stablish, strengthen and settle us: to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

We Love Him because He First Loved us.

"Jesus of Nazareth a man approved of God among you by mighty deeds and wonders and signs which God did by him in the midst of you as ye yourselves also know, him being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God ye have taken and by wicked hands have crucified and slain."

There is a great deal of religion in the world, or at least what is called by that name, but it is doubtful if there is much knowledge of God. I have often been in "religious meetings" and have taken particular notice that not only was the Bible not read or quoted, but the name of God was hardly ever mentioned, if at all, and only then as it seemed, as far in the back-ground while the name of Jesus occupied the supreme position. This I find is an extremely false position, and arises from the fact that the Bible is either not read or not comprehended, and so the God who has revealed himself through the Bible is not appreciated, and his work, revealed plan, and promises ignored.

In ancient times it was fashionable to erect a little household god to ones own self, or ones own household, and nail him securely where he could not be moved. This custom has become obsolete, at least in these parts, but what matters whether we have a false god in our mind, or on our mantle shelves as far as the moral effect is concerned.

The God of Israel has revealed himself in the Bible not in word only but in deed, and it is only by continual recurrence to the histories, laws, instructions, etc., there contained that we can secure anything like a correct mental or moral perception of the Divine King, and even then, when all is done, each individual impression will vary somewhat according to the temperament and disposition, but as in learning to write, though each child makes his own personal and particular scrawls, yet the main thing is to follow the copy, and keep looking at it.

And then there is so much circumlocuting theology around, enough to make a man's head swim. Impractical chop-logic that attains to the most extreme and ungodly conclusions by the dexterous manipulation of dislocated texts cemented together with a spat of *sui*dition and driven with such a plomb of emphasis that really its hard to keep from being swept away in the great flood of words. I heard a sermon for instance, not long since, in which the earnest preacher tried to show us that God had poured out all the judgments of his wrath on the devoted head of his Son, and all the punishment that all humanity had earned or has to earn was once inflicted in Gethsemane and Calvary. Now I can see that such a terrible meaning can actually be read into certain expressions of Isaiah or Paul by any one that does not understand or has not taken into consideration the circumstances of the case, but it must be understood that neither Isaiah nor Paul have any right to ride rough-shod over facts any more than any one else. We are told by the "orthodox" preachers that Jesus died to satisfy God's justice. Now who in reading the histories in the four gospels or in the Acts could ever come to such a conclusion as that? Who could gather from Matthew, Mark, Luke, or John, that the judicial murder of Jesus of Nazareth was to satisfy the justice of God? Any one that does read with his eyes open will see that the crucifixion of God's Son was the result of the blindness, the injustice, the enmity of man, and there is no ground there at least, for assuming that God was well pleased with the deed, or accepted it as a sacrifice of sweet savor. The apostles denounced the traitor who sold him, and all who by implication, or consent with "wicked hands had crucified and slain him. Which of the prophets asked Stephen, "have not your fathers persecuted and they have slain them which showed before of the coming of the Just One of whom ye are now the betrayers and the murderers?" And did the Father of light condone, sanction, and approve this murder? The character of our God is at stake. let all true men investigate the calumny and denounce it.

I asked a sensible neighbor of mine, as we came out from hearing the sermon before-mentioned, if his boys had burned down his barn, all but one of them who was not in it, what he thought of the idea of thrashing the one that did'nt do it? "The one that did'nt do it" says he, and his hand rose thoughtful to the crown of his head as if it sought a place that needed scratching. "The one that did'nt do it dy'e say?" "Yes" says I, "give him the thrashing for the whole lot you know," then something seemed to dawn on him and he smiled, but he has'nt answered yet. When you think for a minute you will see the very idea of justice, human or divine, is not in such a transaction as that anywhere. It does not stand the test of common sense and neither Paul nor Isaiah have a right to trample common sense.

Now the extract from Peter's discourse set at the head of this article is a real good summary of the whole four gospels in a few words, and notice how God shines out supreme in it. In the three verses he is named four times and the whole work is ascribed to him. Jesus is the "man approved of God." The signs, miracles, and wonders, God did by him, it was according to God's knowledge and God raised him from the dead. God on his side sending, approving, supporting, and saving him. Humanity on the other hand hating, rejecting, wantonly bruising and killing him. But Isaiah says, it pleased the Lord to bruise him, he hath put him to grief. The answer to that is, did Jehovah bruise him according to the record or was it a brutal Roman soldier, and a Jewish mob. And yet Isaiah is right for had it not been God's will and in a certain sense his pleasure, the deed could not have been done, and the same can be said of all other wickedness, and when we read Isaiah or Paul we must know what we are reading about, understand them in the light of facts and put the emphasis in the proper place, for we can misrepresent and prevaricate with emphasis as well as words.

The Bible doctrine is that our Father in heaven, in mercy, and not in justice planed the redemption of the race, and the sending of the Just One differs not in kind but in degree from all his former loving kindness and tender mercies. "Return unto me, and I will return unto you" was God's prayer to man. The character of God in both the Old and New Testament is generosity, magnanimity, gentleness, love, tenderness, mercifulness, patience, and all the other virtues that we admire most in godlike men, for man was made in the image of God, and we still have some copies left, poor ones maybe, but still somewhat like; but look you, these kind don't wish to inflict eternal torture on any body and he dont punish the innocent instead of the guilty, not if they are like the Bible God, the God of which a man need not be ashamed.

Dear Restitution:

There is a question that has been asked a great many times, "What must I do to be saved?" and so many ought to think of this.

Now if we read the blessed Book of Life we can easily find out what we must do. We can find nothing too hard for us to do.

We must overcome the world. We must be overcomers of our trials and temptations. If we overcome them at first it will be a grand victory for us. We will read Mark xvii. 16, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."

But that is not all we must do. Our work has just begun when we are baptized. We have just put on the Christain armor. Now we can talk with a new tongue. Now we must lay all worldly things aside, and keep the world dark to us. We must not even touch the edge again.

Dear ones are you working for the Master? If you cannot tell the good news are you helping some one else to tell it? James v. 1, 2, 3. "Go to now ye rich men; weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted and your garments are moth-eaten. your gold and silver is cankered and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasures together for the last day."

Oh Brother or Sister, are you laying gold or silver away that should be used for the Lord? If you are get it at once and use it. Do not let its rust be a witness against you. To be saved we must try to save others. If we cannot tell the good news there are some that can. Now is when we need the gold and silver to help those that can tell the good news to those who have not heard it. The gospel must be preached to all nations. So, dear ones, let us be at work. If we cannot work one way let us work another for the time is coming when the work must be done, and certainly it is not far distant. If there is a time we must work to be saved it is now. May we all work in some way or other that we may be saved is the prayer of your Sister in Christ.

EMMA LINDSAY.

A Keen Edge.

God's word is sharper than a two-edged sword; and what is a sword good for that has no edge? The world is surfeited with smooth talk. Ministers complain that the gospel makes no impression on the people. The trouble is, they do not preach it, or if they do, it makes little impression on the ministers themselves. They fight with daggers of lath; they brandish empty scabbards. They do not know and feel the word of God themselves in its present living power, and how can they proclaim it to others? They are afraid of reproach, of persecution, of poverty, of toils, which come upon those who consecrate themselves to the service of God and walk in the ways of truth.

But the word of God has edge, nevertheless. It finds men out; it reaches their hearts; it searches out their sins; it exposes their iniquities. It pierces even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart."

What man needs is the word of God; not some small portions of it, such as are endorsed and allowed by certain denominations, evangelical or otherwise; not such parts simply as are fashionable and acceptable; not such departments of truth as may be preached without giving offense, provoking criticism, or incurring blame; but the plain, unequivocal, unalterable words of the living God, which shall endure when "the tree withereth and the flower fadeth away;" when heaven and earth shall pass away. He who plants himself on this foundation, and proclaims this word, will find that the Spirit's sword has by no means lost its keen edge, but that it still has power to pierce the mind of doubt, and cleave the bosses and shatter the defenses of unbelief; and, attended by the Holy Ghost, to convince men of sin and righteousness and Judgment to come.

But it must be the gospel, not a miserable, emasculated substitute therefor. It must be the truth as it is in Jesus, without regard to sectarian limitations or denominations.

The River of Life.

A silver thread among the hills,
A stream that singing runs,
A river broad, and deep, and strong,
In seaward course it flows.

So let my spirit's life, O Lord,
Be still, as seen by Thee;
So 'st it onward hold its course
To the eternal sea.

Let it grow broad—with broadest love;
A flood of kindly deeds,
Of gentle thoughts, and helpful words,
To meet my brother's needs.

Let it grow deep—in channels worn
By Faith's restless tramps,
Still fed by the refreshing springs
Which flow in there its source.

Let it grow strong—as drawn by Thee,
Of hope a swelling tide,
That sweeps all doubt and care away,
And doth in God abide.

So may the river of my life
From reach to reach still flow;
So shall my soul from day to day
Thy clearer image show.

Till merging in the blissful sea
Of glory vast and bright,
It finds its end—its goal of faith
And hope—in love and sight.

Murderous Modern Weapons.

The system of guns of small caliber now almost universally adopted in Europe was suggested, as were all the other recent European improvements in small arms, by some one or another of the American rifles, whose excellence has long been universally acknowledged. The principle is, the smaller the caliber the greater the force of projection and the longer the range. Changes in this direction once commenced it was impossible to predict where they would cease. The rifle cartridge of the kind now used in Italy and Austria scarcely exceeds that of a small-sized revolver and resembles more than anything else a short segment of steel wire finished at the ends.

This change in armament will necessarily cause important modifications in military tactics, but of what kind is not yet known and cannot be precisely known till some European war of importance shall furnish the data. In the first place the statisticians are endeavoring to discover what number of discharges or balls will be necessary to cause the death of a single combatant. In the battles previous to 1859 it required 143. In 1864 and 1866, considerable improvement in small arms having been made, it required 60, while in the Franco-German war of 1870 the number on each side was estimated at 40, according to some authorities, and at 102 according to others. Before 1859 military writers expressed the opinion that if the fatality did not amount to seven in a thousand, that is, one soldier killed for every 143 balls expended, the game was not worth the powder and the firing had better cease. The problem is still further complicated by the invention of smokeless powder, which, it is thought, will increase the mortality with less expense of ammunition. This opinion is confirmed by the events of the late civil war in Chile, where of 9,025 combatants, though only 3,446 were armed with the Austrain rifle, the Mannlicher, 66 per cent, or more than half the mortality, was due to this weapon.

Another question that absorbs the attention of the military writers is the number of killed in proportion to the number wounded. Inferences drawn from the Winchester, with which the Chinese were armed in Tonquin during the war with France in 1884-'85, were favorable to the theory that the wound made by a rifle of small caliber was less likely to cause death than one made with a rifle of the old models. Since then the caliber has been greatly diminished and opinion in regard to the relative mortality seems to be divided, though inclining strongly to the theory that the wound of a very small ball moving very swiftly makes a much more dangerous wound.

The question is an important one, and as it is presumed the next war in Europe will be general and perhaps decisive of the fate of one or more nations, all the governments interested would like to know the value of their armament, how it is to be used, and how depended on before they can enter upon the contest. As the experiments necessary to these deductions cannot be made on living men, dead bodies of men and horses have been employed for the purpose in different countries, but usually in very small numbers. A dead body or two dead bodies were attached to a plank and fired at from different distances. The Germans have greatly extended this process. They have not only succeeded in placing an entire company of corpses in line but in order to give the tissues all the natural resistance of real soldiers, they have injected colored fluids, have armed and equipped them, and exposed them to fire accompanied by living horses. The Surgeon General of the Prussian army gave the result of these experiments in a report made to the Medical Congress held a few weeks ago at Rome.

There were employed in the experiments 480 dead bodies, thirteen living horses, and sixteen dead horses. These were fired on at distances varying from 150 yards to about two miles, there being an expenditure of 1,000 rifle balls. The report read was too long and technical to be given in full, but portions of it will interest the general reader from a humanitarian point of view. Its general tenor was that wounds made by modern weapons and projectiles are incomparably more serious than those made by the weapons formerly employed. At moderate distances up to half a mile the clothing is not forced into the wound, but the effects are frightful. All the drops of liquid contained in this part of the body, taking the force and swiftness of the projectile, and trying to escape in every direction, strike the sides of the cavity with terrible force. The bones instead of being pierced, are crushed in mass, as by an explosion of dynamite, and the fragments are sent off in every direction through the body. The liver and heart are pulverized, the intestines torn into small pieces and lacerated in the most singular manner. The hole made by the ball in entering is scarcely preceptible; that which it makes in leaving the body is sometimes six or eight inches in diameter. It is to be borne in mind that the ball always passes entirely through the body and through a second and third if they are placed one behind another, only stopping in the fourth.

A ball striking the arm or leg destroys the member entirely. If it strikes the head, the neck, or the abdomen it kills infallibly. If it passes through the thoracic cavity the wounded person may recover if the vital organs are spared. Beyond half a mile, and most of the firing in future battles will be beyond that distance, the wounds are a little less serious and the mortality less. The effects are still, however, far more serious than with the weapons formerly in use. From two-thirds of a mile to distances slightly exceeding a mile, the bone is fractured all about the hole made by the ball in its passage. Even when the distance considerably exceeds a mile the bone is broken in nearly half the cases, and the splinters are driven in different directions through the flesh. At longer distances the clothing is driven into the flesh, which is always a serious aggravation of a wound, not only on account of the presence of the cloth itself, but because it is generally covered with microbes that produce corruption.

The report adds other peculiarities attending use of the new ball. The envelope, which is composed of sheet steel, loses its shape when it enters the body and often divides into minute fragments, each of which takes a different direction, lacerating all it comes in contact with. Its temperature when it enters the body is greatly elevated, always 70 degrees and sometimes as high as 350 degrees. A few of these peculiarities were observed by the French during the war with Dahomey in the use of the Lebel rifle. The ball of this weapon, which is an exceedingly small, oblong object, cased with steel, killed in many cases two or three Dahomans, if they happened to be one behind the other, but the French surgeons had no time to study the nature of the wounds. Even if they had dissected and examined minutely all the wounded, it is scarcely probable they would have discovered all the singular effects mentioned, numerous changes having been made in Austria and Germany since the Lebel was invented.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A New Song.

"O sing unto the Lord a new song; for he hath done marvelous things: his right hand, and his holy arm, hath gotten him the victory.

The Lord hath made his salvation: his righteousness hath he openly showed in the sight of the heathen.

He hath remembered his mercy and his truth toward the house of Israel; all the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God.

Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all the earth; make a loud noise, and rejoice, and sing praise.

Sing unto the Lord with the harp, and the voice of a psalm.

With trumpets, and sound of cornet, make a joyful noise before the Lord, the King.

Let the sea roar, and the fullness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein.

Let the floods clap their hands; let the hills be joyful together.

Before the Lord for he cometh to judge the earth; with righteousness shall he judge the world, and the people with equity."

This inspired command will be obeyed in the right time and in the right place.

Five hundred years before Jesus rode into Jerusalem on an ass's colt the prophet said: "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion, shout, O daughter of Jerusalem, for thy King cometh unto thee," etc. And at the right time they did rejoice and shout, spreading their garments in the way and the children catching the spirit sang: "Hosanna to the Son of David." If these had held their peace the very stones would have cried out.

Who will sing this new song?

Probably the one hundred and forty and four thousand seen by the beloved John, standing on the Mount Zion having the Father's name written in their foreheads; the twelve thousand of each of the tribes of the children of Israel of Revelation 7th, who were sealed in their foreheads, and they sing as it were "A new song." This song was written about three thousand years before they sing it. They cannot sing the Lord's song in a strange land; they are on the Mount Zion when they sing it. No man can learn that song but that company, as the song of Miriam and her companions on the shores of the Red Sea, was specially adapted for them.

The ninety-eighth Psalm is intended to be the opening "Song of the Millennial Age." We should remember the age to come is a judgment age and an age of knowledge, when no one shall have need to say to his brother or his neighbor, "Know the Lord, for all shall know Him from the least to the greatest of them, saith the Lord." "By his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many, for He shall bear their iniquities."

About forty years since Dr. Walter Clark said in a discourse in the South Church, on the text, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world," "It certainly meant that the saving power of Jesus our Lord would reach more than a mere fraction of our race as it had in the past, and this thought is in harmony with the spirit of the holy Scriptures; 'for as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one man shall many be made righteous;' or the living race in the flesh shall feel the effects of Jesus's perfect obedience as much as the living race in the flesh felt the effects of Adam's disobedience."

About fifty years since the news reached Hartford that the Russians had taken the stronghold on the Balkan Mountains, and were marching down on Constantinople. A prominent business man and a prominent member of the South Church said, at the dinner-table, that day "I had rather heard that news than to have known that I had made a thousand dollars." It was then understood by many, as it is now, that the wasting away and downfall of the Turkish Power was a certain harbinger of the millennial age. Now, it reaches us in moments of time, traveling, it is said, faster than sound and faster than the light.

Probably Miss Ellsworth penned the first message Mr Morse sent over the wires by inspiration as well as from inspiration. The four words were written and spoken thousands of years before she was born: "What hath God wrought."

"Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens, and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

Where is that promise and what is that promise?

Isaiah lxv. 17: "For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth; and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind.

But be ye glad and rejoice forever in that which I create: for, behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy.

And I will rejoice in Jerusalem and joy in my people: and the voice of weeping shall no more be heard in her, nor the voice of crying," etc.

"Awake, awake; put on thy strength, O Zion; put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem....

Break forth into joy, sing together, ye waste places of Jerusalem: for the Lord has comforted his people, He hath redeemed Jerusalem.

The Lord hath made bare His holy arm in the eyes of all the nations; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God."

Acts i, 10, 11: "And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven, as He went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel;

Which also said, 'Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus....shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.'"

Zechariah xiv. 4: "And His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east; and the Mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof towards the east and towards the west, and there shall be a very great valley: and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south."

Psalm cxx", 1: "They that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth forever."

The words of the Apostle Peter: Acts iii, 21: "And He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you:

"Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began.

"For Moses truly said unto the fathers, a prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren like unto me; Him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever He shall say unto you.

"And it shall come to pass that every soul that will not hear that prophet shall be destroyed from among the people."

Let us Take Time.

Let us take time for a good-by kiss. We shall go to the day's work with a sweeter spirit for it.

Let us take time for the evening prayer. Our sleep will be more restful if we have claimed the guardianship of God.

Let us take time to speak sweet, foolish words to those we love. By-and-by, when they can no longer hear us, our foolishness will seem more wise than our best wisdom.

Let us take time to read our Bible. Its treasures will last when we shall have ceased to care for the war of political parties, the rise and fall of stocks, or the petty happenings of the day.

Let us take time to be pleasant. The small courtesies which we often omit because they are small, will some day look larger to us than the wealth which we have coveted, or the fame for which we have struggled.

Let us take time to get acquainted with our families. The wealth you are accumulating, burdened father, may be a doubtful blessing to the son who is a stranger to you. Your beautifully kept house, busy mother, can never be a home to the daughter whom you have no time to caress.

Let us take time to get acquainted with Christ. The hour is coming swiftly for us all, when one touch of his hand in the darkness will mean more than all that is written in the daybook and ledger, or in the record of our little social world.

Since we must all take time to die, why should we not take time to live, to live in the large sense of a life begun here for eternity.

A Serious Question.

Bro. T. E. Adams and others wish to know which is the worst evil of the two, the drink habit, or the tobacco habit. A man can use either one is true, and go about his business. One is more filthy than the other. Neither are natural or necessary habits. Both are contracted in ignorance. Both are very extravagant in their demands. Millions of dollars are sacrificed annually to appease these unreasonable and insatiable demon gods. Many a poor soul has brought himself and family to poverty's door, to stay there crippled for life. Both are poison, and will dethrone reason, and make a fool of a fellow, and throw him in the ditch if he gets too much. Neither ever will make a man any better, nor begin to recommend him to the best society below or above. Both must be laid aside when you go to church to appear before God and his people, and why is it so? If drinkers could only see the river of fiery whiskey mixed with beer they have drank, cooking their insides, and take alarm, and if tobacco users could only have a glimpse of the monster pile of the poisonous stuff they are salting themselves down with, and flee from the wrath to come. How can a man or woman glorify God in body and spirit, when soaked and smoked in whiskey or tobacco? Christ pleased not himself, but who is pleased with these worldly fashionable habits? Now do tell us which is the worst and most vile of these twin sisters, and oblige a brother who is confessedly confused over this matter.—[Both.—Ed.]

A SHORT ACCOUNT.

I will say to the brethren, that I have just returned from Oklahoma, and the new country, where we hold some meetings in different places with good interest, and five willing souls became obedient to the faith by being buried with Christ in baptism. While some others were almost persuaded to make the good confession. May heaven's blessing rest upon them and keep them from falling.

While there we met two of Bro. Gower's sons, and their families. One of the sons and his wife are in the faith, the other one it seems has just neglected to do his duty, neglected this great salvation. May our God help us all to do our duty before it is too late. The new country is a good field to sow the word of the kingdom in. The people are anxious to hear. Party lines and creeds are not much in the way there yet.

Iowa Tent Work.

Dear readers of the Restitution:

Knowing that you all are interested in the work of the Lord I will try to keep you informed as to what we are doing here. Our conference at Nevada closed June 17. In many respects it was the best meeting we have ever had. The attendance was good. Brotherly love and the spirit of the Savior was manifest throughout. Our plans of work showed more business tact and system. The preaching was of a high order because biblical, and was ably presented. The influence of our meeting was felt and the good order and conduct of the brethren was the subject of remark by the citizens of Nevada. The preaching awakened an interest among the people. A new tract missionary society was formed to scatter tracts. Five were added by baptism. Preaching brethren from abroad were Bros. A. Adams of Nebraska and C. W. Russell of Chicago. Brother Russell will remain and assist in the tent work during the summer. The tent remained at Nevada one week after the conference. The tornado did but little damage to the tent aside from breaking two of the gas torches, breaking one center pole, and tearing to pieces our tent organ. We were able however the next day to repair all damages and the meetings went on. To God we render praise, for no one was hurt. On Monday June 25th we came to Hickory Grove where we have been preaching to the present time. Our tent will next (D. V.) be pitched at Alden in Hardin County. Yours for truth.

A. J. EICHANER.

Master, We have toiled all Night, and have taken Nothing?

"What then? "Launch out into the deep and let down your nets for a draught!" "Cast your net on the right side of the ship and ye shall find." O ye fearful, weary fishers of men, is there not comfort for you here? You have been toiling all night, your garments are heavy with mists of sorrow, you are sick and faint and discouraged because there are few to hear and less to heed the message that you carry. But get out of the ship, mend your nets, wash them clean, then, thrust out from the land and let Jesus teach the people. At his word, let down the net. It would seem as if the same glad, astonishing result would follow, as was the case with Simon. Multitudes will be caught, and the fishermen will be obliged to call their partners in labor that they may come and help them. Obey and take courage, dear ministers of the Lord. You have been sent to catch men; the Lord is with you in the work. Whenever and wherever he calls, go, and let none fear for the outcome is in his hands. The ships, the nets, the fishermen are all his. He will use and provide and bless. Let the ships be filled! Mourn no more that the toil has resulted in a disappointment—work on, the reward will come by and by.

S. ROXANA WINCE.

Editor Restitution:

Please insert the following in THE RESTITUTION:—Died at her home near Beachville, Oxford Co., Ont., Saturday, June 16, Sarah M. Clarke in the 18th year of her age, after a short illness of typhoid fever followed by inflamation of the lungs. She was the youngest of a large family, and being obedient and of a cheerful disposition, she was a pride to her parents and the joy of the household, but death approaches and those golden curls that were always so neatly dressed by a fond mother and sisters were arranged for the last time by a mortal hand. The funeral service took place on the following Monday, and was conducted at the house by Rev. Mr. Morgan, a Baptist minister. He spoke words of comfort from the 15th chapter of 1st Cor. The resurrection of the body and the soon personal coming of our Lord were ably put forth, leaving the impression with all that we need not sorrow as those who have no hope. Cousin Sarah was a reader of THE RESTITUTION, and had a fair knowledge of the truth as revealed in the Scriptures, having been taught the truth from infancy, and she was looking forward to an early baptism. She was a general favorite with her companions and schoolmates who brought floral tributes. A large number showed their sympathy with those who mourn, and who also are confident that they have the sympathy of THE RESTITUTION.

JAMES E. LONG.

Editor Restitution:

I will try in my weakness and for the first time to write a few lines to let the brothers and sisters throughout. Our plans of work know that there are a few of the One Faith in this part of Missouri. We are surrounded by all kinds of faith except the right one. We have about eight in the county that I know of. We hear but little truth as it is in Christ Jesus. Bro. W. J. Orem has preached some for us and he is the only one. I would like to be where I could hear the gospel of the kingdom proclaimed as it was by Christ and the apostles. I am glad to say that I believe that Christ will come and reign in Mt. Zion, and in Jerusalem. I am glad to know that those that have part in the first resurrection will reign with him a thousand years. Oh, that we may all have a part in that grand gathering, clothed with immortality and eternal life. This thought cheers me, and makes the trials and sorrows of this life easier to bear. We are told that if we suffer with him we shall reign with him. Blessed thought. It comes to me o'er and o'er. We shall reign on the earth. About all we hear in this part is immortal souls, sky kingdom, or kingdom in the heart, dying and going to heaven or hell, and try to reason with them and they turn a deaf ear, so it is blind lead the blind and all go into the ditch together. I will send you an article clipped from one of our county papers. It shows how much the writer knows about the gospel. How can one keep still when they hear such as that proclaimed to a dying people, but anything else is poison to them. They think that all will come to a knowledge of the Lord and be saved. I do not take THE RESTITUTION. I have not got much of this world's goods, but rich in faith, and in hope of the soon coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Let us all work while we can, for the night is coming when man works no more.

Yours, watching and waiting for the coming of the Lord.

JESSE HARROLD.

Dear Restitution:

In reading Bro. Wince's article "Addition and Subtraction" in RESTITUTION June 20, his argument for the year day theory from Dan. ix. 24 to 27 I think fails, for I think the Jews never used the word week, it was always day, month or year, now I would like to know what the original words are in the Greek or Hebrew. I have always thought it was 70 sevens only and no word to denote whether they were 70 sevens of days, months or years, but at the death of Christ they prove to be 70 sevens of years, 69 sevens or 483 years were then fulfilled and one more seven years yet to be fulfilled. Please will Bro. Wince or Joblin or Wilson answer this as I don't like to use the word week instead of seven if the original means only seven as the two words week and seven have different meanings, I just write this for truth's sake. I have tried to write this in the spirit of brotherly love and not to find fault. If you think well to publish it do so, if fit for the waste basket put it there, you know best. In brotherly love.

Does Phrenology Prove Immortality?

Having recently heard a paper read, the object of which was to prove by phrenology the immortality of the soul, I wish to say a few words through THE RESTITUTION on that subject, believing it will be interesting and perhaps of profit to its readers. Phrenology has come to be known as a true science. It claims that there are forty-two organs in the human brain, and the development of these organs forms the character of the individual. These organs are separated into groups—the intellectual, moral, social, domestic and selfish. Those versed in the science can tell at a glance whether the person is of a social, domestic, selfish or moral nature, or whether endowed with a high or low intelligence. I quote from the paper as follows: "The only basis for the doctrine of immortality is found in the groups of phrenological organs termed hope, conscientiousness, benevolence, veneration and ideality. All other mental powers the higher animals possess in common with man; some of them in a merely rudimentary state, others even more fully developed, comparatively, than in the human being. And this distinction proves the immortality of the soul."

The paper closes by asking: "Why, if man perishes like the plant or animal, is he endowed with organs of the mind (those mentioned above) which have nothing to do with his physical development, growth or reproduction, but do relate him to something upward, onward and higher than existence of this life—why, we need these moral organs in addition to the social and domestic organs?"

God in his infinite mercy "made man a little lower than the angels," and therefore susceptible to sin, yet endowed him with the organs of the brain (hope, conscientiousness, veneration, benevolence and ideality) that placed him above the beast in intelligence, so that he might "have dominion over them." He endowed him with these faculties, together with all the others which the beast possesses, so that he might make the most of life; that he might love and adore the living and true God, believe in him and keep his commandments, and in the resurrection partake of that joy promised those who are faithful, and receive immortality. He gave him hope, that he might look for something beyond this life; he gave him consciousness, that he might discern right from wrong; he gave him veneration, benevolence and ideality, that he might love and revere his creator and do his will, that he might love his fellowmen.

The heart does not possess these faculties, yet Solomon in Eccles. iii. 19-21, says "man has no preeminence over a beast, as one dieth, so dieth the other; all go to one place, all are of dust and all return to dust again. Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?"

No cognizance is taken of the spirit of the beast; but the spirit of man goeth upward and his deeds, whether good or bad, are recorded on high. If faithful, he will receive a "crown of righteousness that fadeth not away" when Christ comes to judge the world. If unfaithful he will be "utterly destroyed."

Phrenology nor any other science, can prove the immortality of the soul, it merely infers it. On such a foundation (inference) is based the popular doctrines of this day, and such foundations will not stand the test when the great "flood and winds" of the last days prevail against them. Get into the ark of safety, if you would escape the doom that will come to all false doctrines and teachers.

May we all be earnestly watching and praying as we see the end approaching. Your brother in Christ.

J. E. HASEN.

Announcement.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Kansas, will be held three miles northeast of Oxford, in Cowley County, at Bro. Thomas Jackson's schoolhouse. This meeting will last about ten days, commencing August the 10th, 1894. There is some important business to transact. Business meeting will be on Saturday at two o'clock P. M. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can bring tents and come prepared to camp. The brethren at Oxford are wholesouled, hospitable folks, but it is too much for women to have to work all the time and get no good of the meetings, so let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master. The commotion of the world indicates his coming is very near. All speaking brethren wishing any information correspond with Bro. S. C. Oliver, Attica, Kan. A full program will be published in due time.

Reduced Rates to Denver.

Unusual low rate excursions are being announced this year by the Pennsylvania Lines, and long distance journeys over them may be made at slight expense. For this summer exceedingly cheap excursions to Denver will be run over these Lines. The rates will be the lowest in effect for years and will enable persons to visit the West at slight cost. The dates and return limits for these special Denver excursions will be as follows:

On July 20th and 21st, good to return until the latter part of August, account the meeting of the Mystic Shrine Order.

On August 9th and 10th, account annual meeting League of American Wheelman, good returning until the middle of September.

Although the low rates have been made for meetings of organizations, the sale of tickets will not be confined to members, but the public generally may take advantage of the low fare. The return limits will be ample for side trips in the West. Details may be obtained by applying to any Ticket Agent of the Pennsylvania Lines, or by addressing F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Remember the recent reductions in rates via the Nickel Plate Road and its unexcelled passenger service of through trains equipped with finest coaches and buffet sleeping cars between Chicago, Cleveland, Buffalo, New York and Boston, when next you are traveling East or West.

Seashore Excursion.

On July 7th, 8th and 9th low rate excursion tickets to Asbury Park will be sold via Pennsylvania Short Lines, account National Educational Association meeting. Asbury Park is adjacent to Ocean Grove, Long Branch, Atlantic City, Cape May, and other delightful resorts on the New Jersey Coast. Excursion tickets will be good going and returning via Baltimore and Washington, with stop-over privileges. This will be an excellent opportunity for a vacation trip to the principal summer resorts of the east at slight cost. For details apply to nearest Pennsylvania Line Ticket Agent, or address F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

☞ It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1894, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

Sowing and Reaping.

Sow while ... sowing-hand,
Pause not ... nor grieve
We may not ... the ... of summer,
Weary ... there ... heedful-spirited reaper!
For, wait ye the Autumn-sheaves
For the shower of golden grain.

Scatter the seed and fear not,
... will be sprout
What matter if you are wearied
... your hand ... weakly
... the earth is hard—
For the harvest must be fed.

... the ... dears falter
In the warm earth's bosom deep,
And your worn tears fall upon it—
They will ... its hidden germ;
And the green blades rise the quicker,
Perchance for the tears you weep.

Th... sow, for the hours are flying
And the ... must fall to-day;
And ... what hands shall reap it,
Or if ... be passed away
Before ... ening reminders
Shall ... then the sower say.

Sow and look ... and upward,
Where the starry light appears;
For, in spite of the cowards doubting,
Or your own heart's doubts and fears,
You shall reap in joy the harvest
You have sown to-day, in tears.

SECOND LESSON.

Leader. You will doubtless remember that we closed our lesson last week by showing that the taking away of the "Daily Sacrifice," spoken of by the prophet Daniel, was to be accomplished by the "Little Horn," in the middle of the seventieth week, (last week of this Gentile age), and that the words "days" in chapter xii. meant "days," and that if we changed the word "days" (which we have no authority to do) to years, it would be a source of confusion.

Elias. This reminds me that last evening I read an article in which the writer affirmed that Antiochus Epiphanes was the Little Horn, and that he set up the abomination spoken of by Daniel. What do you think about that?

Leader. I think it conflicts with the Word of the Lord Jesus. In Matt. xxiv., he speaks of the abomination as being still in the future. "When therefore ye shall see the abomination spoken of by Daniel the prophet," etc. Now, Antiochus died some two hundred years previous to this.

Lud. While quietly sitting in my study last Tuesday evening, I read over very carefully the seventh chapter of Daniel, where he relates his vision of the four beasts, etc., and I noticed his perplexity as to what it all meant. An interpreter was sent to him, and the matter made clear, and I think if we pay strict attention to it, in place of following the interpretations given by mortal man, we will have clearer conceptions of the Prophetic Word. He was told, that "These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, which shall arise out of the earth," and at the conclusion of their career, "the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever." But the fourth beast attracted his attention and he said: "Then I would know the truth of the fourth beast, which was diverse from all the others, exceeding dreadful, whose teeth were of iron, and his nails of brass; which devoured, brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with his feet." In reply his interpreter said: "The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces." And now he says, I would like to know the truth concerning "the ten horns that were in his head, and of the other which came up, and before whom three fell; even of that horn that had eyes, and a mouth that spake very great things, whose look was more stout than his fellows." In reply his interpreter said to him: "And the ten horns of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise: and another shall rise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings." And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change their time and laws: and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time." At the conclusion of this Little Horn's career, the kingdom and dominion "under" the entire heavens should pass from his hands into the hands of the "saints of the Most High."

Leader. Elias told us about an article he read with regard to Antiochus Epiphanes being the Little Horn, and that he set up the abomination, how does this accord with the divine interpretation given to Daniel?

Carrie. It does not accord at all. Antiochus Epiphanes died hundreds of years before Christ's advent, but Daniel's interpreter says the Little Horn continued in power "until" the time come that the saints possessed the kingdom."

Leader. We are sometimes told that popery represents the Little Horn, does the career of that power harmonize with the interpretation given to Daniel? Arlon, how does this strike you?

Arlon. That cannot be: Daniel's interpreter says with regard to this Little Horn: "I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them; until the Ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High: and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom." Popery has no such power, her civil power has long since passed away, she has no power either to "make war," or prevail against the saints, but Daniel's interpreter says the Little Horn would have power to do all this, "until" "the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom."

Leader. Daniel was informed as to how long he would have power to make war and prevail over the saints. Albert, will you explain that?

Albert. Verse 25 says: "they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time." I have been taught that popery was the Little Horn, and that "time and times and the dividing of time," was 1260 years. My faith was much shaken in this interpretation, when I found that the 1260 years of the papacy has long since passed away, and that she has no power to make war against the saints. But the Little Horn will exercise power for "a time times and the dividing of time" which period lasts until "the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom."

Leader. Does Daniel indicate how long a period "a time and times and a dividing of time" is? Lucy, give us the result of your study.

Lucy. Daniel settles the matter in a plain manner, and if we would accept it in place of human affirmations we would have less difficulty in comprehending the Prophetic Word. The margin of Dan. xi. 13, says "at the end of times even years." Also in Dan. iv. 32, the king was sent to dwell with the beasts of the field, until "seven times shall pass over thee." Our teachers have told us that "time times and the dividing of time," means 1260 years. If that is correct, then the king must have been sent to dwell with the beasts for 2,520 years, which you will observe is nonsensical upon the face of it.

Leader. Your observations are to the point. We read with regard to this Little Horn, "he shall come in peaceably," "shall enter peaceably even upon the fattest places," shall obtain the kingdom by "flatteries," he will "confirm the covenant with many (Jews) for one week (of years—seventieth week of Daniel) and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and oblation to cease," "his heart will be against the holy covenant." Here he will throw off the sheep clothing he has been wearing for three years and a half and show that he is in reality a wolf. He breaks this covenant "in the midst of the week" of seven years, and this leaves him just three years and a half.—"time times and a dividing of time," he will now become "a vile person," "shall do according to his will," "exalt himself above every god" makes "war with the saints," "and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time,"—three years and a half, dating from the time "he shall cause the sacrifice and oblation to cease," "and shall prosper till the indignation be accomplished." And 1260 days (not years) from this time, he will set up the abomination, and at the end of the "1335 days," Daniel and all those who wait for it will stand in their lot "at the end of the days." Agnes, do you know of any other period mentioned in Daniel indicating the termination of the power of the Little Horn?

Agnes. I do. In Dan. viii. Daniel has another vision which he did not understand, and Gabriel was sent to inform him. He sees a ram with two horns pushing in every direction. Now, Daniel says Gabriel, "The ram which thou sawest having the two horns are the kings of Media and Persia." He next sees a he goat come from the west, with a great horn between his eyes, and he ran unto him in the fury of his power, and he broke the two horns on the ram, and cast it down to the ground and stamped upon it. Gabriel says: "The rough goat is the king of Grecia, and the great horn that is between his eyes is the first king." Next Daniel sees this he goat become great and strong, and when he had attained the zenith of his power the great horn between his eyes broke, and in its place four horns grew. Gabriel explains this as follows: "Now that (great horn—Alexander) being broken, whereas four stood up for it, four kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation, but not in his power." Now Daniel sees a little horn come up out of one of these four kingdoms, and grew to be exceeding great, and cast the sanctuary down and took away "the daily sacrifice." Now, right here is the main point of this prophecy. What has already been given is largely his historical ancestry, leading to the time when he shall appear.

Leader. You are correct, and if interpreters would pay more attention to this there need not be so much mystery enshrouding this prophecy. Albert, what does Daniel's interpreter say with regard to time?

Albert. He is clear in the matter. He says: "Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the last end of the indignation: for at the time appointed the end shall be."

Leader. Now, Carrie, what are we to understand by the words "last end?"

Carrie. Why that must certainly mean the last part, and if we would understand this prophecy we must note this point particularly in our study. The "little horn" is the burden of the prophecy relating to the "last end."

Leader. That is true. Lud, can we surely know when we arise at "the last end of the indignation?"

Lud. We can. The historical connection is accurate, and is so minutely given that both Daniel and especially the "wise," living in this age, may locate the "last end," and recognize him when he shall appear. The beginning of the "Last end," or last part of the indignation will be marked by the resurrection of the Lord's dead ones. See Isa. xxvi. 19-21: "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead. Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For, behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain." How precious the invitation: "Come my people," etc; at this time they will find of a truth, that our living Savior is a "shelter in the time of storm."

Leader. Such assurances are indeed comforting. Now, Arlon, does Daniel confirm Isaiah?

Arlon. Why, yes. At the time the little horn breaks his covenant in the "midst of the week," instead of being a "little horn," (a small power,) he will have become the "mighty king," and will persecute Israel. With regard to this Gabriel explains to Daniel, and says: "And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people: and there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time: and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in a book. And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt. And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars for ever and ever." Mighty events like the above, did not attach to popery after it had attained the zenith of its power; therefore, it could not be the little horn Gabriel has here described to Daniel.

Leader. I will ask Albert if Revelation says anything about this time of trouble spoken of in Daniel and Isaiah?

Albert. It does. Rev. vi. graphically describes it. Ver. 11, speaks of the first company which has been delivered, and given "white robes," and told that they must "rest" while their brethren are being tried which are left behind. Ver. 17, says: "the great day of his wrath is come." In chap. vii. we have the sealing of Israel, and verses 13, 14, gives the out-come of the trial of the brethren left behind, "And one of the elders answered, saying unto me. What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they? And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, These are they which come out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

These are "the saints" that are given into the hands of the "little horn" "king of fierce countenance," etc. "until the consummation." "even to the time of the end," "till the indignation be accomplished," until "the time came that he saints possessed the kingdom," covering a period of time known as a "time times and dividing of time," or "forty and two months," which are just three and a half literal years, when in his pride and arrogancy, he will even assume to "stand up against the Prince of princes; but he shall be broken without hand," whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming." It does seem to me that faithfulness to God's Word would forbid its application to popery.

Leader. How long a time will he be allowed to pollute the sanctuary? What is your opinion Elias?

Elias. In just "1290 days" "from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away," he will set up an abomination that will be very offensive to the Jews, and at the end of "1335 days," "then shall Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead. Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars for ever and ever." Mighty events like the above, did not attach to popery after it had attained the zenith of its power; therefore, it could not be the little horn Gabriel has here described to Daniel.

Leader. I will ask Albert if Revelation says anything about this time of trouble spoken of in Daniel and Isaiah?

Albert. It does. Rev. vi. graphically describes it. Ver. 11, speaks of the first company which has been delivered, and given "white robes," and told that they must "rest" while their brethren are being tried which are left behind. Ver. 17, says: "the great day of his wrath is come." In chap. vii. we have the sealing of Israel, and verses 13, 14, gives the out-come of the trial of the brethren left behind, "And one of the elders answered, saying unto me. What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they? And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, These are they which come out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

These are "the saints" that are given into the hands of the "little horn" "king of fierce countenance," etc. "until the consummation." "even to the time of the end," "till the indignation be accomplished," until "the time came that he saints possessed the kingdom," covering a period of time known as a "time times and dividing of time," or "forty and two months," which are just three and a half literal years, when in his pride and arrogancy, he will even assume to "stand up against the Prince of princes; but he shall be broken without hand," whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming." It does seem to me that faithfulness to God's Word would forbid its application to popery.

Leader. How long a time will he be allowed to pollute the sanctuary? What is your opinion Elias?

Elias. In just "1290 days" "from the time that the daily sacrifice

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 18, 1894. NO. 27.

The Restitution.

The Restitution affirms the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end this institution of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

your comfortable home and circumstances when you buy these or any of these I want you to recall this article and ask yourself "Am I doing as I would wish to be done by." The Lord will not prosper us so long as we persist in this course of conduct. The cause of Christ is crippled and stopped in many localities because you do not live up to your duties and privileges—especially your duties. "Another Beggar!" No not that my brother. I am not writing a begging article. I want to arouse you to the fact that you are unfaithful with your Lord's money. You are not your own, your time is not your own, your talents are not your own, and yet you have taken that which belongs to God and have used it or spent it in such a way that your actions if not your conscience are a witness against you. You have robbed God of the tenth and also of the free will offering. You have done more than that, you have by your action compelled your evangelist to pay your share of the money necessary to carry the gospel to your neighbors, and you rejoiced in their baptism at another's expense. You sat by your warm stove enjoying coffee or tea and a warm meal, while your preacher sat shivering in a railroad depot, eating a scanty 10 cent dinner of crackers and cheese bought at the corner grocery. While you were in bed dreaming of Paradise he was passing a sleepless night at the depot and bumping along in a freight train caboose, suffocated with tobacco smoke and sickened with obscene and vulgar profanity. While you are seated in a comfortable chair with your children about you and their soft hands caressing you, he is reading a letter from his little girl, and the tears come thick and fast as she says, "Papa, why don't you come home?" She cannot understand why he should be away so much, while the papas of her playmates should always be at home and every evening is so pleasant to them. "We are all so lonely without you," she continues, "and I would just let the preaching go and come home and we will meet you at the depot."

Do you wonder sometimes that his sermons are "troubling?" His thoughts are in that far away home. "Do they need my help, are they well and have they food and raiment?" These are the uppermost in his heart. There is no Aaron or Hur to hold up his hands; the battle turns against him and he is driven from the field, and who is to blame?

It is just so with our papers. One after another is driven out for want of support. A brother said the other day, "Why I can get the Inter Ocean for $1. per year and THE RESTITUTION is $1.50. Yes, just so. But is the Inter Ocean reading as valuable to you as the reading of THE RESTITUTION? But if there were a thousand pages in the Inter Ocean and every page crowded with the recital of incest, murder, rape, theft, railroad accidents, bank and express robberies and elopements, and you should read it all, what, I ask, will be your advancement in the Divine life? Has it renewed the spirit of the Master within so that your life has God's seal upon it? Is it not true that "like begets like" and the more you read of these things the more you will conform to them? No, my dear brother, these things are not profitable to you. But if in the religious paper you find one article which will lift you up and renew your thoughts and set you upon your feet toward the golden city and life eternal it will be cheap at $1.50. Money cannot buy a home in the kingdom of God. You may be poor in this world's goods, but if you are rich toward God you are sure at last to find a home in the everlasting kingdom. Duty to you is plain. You are the Lord's steward. Be faithful that he may say to thee "well done."

of" and "the conference meeting" was omitted" and yet it is headed "Conference Report."

If the report had been more full we think it would have afforded data from which we could gain information in regard to Evangelistic work that would serve as a guide to other states. For example the treasurer's report shows that $147 has been expended during the past quarter and yet three Evangelists have been at work and "each gave a report of his labors which was very encouraging." Now if those three evangelists ran work a quarter on less than $14 apiece and give an encouraging report, we would like very much to be let into the secret so that we might be able to do the same. If these evangelists received more for their labor it was not in the report if this is all they received it would far better never been put into type, for it certainly is enough to discourage any young man (or old either) from ever entering the work. If on the other hand these ministers work outside of the conference it shows a lack of business management on the part of the conference to hold these men—able men every one of them—and give them work, and remunerate them for that work.

Another conference reports "all the officers on duty," the attendance of workers large and filled with good thoughts. In this conference the two evangelists report 205 sermons, 9 funerals and about 7000 miles of travel by rail.

Now stop and consider. This is a vast amount of work. Also 18 were baptized. If one sermon was preached each day it required 214 days at 32 miles travel per day; that is to say the evangelist must travel 32 miles and preach one sermon and keep it up for 214 days without intermission. Now look upon the other side of this account, what do we pay for this work? One hundred and forty-seven big round silver dollars!!! Yes sir, just that! That $147 is to clothe him, buy fuel, food and all. Less than 70 cents per day for travelling 32 miles and preaching a sermon. If the Pullman strikers ever read this article they will be ashamed of their strike and think they are well off, as compared with a Michigan evangelist. If it be replied that these evangelists have an income outside of what we pay them, then my answer is so much more a shame to us, for then besides the above, we compel them to donate more to the work than the whole of us put together, for it will take more than twice $147 to keep two evangelists a year; and if they spend their time in preaching we compel them to give up more than all of us put together and make them do the work. Brethren, is this business? Is this justice? Have you no responsibility? Where is wisdom in all this? You all can quote "Be wise as serpents," but you do not all display that wisdom. If the state of things existed among the Israelites that now exists among us I do not wonder that God said to them "Ye have robbed me even this whole nation." And God declares that they had robbed him of the "tithes and offerings" that were his due. Are we not doing the same thing? When you go to the store and ask the grocer to give you a plug of tobacco or a paper of "Tom and Jerry" or "Durham" remember this article. When you buy a needless luxury—a glass of pop, or soda, or some candy or gum, or an extra flower or feather for the summer hat, think of the evangelist who went without the pop, the soda, the tobacco, the gum, the flowers for her hat, and even paid your share of the expense of traveling that 32 miles and that sermon that you heard the evening before and that you said was good, as you took a fresh chew of tobacco or looked with self-satisfaction at

Dear Brother Underwood:

This bright and balmy June morning I am seated under the Gospel Tent which is again pitched for the third time upon the old campground at Hickory Grove, Story Co., Iowa. THE RESTITUTION of June 20 has fallen into my hands and as I read its pages over I found many things in the line of Christian life and Christian work which commended themselves to my heart and conscience.

I also find some things which pain me when I read them and wish they could be otherwise.

I find in this number the report of two state conferences giving their work for the quarter for the year. One conference declares there was "no business to dispose

WE will be under obligation to anyone who can give us the present address of F. T. Wilson who lately lived at 917 W. Grand Ave. Des Moines, Iowa.

WE want all our young folks especially to see the following beautiful lines on beauty:

"Beautiful flowers are they that wear
The light of innocent spirit there:
Beautiful forms are those that do
Deeds that are noble, good and true;
Beautiful feet are those that go

ON Sunday evening the Church in Cleveland had a joyful season. Two more precious souls forsook all, and put on the Anointed One, after duly counting the cost. After years of experience in the Broad Religious way, they are now happy in the narrow way of life. Bro. and Sister Moore were both impressed with God's simple truth at the same time and together investigated its claims, and together obeyed the form of doctrine delivered to us; and, together may they contend for the faith once delivered to the saints till Jesus comes, and then hear him say, "Well done." A large number heard for the first time, what they must do to be saved,—being attracted by the notice of a baptismal service.

Signs of the Times.

The newly elected President of France is said to have been notified that he will have to go the ways of his predecessor. It might have been a presentiment of this that caused him to burst into tears of learning of his election.

The gravity of the situation in this country has vividly shown when one company of state troops refuses to charge rioters, and another turns over their arms and ammunition to the strikers.

Martial law has been proclaimed in Chicago after several bloody encounters, and the end is not yet.

Little or no freight is moving at Cleveland and business is paralyzed.

A gorgeous military, civic and industrial parade took place in Cleveland on the Fourth when the soldier's and sailor's monument was dedicated. It was said to be six miles long and must have cost many thousands of dollars. Floats elaborately decorated, and monster loads of flour and bread and groceries would indicate a land of plenty,—but all the same a child four years of age died of starvation in Cleveland within a week. This, too, is a sign of the times.

The Newcastle (England) Chronicle says it is noteworthy that while barbarous Russia and civilized Germany have been competing in rancorous hatred of the Jewish race, in England there has been quite a wave of pro-Jewish sentiment set in.

The Jewish Chronicle speaking of the Akka-Haifa-Hauran Damascus railway says it is a notable event of our day; that merchants and travellers in that country have long advocated the construction of railways in that fertile country, and are realizing their most cherished hopes; that the traffic from the central plains is far in excess of the camel-carrying power of the country; that this line is under British direction and encourages the hope that it will be a cheap and efficient transport, and stimulate the development of the country; and that it will vastly benefit the Jewish colonies which have been established within easy reaches of the road,—especially will this be the case with the first and very important colony of the Choveri Zion in the land of Bashan; that considerable progress has been made with the construction of the line.

The Rev. Herman Gollancz President of the Choveri Zion association recently said of the Jewish club that where these colonies had been planted with caution and prudently managed they were a success. It was true there were some hot-headed members who thought they should equip an army to reconquer Palestine for the Jewish people, but he said this policy would not only be fatuous but destructive of the very objects of the society. Let the Jews do their share in bringing about the word of prophecy and God would put his seal upon the work and bring it to pass in his own good time, he said. "A sage in Israel once said" There are true things which can only be obtained at the cost of great trouble and one of these is Palestine. That portion of prophecy had been fulfilled which predicted our dispersion consequent upon the destruction of the Temple and desolation of our country, why may we not hope that the other portion of the prophecy will be fulfilled which promised the return to Zion the rebuilding of the Temple and the restoration of Israel. Who does not derive comfort from the words of the prophet Zechariah which in spirit projected that the near view will catch some of the enthusiasm for Palestine manifested by the Jew, and help him to effect what may now be regarded by some as a dream, (but which we hope will become a reality) of the National idea in Judaism."

This is remarkable language from a Jewish Rabbi, and seems to show that hope in them is springing up. A Consular report on the trade and commerce of Jerusalem just issued from the British foreign office says that several companies have applied to the Sublime Porte for a concession to build a harbor at Jaffa, and it is expected it will soon be granted. It also says that buildings of various kinds continue to be erected in the vicinity of Jerusalem, and the city is fast out-growing its former limits. On the western side houses have increased so rapidly that a large suburb has arisen where formerly fields and vineyards existed. Every available piece of land is now being bought up by private persons or by benevolent societies and missions, and already the name of "Modern Jerusalem" has been given to this new quarter.

Brethren, keep your eyes on the Holy Land, and be sure to secure the blessing pronounced upon those who pray for the peace of Jerusalem.

Josephiteism. No. 2.

WHAT WE THINK OF IT, AND WHY.

Before giving other reasons for our opinion of this ism, we wish to say that one of its defenders writes to say that he is sorry that he cannot address us as brethren, those who believe in the miraculous conception of Jesus, or to that effect. In reply to this, we say, while we appreciate his kind regard, we beg him not to trouble himself on our account, because, if that be his test of fellowship, we are very thankful not to be worthy of it; and thankful, too, that he sees that he has believed another gospel, and cherishes another hope, and draws the line straight. This is far preferable to the mawkish way of some others.

Another experience was, that an article was sent for us to read; and, we suppose, to ensure our perusal of it, a check on a bank in Pennsylvania for one dollar was closed with it. It was sent by a women, who said it was written by a friend; but whoever the writer was, it contained the abominable suggestion of Tom Paine about Mary and the Holy Ghost. The Almighty dollar was returned with the article, and a slight dose of medicine that seemed to be called for. To all such we say, "Thy money perish with thee."

Another writer of this school says "the story of the supernatural begettal of Jesus is one of those lying wonders, or rather wonderful lies, which, as Paul also foretold many would believe to their destruction, and because they would not receive the truth apostolically delivered to them, but preferred rather to believe these cunningly devised fables of the apostacy, God gave them up to their delusions that they should believe the lie, that they might be condemned who believe not the truth, but took pleasure in believing what was not true." There is no mistaking this language,—and we much prefer this kind of talk to the goody-goody kind. But another reason for our opinion of Josephiteism as given in our No. 1 is, that it openly declares Jesus to have been a sinner; that he was baptized for the remission of his sins. "And if he did not need it, it was simply a mockery and a sham." That he felt he was not perfectly clean before God and went down into the water in obedience to his Father's commands, and washed away the faults of his youth."

Our readers will bear in mind that the Word of the Spirit in Heb. ix. 22 informs us that it is a principle in the economy of God, that there is no remission of sin without the shedding of blood; and the context proves it had ever been thus, it was not a recent enactment; and in the 13th verse we learn that the blood of bulls and goats only purified the flesh, and were emblematic (v. 23) of the blood of Christ (v. 14) which was calculated to purge the conscience, because through the eternal spirit he offered himself without spot to God.

Josephites being authority in this matter, we have first to deal with a SPOTTED CHRIST. These witnesses tell us that during all the years that elapsed from David to Jesus, God was working to impregnate Israel, his wife, with the seeds of truth and justice, so her children be righteous, or his children, but with special reference to the one who was to be ruler, or head of his people. They say he gave them promises calculated to stir up in them a strong desire to live godly, so they might obtain the rewards... And must have had a great influence on the descendants of David, by way of stimulating them to overcome evil." Taking it for granted from the Josephite standpoint, that Joseph was the very best specimen among David's descendants, we suppose they hold that God concluded to risk the scheme of redemption upon him (Joseph). Joseph should beget the Redeemer.

The Lamb of Joseph was born, but it was a complete failure. God was mistaken altogether in Joseph. The Joseph Lamb, instead of being what the type called for,—without blemish,—very soon showed sin-spots; and pray how could Joseph with spots all over him, beget a son without spots? Does not like beget like?

Now, we ask, what had God gained by the effort of ages to impregnate Israel his wife with Truth so as to develop a Savior? Nothing at all. Matters are worse than at the beginning. There was only one spot upon Adam, but it brought death and entailed a thousand ills, and now, here is the son of Joseph intended to be the second Adam, with we do not know how many spots; and far more in need of a Savior than Adam the First.

Oh what a blundering God these Josephites have; and he learns nothing by experience either. Commonsense might have taught their God that a clean thing could not come out of an unclean, and so saved all his futile efforts. But they make him blunder again and again to cover up old blunders. Joseph, after special training to beget a son for God to ADOPT, actually begat a seed of the serpent; one spotted by sin; and then as if almost discouraged, concludes to have him washed in water to take out the spots, and make serve the purpose somehow, if he was the serpent's seed.

Yes, we are astonished at the stupidity of the Josephite God. If washing in water would take out a number of sin-spots on Christ—why did he not have Adam's spot removed the same way before he had done any mischief?

It was another stupendous blunder to forget that without the shedding of blood there is no forgiveness of sins. Do we not read that the blood of Jesus Christ his (God's) Son cleanseth us from all sin? 1 John i. 7; and that we are redeemed by his blood, Rev. v. 9? —the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish, and without spot, 1 Pet. i. 19? The alleged son of Joseph is put before us spotted by sin; where is the precious blood to redeem him? By the Josephite showing he needed a Savior as much as any child of Adam. Where was his Savior to come from? Where was precious blood to redeem him to be found? If his own blood was tainted by sin he could not redeem himself; his own blood was no more precious than that of any other man if he was a sinner? And thus Josephites would rob us of the redemption which is in Christ Jesus by making him a sinner in the face of a divine testimony that he did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth." 1 Pet. ii. 22. A diabolical business to be engaged in, surely! As in all human attempts to doctor the divine system of truth, the slimy trail of the serpent is traceable in this. One false position involves lies and contradictions at every turn, to support it. A striking instance we have in the fact that the prominent Josephite writer already referred to, says Jesus felt his weakness, nothingness and uncleanness, and had to wash away the sins, faults and short-comings of his youth,—Peter saying that he was "the Son of God because he was the Son of promise, and the true holy Seed of the Woman." Think of a faulty, unclean man being the Son of God because he was the Son of promise and the true holy Seed of the Woman, if yes can, and you will begin to see some of the advantages of Josephiteism. Then again he who was thus required to be baptized for the remission of his sins is on another page said to be "The Son of David as promised; and, holy, harmless, undefiled [separate from sinners is omitted] and followed God with all his heart mind, soul and strength." A holy son of unholy Joseph!

This writer exhibits more of the beauties (?) of his system when he says of Jesus "In complying with this form (baptism) appointed by God he found acceptance, and approval (he was neither accepted nor approved before)—"This is my beloved Son;" while the preceding sentence makes God his father before baptism; for it says he "went down into the water in obedience to his father's commands and washed away the faults of his youth;" unless, indeed, he means Joseph ordered him to be baptised.

Another person by letter, says, "he became a Son of God by the spirit of holiness by the resurrection from the dead." We submit that they should find out what they themselves believe, and why they believe it, before they go before the public if they want to make converts; but it might subserve the cause of truth to have them parade their crudities.

For instance, they teach that Adam was the father, and Eve the mother of the serpent's seed, as well as the Woman's Seed—explained of a good and bad class of their children. The folly of this expedient is seen when it is remembered that like begets like. If Adam's children were the serpent's seed, then of a surety Adam was the serpent; and if the serpent, he could not beget children of God, as the Seed of the Woman are supposed to be. We have a pamphlet from Buffalo, N. Y. showing Adam was the serpent that beguiled Eve.

In their haste to teach some new thing they seem oblivious of the principle admitted later on, viz: impregnation with words of truth; and write as if one class were born serpent-seed and the other woman-seed respectively, for 2000 years at least; their theory admits of no gospel for that time. Strange they have never read the apostolic announcement that "all have sinned;" and that therefore justification and consequent separation into two classes was brought about by faith in a Word of promise believed or rejected in every age. So much for the blinding effect of Josephiteism.

Another Josephite writer of prominence says he does "not believe the Mosaic sacrifices were intended to typify the death of Christ;" and we offer this as another reason for our opinion as stated,—the above declaration is supported by what proves the writer ignorant of the first principles of the gospel, and essentially an infidel.

☞ It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

A Symposium of Faith.

Under the above heading the Conference Board of the Church of God in Iowa, sent out about one hundred of the following circular letters, which explains itself, and received the following replies many of which were read at their conference greatly to edification. And as means for publication in book form were short a vote was taken that these letters be placed in my hands to be sent to THE RESTITUTION office for publication, and here I comply.

G. M. MYERS.

THE CIRCULAR LETTER.

We are desirous of a symposia of our Faith as stated by 100 of our leading brethren and sisters throughout the nation: 1st. That we may read it for edification before our Conference which convenes at Nevada, Iowa, from June 7 to 17, 1894: and 2d, That we may put in book form, a copy of which will be sent you when the book is issued, at some date this coming summer or fall. In writing your faith observe the following points:

1. Write it out on foolscap, or legal-cap paper, and write on one side only.

2. Write clearly or plainly so that it may be easily read.

3. Study your subject well and analyze it so that your statements may be clear, comprehensive and not too long, not covering more than two pages of manuscript.

4. Do not write negatively, nor discuss any point, or question anybody else's views, but state your points of faith affirmatively. Give just what you believe.

5. Limit your statement to ten points, no more.

6. Make no Scriptural quotations, and cite no more than three texts by book, chapter and verse in support of any point.

Please observe these points, as our aim is to be brief, clear, and comprehensive. Prepare your article and forward to our Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. A. J. Eychaner, Gladbrook, Iowa, by May 25, 1894.

Yours in Christ,
THE IOWA CONFERENCE BOARD, CHURCH OF GOD.

The Iowa Conference Board, Church of God:

Dear Brothers and Sisters, you ask for a brief statement of what I believe. But in the space allowed I can only state in part as follows:

1. I believe there is one God who created all things, by, in, or through his Word, John i. 3, or Son, Col. ii. 16; Heb. ii. 10, including Man, male and female, who though made of dust, was made in the image of God, and God placed him at the head of creation, subjecting all things under him, and put him in a beautiful garden containing abundance of fruit of every kind, with the privilege of eating freely of every kind, excepting only one, of that one kind he must not eat, or he would surely die.

2. But the serpent deceived the woman, so that she ate of that one forbidden fruit, and gave of it to her husband so that he ate also! Thus they fell, and God judged them the same day, passing sentence on 1st the serpent, 2nd the woman, and 3rd the man,—which sentence has and is being literally executed, for we still see the enmity between the two seeds, and the woman's seed still puts its heel on the serpent's head. The woman's sorrows in bringing forth children continue and man still returns to dust. And if God had found no remedy those things would ever be the same. But,

3. God had mercy! Adam had failed, but God so loved the world he had made, that was "very good" that he determined he would some time in the then future give or send his Son, who would not fail. And meantime he accepts offerings or sacrifices from the fallen ones,—these sacrifices typifying the coming "Lamb of God," and thus was Christ "slain from the foundation of the world."

4. This Coming One was looked for and expected from that time on. At the birth of Cain, Eve thought she had gotten a man the Lord. So Enoch "the Lord cometh" etc., Jude 14. Abraham, Moses, David, and all the prophets, died in faith looking for the coming of the Lord, Christ, (anointed) or Christ the Lord. And at the birth of Jesus the angel of the Lord was he first to inform the shepherds that there is born a Savior who is Christ the Lord. About thirty years later, John is heard proclaiming glad tidings, and points out Jesus as the Lamb of God who takes away the sins of the world.

5. Following John, came Jesus himself proclaiming the good news of the kingdom of God—"Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," by which is meant the restoration of the kingdom of Israel. The mighty works performed by Jesus were to convince the Jews that he was sent of God to be their King—that he was "the Christ the Son of the living God." But as a nation they rejected him,—would not acknowledge him as their King, but crucified him! mailed him to the cross on which he died, but God raised him again from the dead, and he now lives at the right hand of his Father in heaven. But before or at his ascension,

6. He commanded the apostles to go into all the world and proclaim the same gospel they had been preaching, to every creature, with another item added,—they are now to proclaim that Jesus is the Christ. Hitherto they had not done this. Matt. xvi. 20.

7. Those who believed the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus the Christ, as proclaimed by the apostles were baptized for the remission of sins, and thus became members of Christ as formed the Church of God.

8. It is the duty and privilege of these believers to meet together on each first-day of the week to break the loaf,—(Lord's Supper) read the Scriptures, exhort one another to love and good works, and so edify each other and at all times as opportunity occurs, according to the ability of each, to tell the good news to their friends and neighbors, thus holding forth the Word of Life in order that others may be saved.

9. When the Lord comes he will raise the sleeping saints and change the living ones, giving them bodies like his own glorious body, who will share with him in the government as joint-rulers with him in judging or ruling the world in righteousness, from his throne on Mt. Zion in Jerusalem forever. The wicked will be cut off and be no more.

10. The twelve tribes, now scattered, will return to their own land as subjects, where and when they will greatly multiply and increase, and the kingdom will spread till it embraces all nations under the whole heavens, Dan. vii. 27, and under the benign government of Christ and his saints the whole creation will be delivered from the bondage of corruption, and the whole earth will be filled with God's glory, and God's will will be done on earth as it is in heaven.

And now dear brethren may we ever be found worthy to share in the glory with our Lord, is the sincere desire of yours in hope,

GEORGE ELTON.

1. I believe that there is one God, who is Creator and Ruler of all things. Acts xvii. 24–29.

2. That Jesus, the Christ, born of the Virgin Mary, is the Son of the true and ever living God. Matt. xvii. 16.

3. That Jesus Christ tasted death for every man, Heb. ii. 9; and therefore every man will be benefitted by his death. 1 Tim. iv. 10.

4. That man is wholly mortal, Job iv. 17–9; and that immortality can only be obtained by a resurrection from death to immortal life, or by a change in the living from the corruptible to the incorruptible nature, at the future coming of Jesus Christ, 1 Cor. xv. 42–44.... 51–54, after having developed a godly character by obedience to God's law. John v. 29.

5. That Jesus Christ will come, in the near future, personally, to the earth, Acts i. 11, where he will establish his kingdom, Dan. vi. 13, 14; Matt; xxv; 31–34; 2 Tim. iv. 1, and continue his reign in righteousness, with the saints of this and past ages as his subordinate rulers, until all evil, and the last enemy of the human family shall be destroyed, after which time Christ the Son, will deliver up the kingdom to God, the Father, that God may be all in all, the King of kings and Lord of lords, Rev. v. 9, 10; 1 Cor. xv. 25, 26, 28; 1 Tim. vi. 15.

6. That the earth, in its redeemed state, will be the eternal home of the saints of all ages, Psa. xxxvii. 29; Prov. x. 30; Matt. v. 5.

7. That Christ, the last Adam, will restore to the human family all that was lost through the disobedience of the first Adam, 1 Cor. xv. 22; Jer. xxxi. 23, 30; and that every one born into the world shall have a full opportunity to accept the offer of salvation, redemption from sin and all of its sad consequences, John i. 9; Rom. ii. 11.

8. That, under the law of Christ, Faith in God, and in Jesus Christ, his Son, Heb. xi. 6, Repentance (reformation from sinful ways) and baptism (immersion in water) are prerequisites to the remission of sins, Acts ii. 38; and a consistent Christian life thereafter as essential to gain life everlasting and a crown of glory in the kingdom of God. 2 Pet. i. 5–11.

9. That, as the ruling principle in God is love, 1 John iv. 8, we as his children, should cultivate and develope more love for God, for truth and for humanity, and make it the prompting motive of our every act in the walks of life. Rom. xii. 9; xiii. 10.

10. That the members of Christ's body should meet, as oft as convenient and partake of the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of our Lord, in commemoration of his suffering and death. 1 Cor. xi. 25, 26.

L. E. CONNER.

1. There is one God and Father of all. Eph. iv. 6; 1 Cor. viii. 6; Deut. iv. 35.

2. One Lord Jesus Christ, who died for the sins of the whole world. 1 John ii. 2; St. John i. 29; 1 Tim. ii. 6.

3. That all will be brought into harmony with the Father. 1 Tim. ii. 4; John iii. 17; xii. 32; Eph. i. 9–10.

4. That God is now calling out the instrumentalities by which he will in the ages to come accomplish his great design. Gal. iii. 16, 29, 8 v, Acts iii. 25; Gen. xxii. 18.

5. That God has power and all knowledge, and therefore he will accomplish all his purposes. Eph. i. 9, 10, 11; Isa. xlvi. 10; xiv. 24–27.

6. That in order to the remission of sin we must believe in God and his Son, Jesus Christ. Repent and be baptized in water in his name. Acts ii. 38; xxii. 16.

7. That the kingdom of God will be established on the Earth which God designed to be the eternal home of man. Dan. vii. 14–27; Prov. x. 30.

I have not time to write any more as I have so much to do just at this time.

Respectfully submitted. Your Brother, waiting for the Master.

A. HEPNER.

I believe in one God, the Creator of all things.

I believe that Jesus of Nazarath was, and is the Messiah, the Son of the Living God. That he is the one that is to redeem his people from (death the effect of) their sins by a resurrection or change at his coming and kingdom, by the power delegated to him by the Father.

That in order to share in the blessings of the kingdom in the future, it is necessary to believe in the Gospel or Good News of the coming and kingdom of our Lord and Savior, Jesus the Messiah.

Repentance and immersion into his name for the remission of sins, and a holy life as essential for an admission into the kingdom.

ALEX. WILLIAMS.

I believe in the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations. Also the restoration of Israel, and a literal resurrection of the dead, the righteous to be made immortal and the final destruction of the wicked.

We obtain eternal life only through Christ, also a gospel belief in repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, also a godly life is essential that we may obtain salvation.

His Coming.

"I daily long for his appearing, and frequently look up as I sit by my window toward the Eastern sky, hoping to see the King in His Beauty."—Extract from a Letter.

I sit by my window and listen,
While the mists of the morning go by,
That I may catch the first glimpse of his coming;
May meet the bright glance of his eye.
And day after day, as the hour-tide,
Is marked on the all of the door,
While the tired men rest in the shadows,
And the sunlight plays on the floor.

I list for the sound of his chariot,
I wait for the light of his smile,
For the coming in glory of him
Who tarrieth the "little while."
I sit on the door-step at evening,
A maiden is singing hard by—
I hear the sweet laughter of children,
And the thrush's musical flow.

The night-birds are trilling the chorus,
Of all the glad notes of the day,
And mingled with these are the voices,
Of strangers far away;
For deep through the beautiful gloaming
My eyes are gazing afar,
To catch the first glimpse of the rising
Of Bethlehem's magical star.

The star that shall herald the coming
Of Jesus—the hope of the world:
Ah! none but the watchers will see it,
The watchers with lanterns unfurl'd
So I watch at morn and at evening;
I question my heart all the day,
Will he come at midnight or noon-tide?
And why does he longer delay.

Are the garments he gave me all stainless?
The lamp brightly trimmed in my room;
My hands busy clothing the needy?
Flinging joys flying threads through my loom?
Shall I hear the low call of the Master?
—Oh visions of glory, go by!
The Bride is all spotless in beauty,
Unworthy, unworthy am I!

But onward, the watchers are marching,
And closer the foeman they press;
Back! back! to thy station and arm thee,
Near by are the mansions of rest!
Be no doubt in thy heart of the issue,
Keep close to thy duty and truth,
The blood of the Master hath bought thee,
With life is unchangeable youth.

Hid with him are the lives of the children,
Not the rack nor the flame can destroy;
No tidals nor sorrows may move them,
They wait for Eternity's joy.
So I sit by my window and listen,
While the mists of the morning go by,
That I may catch the first sound of his coming,
May meet the bright glance of his eye.

The Oxford Conference.

To the brethren and sisters scattered abroad over Kansas and Oklahoma—greeting. Yes, and to those outside of Kansas and Oklahoma also. This conference is located near the county line between Cowley and Sumner, which are border counties, making it very convenient for the brethren in Kansas and also Oklahoma, to meet together and hold a general good meeting. Brethren and sisters we do not ask you to go to Jerusalem to worship, but we do ask you in the name of our Master to come to this meeting, and come with your hearts full of the love of God, so that you can share in the good works and in the blessings. We as a people, for some cause, are more or less isolated and scattered abroad, and as a consequence are lonely. Well this meeting is designed for such people, now let us enjoy it. These are trying times on our faith, and we need all the encouragement possible, then let us not neglect this opportunity to assemble ourselves together, to exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching. Brethren, if your faith and hope were as bright and strong as they should be, it would require no urging to do our duty. Then brethren we desire to meet you and to greet you, to see your faces, and hear your voices, and to get acquainted with you. We need your presence and your counsel in the cause of our blessed Master, who is soon coming to call us to account. What are we doing, are we laboring in his vineyard, or are we idle, being engrossed with the cares of this life? The time is short for the meeting and for eternity. Let us improve the time while we may. Then in conclusion brethren, let me say to you who can if you will, get ready and come to the meeting, show your faith by your works, and to those brethren who cannot come, we say write a letter of encouragement and put in your wishes, faith and hope, and send it to the brethren assembled in conference at Oxford, Kansas. Begin at once, and may God's blessing attend every effort put forth in the right direction to advance the blessed cause of God our heavenly Father, and of his Son Jesus Christ, who has done so much for us. Amen.

A Warning.

Sceptics object to faith, but our Savior gives us something that we can see; and tells us to look up when we do see them. In Matt. xxiv. 6, we have a positive and distinct landmark.

"And ye shall hear of wars, and rumors of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet."

For the last twenty years there has been more rumors, more desperate efforts, more legislative action, more fearful forebodings, in anticipation of impending war; uneasy has lain each head that wears a crown; than in any other period of the world's history; in the absence of actual warfare.

All classes and conditions of men were fearfully "troubled," yet with all this tremendous preparation, this crushing taxation, these amazing engines of war; in 1824 "the end is not yet." Less prospects of immediate war than a year ago. Who took the Savior's warning? I know I did not.

Something else that every body is looking at just now. Luke xxi. 26. "Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth."

While we are now passing out of the war "rumors" period; we are in the "men's hearts failing them" as never before in the world's history. But, oh, that word "world." How blinding!!

The word our Savior used oikoumene, is from oikos house; therefore had no reference to earth or world; but to household affairs, or the economies of the world, which Webster says is from the same word. Walker spells it œconomy.

Why this tremendous abnormal condition of everything? Lack of confidence; let Jesus answer, "For fear and for looking after those things which are coming on the economies:" it is that and nothing else; no war, no famine, no pestilence. Did he speak as never man spake?

There is only one word in all the languages of earth that exactly describes the present condition of the whole industry of the world and our Lord and Savior used that word; in plain English economics.

Here then is another landmark, that all can see.

AMENDED REPORT.

Editor Restitution:

I have just to-day, June 28th, opened The Restitution, dated 27th ist, and read our secretary's report of our annual conference, and find it not full enough, and therefore, wish to amend it as follows:

1. By vote the essays read at our conference by Miss E. N. Kinsey, of Shell Rock, and by Sister R. J. Hill, read by Sister Palmer, were to be published, together with Brother and Sister Stella's, and Sister Wince's letters.

2. The report on the Educational Fund reads, "Expended during the year $57.10." This should read $07.10, as G. M. Myers has donated to the young lady attending school her tuition, which is $40, and has also furnished her tuition for the coming year, which she has in her possession.

3. By vote certificates of Christian character, aptness, and ability, to teach were issued to Bro. John Gurton, Marathon; O. J. Allard, Eagle Grove; P. B. Stella, 1422 10th St, Des Moines, and to Sister Libbie Palmer, Aldon, and Etta Applegard, Odebolt. These we commend to our brotherhood.

4. At our last session one C. W. Russell, who had been with us from the beginning of the meeting and had done good work as a proclaimer of the truth, presented himself for membership in our conference, and gave us a letter of commendation from the Garfield Congregation of the Christian Church, Chicago, and for further reference as to character gave us the name of Bros. Chas. Gardner and H. V. Reed, Chicago. It was voted that a letter of inquiry be sent to those brethren, and if report was favorable, that thereon a certificate be issued to Bro. Russell. The letters have been sent and the following has been received from Bro. Gardner:

Bro. G. M. Myers:

I think you will find Chas. W. Russell a good Christian brother, and one whom you can tie to. We think him endowed with the Spirit of the gospel, and fitted to do good work in the field, and I have known him a number of years.

Yours in the faith.

Chas Gardner.

P. S. He is not a reed though to be shaken by every wind of doctrine. C. G.

The certificate has this day been made and forwarded to Bro. Russell, who is in connection with Bro. Everhaner, with the tent near Colo., and as above we commend Bro. Russell to your confidence.

G. M. Myers.

To the Household of Faith, in Indiana, and elsewhere, Greeting:

You will all rejoice with us to know that since we bade good-bye to the loved ones in Indiana, six dear names have been added to heaven's roll call, six precious souls have taken the life-giving name upon themselves, starting for the Kingdom of God. Their names are, Alfred Harper, Sisters Nehron, Oswolt, and Sisters Dora, Berta, and Minnie Happle, the three last all young ladies. To God be all the praise. We are so rejoiced that a few are ready to forsake all and follow Jesus, but the burden is so heavy on our souls for more, more. For many years Sister Harper has toiled and prayed almost alone, only two or three of the faith in their neighborhood, the society around bitterly opposed to the truth, but she has proved herself "strong in the Lord" and she can look toward heaven and rejoice, for the husband she has so long prayed for has been admitted into the King's family along with five other precious ones. The Elder baptized them all two weeks ago, to God be all the praise. Many that we have labored with, entreated kindly, plead with earnestly, prayed for repeatedly, and when asked concerning the future will invariably reply, "I do mean to make a start before long, but I am not quite ready yet." Dear souls, you are going to put it off too long. Do you not hear sounds of war, of hungry cries, of misery and woe, everywhere? We no longer listen for the echoes of distant thunderings of musketry. It is in our very midst. We seem to be just in the waiting time, when we may "Lift up our heads and rejoice for our redemption draweth near." O with what a watchful, prayerful, attitude ought we to live. No halting, no sleeping, no hating of brother or sister, or neighbor, or friend. If there is any hatred in our hearts in mercy's name root it out quickly, for Christ cannot, will not stay while his enemy has a lodgement there. Cannot we bear a little when our sweet Life Giver bore so much without one thought of hatred. O dear hearts, meet and speak with all. Make every wrong right, for we have no time to sour our lives and those around us with hard thoughts, let us rather spend our time in doing some good, be it ever so small, it will brighten some one's life and make your little world a better, happier place.

We had a very pleasant time at Old Antioch. The attendance was very large, but all the time no matter where we turned, the sad thought was ever present—O those empty places that such a little while ago were filled with those we loved. Sobs and sighs of grief fell on our ears many times during that three days meeting, and we could only cry out with the beloved John "Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

We spoke three evenings to the Argos brethren, and one sister came forward and took the right hand of fellowship. She had been immersed some time before.

From there we went to Plymouth where we enjoyed an hour with the faithful ones in their prayer meeting. Be faithful dear hearts, there may be discouragements but the lead-light is always bright, for it is carried by the Son of God. And now dear ones of the faith, once more we ask you all to pray for the toilers in the vineyard and for the dear Lambs of the flock, that we may all have grace sufficient for the days in which we are living.

Yours with love.

The Apostle Paul on Immortality.

The following summary of the writings of the Apostle Paul on the subject of immortality shows the wide difference between the modern views and the views of the writers of the Scriptures:—

1. The apostle Paul is the only writer in the whole Bible, who makes use of the word immortal or immortality.

2. He never applies it to sinners.

3. He never applies it to either righteous or wicked in this world.

4. He never applies it to men's souls at all, either before or after death.

5. He speaks of [illegible] of the King Eternal. 1 Tim. i. 17.

6. He declares that this King Eternal is the only possessor of it. 1 Tim. vi. 16.

7. He presents it as an object which men are to seek after by patient continuance in well-doing. Rom. ii. 7.

8. He speaks of it as revealed or brought to light (not in heathen philosophy but,) in the gospel of the Son of God. 2 Tim. i. 10.

9. He defines the period when it shall be "put on" by the saints of God, and fixes it at the resurrection, when Christ who is our life shall appear. 1 Cor. xv. 52, 53; Col. iii. 4.

10. Therefore he never taught the immortality of the soul as it is now taught, and hence, when he declared that sinners should be destroyed, or perish, or die, or be burned up or devoured by fire, he did so without any "mental reservations," or "theological definitions." In other words, he said what he meant, and meant what he said."—Pauline Theology, Selected by T. E. Adams.

The Tobacco using Preacher.

The following selection is so good, and to the point; that we copy and send it to The Restitution for insertion, feeling that all religious papers should copy and give it to their readers. My brother, my sister, I beg you to read it carefully, and if you are not ready to give it up, then let me advise you to stop and gaze for three minutes at a man or woman (for southern women use the weed) that is an expert chewer, and if you are not disgusted and can see nothing wrong and heathenish about the habit, then I pray you, to turn your eyes to Calvary, and behold that pure, innocent Son of God, who was our pattern, our example, in whom the Father is well pleased. See his life of self-denial, nothing, NOTHING, that he did or said that was wrong, and may the eyes of your understanding be opened to discern between the holy and unholy, between the filthy and the clean and righteous Son of God. Be in haste, for soon the King's Son is coming for his Bride. Is she ready? Rev. xix. 7.

T. E. Adams.

"A country minister being invited to preach the weekly lecture to a congregation in the city of New York, after dismissing the people, took out his tobacco and began to chew the filthy weed. A member of the church remonstrated with him on the sinfulness of the practice and stated that he could not expect impenitent sinners under his instructions would give up their sins while he indulged in a sin himself.

"I know it is wrong," said the minister. "I have often resolved to give up the habit, but I have not resolution enough to persevere."

"Why," said the other, "that is the very excuse the impenitent give for not repenting and forsaking their sins."

"Well, I'll think it over as I go home," observed the minister, "and perhaps I will give it up."

"That will not do," replied the church-member, "for we never allow this if we can help it; we exhort the impenitent to repent on the spot; we never tell them to go home and repent, nor do we pray that they may repent when they reach home."

"I see" said the minister, "I cannot get away, so—therefore, I will try to give up chewing."

"But," remarked the other, "that will not do either. We never urge sinners to try to give up their sins—do you?"

"Why no; I think it wrong to intimate that they cannot do it at once."

"Will you act then as you preach, or let your conduct give the lie to your preaching?"

"With the help of God," said the minister, "I will leave off the practice from this moment."

A member of the church where this conversation took place, who was in the practice of chewing tobacco, was so impressed with what had taken place that he too solemnly promised to abjure the filthy habit without delay.

Whom will the Lord find Ready and Waiting?

"Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as you see him going into heaven." "He shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe in that day."

Are we really anxious for the coming of our Savior? and have we made the necessary sacrifice so that we may be counted worthy of so great a blessing as a home in God's kingdom? When we believed did we obey from the heart that form of doctrine delivered to us? The truth shall make you free! Jesus saith: "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh to the Father but by me." "I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out and find pasture." "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Truly, Christ is the door of the sheep, and baptism is the way into Christ. The Savior himself says: "Why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say? Whosoever cometh to me, and heareth my sayings, and doeth them, I will show you to whom he is like: he is like a man which built an house, and digged deep, and laid the foundation on a rock: and when the flood arose the stream beat vehemently upon that house, and could not shake it: for it was founded upon a rock." "This is the stone which is become the head of the corner! Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." See Acts ii. 38; x. 43, 47; xix. 5; Gal. iii. 27; 1 Jno. v. 11.

He that entereth in by the door, (which is Christ) into the sheepfold, shall be saved, and shall go in and out and find pasture. Paul says: "I delivered unto you first of all, (or among the chief things) that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures: and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures." Then, if we are baptized into Jesus Christ, we are baptized into his death: that is, we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall also be raised in the likeness of his resurrection. This is the wise part: in God's own appointed way put on Christ, who is the resurrection and the life, and like the early Christians, "constantly attend to the teaching of the apostles, and to the contribution, and to the breaking of the loaf, and to the prayers." "Bear each other in mind, for an incitement of love and good works; not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as is a custom with some; but exhorting to it, and so much the more as you see the day showing near." (Diaglott) Be righteous before God, like Zacharias and Elizabeth of old: "who walked in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless."

"There is now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit." "For as many as are led by the spirit of God, they are sons of God."

Thus if we have been married to him who is raised from the dead, we should bring forth fruit unto God. Thus shall we glorify our heavenly Father, and become the disciples of our blessed Savior. "Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth: for ye are dead (to sin), and your life is hid with Christ in God." For here we have no continuing city, but we seek one to come. See Rev. xxi. 2-4. The Lord speaks from heaven: "As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten, be zealous therefore and repent." "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." "Behold I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." "Behold I come quickly and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." Oh, transporting thought! all the pains and ills of life will then have passed away. These trembling tottering limbs will be endowed with endless vigor.

The tongue once dumb shall sing glad praise to its Deliverer, the sightless eyes will behold and admire him who is alive forevermore. Blessed Jesus, we know that when thou shalt appear, we shall be like thee. Glorious promise! is it not worth striving and watching and waiting for? and, with the aged and beloved apostle, we earnestly say: come quickly, Lord Jesus.

Disciple.

Dear Restitution:

As we have just had a conference meeting at our church we thought we would write a few lines to the paper.

Brother Hudler and Brother Conner were with us during the meeting, and on Monday after the conference Brother Hudler baptized five. He has been preaching for us about nine months, and during that time he has baptized thirteen. He is a faithful worker, and the Lord will reward him for his good work. We had the pleasure of meeting some of the brothers and sisters from abroad at this meeting.

Your Sisters in the love of Christ, and hope of the coming King.

Sadie & Birdie Neale.

Editor Restitution:

Please say through The Restitution that I will be at Gospel Grove the 4th Sunday in July, to commence Saturday night before. The 5th Sunday at New Hope School House, Edgar Co. Ill., as Azorah Scroggs may appoint. 1st Sunday in August at Dudley, Ill., to commence on Friday evening before. Second Sunday in August at Belleville, Ind.

J. S. Hatch.

Dear Restitution:

I have the pleasure to introduce to you a new brother and sister, Wm. Noll and wife. They were baptized by the writer. May they never regret the step they have taken, and ever remain strong and steadfast in the faith, and grow in grace and the knowledge of the truth. May each day find them living nearer the Savior. We also desire an interest in the prayers of all who are in Christ, that I may remain faithful to the end. How my heart leaps for joy to see the dear souls walk out with their eyes open, and say with a sorrowful heart, I am tired of sin, I will follow the example set by Christ, our Redeemer to a dying world. May they be able to follow that example and gain the prize offered to the faithful, is the prayer of a brother in Christ.

James T. Hedden.

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed please find $2.15, $1.50 to pay my subscription for one year and 50 cents to help some one not able to pay, and 15 cents for a book.

The weekly visits of the paper are met with greeting by the writer who is so situated as to seldom hear the truth preached, or have the pleasure of conversing with one of like precious faith.

I would ask an interest in the prayers of all the faithful, and hope we may all meet where sorrow and weeping will be no more, joy and gladness will fill the whole earth, and "Righteousness will be the girdle of our loins." At that time strikes and lock-outs will be a thing of the past. There will be no more rioting or bloodshed, no more calling for State Militia or U. S. Marshals, no more quibbling over the tariff or silver question. These things belong to this age to fulfill the Gentile time.

"Even so, come Lord Jesus and come quickly."

Yours in hope of a crown.

P. H. Oatman.

Announcement.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Kansas, will be held three miles northeast of Oxford, in Cowley County, at Bro. Thomas Jackson's schoolhouse. This meeting will last about ten days, commencing August the tenth, 1894. There is some important business to transact. Business meeting will be on Saturday at two o'clock p. m. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can, bring tents and come prepared to camp. The brethren at Oxford are wholesouled, hospitable folks, but it is too much for women to have to work all the time and get no good of the meetings, so let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master. The commotion of the world indicates his coming is very near. All speaking brethren wishing any information correspond with Bro. S. C. Oliver, Attica, Kan. A full program will be published in due time.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Luke xvi. 19.

The direct teaching of Christ in harmony with Moses and the prophets, is the standard to which all our interpretations are to be referred, and by which they are to be measured. The context to this parable of our Lord shows him in conflict with the covetous Pharisees so that they derided him, verse 14. How natural that he should reply to them by a parable in which their future misery is so forcibly depicted. That this parable is spoken in reference to a particular party is evident from the opening words of our Lord. There was a certain rich man. There was a certain beggar. The description of the rich man arrayed in purple and fine linen, and faring sumptuously every day, brings to our mind the Jewish High Priest. See Exodus xxviii. 4-5.

"And these are the garments which they shall make, a breastplate, and an ephod, and a robe, and a broidered coat, a mitre and a girdle, and they shall make holy garments for Aaron thy brother, and his sons, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office. And they shall take gold, and blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen." And in verse 20 and 30 of the same chapter we learn that Aaron when he went in before the Lord, bore with him the names of the children Israel. So that he was their representative. What Dan could be more appropriate to represent them in their national death, which we learn by his teaching elsewhere was near to come upon them. He had great and goodly cities given to him, and houses full of all good things, vineyards and olive trees. Deut. vi. 10-11. He was proud of his relationship to Abraham, but failed to do the works of Abraham, or to heed the advice of Moses, or the voice of the prophets. When warned that the vineyard would be taken from him and given to others he reformed not: but stoned and slew those sent unto him, and finally slew the Son of the owner of the vineyard. Matt. xxi. 33. Thus he rejected the council of God, and thereby caused his death as stated in the parable.

We may identify Lazarus by his position at the gate of the rich man, and his desire to be fed by the crumbs from the rich man's table.

A noted incident in the life of Christ will aid us in understanding what class is represented by Lazarus in this parable. In Matt. xv. 22-28, we have the account of a woman. Mark says she was a Greek, a Syro-Phœnicinn by nation. Mark vii. 26. "And behold a woman of Canaan came out of the same coasts, and cried unto him, Saying, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David; my daughter is grievously vexed with a devil. But he answered her not a word. And his disciples came and besought him, saying, send her away; for she crieth after us. But he answered and said, I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Then came she and worshipped him, Saying, Lord help me. But he answered and said, It is not meet to take the children's bread and cast it to dogs. And she said, Truth Lord; yet the dogs eat of the crumbs that fall from their master's table." Jesus then granted her request. In this woman I see Lazarus begging crumbs, and this view is in harmony with the prophets who foretold of the rejection of the Jews for their unbelief, and of the receiving of the Gentiles into favor by the gospel, or to become heirs to the promises made to Abraham. Many cases can be cited of Gentiles seeking to be allowed to have part in the good things which the Jews thought was only for them. Cornelius is an instance of what was to happen in favor of the Gentiles, and an angel was used to aid him to get a knowledge of the truth, or to carry him to Abraham's bosom. And it came to pass: that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham' bosom. This is the death of the old man, of death to sin. St. Paul says I was alive without the law once; but when the commandment came sin revived and I died. The same truth is in the ordinance of baptism taught us death to sin or of the old man, and resurrection to newness of life. After the death of Lazarus he was carried by the angels to Abraham's bosom. This is in harmony with the teaching of the Scriptures, angels visited the fathers, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses and the prophets. St. Paul says, are they not all ministering spirits sent forth to minister to them that shall be heirs of salvation. Next in order is the death of the rich man. This was foretold by Moses and by the prophets and by Christ. In Deut. xxviii. 51, there is a noted prediction of the destruction of the rich man, and for the very reason that he did not hearken unto the voice of his God. This voice came by Moses and the prophets. "And he shall eat the fruit of thy cattle, and the fruit of thy land, until thou be destroyed." And in Isaiah lxv. it is written, "And ye shall leave your name for a curse unto my chosen, for the Lord God shall slay thee, and call his servants by another name." And the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch. Acts xi. 26. The direct testimony of Christ is that they should fall by the sword and be captives in all nations, and that Jerusalem should be trodden down of the Gentiles. The rich man after being buried lifts up his eyes in hell, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off and Lazarus in his bosom. Any having read the history of the Jews in the destruction of Jerusalem and their dispersion among the nations will have no trouble in understanding the figure of the rich man in hell being in torments. All the way down for nearly nineteen centuries has the voice of the rich man been heard crying for water to cool his thirst, caused by the flame of persecution. And still his cry is heard from the land of the Czar. Plundered and driven out, wanted in no country except it be in the land of his forefathers to which his face is now turned. That the Scriptures do represent the Jews in their suffering as in hell, read Isaiah v. 7-13-14-24. "Therefore my people are gone into captivity, because they have no knowledge, and their honorable men are famished. And their multitude dried up with the thirst. Therefore hell hath enlarged herself, and opened her mouth without measure, and their glory, and their multitude, and their pomp, and he that rejoiceth shall descend into it." The same fact is taught in the direct teaching of Christ. "And thou Capernaum which art exalted unto heaven shalt be brought down to hell." Matt. xi. 23. "Behold your house is left unto you desolate." Matt. xxiii. 38. This is the description of the rich man who in the parable represents the house of Israel in their apostacy from God. Read the pictures by Moses. "And the Lord shall scatter thee among all people, from one end of the earth even unto the other, and among these nations thou shalt find no ease, neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest; but the Lord shall give thee there a trembling heart and failing eyes, and sorrow of mind, and thy life shall hang in doubt before thee: and thou shalt fear day and night, and shalt have none assurance of thy life: in the morning thou shalt say, would God it were even and at even thou shalt say, would God it were morning for the fear of thine heart." Deut. xxviii. 64-67.

The words that Christ puts in mouth of Abraham to the rich man. "They have Moses and the prophets, let them hear them." And that if they did not hear them they would not believe though one rose from the dead.

This language is proof positive that in Moses and the prophets was to be found the instructions that would if obeyed have kept the rich man and his brethren from the trouble in which he was involved. And to us they are evidence that if we would understand what is the truth taught in the parable we must interpret it in harmony with the teaching of Moses and the prophets. And where did Moses in all his teaching threaten the Jews with punishment in a future state, or where did he teach the conscious state of the dead. His teachings are as silent as the grave on those points. Abraham informs the rich man that there is between them a great gulf fixed. Who fixed this gulf and what is it? The Scriptures can alone be our teacher to give us the correct answer. In Isa. lix. 2, it reads thus: "But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hidden his face from you, that he will not hear." Christ said if I had not done among them the works which no other man did, they had not had sin; but now have they both seen and hated both me and my Father, and without a cause. John xv. 24-22. This hatred of Christ and his Father fixed this impassable gulf, and ending in putting Christ to death. In order to understand the figure of Lazarus in Abraham's bosom it is only necessary to read a few passages of Scripture in which the figure is used. Read Num. xi. 12; Deut. xiii. 6; Isa. xl. 11; John i. 18; Five brethren, 1st, Chief Priests, 2nd, Priests, 3rd, lawyers, 4th, Doctors of the law, 5th, Scribes. All belonging to the house of Israel and all sharing in the good things the rich man had in his life.

My excuse for attempting to write on the subject of the rich man and Lazarus, is the necessity of light on the subject. Because those believing in the immortality of the soul and the conscious state of the dead, believe this parable to be their impregnable fortress. Those seeking light on this subject should read carefully, Lev. xxvi. and Isa. v. where the Lord says, I will command the clouds that they rain no rain upon the land. This whole warning has nothing to do with a future state of existence, but has and is being fulfilled before the eyes of all nations. If the editor of THE RESTITUTION, Mr. Joblin, or any other of the able writers for THE RESTITUTION will take up this subject and put it in tract form, the object of this attempt will be obtained.

Reduced Rates to Denver.

Unusual low rate excursions are being announced this year by the Pennsylvania Lines, and long distance journeys over them may be made at slight expense. For this summer exceedingly cheap excursions to Denver will be run over these lines. The rates will be the lowest in effect for years and will enable persons to visit the West at slight cost. The dates and return limits for these special Denver excursions will be as follows:

On July 20th and 21st, good to return until the latter part of August, account the meeting of the Mystic Shrine Order.

On August 9th and 10th, account annual meeting League of American Wheelmen, good returning until the middle of September.

Although the low rates have been made for meetings of organizations, the sale of tickets will not be confined to members, but the public generally may take advantage of the low fare. The return limits will be ample for side trips in the West. Details may be obtained by applying to any Ticket Agent of the Pennsylvania Lines, or by addressing F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

Beautiful Things.

A [illegible], a heartfelt sigh,
A [illegible], a sparkling eye
A [illegible]
These things are beautiful to see.

A [illegible]
A grasp by [illegible]
A [illegible]
[illegible]

A mother's prayer, an answer sure,
An angel [illegible],
A happy home, a restful heart;
These things are [illegible]

A joyful meeting, a [illegible],
An [illegible],
A day of pleasure, night of rest,
These things are beautiful and blest.

Prophetic Truth.

I send a few cuttings from one of our Edinburgh newspapers recording the proceedings of a four days' conference held here on the above named subject, together with the Inspiration of the Scriptures. I enclose a printed list of the names of speakers, as also a list of books, and the Prospectus of a new periodical to be started for the purpose of setting forth the important truths mentioned.

I must say that there was a large amount of truth placed before the meetings, so far as I had opportunity of observing. To say that there was nothing to be objected to would be going too far, but certainly a deep impression seemed to be made on the large evening meetings. The most telling speaker was a Mr. Carr from New York, whose plain, homely, unsophisticated style, and his deep sympathy with his audience made a profound impression.

I must leave further remark till another occasion.

JAMES CAMERON.

A four days' Conference on the Inspiration of the Bible, the Jews, and the coming of Christ, was opened in the Free Assembly Hall, Edinburgh, June 12. Mr. James E. Mathieson presided, and there was a good attendance. The Chairman said the subject of consideration that day would be the inspiration of God's holy word. They believed that this was a question that required to be emphasized in our own day—that there had been in many quarters, few would deny, a great departure in our old fashioned belief that this word was the word of the living God. It was not a collection of man's fables or fancies or opinions. It was the Word that had proceeded out of the mouth of the living God. It was "thus saith the Lord;" it was not "thinketh the Lord." They got the very words of the living God as they were given in the original tongues, and as they had been translated into our own language. Doubtless there had been some errors in the translation from time to time, some errors of very little importance, and there might have been others also in the translation into the various languages of the world. But the Word of God could not be broken; it was not a human thing. The forty different writers had written with a unity and aim and purpose which was unknown to the writers of any other subject under heaven. If these men had been writing out their own minds there would have been absolute contradiction over and over again. Short addresses were afterwards delivered, among others by Mr. L. Liesching, late judge in Ceylon, and Mr. Carr, from the United States.

The conference resumed at three o'clock in the afternoon—Mr. James E. Mathieson presiding. The Chairman, speaking of interpretation, said God's Word was its own best interpreter. It did not require great learning to understand the Bible. Although men have been searching the Scriptures, and had given the result of their researches in books, there were still great undiscovered mines of truth yet to be revealed to those who chose to seek. However moderate might be the amount of wisdom they possessed, if they were willing to take a lowly place God would reveal more and more unto them.

Mr. Brandreth, Birkenhead, said it was time those who loved the Bible took their stand by that book. Let them rightly divide the Word of Truth. There was not an accident in it; every single thing was intentional on God's part. The speaker then referred to the use of numbers in the Bible. Number thirteen, for instance, was a most wonderful number. In every case where it was mentioned it had to do either with rebellion or the remedy for rebellion. He contended that there had a numerical structure right through the whole Bible, and he had never yet found contradictions in it.

Dr. Neatby, London, said the whole Bible was given by the inspiration of God: it was God-breathed. Was it possible, he asked, that God only gave the great facts and left men of like passions to themselves to their own devices as to the way in which expression was to be given to the most solemn truths? Would they believe that God, who watched the fall of every sparrow, had not provided better than that in regard to their spiritual need? God had provided. Let them take any chapter in the Bible and compare it with others and they would find from Genesis to Revelation it was one great whole.

Rev. Mr. Smith, Dufftown, said 20 years ago there were many places in the Scriptures about which large numbers of earnest and honest enquirers stood in doubt. How did they stand with regard to that matter to-day? The Scriptures had been practically dug out of the ground, and the words of Christ "if these should hold their peace the stones would immediately cry out" had now a world of significance. These words had come to pass literally. People who ought to have spoken out in favor of the Bible had been silent, and through his instruments God had been digging up monumental inscriptions from the Nile and the Euphrates valleys. From these light had come, and had shone upon the Bible, clearing up the doubt which once existed about many places mentioned in that book. Time was in their favor. The trend of things was against satanic attacks upon the Bible, and he was confident the time would soon come when those who had said things against the Bible would be utterly ashamed of having done so.

The Conference was resumed in the evening—Mr. J. E. Mathieson, London, again presided, and, speaking of the second advent, said that as all the prophecies concerning Christ's first coming had been literally fulfilled, so would there be a literal fulfilment of the much larger number of prophecies pertaining to the second coming. Mr. Louis Liesching dealt with the prophecies foretold in the Book of Daniel, and going into the details of the actual time up to the first coming of Christ, he showed that from actual fulfilment the Book of Daniel was an incontrovertible proof of divine inspiration. Mr. Carr, of New York, spoke of the similarity between the different books of the Scriptures and of the similarity between the work of creation and the work of redemption. He next dealt with the close connection between the various books in Scripture, and said that, while some spoke of the differences existing in the gospels, they might better speak of the harmonies that obtained there. He was sure that if they could keep their hands off the Word of God, the Spirit of God would teach them its meaning. He judged the Scriptures by their fruits, and he challenged any one to show him a book that had the same power as the Bible. Rev. James Smith, Dufftown, who was the last speaker, congratulated the meeting on the absence of controversial material at their conference, the object of the meeting being to give an exposition of what the Bible had to say for itself. He thought that the best service they could do for the Bible was simply to let it be heard. A great many things were said about the Bible, books had been written for and against it, but he thought they would be set right if they studied the Scriptures. There was a thorough continuity in the Bible, and he asked his hearers to get rid of the ridiculous notion that the Bible only contained the thoughts of God. In the Bible they had the words of God. He then dealt with the authority of the Scriptures, and said they could not take one portion and leave another, for in each portion the authority was the Holy Ghost. They could no more separate the divine and human in the Scriptures than they could separate the divine and human in Jesus Christ.

Yesterday's meetings were much better attended than the first day's meetings last week in Glasgow, and each successive gathering was better attended than its predecessor.

THE FUTURE OF THE JEWS.

The religious conference was resumed in the Free Assembly Hall, Edinburgh, June 13,—Mr. James E. Mathieson, London, presiding. The subject under discussion was, "The Jews, God's chosen people." The chairman said they learned from the Bible that God was coming down personally to reign in Jerusalem in the midst of the Promised Land, which would then be given to the Jews in all its extent to the very utmost border. He explained the part which, he believed, in the Providence of God was to be played by the Jewish nation in the evangelization of the world. Mr. Brenner, secretary of the Convention, said that God would bring in the Jews in his own good time. God's honor was bound up with the restoration of the Jews to their own land, and with their being a blessing to the whole earth. The Rev. Lancelot Holland also addressed the meeting. In the afternoon the Rev. L. F. Armitage, St. Leonard's Parish Church, dealt with the debt which the world owed to the Jews. At the evening meeting, which was much more largely attended than any meeting held yesterday, the address which seemed to make the deepest impression was delivered by Mr. Carr, of New York, who took up the various prophecies throughout the Bible in connection with the restoration and the position of the Jews in carrying out the purposes of God in connection with his kingdom on earth. Mr. G. F. Trench, Ireland, took up the subject of the Millennium, with special reference to the position of the Jews as leading to that event, the Jews being of course the chosen nation during the Millennium. He then spoke of the ultimate destruction of the chosen people, as described in the Book of Revelations when Gog and Magog went up to war against God's people. The addresses have been largely of a prophetic character, but in none of them has any attempt been made to fix dates even approximately. Stress, however, has been laid upon the significance of certain signs of the times as pointing, by reason of the greatly increased interest amongst the Jews, and other circumstances, to the fact that there are indications of the present age being one not at all unlike that described as the end of the age preceding the Millennium. At yesterday's meetings a large number of ministers of different denominations attended.

THE SECOND ADVENT.

The meetings in connection with the religious conference which is being held in Edinburgh this week and which come to a close to-night were on June 11 devoted to the subject of the "Second Advent." Mr. Mathieson, London, who presided, in referring to the recent Gifford Lectures, said that the Gifford Trust had brought over from Germany the most rationalistic lecturer they could find to deliver a course of lectures. He animadverted upon the action of the Trust in paying £500 for this mass of poison poured upon the community. At the afternoon meeting the most telling address was that of Mr. Carr, of New York, who gave a lucid exposition from the Bible of the signs which might be expected as pertaining to the close of the present dispensation. As a Bible student and teacher, Mr. Carr has a faculty and knowledge of Biblical truth which must command the most attention, even from those who do not agree with everything he puts forth. At the evening meeting addresses were given by the Rev. J. M. Sloan; Mr. A. B. Stewart, Glasgow; and the Rev. J. Smith, of Dufftown. Mr. Smith drew parallels between the days immediately preceding the flood and those of the present age. The one great difference, he said, was that while in the days of Noah, and those immediately preceding the flood, the result of preaching were well nigh nil, at the close of the present dispensation when Christ came a great amount of faith would be found on the earth, and the gospel would have achieved mighty triumphs. That, he said, was the great point of difference between these two dispensations. From reading the Bible he had seen clearly the personal and second coming of Christ, and knew the view of his fellow countrymen and of his fellow-believers in the various churches throughout Scotland, but that good and only good would come from the reception of the great truth that at some time, which no one would dare to define, but which proved the signs of the times and which many of them thought was not far off, the second personal reign of Christ might be soon expected.

The meetings in the Free Assembly Hall, June 15, were specially interesting on account of the speakers placing before their hearers some new views of Scriptural truth bearing on the second Advent. Mr. Carr, of New York, and Mr. French spoke in the afternoon, and Rev. Mr. Sloan, Pastor F. E. Marsh, and Rev. James Smith, of Dufftown, in the afternoon. Last night Mr. Marsh and Mr. Carr were the speakers. Mr. Marsh dwelt upon the necessity of a higher level of Christian living on the part of the Church, and said it was only by a life of separation from worldliness and pleasure that the testimony of God's people could be efficacious in the present dispensation. Mr. Carr gave the closing address. From all accounts, no Christian teacher who has visited Edinburgh during the last few years has made such a profound impression, and last night he appeared at his best. Among ministers and workers a feeling was expressed that Mr. Carr should be invited to return on an early date to Edinburgh, and this suggestion was warmly received. At the close of last night's meeting a large number of people gathered round the platform and shook hands with the various speakers, and one of the ministers remarked that they were under a deep debt of gratitude to those who had made arrangements for the conferences. Several articles of jewelry were placed in the collecting boxes yesterday.

The Whole Gospel.

The Gospel of God is no narrow, meager, one-sided thing. It is a magnificent stream, into which many waters flow; a loud and swelling anthem, filling the whole ear, rich alike in melody and harmony. It is not a continual harping on a single string, as some excellent people imagine. They are everlastingly talking about "the simple gospel." This is their shibboleth. If you cannot pronounce it in their way, you stand a good chance of being regarded as ignorant of the Gospel—of God's Gospel! We have shown our preference for the term message, and, partly, because of its simplicity it implies; but we must we have not seemed even for a moment, as if we thought this message had, like modern telegrams, been reduced to the fewest words possible, lest it should cost too much! The fact is, we don't believe in this much vaunted simplicity. We are satisfied it is not "according to the Scriptures." We go further. We affirm these "simple gospels" to be schismatical gospels—yes! even when, as far as they go, they are divine. They are schismatical; they are heretical. A schism is a rent, and these "simple gospelers" do what the Roman soldiers forbore to do—they rend the seamless robe of our Lord.

A heretic is a man who "picks and chooses." One picks and chooses one element of the Gospel, and with him that is everything. Another picks and chooses another, and that is with him the truth. And so it goes, till you may find quite a number of "small gospels"—relatively small—humanly made so; and certainly schismatical in the result. The hearer accustomed to the one, can scarcely believe he is listening to the Gospel at all, when he chances to hear prominence given to some aspect of the Gospel which his favorite preachers seldom present. We write strongly, but we also write sorrowfully, and write of what we know to be a fact. With one class, the good news of the incarnation is all and in all; so much so that the propitiation is almost never heard of. With another, "the Cross" appears to be still standing; and the stone to be lying at the sepulcher's mouth, until this day. Some, advancing beyond this, get as far as Mount Olivet—as far as the ascent from Mount Olivet; but to the descent to Mount Olivet they dare not venture; they would think they were about to wander into the land of romance were they to set forth on that errand. "The Gospel of the Kingdom" is with them practically suppressed; and they have the temerity to talk as though they could turn the guns of Matthew xxviii. against those of Matthew xxiv.—in plain words, they more than hint that the "Gospel of the resurrection has made the previously heralded "Gospel of the Kingdom" likely to be repealed act of parliament. As if this were not confusion enough, we turn to another quarter, and what do we find? We find a gospel changing with the seasons—a yearly drama, under the spell of which you are guided when to weep and when to rejoice, a piece of pernicious acting, which, for weeks in each year, tries to cheat the people to think and feel as though the serene and heavenly Jesus were just then passing from stage to stage of His earthly passion. And, once more, not to be further tedious in this saddening enumeration, there would appear to be some who think the proper course is to denude the Gospel as much as possible of all distinctive truth and fact; and with them the joyful story is reduced to Christ's ability to save, leaving even His willingness under an impenetrable "if."

We say these shattered fragments of the one grand Gospel of God are essentially sectarian. By reason of the partial truth they exhibit, the preachers of these "small gospels" are able to draw away disciples after them. Having not the whole truth, they further, they have the power to separate believers into sects of unbelievers, who instinctively war against the truths in which they have not been schooled.

Over against all those exhibitors of a spurious and divisive simplicity, we set the true, divine comprehensiveness of the grand, good story of redeeming love. Why, we ask, fix on one element of the good news, and make that everything? And still more earnestly we inquire, Why exclude any of God's joyful message from His joyful message? Why not tell out the magnificent story to its very end? It is all very well to say that you cannot always be doing this on every occasion. That does not touch the question. The question is, What right have you to suppress any of the joyful intelligence which God has sent? You have no right.

You may say that to introduce so many things into the Gospel will not lead men to repentance. But in the first place, we want nothing introduced into the Gospel which God has not set there. In the next place, we are not pleading for the neglect of all method, all proportion, all regard for the capacity of your hearers. And in the third place, we very much doubt your right to say what will and what will not lead men to repentance. "The Gospel of the Kingdom" led men to repentance in olden time; and would again lead them, if proclaimed aright.

You are sure that the introduction of so many controverted points into the preaching of the Gospel would perplex the hearer. But that, again, depends, in part, on the manner of their introduction. They may be treated in a simple, direct, biblical manner, made luminous by clear statement, and engaging by apt illustration, and convincing by happy Scripture quotation, and telling by forcible and solemn appeal. Moreover, it is not "the poor sinner" that needs all this commiseration. All this talk about the danger of perplexing and overburdening the unsaved hearer might be more fitly called—lazy preachers' cant.—Our Rest,—1876.

Baptism a Non-Essential.

We have been informed that an immersion took place in the vicinity of N——. When on the verge of the water, one of the candidates publicly inquired of the baptizer, if he thought baptism would do anything for anyone; "because," said the individual, "if you think it does, I shall refuse to be baptized even now; I have been pardoned, justified, and saved by grace through 'faith alone,' for many years." To which it was replied, "No; it is merely a duty which belongs to disciples." The ceremony was then performed, but for what purpose it will be difficult to explain. If we pay the least attention to the teaching of the Holy Spirit, in the following passages, we shall ascertain the proper design of this institution:

Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God.

Christ also loved the Church, and gave Himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it, with the washing of water by the Word.

And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins.

Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit.

Received you the Spirit by works of law, or by the obedience of faith? (the Gospel?)

Know ye not that as many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into His death? therefore we are buried with Him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up [illegible] by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of His death, we shall be also in the likeness of His resurrection.

For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.

The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us.

He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved.

Let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water.

Then they that gladly received the Word were baptized; (not they who had been born of the Holy Ghost, as we are now taught to believe, by those who corrupt the sacred volume.)

After reading these portions of Scripture, which were dictated by the Holy Spirit, how can anyone, who refuses salvation through this medium, expect to meet the Savior with acceptance when He shall appear. "In vain do you worship me, teaching institutions merely human." "The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with His mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." "Let God be true, and every man (who speaks contrary to His truth) a liar." "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." Let us not be wise above what is written, but meekly resign our own wills and trustingly exclaim, Thy will O God, be done.—Our Rest, 1876.

Glorifying God in Business Life.

We are to glorify God in all our business relations. There is danger that we shall make an unwarrantable distinction between our business engagements and our religious obligations. They do not belong to different spheres of duty. We too often act as if Sundays and churches belonged to God, and week days and business houses to the world, the flesh, and the devil. There is a sense in which every house which has been consecrated to God is peculiarly sacred; but there is also a sense in which every office and store may be consecrated to God. Religion is not for Sundays and churches alone; but it is for week days and business houses as well. Religion sanctified and glorifies every relation in life. If a man cannot take his religion into his business, he must have a bad business or a very poor religion. We all recognize the importance of what is known as "a call to the ministry;" the man who refuses to heed this call does so at his peril. But it must not be forgotten that every man is called to some form of ministry in the work of our Lord.

The whole duty of every one everywhere is to glorify God, and the exalted privilege of every man is to enjoy God forever. No man is excused from this great obligation because he refuses to confess Christ; this refusal but adds to his guilt. If you are engaged in honest business for which you have qualifications and which you are conducting in a religious spirit, you may rest assured that God has called you into business. By giving you ability to perform your work, God has set you apart to that duty. Other business men may not have formally laid their hands upon your head, giving you ordination to that service, but tacitly they have given their approval, and God has given his blessing. This conception of our daily calling exalts and glorifies it. It makes the lowliest duty radiant with the glory of the loftiest motive. This conception of life and duty converts every office and store, every workshop and factory, every parlor and kitchen into a sanctuary. It makes every counter and desk, every anvil and bench a pulpit from which men and women may preach the gospel of Christ, and in which they are to glorify God. We are to find our opportunity to serve God not apart from, but within our daily vocation. Any other thought of secular service degrades it and dishonors God.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 25, 1894.

☞ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

CURRENT events seem to have monopolized our space of late, to the neglect of the question department, but we hope to prepare some answers for our next number.

BROTHER J. F Wagoner held a meeting in the grove near Bro. Burkey's east of here over the third Sunday in the month, and two made the good confession and were immersed.

WE are informed by Mr. Horner, General Passenger Agent of the Nickel Plate R. R., that their train service that was disturbed by the recent strike is now reanmed, including their through Palace Buffet Sleeping cars between Chicago and all points east.

EVERY day brings to our notice the distress, the bereavements and disappointments of some who are hoping for the good time coming, and truly we have need of patience. Nothing contributes more to patience under affliction than an examination of the foundation of the Christian's hope. The promise is reliable, the oath will be kept. God's counsel is immutable. When we get a full view of Jehovah's scheme, and realize the unity of his purpose, and how persistently he has worked out his grand design—every act from first to last having relation to that purpose, who can help exclaiming with Paul, "Oh, the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!" These considerations should afford strong consolation to those possessing the Abrahamic faith. He who has promised cannot lie. Anchor to this, tried ones.

RUSSIA is engaged in one of the greatest enterprises of the century. It is building a railway from Valdivostok on the Pacific, in the East, to Moscow, the Black, Caspian and Baltic Seas in the West—some 9,500 miles altogether. This line is attracting widespread attention, because of the important commercial, political and strategic objects it is designed to serve. It is thought that it will rob England of the great carrying trade between Japan, China, India and Europe, inasmuch as it will transport merchandise in twelve or thirteen days that now requires from six to eight weeks. The principal incentive for its construction, however, is a strategic one,—an internal line of communication not at the mercy of foreigners. It is expected that this road will be completed in six years, and a Russian officer is reported as saying, recently, "Once at Valdivostok in force, Russia will dispute England's prestige in the East and threaten her from a new quarter."

WE were surprised and delighted last week by a visit from our dear Sister Fremont Barber, who had taken advantage of the cheap rates to Cleveland to spend a few days with the brotherhood, and see if some systematic effort could not be made to cheer, and upbuild the bereaved friends of the Truth at Salem, and enlist others. We think an arrangement of this sort practicable, and may be in operation in the near future. Sister Barber was accompanied by two nieces, M. & L. Bradshaw, grandchildren of the lamented Brother and Sister Barber, of Salem, but who live at Alliance. They had been waiting for an opportunity to go to Salem to be baptized for some months, and it occurred to them that they might accompany their aunt to Cleveland and there put on the Saving Name. There they found a goodly number of the same ages cherishing the blessed hope, and from whom they received hearty congratulations, and affectionate parting words. The Lord preserve these dear lambs of the fold, from every evil way and at last crown them abundantly with life. Having previously resisted every effort to get them into the popular societies, we expect soon to hear that they are firm and aggressive members of the One Body.

Josephiteism. No. 3.

WHAT WE THINK OF IT, AND WHY?

If our memory serves us correctly our No. 2 closed with a quotation which said the writer did not believe the "Mosaic sacrifices were intended to typify the death of Christ, or that they were appointed for the purpose of leading the Jews to a knowledge and belief in his death as an all-atoning sacrifice for sins" and inasmuch as that they utterly failed to lead a single Jew to a knowledge and belief in his death as such sacrifice, they were not typical of Christ's death. This is the argument and proof.

As might be expected, this writer has a belief of his own about the Mosaic sacrifices. It is this: "They were appointed for the purpose of leading the Jews to the practice of that purity, which, in the sight of God, is better than sacrifice, and that righteousness, which, to him is far more acceptable than the "fat of ram's." We submit that if, as alledged, failure to accomplish the purpose, disproves the typical nature of the sacrifices, failure to lead the Jews to practice purity in the sight of God disproves the writer's idea of it; it certainly did not tend in any such direction; although our author claims they did not altogether fail in that direction, because the lives of many holy men are recorded in the Old Testament." If he had proven that they had been led into paths of holiness by the Mosaic sacrifices there would have been some point to his argument, as it is, the whole matter rests upon his IDEA of the purpose of the sacrifices. Is he an infallible interpreter?

Little by little the true inwardness of Josephiteism is laid bare. They have a sinner for a Savior, and now they have to prove if they can that there was no need of a sacrifice for sin. We want our readers to make a note of what immediately follows this sentence, because it is the Josephite recipe for becoming righteous,—reconciled to God and an at-one-ment effected: —"It is ONLY by man's forsaking, and giving up his past sinful life and devoting his future life to God and to righteousness that a reconciliation or at-one-ment could possibly be effected."

This shows man every way competent to save himself. This being true, of course the Lamb of Joseph was as good as the Lamb of God, —and no necessity for the death of either. Again this writer says the Old Testament shows "that all the wisest and best men expected salvation solely on account of the good deeds which they had done, or on account of their own personal righteousness, repentance of what they had done amiss in the past, and their future obedience to the commands of God." But "what saith the Scriptures? Abraham believed God, and it (his belief in God) was counted to him for righteousness," see Rom. iv. 3, and Gen. xv. 6. And Rom. iv. 13 says, "For the promise that he should be heir of the world was not to Abraham [illegible] through the law but through the righteousness of faith;" that is, as seen by the 3rd verse, the righteousness obtained through faith, not as Josephites will have it, "by good deeds done, or personal righteousness of their own; it was counted to them because of faith.

Popular teachers say the righteousness of Christ is imputed to men, Josephites reject this, and rightly too,—but they are committed to a theory which blinds them to the truth, that belief of God is counted for righteousness, and have adopted a way of their own—viz:—Man can by good deeds constitute himself righteous, and no thanks to any one.

Josephites say, "To say that no man could possibly be saved unless Christ had died would be to state what is not true."

Josephites positively teach that Christ both before and after his death abstained from preaching his death. If this be true, Jesus never said, "I lay down my life for the sheep;" never said "This cup is the New Testament in my blood, which is shed for you;" never said "all ye shall be offended because of me this night, for it is written, I will smite the shepherd and the sheep shall be scattered, but after I am risen, I will go before you into Galilee," never said, "With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer." And Mark deliberately lies when he says chap. viii. 31 "And he began to teach them that the Son of Man must suffer many things and be rejected of the elders and of the chief priests and scribes, and be killed and after three days rise again;" and Paul too teaches a false gospel if Josephites tell the truth, when he says, "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures. 1 Cor. xv. 3, 4.

As the foregoing will likely make some of our readers curious to know what Josephites really think of Christ's death, any way, we quote the exact words of our author, "I therefore believe that Jesus died because his counterpart killed him." If words have any meaning the idea conveyed here is, that his death had no place in God's purpose. It was purely accidental; but to show we strain nothing to make a point here, we quote further:—"That in consequence of the circumstances and position in which he was placed by the rebellious conduct of his brethren, it behooved Christ to suffer, in order to maintain his integrity and innocence, and to rise from the dead in order that he might receive the reward of his obedience, and that because he was the first of the human race who had perfectly performed the righteousness of the law of God, that repentance and consequent remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations beginning at Jerusalem." This is the very marrow and fatness of Josephiteism. It being true, David neither predicted Christ's death nor his resurrection without seeing corruption. God never made known to David the way of life; David never predicted that he would be satisfied when he awakens in his Lord's likeness; the Lord was never wounded for our transgressions, nor bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was not upon him, we are not healed with his stripes; it never pleased the Lord to bruise him; his soul was not made an offering for sin (see Isa. liii. 4-12) if Josephiteism be true. Our readers can take their choice, of course.

If it is not brazen effrontery to say, "It cannot be that Christ died because men could not be saved unless he had died, because the same is required of men in order to obtain salvation after his death as was required of them before, viz: —repentance, belief of the gospel and baptism for remission of sins;" it is certainly supreme ignorance. Just think of THE GOSPEL without either the death or resurrection of Christ in it if you wish to get a fair view of Josephiteism. By consulting the 11th chap. of Hebrews it may be seen that the Hope of the faithful from the infancy of the race centered in a better resurrection. And if weak, if, in the nature of things, they could have that good hope without a promise of it? Must it not have been set before them? It WAS set before them, for we read, "And these all having obtained a good report through faith, received not THE PROMISE. The promise was gospel—there was resurrection in it. And the spirit of God in Paul for it, every one of them would have perished if Christ had not been raised from the dead. And how could he be raised from the dead if he had not died? And how could there be gospel without his death and resurrection?

Oh, Josephiteism! Surely the serpent that beguiled you must have left you to your own resources. He is too subtle to make such silly mistakes!

Further notice must be taken of what is said about the blood which makes the atonement. Our author says, "It can only mean that no sin had separated between God and man, it is ONLY by man's forsaking and giving up his past sinful life and devoting his future life to God. . . at-one-ment could be made. This on one page is the only way; on another page it takes in addition to this, belief of the gospel and baptism for the remission of sins. But the precious blood of Christ by which we are said to be redeemed is worth nothing in the estimation of Josephites. They plainly say that "if the Jews had only learned and practised what the sacrifices were intended to teach them, Christ would not have died at all."

Poor deluded mortals! Did not Jehovah swear (Ps. cx. 4) "Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec?" He did. Does not Heb. vii. 11 positively teach that there was no perfection under the Levitical priesthood,—and this is what made it necessary for another priest? It certainly does; and yet they say, if the Jews had practiced what the sacrifices were intended to teach, Christ would not have died at all. Oh foolish Josephites, who hath bewitched you?

Presuming that they do not deny the priesthood of Christ as yet,—do they not know that every high-priest is ordained to offer gifts and sacrifices for sins, and that therefore it was necessary for this man to have somewhat to offer? Do they not know that he offered himself without spot? Do they not know that he is a minister of the sanctuary and of the true tabernacle? Do they not know, or do they wilfully disbelieve, that by his own blood he entered in? And how could he have entered in if he had not died?

Josephites teach that the kingdom of God would have been set up then and there if the Jews had accepted John's or Jesus' message: so that God, we suppose, from their view of it, had to see what decision the Jews would come to before he could decide what to do!!! If they had received him, the kingdom would have been set up then. Alas, for Josephiteism again.—his rejection was announced a thousand years before, and the rejected one invited to sit at Jehovah's right hand, until he should make the Son's foes his footstool. Psa. cx. 1.

What a short-sighted God the Josephites have; this may account for their short-sightedness; men become assimilated to the object of their worship, and hence they overlook the fact that the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob has arranged that people from all points of the compass shall participate in the honors of the kingdom, besides his natural descendants. And as they had no opportunity up to the time of Christ to secure a share of its glories, it is reasonable to conclude that the interval to be spent by Christ at the right hand of the Majesty in the heavens was set apart for such opportunity. They overlook the fact that the God of the Bible had outlined the world's history to us through Daniel; and instead of intending to set up HIS Universal kingdom as soon as the fourth kingdom should have attained the zenith of its glory,—it was to wane first, and weaken, and divide. This shows the absurdity of the Josephite assertion, that the kingdom of God would have been set up then and there if the Jews had accepted Jesus! Surely the Josephites must think that the God of the Bible is altogether such as they themselves are; Psa. l. 21.

They belittle the blood, do Josephites; and no wonder they should belittle the blood of Joseph's son, for cleansing purposes—it was tainted with sin. This is one sensible thing they do.

If they forget, we must not, that we are sanctified through the offering of the Body of Jesus. Heb. x. 10. And that by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified." v. 14.

If they forget, we must not, that we can only enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say his flesh." vs. 19, 20.

If they forget, we must not, that Jesus said, "This is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many." Mark xiv. 24.

If they forget, we must not, that the blood of Christ who through the Eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purges our conscience. Heb. ix. 14.

If they forget, we must not, that this is the reason he is the Mediator of the New covenant, that by means of death for the redemption of the transgressors that were under the first covenant, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance." Heb. ix. 15.

If they forget, we must not, that where a covenant, or will is, there must of NECESSITY be the death of the testator. And yet Josephites say there was no necessity of his dying!!! Pray what would make the will effective? Heb. ix. 16, 17.

If they forget, we must not, that both the Old and New Testaments had to be dedicated with blood, and Jesus said "this is my blood of the New covenant which is shed for many."

Oh, how fatally deluded the people who say that under certain circumstances they imagine, Christ would not have died at all! They need to learn the A B C of the gospel. Is it not the height of religious stupidity to rack their brains to discover a way to do without the death of Christ, when Heb. xiii 20 tells us that the God of Peace brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that Great Shepherd of the sheep THROUGH THE BLOOD OF THE EVERLASTING COVENANT?" If HE had to be raised through the covenant ratified by his blood, how could we be raised without it?

Beloved, do you feel like belittling his blood? We feel assured you do not; and we imagine that tears of love and gratitude and anticipation will trickle down your cheeks as you long for the time to come when with all the redeemed hosts you will help to make the arches of heaven ring with praise to him who was slain, and has redeemed you to God by his blood out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation, and made you kings and priests to God.

This song will not embarrass Josephites—they will not be there, unless they repent.

SAM. Small says of Georgia, "Our politics are corrupt and our politicians are corrupt. The ballot box may show who is elected, but the returns show who gets the office. If we preachers would quit preaching so much about the sweet by and by, and have more to say about dirty now and now, we would see things getting in better shape."

A Symposium of Faith.

Under the above heading the Conference Board of the Church of God in Iowa, sent out about one hundred circular letters, and have received the following replies many of which were read at their conference greatly to edification. And as means for publication in book form were short a vote was taken that these letters be placed in my hands to be sent to THE RESTITUTION office for publication, and here I comply.

SERIES 2.

The Church of God believes:

1. In a Supreme Intelligence. The Father in whom are all things and we in him, 1. Cor. viii. 6. He is one, Deut. vi. 4, and the only true object of worship, John iv. 24. Rev. xiv. 27.

2. In the inspiration of the Scriptures and their sufficiency as the sovereign guide to the Church of God, in all matters of faith, doctrine and practice, 2 Tim. iii. 15, 16, 17; Isaiah viii. 20.

3. In Jesus, Anointed Seed of David and Son of God, Matt. i. 21; Acts x. 38. Rom. i. 34. The Medium through whom remission of sins is granted, Rom. iii. 25, and immortality and eternal life bestowed. Rom. ii. 7; vi. 23.

4. That the law of ten words or, commandments spoken by Deity from Mt. Sinai and engraven with his own finger upon tables of stone, is an expression of the will of God, clearly defining our duty to God and to each other, and will remain as long as the necessity of its existance remains. That moral principles are unchangeable and eternal. The law which prescribes moral duties must remain as long as moral relations exist for the reason that it is based upon the relationship we sustain to God, and the duties we owe to our fellow-men. Under the New Covenant it will be written in the hearts of God's people, Exod, xx. Deut. x. Jer. xxvi. 33.

5. That faith, repentance, baptism and a holy life are necessary conditions to endless life in the kingdom of God, Heb. xi. Luke xiii. Acts ii.

6. That man is mortal without exception of parts Job iv. 17, must seek for immortality Rom. ii. 7, and put it on at the resurrection, 1. Cor. xv. 51 and 55.

7. That death is a reality, the suspension of all consciousness Eccl. ix. 5; Ps. vi. 5. The resurrection is the only way out of death, we believe with the apostle Paul, that without a resurrection there will be no future life, 1 Cor. xv. 16, 28.

8. That Christ is the promised Seed, who is to crush the serpent's head, Gen. iii. 15, raise the dead. John xi. 25. remove the curse, restore the earth and reign King of kings and Lord of lords. Acts iii. 21; Rev. xix. 16.

9. That the resurrection—the judgment-time of reward—inheritance of the saints—the kingdom of God—or all future events to take place upon this earth under the second coming and reign of Christ. 2 Tim. iv. 1, Rev. xi. 15, 18; Heb. ix. 28.

10. That the solar, lunar, and stellar signals given in our Lord's great prophecy are tokens of our proximity to the advent glory, are now in the past, Matt. xxiv. The moral, political and religious signs in the world admonish us that we stand on the eve of the Kingdom Age. Let the Church of the Living God lift up her head for her redemption draweth nigh, Luke xxi. 28.

A. F. DRAPER.

1. I believe there is one living and true God, Creator of all things, Gen. i. 1; Acts xvii. 24.

2. That Jesus Christ is the Son of God, Rom. i. 4; Acts xiii. 33.

3. That he was a prophet, Deut. xviii. 15, 23; Acts iii. 22; vii. 37.

4. That he is a priest, Heb. iii. 1, 4; xiv. 8; i. 3.

5. That he will be a King, Isa. ix. 6, 7; Jer. iii. 17, 18; Luke i. 32, 33, and

6. That he gave to the world the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and salvation is through his name, Rom. i. 1, 3.

7. That the gospel must be believed, accepted and obeyed to become the power of God unto salvation through Christ the Seed of Abraham, to whom the promises were given, Acts viii. 16; Gal. iii. 16.

8. That the gospel includes the things of the kingdom of God and name of Jesus Christ, Acts viii. 12, xvii. 31; 1 John v. 5.

9. That we are justified in this faith, Acts xiii. 39; Rom. ii. 13; v. 1.

10. That after faith there should be repentance toward God, Acts xx. 21, a godly sorrow for, and a turning away from sin, because the goodness of God, and not fear of God leads us to repentance, Rom. ii. 4; 2 Cor. vii. 10.

11. That immersion in water is necessary, Matt. iii. 16; Rom. vi, 3; Gal. iii. 27.

12. That the reception of the Holy Spirit is a gift from God on condition of obedience and not as a baptism, Acts ii. 38; x. 45.

13. That the righteous have the promise of an inheritance in the kingdom of God which is to be under the whole heavens, Dan. vii. 27.

14. That man is mortal but has the promise of immortality upon conditions of his seeking for it by continuance in well doing, Rom. ii. 7, and to be put on at the coming of Christ, 2 Tim. i. 10; 1 Cor. xv. 53.

15. That death is an unconscious sleep, 1 Cor. xv. 20, 51, Eccl. ix. 5.

16. That the resurrection will take place at the coming of Christ, which will be at the end of the age, Matt. xxvi. 31, Mark viii. 38, John vi. 40.

17. That the wicked are to be destroyed, Mal. iv. 1, Acts iii. 23; 2 Thess. i. 8.

Very Respectfully,

L. L. WILKINS.

1. I believe that there is a God in heaven, that he is the Supreme Ruler of the universe, that he is infinite in power, wisdom and goodness, that he is willing to save to the uttermost, that he possesses body, parts and passions, that he is a God of supreme love and compassion.

2. I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. That he existed in the plan and purpose of God from the beginning of the world, that in due time he was born of the Virgin Mary, that he was a real person and possessed personal attributes, that through him we have the plan of salvation.

3. I believe that the plan of salvation is so complete, that it is possible for all men to be saved by complying with the terms of the gospel, that in one time all men will be blessed with the knowledge of the plan of salvation, that they will accept the gospel and be saved, or they will reject the great offer of salvation and be condemned.

4. This involves the literal personal return of Christ from heaven to rebuild the throne and tabernacle of David, and that he will reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there will be no end. The times of restitution, the kingdom age is ushered in, the sleeping saints are raised immortal, the living saints changed from mortality to immortality, from natural to spiritual, are born of the Spirit. These constitute the Bride, the Lamb's Wife, the selected kings and priests, are Christ's immortal Cabinet, the associate rulers with our Immortal King in the work of subjugating the world.

5. The kingdom set up, Christ upon the throne of David, the saints are equal heirs with him, and have the world for a habitation the curse lifted, the earth restored to its Edenic beauty, loveliness and fertility, the earth shall yield her increase, and the desert blossom as the rose, and the knowledge of the Lord shall be to all people.

6. In this grand work of restitution, all human governments shall be made submissive to the righteous government of our King—or they will be broken. The King in his beauty will have dominion from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth, and if we suffer with him we shall also reign with him. May this be yours and mine, to enjoy through the endless succession of ages, is my prayer, Amen.

W. L. WINSLOW.

The Iowa Conference Board:

Yours is received and you wish to know of my faith. Well, I will tell you.

In the year of 1842 I commenced to search the Scriptures to know the truth of them. I have been all through the advent movement from that time, and I have been a learner. I see, after Noah God made promise to Abraham, and to his seed and down to Joseph and Mary the father and mother of Jesus, the obedient child. And as he understood the things of the kingdom of God he was baptized, then God called him his Son and then he was put on trial for eternal life and he was obedient to God to do his will and not his own fleshly thinking, he became obedient unto death; so God raised him up to die no more, and so the apostles says, gone away to receive a kingdom. Amen. I do not believe in any one to be baptized in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, but after they have learned the things concerning the kingdom of God and his righteousness to baptize them in Jesus Christ the Anointed One, for there is no other name given under heaven whereby man can be saved.

The Nickel Plate Road have authorized their agents to sell tickets July 30th and 31st, to St. Paul, Minn., at rate of one fare for the round trip, good returning until Aug. 7th.

Dear Restitution:

How glad we are to still have the good paper come to us as a visitor bearing the good news. I am glad to read of the good meetings. My wife, a daughter, and myself, are here alone in the one faith. I am preaching some. I am poor but how glad I would be if some able man could hold a meeting here. If T. E Adams or John Foore of Kansas, could come. I am well acquainted with them.

Poetry.

I am Glad.

O, I'm glad redemption's coming;
And the Saints are going home,
Going to the better country,
Where their feet no more shall roam;
Going where the radiant sunlight
Ever gilds the verdant shore;
Where the storm-clouds never gather,
And the shadows fall no more.

I'm glad that the promise is given,
Cheering us when faith grows dim;
If we suffer with our Master,
We shall also reign with him.
In the world we've tribulation,
And the trembling cross to bear,
But we'll have the crown and kingdom,
And the weight of glory there.

I am glad, but still I sorrow
For a Church in slumber bound;
Speedily the Master cometh,
But, O where shall faith be found?
Where are those the good and faithful,
Who shall hear him say, "well done?"
Where are those to bid him welcome,
When he comes to take his throne?

I am glad there is a remnant,
Waiting, longing, for the day;
Watching, for the object: Jesus,
Crying at his long delay.
Now their lamps are brightly burning,
Earthly hopes no more enamor,
They are robing for the marriage,
As the feast bell draws near.

O, I'm glad, for God has promised,
He will wipe our tears away;
He will give us joy, for mourning,
And in robes of praise array;
Never shall the sound of weeping,
Fall upon our ears again;
But we'll hear the songs of gladness
Rising in celestial strains.

"The Meekness and Gentleness of The Messiah."

Such are the qualities which Paul ascribes to his Master in his second letter to the church at Corinth (chap. x. 1.) And it is this character which our Lord claims as his own in these words, "Come unto me, all ye that labor, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest to your souls." The Savior's example of meekness and lowliness of heart is here commended for imitation by those professing to be his disciples —"Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart." And so the apostles. For example, Paul—"Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus, who being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God, but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man he humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." And Peter —"What glory is it when ye be buffeted for your faults ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well and suffer for it, ye will take it patiently, this is acceptable with God. For even hereunto were ye called, because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example that we should follow his steps. Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth; who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not, but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously." Yes, "he endured such contradiction of sinners against himself," as none of us shall ever meet with. But, mark, he not merely met with such, he endured it, and here his meekness and gentleness were pre-eminently displayed.

But there are some sayings of Jesus on record from which it has been inferred, both by friends and foes, that Jesus indulged the spirit of reviling and threatening, even in circumstances when he himself had received no provocation by similar treatment. For example, he said, "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye devour widows' houses, and for a pretense make long prayers." "Ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones and of all uncleanness. Even so ye also appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity." "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell."

Now, this language is consistent with the meekness and gentleness of Christ, or it is not. It is reviling and threatening, or it is not. It is the language of harsh denunciation or that of tenderest commiseration. This depends not so much on the words employed, as on the tone and gesture with which they were uttered. Any one, by experiment, may demonstrate, to his own entire satisfaction, the possibility of uttering these words so as to manifest the compassionate spirit of Jesus, or a spirit entirely foreign to his heart of hearts. Which of these we are to impute to the meek and lowly one, no candid mind will hesitate to determine.

I may remark that the word "woe," in the above passage which seems to aggravate the severity of its tone, is capable of being rendered "Alas," as indeed it is in Rev. xviii. 10, 16, 19. Hence it might be read, "Alas for you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites." And I observe, that in Newcome's version, all the occurrences of this word as used by Christ are rendered, Alas. There is at least one occurrence of it where it cannot have the denunciatory sense, and that is sufficient to show that it may have the commiserative sense in Christ's rebuke of the Pharisees. It occurs in Matt. xxiv. 19.—"But woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days," that is, alas for them, etc. It must have the commiserative sense here, and though rendered "woe" we never think of viewing it as denunciatory. And so in regard to the charge of hypocrisy, and the epithets "Serpents and generation of vipers." These words are rendered by Dr. George Campbell, "Ah! serpents! offspring of vipers!" And the only question is, Is this a true description of the characters addressed? No one will deny that it is.

Now, it is just at this point that the bearing of Jesus' example on us becomes manifest. For Jesus infallibly knew that the epithets he employed were correctly applicable to the persons addressed. And, moreover he knew precisely the effect his words would have on his auditors. In calling the scribes and Pharisees serpents, he not only knew it was true, but that their mental and moral condition would not be thereby injured. Now, before we can plead the example of Jesus for stigmatizing our contemporaries, we must be able to fulfil the conditions referred to. We must be infallibly certain of the absolute truthfulness of our epithets and charges, and we must be quite sure that our application of them will not have the effect of hardening in unbelief and disobedience, while the gentler course might have resulted in awakening an interest in the truth. These conditions, I am afraid, can be fulfilled by none of us, and hence the example of Jesus must be limited for us to his imitable qualities. Jesus "knew what was in man," we hardly know ourselves, much less our fellow-men; but are nevertheless prone to perceive a mote in our brother's eye, while oblivious of the beam in our own. How true the lines of Robert Burns, so often quoted:—

"O wad some power the giftie gie us,
To see oursel's as ithers see us,
It wad frae mony a blunder free us,
An' foolish notion."

This weakness of the flesh may well account for the many apostolic exhortations to meekness and gentleness. These qualities are among the fruits of the Spirit mentioned in Gal. v. More at length, Paul exhorts "to speak evil of no man, to be no brawlers, but gentle—showing all meekness unto all men." And more especially in efforts to enlighten the ignorant, he says—"the servant of the Lord must not strive, but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient; in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth." And so Peter—"be ready always to give an answer to every one that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear."

The violation of this example by the abuse of speech is much dwelt on by the apostles. "The tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity." "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body." "If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, that man's religion is vain." The bridle is used to regulate and control, and only if need be to arrest, the movements of the animal to which it is applied; so must the would-be religious man regulate, and, if necessary, "hold" his tongue in order to fulfil the will of his Master.

The following extracts from Solomon are much to the point, "The mouth of the just bringeth forth wisdom; but the froward tongue shall be cut off." "A soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stir up anger." "The tongue of the wise useth knowledge aright, but the mouth of fools poureth out foolishness." "There is that speaketh like the piercings of a sword: but the tongue of the wise is health." "He that hath a perverse tongue, falleth into mischief." "Whoso keepeth his mouth and his tongue, keepeth his soul from troubles." "By long forbearing is a prince persuaded, and a soft tongue breaketh the bone."

It should be noted here that, from the extreme readiness with which the tongue obeys the impulses of the heart, the utterance of a hasty foolish or abusive word may, in certain circumstances, be much more excusable than the deliberate ill-natured out-pourings which are allowed to flow from the pen, and to pass, without correction, through the printing press. This latter abuse of speech is utterly without excuse, and should receive the unqualified disapproval of every one who values the example of Christ and his apostles.

Brethren, let us keep these things in mind as we come in contact with rough usage from our contemporaries. Let us remember, that, while we are not responsible for the consequences of plainly and firmly maintaining the defence of the gospel, we are responsible for the consequences of the spirit with which we do so. While we strive to be wise as serpents—in the wisdom of God, let us not forget that the same authority enjoins us to be harmless as doves. "Blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom shine we as lights in the world, holding fast the word of life."

Essay Read at the Iowa Conference.

THE CHRISTIAN GRACES.

The life of a true Christian is surely a beautiful life, gliding silently onward year after year, bringing peace and happiness to everything with which it comes in contact. Many graces are attendant upon this life, which come and go at the will of the individuals; each working for the good of all mankind.

These are patience, hope, mercy, faith, charity, help, perseverance, judgment, justice and politeness. Indeed there are so many, to mention them all, I have not space but will treat of the characteristics of a few of these graces.

There is Justice abroad, ever carrying the famous philosophers' scales, with which to balance the right and the wrong, the false and the true, taking Perseverance as her companion follows with untiring zeal the actions of her neighbors. Sometimes these scales are not properly adjusted, then judgments might be harsh did not faithful Mercy, ever near, hold up her tender hand of pity, and looking to God, ask also the motive as well as the act, crying, oh Justice, let the tears of the offender find more compassion, but not more justice from thee. Be solicitous to sift out the truth.

Whenever equity may justly temper the rigor of the law, let not the whole force of it bear upon the delinquent, for it is better that a judge lean on the side of compassion than severity, and perchance thy scales are not correctly balanced, and then justice finds that

"One gentle look, one kind word spoken,
May soothe and heal a heart that's broken."

Help goes on various missions with this to guide, "Whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only, in the name of a disciple, Verily I say unto you he shall in no wise lose his reward." Dark comfortless homes are entered, a smile of cheer is carried, a word of comfort is spoken, cold feet are made warm, hungry children are fed. Dorcas is making garments, not of fine linen, but, homely, warm garments, that will bring the glow to the blue, shivering lips. Help and Mercy, twin-sisters, entering even the prison-cells, where gloom and vice sit enthroned, shrinking not from the depths of sin, but directing and guiding to a better life, carrying hope to the despondent one, sinking lower and lower in the slough of despond, throwing out the life-line and crying, cling for your life, and we will draw you to the solid rock, we will take your feet from the mire and the clay and will place them on the Rock of Ages.

Of these various graces Politeness has the cunning gift of coming near the hearts of the people and making way for the others to work. It touches many hardened hearts as with a magic wand and makes friends where all else may fail.

Christian politeness is so essential to our happiness. Paul the apostle in writing to those churches that he loved so much exhorts them so many times to be kindly affectionate one to another. Politeness is to do and say the kindest thing in the kindest way.

Now, it must have been quite a trial for the good Ananias when told to go to Saul to say, Brother Saul; for this same Saul had always condemned the churches. He had stood by silently consenting unto the stoning of Stephen; he had heard unmoved the agonized cry, "Lord lay not this sin to their charge." Yet, when Ananias heard the call he said, "Behold, I am here Lord." On receiving the message to go to Saul we read his answer, "I have heard of many of this man, how much evil he hath done to thy saints at Jerusalem. And here, he hath authority from the chief-priests to bind all who call on thy name." But, on further command from the Lord, Ananias arose, and with courage to sustain him went boldly in to Saul and with the touch of faith and voice of love he said, Brother Saul, the Lord hath sent me. That magic greeting, brother, caused the long discordant pulse of Saul to vibrate, the scales fell from his eyes, and he arose and was baptized.

We all have read of the life of Paul and know how the refiner can change the broken vessel and bring order and love from chaos and hatred.

When the men brought the woman before Jesus accused of a crime considered worthy of death, all anxious to accuse and to punish, Jesus knew they were all full of sin, but instead of telling them so, he stooped and wrote upon the ground, his heart merciful to all mankind, and politely said, "He that is without sin let him cast the first stone." We know the result, a difficult problem solved, a life saved through the mercies of a polite soul. It is this polite working for God that will help many a weary one into a better life. Working for God is the vocation of the Christian. The work lies within two spheres, one sphere usually involving the other. Work for God is often work for our fellows. Many times it is work for ourselves in the effort to subdue wrong states of the heart, or to build up right states of feeling.

In this that gracious grace, Charity, works an important part. Often the effort to create right states in ourselves is best promoted indirectly by active efforts directly for the good of others, so that we may almost say that our entire work for God is working for others. And God wants our best work, our best efforts.

"Charity suffereth long and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil, rejoiceth not in iniquity, but in truth, beareth all things, hopeth all things. Charity never faileth."

Those only are artists who feel that their best is constantly required of them. Every artistic production is the partial manifestation of some one's mind, and that production attains the higher possibilities as the mind is more and more drawn to truthfulness and free expression by a constant effort to do the very best that is attainable.

Faith is another important grace. By faith was taught to the generation of Abraham that human sacrifice was not a requirement of God. The heathen races round did not shrink from giving up their children, much as they might love them, as sacrifices to their gods when great calamities befel their country. Would Abraham be able to show equal devotion to the one Most High God whom he worshipped? In Ammon and Moab, Egypt and Phœnicia human sacrifices were familiar. The right of the father over even the life of his offspring being everywhere recognized as absolute and indisputable. This sentiment we find carried to the length of sacrificing their children even by Hebrew fathers, as in the days of Jephtha, and in the days of Ahaz and Manasseh, the children passed through the fire. Abraham heard the command, take thy son, thy only son, whom thou lovest, even Isaac. God seems to wish to make the surrender as complete as can be, each loved name being a fresh stab. In what way should the former promise, "Thou shalt be the father of many nations," be established? Isaac was the son of his old age. Old men's children are proverbially dear to them, and Abraham loved Isaac with all the deep wealth of a father's heart. Yet his faith was undaunted, and who can depict or enter into the deep trial of that father's heart as he journeyed three days with his beloved boy toward Mount Morish, or the anguish of soul in the oft repeated word, "My son."

When Isaac in innocent wonder asked, from whence should the sacrifice come, how the sob of suppressed anguish shook his frame as he told him the Lord would provide a sacrifice. We know as he was about to complete the hideous rite the trial was stopped, the uplifted hand was stayed, his faith had stood the fiercest test. Isaac was not to be injured, a ram caught in a thicket near by was to be slain in his stead. No wonder Abraham called the name of the place, "The Lord will provide." Oh the men in future ages would use the whole incident as an encouragement to trust in God under all trials of faith. In the mount of the Lord help is provided.

The good graces in the life of a Christian are so many and such a broad field of labor before us that if we set them to work we will have no time or room for the temptations that beset our way.

These graces are our talents; and not only one is given, but many. Let us not bury them.

The world is beautiful, its green valleys, its rolling plains, its lofty mountains are proudly rearing their hoary heads high in the starry blue; the warbling song birds and the rustling leaves all present a scene pleasing to the eye and ear, yet there is something more beautiful than all these, and that is the life of a true Christian—and be we Christian or not, we are scattering seeds which will yield a bountiful harvest of wheat or tares. God grant that we with care sow the good seed that will bring forth blessings.

"We sow for two worlds day by day,
Two harvests for our reaping;
One near at hand, one far away,
Of joy or bitter weeping.
But sweetly is the message told,
The good seed for our casting
Yields in this world a hundred fold
The next—life everlasting.

We sow for two worlds, not for one;
The strange we do not cherish
Beneath the stars, beneath the sun
Will never never perish.
But good seed cast in to the mold,
Preserved from blight or blasting,
Yields in this world a hundred fold
The next—life everlasting.

We sow for two worlds, not for one;
Through years and unseen ranges;
For hate its fateful harvests bear
Unchanged through all life's changes;
And love, in deed or language told
Its ripened seed recasting,
Yields in this life a hundred fold
The next—life everlasting.

Every Day Alike.

"One man esteemeth one day above another; another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind." Rom. xiv. 5. From the context of this Scripture, we safely conclude that there was a difference of opinion and practice among the brethren over the subject of eating, and the same troubles come down to us. Not only so, but there was trouble in the camp over the subject of the days. One weak brother, it seems was not able to see that the difference between clean and unclean meats, as found in the law was done away, while others whose judgment had been exercised more fully, could see that all this difference was now done away in Christ, so much so that Paul could safely say, "I know, and am persuaded by the Lord Jesus, that there is nothing unclean of itself: but to him that esteemeth any thing to be unclean, to him it is unclean." Thus far we presume that general agreement prevails, but the rub will come over the days, so let it come the sooner the better. We ask how many days are included in every day as contrasted with one day? Remember it was the weak ones that were befogged over the time honored difference in meats and also in days. Now we ask, did that master stroke make clean work in annulling the difference between clean and unclean meats; and in days, times and years, or were some things excepted, and left for bones of contention? If so, what are they? Some of the wise scribes tell us that the seventh day sabbath was excepted and in their haste to convince us quote the opinions of Benson, Clark and others. Well, why not quote from Paul or Peter, or some inspired writer? There can be but one answer, that is, they have failed to testify favorably. They were on the other side in this case. Can you believe that Paul would make such a broad sweeping declaration, and not except the sabbath, if he knew it was excepted? Would you my brother? And as he made no exception, what right have you to make any? And as we find no inspired writer making any exception, are you not clear out of the record when you assume the sabbath was excepted? We find that the Colossian brethren were also troubled over the sabbath and other questions, and Paul takes up his pen to set them right. Listen to inspiration, "Let no man therefore judge you in meat or drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days: which are a shadow of things to come, but the body is of Christ." Col. ii. 16, 17. Leaving off the "days" in this case, and the "alike" in the other and the sense is just the same, one man esteemeth one day above another, another what? day of course, another esteemeth every day, in contrast to the one who esteems one day above another day and then every day alike is perfectly admissable being the sense of the sentence. Just so in regard to the sabbath days in Col. Leave off "days" and it would read, "Let no one judge you in respect of the sabbaths," without one word respecting reservations or exceptions, while this word sabbaton is the same identical word for weekly sabbath in the New Testament, why not the weekly sabbath here? While if the weekly sabbath is not included here, why did not inspiration tell us so, and not leave us to follow the whims and opinions of uninspired men? And then I would like to know why the word "every day" is not as comprehensive as the word "every man" in the same verse, Rom. xiv. 5. But we are met with the statement, "It is not true that the expression 'every day' necessarily includes the sabbath." We say it is true, because inspiration never saw fit to make the exception, but hold, let us hear that clear Bible case, Ex. xvi. 4, Then said the Lord unto Moses, "Behold, I will rain bread from heaven for you, and the people shall go out and gather a certain rate every day that I may prove them whether they will walk in my law or no." Here they were told to gather a certain rate every day. Yet on the sabbath there was none—hence none to gather. This is true, but not the whole truth, for in the next verse the Lord says, "And it shall come to pass, that on the sixth day they shall prepare that which they bring in; and it shall be twice as much as they gather daily." A new thought and a new ring to it. Now let Moses explain this to the people, and all is plain. In verse 26 he says six days ye shall gather it, but on the seventh day, which is the sabbath, in it there shall be none. The difference is plain. In this case, the sabbath is plainly and emphatically excepted. In the other case it is not excepted. So let it be.

T. E. Adams.

The Gospel and its Benefits.

This subject opens a field of thought so wide and varied that it is impossible to here give it more than a very brief consideration. In the first place, the Anglo Saxon word gospel signifies good news or glad tidings. In Romans i. 1, it is spoken of as the gospel of God because it is a message from God, and in many places it is called, "The gospel of the kingdom." This shows that the gospel is good news or glad tidings from God, concerning his kingdom. The apostles were commanded to preach the gospel to all nations, and the people were commanded to believe it. In Mark i. 14, 15, we read, "Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel."

Paul in writing to the Thessalonian brethren tells them of the fearful punishment which shall be upon those who do not obey this command. He says, "And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." 2 Thes. i. 7, 8.

Christ and his apostles declared the same message, preaching the everlasting gospel of which Peter said, "All flesh is as grass and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away: but the Word of the Lord endureth forever. And this is the Word which by the gospel is preached unto you." 1 Pet. i. 24, 25. Paul, in the first chapter and eighth verse of his epistle to the churches of Galatia, says, "But though we or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed."

Why is it so necessary that ministers preach and that people believe, not a gospel, but the gospel? In Mark xvi. 15, 16, we find the words of Christ to the apostles, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."

Also in Cor. i. 18, we read, "For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved, it is the power of God."

Thus we see that is upon the acceptance of this gospel, that our salvation depends. Let us therefore heed the message through which Christ brought life and immortality to light, (1 Tim. i. 10) even if we are compelled to give up many of the pleasures, pursuits, and friends in this life, for Christ has said, "Verily I say unto you, there is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands for my sake and the gospel's, but he shall receive a hundredfold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life." Mark x. 29, 30.

Relying on this promise, may we be able to say with Paul, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." Romans i. 16.

☞It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

The Future Age.

Oh, when will righteousness prevail
In life, when will sin and sorrow cease;
Not till Jesus comes to reign,
Lord of life, and Prince of peace.

Oh, come, Lord Jesus, quickly come,
And take the sceptre in thine hand;
And cause the nations, every one
To bow the knee at thy command.

Then will the law from Zion go,
Bid all the nations to draw near,
Up to Jerusalem they'll go
To worship Christ once ev'ry year.

Then, then, the people it will awake,
And from their dusty beds will rise,
And Abraham with all the saints,
Shout victory over death and sin.

He will the earth re-form for man,
And in the earth a place to [illegible]

State Organization.

I noticed an article in a late RESTITUTION, from a sister, on the subject of evangelizing.

The writer infers that more good can be accomplished by keeping pastors over churches than by the evangelist plan.

I have been a close observer for several years, and have given this subject much careful study and attention, and am convinced that by a perfect system of organization the plan of keeping one or more evangelists in the field is more in accordance with the Bible plan in Paul's time than any other way. It takes some time to get the work well understood by all members, but when all work together in harmony a more successful plan cannot be suggested.

The writer says under the evangelist plan the work is often abandoned after a church is organized, and the sheep scattered on account of no shepherd or pastor.

We read where Paul ordained elders in every church, and again, when they, Paul and Barnabas had preached the gospel to that city and had taught many, they returned again to Lystra, and Iconium, and Antioch, confirming the souls of the disciples and exhorting them to continue in the faith.

If the evangelist visits each church three or four times for one year, they ought by that time to be self-supporting, and will if the interest is kept up with regular social meetings, etc.

A few persons of courage, fidelity and integrity, with hearts in the work can keep a large congregation in a prosperous condition without a pastor.

Here in Nebraska this plan has been very successful. We point with pride to the success the work has attained under this system during the last five years. Starting with one church and about fifty members in the State, the work has increased to ten organized churches and about four hundred members.

But success lies entirely in harmony in action, push and energy of all members, and a liberal use of the means that God has given. But, let me say right here that unless the pocket-book is converted as well as the heart, but little good may be expected.

Economy is another point to be considered. Suppose you employ a preacher to preach for a church on Sundays the usual way, and pay, say $600.00 for a year. He will work perhaps not to exceed one-hundred days including revival meetings. The evangelist will put in over three hundred days (at least the evangelist has in this state) a gain of two hundred days in a year.

Now I ask why is it that our people are so slow in adopting a system by which all the churches in a state may work together in unity?

Is it because the plan of employing pastors is adopted by all other churches and is more popular? If so, away with popularity and high-toned preachers, and let us have the old fashioned kind like Paul and Stephen, and James and a host of others.

Look at the quarterly and annual reports from the states who have adopted this system. Compare with those who have not and notice the difference in the figures. Iowa, Kansas, and Oregon have adopted the plan of State Organization, but it is only partially carried out, some still holding to the old way which causes a hindrance in the work. In some states evangelists work on what is called their "own hook." This is not the best mode for several reasons, but the principle one is, that he must depend on the charity of the people for support, and in order to maintain a concrete existence must often quit preaching, go home and work at his trade if he has one or get encumbered so as to incorporate his Employers. In the mean time the interests die out and much of his efforts lost.

It is no longer a question in my mind, but that one faithful preacher under State Organization will accomplish more in a year than six under any other plan now in vogue.

In conclusion let me urge our brethren everywhere to give this subject their candid attention.

Go into this matter in an earnest business-like manner for one or two years and you will be greatly astonished at the result. People every where are eager to hear the truth. The time is short in which to work. The indications are that this entire people nation is on the verge of an awful rebellion between capital and labor. Christ's return and a new dispensation may be ushered in at any time. Therefore what is to be done must be done quickly.

Yours, for the advancement of truth.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Harriett Phelps, aged 76 years, 1 month and 2 days, died at the home of her daughter in Deep River, In., July 10, 1894. At the age of 18 she joined the Christian Church, and 32 years ago became interested in the gospel of the kingdom of God and expressed her faith in the act of baptism into the name of Jesus the Christ, which rite was administered by Elder Whitcombe. Mrs. Phelps has been a widow for 9 years, Bro. Phelps having died in 1885. She has always been a faithful member of the Body of Christ since her baptism. Her life was in harmony with her profession. During the last hours of her illness she spoke of the bright hope of a resurrection and immortality when Jesus comes. We believe she will live again, hence there is hope in our sorrow. She now sleeps in her grave in a beautiful mound upon the prairie awaiting the tramp of God.

Announcement.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Kansas, will be held three miles northeast of Oxford, in Cowley County, at Bro. Thomas Jackson's schoolhouse. This meeting will last about ten days, commencing August the tenth, 1894. There is some important business to transact. Business meeting will be on Saturday at two o'clock P. M. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can bring tents and come prepared to camp. The brethren at Oxford are wholesouled, hospitable folks, but it is too much for women to have to work all the time and get no good of the meetings, so let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master. The commotion of the world indicates his coming is very near. All speaking brethren wishing any information correspond with Bro. S. P. Oliver, Attica, Kan. A full program will be published in due time.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittance to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1894, the sum set opposite, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons who, being debarred from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

Poetry.

In the Shadow.

I walk down the valley with one I love best,
My Father walks by my side;
I cannot see where He is leading me,
But I trust Him implicitly;
For He holds my hand in the shadow,
And I know He will not let me fall,
I trust Him here in spite of all.

Down there by the dark by-paths of sorrow,
Sometimes I shrink with anguish and pain,
But I cannot, that hand so strong and true,
The voice that whispers in my ear,
"I know the road," I say to me,
"Rest in the love that cares for thee!"

I can not tell why this way
By which I am through night to day;
But, some day later, I know my feet
Will walk in sunshine, broad and sweet;
And, some day later, in fairer skies
The radiant folds of love arise.

Redemption.

"Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits, who forgiveth all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases, who redeemeth thy life from destruction, who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies."

In a former article I endeavored to show that the Bible called attention to the fact that the Creator stands to us in the position of a parent toward children, and the overtures of reconciliation come from him. Now a gentleman who is a Bible reader tried to explain to me the other day that God in justice demanded "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth." He told me in great earnestness that God in no wise took into consideration human virtue, and in fact there was no such thing in his sight, "none righteous, no not one," and in the purity of holiness he simply condemned the whole race entire, the bad no worse than the best, the best no better than the worst. My friend says that God only recognizes merit in Christ. "Under the cover of the blood" all is reversed, all is pure, the best no better than the worst, the worst no better than the best. Of course we have heard this sort of thing before, and we all must allow that such Calvinistic logic makes a good deal of neat and natty "business methods" and my friend is a business man, and smart, sharp "business methods" are rather attractive where you do not have to deal with them too close.

And are we to receive Christ only on condition of believing such as that? There are many false Christs that have gone out into the world, and this is one of them and every Christ that proveth dishonorable or denieth God, is a deceiver and a liar no matter if he comes with an affectation of sanctity that brings tears to the eyes. So far from the heavenly Father "lumping" judgment in this unreasonable manner we are told that he takes "every work into judgment and every secret thing, whether it be good or evil." We read in the story of Jeroboam the wicked king of Israel, that God carefully took into account the little bud of virtue in this king's dying child and reserved it from the curse inflicted on the rest of his race. He exonerated the wicked Ahali in the same manner on account of his, at least temporary repentance. As for his careful and merciful dealings with his people all through the sacred history we cannot occupy space to quote. The whole is a mine of inspiration as to how God broods over humanity, ready to take advantage, cultivate and reward any feeble attempts to "feel after him" and practice righteousness out of a pure heart. Such foolish generalizing as the above only arises from misreading certain passages in the New Testament in order to bolster up certain far-fetched theories that can't be made to hang together any other way, but as I said before we must read in the light of fact and common sense. "Ah! what is common sense," asks the smiling agnostic, "hasn't every body got a different kind?" Not at all, common sense is not as common as it might be, that is a fact, but that can be easily accounted for in theological circles as it is "atrophied" in that case, no attempt being made to use it, and those who do, take risks of calumny and social ostracism. Now, common sense is the general instinct of humanity implanted by God to enable us to distinguish between truth and error, right and wrong. Had we not this instinct more or less, reason would be altogether useless, for it would lay no hold on the mind, we would have no thought in common, and no language in common, for thought is only valuable when it can be applied in common, and language is only a conventional code of signals held in common to communicate mutually. Common sense is not variable like sunlight and atmosphere. It is God's breath, and one in all ages, and in all lands. Customs change, laws change, thought changes, language changes, but no language, no thought, no law, no custom has ever been in any age or land but can be reduced to the common sense of our own time and country, so that we are able to judge of how much sense there was in the said custom, law, thought or expression, for all things after all must be brought to this last divine court of appeal, for be it known that our maker has the same sympathy in common with us, in this matter, otherwise he could not "reason together" with us.

Now for instance the great apostle who wrote so many things that are "hard to be understood" wrote concerning the church that there are "neither Jew nor Gentile, bond or free, male or female" are we actually to instruct that there were no differences between men and women then, because he says so? Why no, the language is subservient to the sense in which he was speaking. We know what he means. So in the dispute in which Luther insisted that the Savior said, "This is my body" and that therefore it must be so. Now, we all know that Luther had right good common sense, but he did not use it. Paul says again, "Ye are not redeemed with corruptible things, such as silver and gold, but with the precious blood of Christ." Now are we to understand by this that silver and gold are corruptible, when we know they are the very type used in other Scriptures to express incorruptibility, indestructibility and purity. ("gold tried in the fire. He shall set as a refiner and purifier of silver") and when we know also they are the pure and indestructible metals, and are we to believe that the actual blood of Christ had a mysterious talismanic power different from the blood of other men. Such ideas are too mechanically gross for consideration, were it not that a dull priesthood and their dumb following have harped so long and so hard on the letter that they never caught the sense of the Word. Now what does Scriptural redemption mean? The Word tells us Jesus "takes away the sin of the world." He does not heal the rash on the outside, he cures the fever in the inside. The consequence of sin must follow, the rash must come out, no use troubling with that. Taking away sin means the radical cure of the spirit of man and the implanting in him of the benign, noble, generous, charitable spirit of the Father of which the Son is the illustration and the type, and of course the change in disposition involves the change in circumstances, which is the kingdom of heaven, and which can only be possible under such circumstances. Redemption is not escaping the wrathful sword of the executioner, it is returning into the family circle where the latch string always hangs out, and always has hung outside the door. My friend asked me under these circumstances, what was the necessity for Christ to die, and I tried to tell him that if Christ only came to introduce the possibility of forgiveness to the human race he certainly died in vain, for the historians and poets of the Old Testament spake and sang of the forgiveness of sin centuries before Christ did not die to introduce God's forgiveness, but to manifest the divine sympathy in its fullness, so that humanity perceiving it, by the common sense God gives, may be brought to put confidence in such a being emulating the example and imbibing the spirit. This is the "story of the cross" the "cleansing of the blood" there is nothing mysterious about it. It is the wooing and winning of the heavenly message, the power that must eventually conquer and sweep violence from the face of the earth. For after all humanity has more pluck than sense, and has faced all the theological threatenings of this priest ridden century without being entirely bulldozed, and I'm glad of it, but where humanity receives kind treatment, it takes all the fight out of it. Yes, the only way to annihilate the devil is to treat him handsomely, fire and sword only makes him fat and "sassy."

The message of God through Christ is at least partially appreciated by all civilized people today, entirely apart from the theologies in vogue, it chords with common sense, not ordinary sense, for there are senses that we have in common, that are very extraordinary; and here we may perceive the divinity of the plan, that it reaches beyond and above human manipulation or mutilation. God's purpose in suffering the death of Jesus can be better understood today than in the day of the apostles. History has shed light on the subject, even now the name of Jesus is set above every other human name, his example has inspired the noble of all the ages. The soft and tender influence of the divine spirit, by the power of the simple story has already done wonders on the face of the globe, and wrought itself into the warp and woof of human life. Even the daily mail in every post office, for instance is stamped from the date of his birth. What will it be in the end thereof, in the consummation, for which this is but the preparation.

J. F. GELLETLY.

Who Authorized the Change? No. 2.

Allow me to call special attention to the confession of Dean Stanley, which can be found in the Nineteenth Century of October, 1879. He says: "The change from immersion to sprinkling has set aside the larger part of apostolic language regarding baptism, and has altered the very meaning of the word. The reason for the change is obvious. The practice of immersion, apostolic and primitive as it was, peculiarly suited to the southern and eastern countries for which it was designed, and peculiarly unsuitable to the tastes, the convenience, and the feelings of the countries of the north and west. There is no one who would now wish to go back to the old practice. It had no doubt the sanction of the apostles and their Master. It had the sanction of the venerable churches of the early ages, and of the sacred countries of the east. But, speaking generally, the Christian civilized world has decided against it. It is a striking example of the triumph of common sense and convenience over the bondage of form and custom."

Did Isaiah prophecy relative to this change? See Isa. xxiv. 5: "The earth mourneth and fadeth away, the world languisheth and fadeth away, the haughty people of the earth do languish. The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant."

The Episcopalian Dean admits that "the change from immersion to sprinkling has set aside the larger part of the apostolic language regarding baptism, and has altered the very meaning of the word." He also admits that they have "changed" that which "had no doubt the sanction of the apostles and their Master." He also says: "the Christian civilized world has decided it," even that which "had no doubt the sanction of the apostles and their Master." And also characterizes the above "change" of "the Christian civilized world," as "a striking example of the triumph of common sense and convenience over the bondage of form and custom." In other words, the "change" of "the Christian civilized world," is "a triumph of common sense," but those who adhere to that which "had no doubt the sanction of the apostles and their Master," cling to "the bondage of form and custom." And by this change, they have even dared to "change" that which "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." I Pet. ii. 21. Have they not, as Isaiah said: "changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant?"

And so well satisfied are they with the "change" "the Christian civilized world" has made that "there is no one who would now wish to go back to the old practice," although "it had no doubt the sanction of the apostles and their Master," because they consider their "change" a "triumph of common sense, over the bondage of form and custom," which was introduced by "the apostles and their Master."

The Dean says: "the change from immersion to sprinkling has set aside the larger part of the apostolic language regarding baptism, and has altered the very meaning of the word baptism." Who authorized "the Christian civilized world" to "change" the "language," which "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit?" and alter the very meaning of the word" baptism, which had "the sanction of the apostles and their Master?"

Our Western Avenue pastor is one of those who would not "wish to go back to the old practice," although "it had no doubt the sanction of the apostles and their Master," because he claims that it does not "comport with even decency." I quote from his remarks with regard to the baptism of the three thousand on the day of Pentecost: "The people could not have been immersed, for they were not prepared for it, nor would the modesty of the Jewish women, or the peculiar customs of the times, with respect to ladies, suffer it. For they had such notions about female propriety, as all know who are acquainted with oriental manners, as would have made them turn with abhorence from the very suggestion that they be taken into the hands of men and publicly plunged under the water. Such a ceremony could not under such circumstances comport with even decency, to say nothing about that scrupulous refinement taught by the Bible." * * * "Sprinkling or pouring comports with decency and propriety under all circumstances, but immersion cannot. For instance, as at John's baptism, or on the day of Pentecost, when thousands were assembled, making a mixed multitude of all ages and both sexes, in the open air. Now, I ask, with any propriety could they change their raiment, or be put under the water without change and remain in such clothes after? Does the gospel, ever gracious, and whose principles never offend even the most fastidious, confront its new converts with such a requirement? I don't think so. Do you?"

What think you of men claiming to be ministers, and followers of the Lord Jesus Christ, when speaking of an ordinance He has ordained and commanded to be observed, declare that "the Christian civilized world has decided against it," and at the same time approve of it as "a striking example of the triumph of common sense and convenience over the bondage of form and custom?" How dare they stigmatize that which the Master has ordained as not comporting with even "common sense," and does not even comport with "decency and propriety," and at the same time declare that the "change" the Christian civilized world, has made from being "buried with him in baptism," (Col. ii. 12), to "sprinkling or pouring (which) comports with decency and propriety under all circumstances?" Are they not wresting the Scriptures to their own destruction? 2 Pet. iii. 16.

Our Western Avenue pastor evidently does not think that the apostles on the day of Pentecost, or John the Baptist did not know enough to provide places for change of raiment, the same as they do at this day. He wants to know with what "propriety" these Jewish ladies could "change their raiment, or be put under the water without change, and remain in such clothes after?" It certainly would comport with "propriety" to make the change of raiment, in proper places provided for such change. The charge the Western Avenue Pastor of the Methodist Church makes in the above extract from his sermon, that immersion cannot comport with decency, propriety and modesty, is an impure reflection upon the Master who commanded that believers of both sexes should be immersed in his name for remission of sins. Even Dean Stanley, who approves the change made by the "Christian civilized world," admits that "the change from immersion to sprinkling has set aside the larger part of the apostolic language regarding baptism, and has altered the very meaning of the word" baptize. They have thus "altered the very meaning of the word," as given by our Savior, and as revealed by the Holy Spirit, through holy inspired men; thus the pure teaching of the Savior, the apostles and the Holy Spirit, have they dared to "set aside," to make it comport with their ideas of "decency," "modesty," "propriety," "convenience" and "common sense." The thought of immodest in a refined Christian lady who seeks to be buried with her Lord in the sacred ordinance of baptism cannot be once thought of. Impure thoughts take their rise only in the mind that is already impure. "Unto the pure all things are pure; but unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure; but even their mind and conscience is defiled. They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable, and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate." Titus i. 15, 16.

These men "profess they know God," and yet they suggest thoughts of impurity in connection with an ordinance commanded by him whose every deed, thought, word, aim and action of his holy life was essentially pure. Shame on men who would change the meaning of his words, and change his ordinances, and call it "a striking example of the triumph of common sense." Beware of "the Christian civilized world," they are faithful daughters of the "Woman" who sits on the seven hills, who has no scruple about changing the Word of God.

"He Endured the Cross."

Yes, "He endured the cross, the disgrace the loss." I shrink as I think of the agony. We have our Gethsemanes, but was there ever such a Gethsemane as that which sent great drops of bloody sweat pouring from the Savior's veins? It is not an easy thing, when innocent, to be branded and to die as a criminal, and to voluntarily face such a death. Could you do it?

You have heard the story hundreds of times; it may be true, but you have thought of it only as a matter of history. It has affected you no more than the story of the life of Alexander the Great. It has never taken hold of your consciousness as real fact that has everything to do with your real happiness here and your destiny hereafter. You listen stolidly and indifferently when the story is told.

You even laugh when we try to impress upon you a sense of its seriousness and importance, and yet, without a Savior there is no salvation. Eternal life can only be obtained through him. He is the only being to whom has been entrusted the keys that will unlock the grave, his voice is the voice that is to awaken the dead, his the power to give life forevermore.

"He endured the cross" that he might have this power. You must be named with his name if you would come up in the resurrection of the just. The reproaches of them that reproached him must fall upon you. You must walk the shining path, although it be one of thorns.

You may have dimly turned to Jesus for the moment, when dear forms have been laid away, but it with no assured hope. You rejoiced not in knowing that they if sleeping in him would rise from the dead. How could you rejoice? He is not your Savior, you could draw no comfort from thoughts of a future meeting.

You talk lightly of death; you wish you could die. But how little you realize what death really is. No punishment can bear any comparison to the punishment that puts us out of being. Losing ourselves, it advantageth nothing though we gain the whole world. Think of coming to the second death, and being condemned to the cruel prison house of the grave forever, every avenue of escape shut off, all possibilities of happiness and attainment taken away.

You enjoy much now, more than you care to acknowledge. You are glad in the gladness of the blossoms. Your heart sings with the singing of the birds. You find exquisite pleasure in the varied green of the forest. The gardens and the fields are a joy. And friends,—who can measure what you feel in companionship with these? And the dear home, with its cool rooms and warmth of love; what pride and comfort you take in their possession.

But all this is only a foretaste—a prophecy, of the coming bliss. Softer skies and fairer landscapes will deck the edenic land, undying friendship's will be there. Glory and honor will be attained, thrones seats and crowns will be won.

And you will miss it all! You will go down hopelessly into the arms of death! The last moments will be ebbing away. You will turn with pleading eyes to friends, you will think of the thousand opportunities you have had of becoming a child of God—gone forever. I can conceive of nothing more terrible than a death-bed without a Savior; and that death-bed will be yours unless you repent.

You can have him now, "He endured the cross, the disgrace, the loss," for you, and YOU, YOU.

Come to him to-day. Prove that you believe the story of his sufferings by being baptized into his name.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the doctrine of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of Kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Dear Restitution:

Again I am glad of the offered opportunity of appreciating the Lord's will to sustain me in life. So many are each week being called to sleep in Jesus, all at rest in the grave, some to await the glorious coming, as it was their last thought. We must all pass away unless it be the Master's will for some of us to remain to witness the appearance. Weakness is our nature. We are as the grass of the field, to be cut down by the rapid swathing scythe of time, but,

"Life is real! Life is earnest!
And the grave is not its goal;
Dust thou art, to dust returnest,
Was not spoken of the soul.

Art is long, and time is fleeting,
And our hearts, though stout and brave,
Still like muffled drums are beating
Funeral marches to the grave.

Footprints, that perhaps another,
Sailing o'er life's solemn main,
A forlorn and shipwrecked brother,
Seeing, shall take heart again."

The Lord has given us bright hopes of the future which grow brighter as we near the end. What can express the joyous sensations, the triumphant delight, the passionate feeling of liberty, that will possess us when we behold the all-glorious Savior's coming in love and peace. May we now kindly accept the advice of Longfellow when he says,

"Let us then be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait.

We have but little time now to wait. How glad we should be that he is coming to purify this world, and make every thing beautiful. "Such music as never was heard, such beautiful scenes as the human eye never beheld, will be in that time." Let us be diligent, faithful workers, and watchers, doing the will of him who suffered for us. What faith he had.

"Lord give me such a faith as this,
And then, whate'er may come,
We'll taste, e'en here the hallowed bliss
Of an eternal home."

Is the prayer and wish of your Sister in Christ.

New Things.

I held a new Mason can in my hand, it was beautifully clear and clean. I thought to myself, the old cans are all burned up, but though the loss was something, there is pleasure in having new things.

The dear old home is gone but the new one will take its place.

And so, though we mourn with almost the grief of one who stands by the grave of a friend, over the perished things that were associated with the names of the dead. Our grief is mending as we learn to look more fondly to the new things that will rise after the burning day has swept the works of men into ruin. It has been an object lesson that we shall never forget. The things of the present, are, but for a moment, the unseen things are eternal.

Now life, new robes, new friends, new scenes, new song, new love, new stars, new city, new earth!

"Old things are passed away, behold all things are become new."

"New measures of new people
Whose God's own fire and light,
Promote, increase, make holy,
Identify, unite.
Thou city of the angels!
Thou city of the Lord!
Whose everlasting music
To the glad is declared,
And there the band of prophets,
United praise ascribes,
And there the twelve-fold chorus
Of Israel's ransomed tribes.
* * * * *
Oh desire that know no sorrow,
O state that fears no strife,
O priestly bowers! O land of flowers,
O Realm and Home of Life!

"Strive men to gain that glory,
Toil man to gain that light."

THE "Symposium of Faith" furnished for us by the Iowa Conference may contain sentiments we do not endorse. The writers are responsible for them. We insert them as sent by the Conference Board without comment.

AN item in a daily paper last week to the effect that the long-talked-of "European war seems to have started in Asia," though meant as a joke, may have truth for its foundation. The hostilities between China and Japan appear to have begun before the actual declaration of war, and Japan may have been hasty in firing on a vessel flying the British flag. We will await the outcome with interest.

Editor Restitution:

Last fall I heard for the first time, some of the blessed truths of the gospel, and this spring I moved in a place where it is not preached, nor there are not any members of the church living here, and ever since I heard, I began to see light, but there are many things that I do not understand as I would like to. I am anxious to learn more, but so far have not been able to get money enough ahead to send for THE RESTITUTION or any of your helps, so I thought I would ask you to send me the paper for six months, and about 75 cents worth of tracts, without the pay until fall. I would not ask you to do this for me if I was not certain I could pay you. I am a widow with five children to care for, but I own a farm which helps me a little but last year the crops were poor, so I have been compelled to live very saving so I would have no bills to pay this fall, and so far I have succeeded, unless you will allow me to contract this one. I am living in town and am getting along as well as I can but so far I have failed to get anything ahead so that I could send for any helps in my Bible studies, and I cant say how eager I am to learn more of this truth, and it has been so long that it seems like I can't wait untill my corn is ready to gather. I got a paper from a friend printed in February, and out of it I picked several tracts that I think would be a help to me, and any help that I may get I expect to make good use of by copying and sending the copies to friends—knowing as I do how poor this church is, I would not think of getting anything for nothing, so dont think but what I will pay you, but perhaps I had better tell you like this, "I will pay you if times are so I can sell any thing."

Respectfully,

MRS. ——

The above letter will indicate to our readers the tenor of a good many others that we have received. Now, this Sister intends to pay, and after such an appeal we cannot, anymore than you could, refuse to send her the paper and tracts. We feel that she is trustworthy, though to our knowledge, we never heard of her before. So we write and tell her the goods are sent. If nothing happens to the crops and times are so that they can be sold, we will get our pay, we feel certain. But if any one of the thousand accidents should happen—fire or storm destroy the crops; sickness or death touch mother or children,—then we are out. If this were an isolated case the loss would not be great, and we would gladly stand it. But there are many such. Not a week passes without bringing several such. We have done what we could, with the aid of some few donations, for several years now, and are still willing to do all our means will allow. Our object in writing this is to see if some one does not want to start a fund to be devoted to such cases. The expense to be paid from the fund, and if it is paid finally by the one receiving the benefit, then their money can be put in the fund for others to be helped. Brethren, this is needed, and the money will not have to lay idle for months. Who will act?

Josephitelsm. No. 4.

Several Josephites are disturbed over our remarks about the Woman's Seed. We rather expected this. The truth always disturbs those who try to evade it. In one sense we are sorry—sorry they will not accept what is so plainly revealed for faith, and labor so hard, and spend their means to disseminate a theory of their own in lieu of it. In another sense we are glad—glad of the evidence that truth is doing what it was intended to do—witnessing and dividing. It will not return void. The good work goes on and we are glad.

They must be exceedingly verdant to think their vagaries would not be criticised after making them public property. Did they really presume so much upon our ignorance as to think their statement that the words, "Seed of the Woman," in Gen. iii. 15 "refers to no particular person, but to the godly, righteous and sober portion of our race?" Well, well!

They tell us that both seeds are spiritual offsprings; one the children of God, the other the children of the serpent, or evil one; each seed follows the natural bent of its father. From this, we take it, that neither God nor the serpent is father to any of Adam's children at first; God subsequently becomes father to here and there one, and the serpent becomes father of all the rest. The reason of this one-sided affair is passed over in silence; they do not know why it is so. The belief that Joseph is the father of Jesus has not given them the key to this part of the subject; indeed it is that belief which creates this mystery.

Their conduct in setting aside the only promise of God calculated to inspire faith, and love, and obedience, and hope, and thus begetting sons and daughters, which James i. 18 proves to be the divine method, is perfectly suicidal; and it reminds us of a caricature of General Grant published some few years ago, in which he was represented as sawing off the limb of a tree he was sitting upon. They talk about God's children, after ruling out the hope set before them in the first promise—the only means of begetting children—the Word of truth. Oh, what clumsy system-builders they are. They talk about a righteous class of men after discarding the only motive to live righteously. They talk about godly people after robbing them of the gospel, which is now, and ever has been, the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth it. So that God must have forcibly injected a ready-made godly character into just a few, and abandoned all the rest, if he manifested no love to them in gracious propositions.

But perhaps we are too fast here. Possibly they think there was and is gospel in this announcement that the Seed of the Woman shall bruise the serpent's head, from their point of view. If that be so, they must think it was good news that at some time or other, some hour or other, the serpent's seed would diminish, and the Seed of the Woman would increase. But, unless this was to take place in their then present life time, what inducement was there in it for them to live godly? Were they not under the sentence of death? If the good condition of things promised be delayed for thousands of years, did they expect to live to see it? If not, how would it benefit them? And if it would not benefit them personally were they required to believe only in something that would benefit others away on in the future? If so, we ask again, what inducement was there in this, to faith and obedience on their part?

If the Seed of the Woman of Gen. iii. 15 be first, last, always and only a righteous class of the human family, this is what the antedoluvians had to believe in; and Josephites too have to believe in a righteous class of the human family,—have to believe in Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob and David, and all the patriarchs, prophets, apostles and martyrs, and have to believe in themselves as well,—and they do; they say something and then make it an article of faith, and on this principle, if there be a future generation of Josephites they will believe in the Josephites of this age, because the theory exhibits a sort of mutual salvation society; nearly all of them being dead members. And being dead, what is there to enable them to live again? And if not able to live themselves how can they assist others? In that case, what is the use of believing in one class of people, in preference to another?

Of course Josephites will deny they believe in anything so ridiculous, but that is because they do not reason out the logical result of their assumptions. They seem afraid to stop and think for fear of the consequences; and so deliver a decree and hurry off to a safe distance, and make another, and another till they have a veritable hit-or-miss scheme of their own; but it is only calculated to entrap those who have been befogged with the mysteries of the "Holy Trinity," "Eternal Sonship" and kindred doctrines of the apostasy, and a few disgruntled, sincere believers of the Truth. Any community is well rid of such an element.

We wonder Josephites are not ashamed to come before the world with the announcement that the Seed of the Woman refers only to a holy or righteous class of people that is to abolish evil or crush the head of the serpent, when they cannot deny that in more than 4000 years the moral status of the world was not only not improved at all but grew worse and worse till the Great God could bear with it no longer and so swept them all away, save eight souls!

We wonder they are not ashamed to claim that this righteous class of people is to increase and increase, till, in some way not explained, they run the other class clean out, when after an opportunity of 6000 years duration probably not one-sixteenth of one per cent of the earth's inhabitants believe the gospel preached to Abraham, which Josephites hold to be the power of God to salvation. We wonder they are not ashamed to preach the holy-class Seed of the Woman as the bruiser of the serpent's head, in the face of the assertion of him they call the Son of Joseph, their Savior, that as it was in the days of Noah so will it be when he comes again.

We wonder they are not ashamed to crowd their explanation of the Woman's Seed upon the public as the law in the case when the prayer of Hannah in I Samuel i. 11 uses the phrase "seed of Men" in contrast with "her seed" in Gen. iii. 15. Did not the Spirit anticipate this destructive doctrine and furnish the weapon to meet it? Like the phrase "her seed" in Gen. iii. 15, it only occurs once, and the context proves seed of men, to be children begotten by men. Two seeds are never referred to one child. It is NOT GOD'S SEED that is to bruise the serpent's head, but the Seed of the Woman. God by the energy of his Spirit made him of a Woman, and because of this he was called a Son of God. Luke i. 35. The Truth annihilates the stale and vile infidel innuendos in reference to Mary and the Holy Spirit, appropriated by Josephites.

We have shown that some Josephite writers have no place in their saving system for the blood of Christ, and no need for it any way. "It is not true," they say "that men could never have been saved without his death." If that be true men can be saved without any interest in it now. But we have already proven by Heb. xiii. 20 that even Jesus was raised from the dead through the blood of the everlasting covenant, and as he was the first born from the dead,—first-born among many brethren, and, as the brethren have to be raised too, will they not be raised through the blood of the everlasting covenant? Does not Paul teach that the planting in the likeness of his death secures a resurrection like his? Was it not in order to know the power of his resurrection he suffered the loss of all things?

There are other Josephites who see how helpless they are, and speak awkwardly of the "Son of Joseph as our Savior." But if we ask who this "our Savior" is, they would have to introduce us to "Young Mr. Joseph," or some such name. And if we wish to know how Mr. Joseph became a Savior, what could they say? And if we asked if Mr. Joseph was not put to death some time ago,—and if so, how it happens that he is alive again, what could they answer, seeing they ignore both the covenant that gives life, and the blood that ratified it?

But perhaps they would call their Savior by the name of Jesus. If so, it would be because they are forced to do it,—not of choice. We rather suspect they would prefer not to go into particulars along here, because there is a Scripture which says he (Jesus) hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than the angels. Not to a single angel did God ever say, "Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee." Bear in mind we have positive testimony that God did have sons before the earth's foundations were laid, and of angelic nature too; but the Son whom he has appointed heir of all things, and by whom he has spoken unto us of these last days, was begotten by the overshadowing power of God and born of a woman; and although possessed of his mother's nature of existence, and capable of dying, and hence lower than the angels, he was Son of God and of course inherited his Father's name.

We understand Josephites to claim that Joseph was the father of Jesus. Did Jesus inherit a more excellent name than the angels from Joseph? How could Joseph impart to him what he did not have? If he did not inherit a more excellent name than the angels from Joseph, he must have inherited it from God; and if he inherited it from God, God must have been his father, either by adoption or begettal. We hold that God was his father by begettal, because he had said a thousand years before, he certainly would beget him.

But Josephites claim that he did not become a Son of God till he was baptized, when God publicly acknowledged him as his Son, well beloved. We hold that as the person publicly acknowledged by God as his well beloved Son had borne the Father's name for 30 years, he must have been Son of God for 30 years. It would be ridiculous to suppose that a Son of Joseph would inherit the name of God when never an angel inherited it!!!

The Josephites admit that the person in question was known by the name JESUS. The angel had told Mary she should call her newly-born babe by the name of JESUS, and also, that he should be called the Son of the Highest in addition to his proper name; accordingly we read in Luke ii. 21 that when eight days were accomplished for the circumcision of the child, his name was called JESUS which was so named of the angel before he was conceived in the womb. At the age of twelve years, he accompanied his parents to Jerusalem to attend the passover. He tarried behind after they had started for home; they supposing him to be somewhere in the crowd, made a day's journey homeward; but not finding him then, they returned to Jerusalem and found him in the temple with the doctors. On being mildly scolded, he replied, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" At the age of twelve, then, he knew God was his Father. And Acts iv. 27 proves that Jesus was God's holy child before he was anointed at his baptism,—the Josephites to the contrary notwithstanding. He was not baptized for the remission of the sins of his youth! ! "He knew no sin."

It is important, now, to know what the more excellent name, JESUS, means. When we remember that there is salvation in no other,—and no other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved, Jesus must be seen to be a name of awful import. And when we remember Jesus' words in Matt. xix. 29, "And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands for my name's sake, shall receive an hundred fold, and shall inherit everlasting life," and remember, too, that the great commission enjoins baptism of gospel believers into the name of the Father, Son and Spirit we see that it is a question of life or death to obtain or not to obtain that name. We see, too that the word Jesus embodies the name of Father, Son and Spirit. The glorious and fearful name by which the Eternal was made known to Moses by the words eheyeh asher eheyeh, rendered by King James' translators, "I am that I am:" but the learned now very generally agree that the correct rendering is, "I shall be that I shall be" or "I will be who I will be."

The common translation, "I am," is merely expressive of his self-existence; "I will be that I will be," is a positive PROMISE of a certain close union between himself and the human race. He would be something to the race in the future. In Gen. iv. 1 of the Common Version, we read that Eve declared at the birth of Cain, "I have gotten a man from the Lord;" but the preposition "from" is not in the original. Literally it reads: "I have gotten a man, even Yahveh." "I have gotten a man, even" "He who will be." Will be what? Why, whatever had been promised, something that he had not been; something he was not then,—something he would be. Eve certainly expected a bruiser, a deliverer, a redeemer to be born. She even calls the expected one by name. "He who will be." She was sadly disappointed in the child then born; but it shows the hope that had been set before her. The very words, "ish eth Yahveh" "a man even Jehovah,"—prove the promised one would be a Son of God, although the Seed of Woman, to all except Josephites. But we ask our readers to read in this connection Jer. xxiii. 5, 6, "Behold the days come saith Yahveh that I will raise up unto David a righteous Branch, and a king shall reign and prosper.... And this is his name whereby he shall be called, YAHVEH OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS." This proves the mother of Cain had gotten the correct name at any rate; proves the Branch of David is to bear his Father's name, and explains how Jesus came in his Father's name, and why the angels had no such excellent name.

Josephites have so many smart skeptical questions to ask that no attention is paid to foundation work. It is their loss.

Endeavor Convention.

The World's Christian Endeavor Convention recently held in Cleveland was pronounced a grand success. According to some of the daily papers there were forty thousand delegates in attendance in spite of the hard time and labor troubles. We attended the first meeting only to ascertain if possible what course they were mapping out for themselves, and what their expectations were;—and found them claiming a membership of two million, in its 13th year, and that they can bring in the Millennium in seven years if each member will convert one more from now on. We learned too that it was not their aim to educate or instruct people, but "To show them how to live the life;" but they forgot to explain how people can do God's will without knowing what it is; or how they can convert the world without God's converting power—the gospel? They also neglected to explain how the words of Jesus can be fulfilled if they convert the world in seven years! He said the last days would be like those which preceded the flood—but John G. Wooley's address on "Christian Endeavor versus the Saloon," contained many ringing sentences. In answer to the question "What shall I, a Christian man, do against the saloon?" he said, "First of all I will be a Christian. I will keep myself pure. I will abolish the word temperate. It is the Pharisee of grammar, the arch hypocrite of the vocabulary of this reform, the blood guiltiest of common nouns,—a quagmire of definitions not to be trusted."

"What is temperance? A claret cup, a drop of sherry, a glass of ale, a pint of wine, a bottle of whiskey, a shameful night, a blank day, debt, dishonor, disease, despair, death. I have inflected it in all its attributes and languages, from the whisper of the dainty delicious lust of ruby wine moving itself aright to the adder hiss of the sodden, passionate adultery of drunkenness at the last, and am here alive, but on the way have passed a million men rotting unburied, and though living, lost.

"I will be a Christian. Henceforth I'll stand upon the mountain top of Paul's great verse, of which the familiar version is, "If meat make my brother to offend, I will not eat meat enough to hurt myself, though the world perish," but which is written, "I will eat no meat while the world stands"... From the first, the strong, clean, same as you would your physical. Be ready to do little things, to be used when God wants you, not when you want yourself. Keep at the foot of the cross where you can be ready. You must bear the cross; the cross does not bear you. Look for small opportunities, not great ones, consecrate all to him, small things as well as large.

With the abilities God has given you, the many opportunities for service, and the help he furnishes, what a grand life you may live for him! A life of praise, joy, glory, and thanksgiving! Years of work that will redound to the Master's glory! Can you with such bright prospects as the Lord promises, refuse to consecrate your strength, your all to him? —T. L. Cuyler.

Announcement, Nebraska Annual Conference.

It becomes our pleasant duty to announce our annual meeting. The beautiful natural park at Cambridge, Nebraska, has been selected again as the place and the time Sept. 14 to 24, 1894.

As we look back over the pleasant gatherings we have had at this season of the year, we wonder if this will not be the best we have ever had, we trust it will. In order to make it so we earnestly request every church in the state to send at least one or more delegates, and as many isolated brethren as can possibly to so come. We want you to see for yourselves just what we are doing and assist in devising ways and means for future work.

Bring your tents, camping outfit, ten day's rations and your hearts full of love for the Master, and enjoy such a love feast with the brethren as you have never done before. Elder A. J. Eychaner of Iowa, who undoubtedly is the best worker and as able a preacher as there is within our ranks, has signified his intentions to be at this meeting. Those who cannot come send us letters of encouragement. Any further information can be had by addressing,

The Glory of Young Men.

"The glory of young men is their strength." Proverbs xx. 29. Truer words were never spoken. There is nothing in the world that a young man is more proud of than perfect physical manhood. He rushes to the front on all occasions, anxious to display his strength, to show what burdens his broad shoulders can bear, and what hard physical struggles he can undergo and come out the victor.

In the times when the Greeks and Romans were in the height of power, physical strength and endurance were counted as virtues, and a young man who had these gifts was looked upon as having the virtue, and the only virtue that was required of him, especially if he used his strength in war. But the time has come when physical strength is not the only glory of a young man. There is spiritual strength we must have—the strength that the Lord gives and the only strength in which there is any lasting glory. There is always a time of defeat for physical strength, but a man who is strong in the Lord cannot be overcome by any power. He has a helper in every time of need, an ally whom no one can be against, and live. A young man can show a glorious spiritual strength by giving up his physical strength, his time, his talents, his all to the Lord and saying, "consecrate me now to thy service Lord, by the power of grace divine." There are burdens to bear, struggles to undergo and battles to fight with spiritual strength that will yield ten-fold the glory that a physical battle would, and then comes the thought again, there is no possibility of defeat when fighting for the Lord. There is a need of young men who are willing to use their strength in doing good. There are doubtless many young men who have an earnest desire to work for the Lord, but they do not know how to begin. They wish to consecrate themselves to Jesus, but the way is dark and all passes are hedged. The questions are asked, "How can I work for him?" "Where can I find a suitable field?" "What opportunity have I for cultivating it?" If you think you can do no work for the Lord without becoming a minister or an evangelist you are sadly mistaken. You may be able to do something in your own present sphere that you could not do in any other. You may have some special line of duty that could be accomplished by no one else. God knows your ability, your desires, and your heart, he will use you in the vineyard as much as he will the greatest divine on earth. Only try to sink out of self into Christ. Strive to develop your spiritual power the same as you would your physical. Be ready to do little things, to be used when God wants you, not when you want yourself. Keep at the foot of the cross where you can be ready. You must bear the cross; the cross does not bear you. Look for small opportunities, not great ones, consecrate all to him, small things as well as large.

With the abilities God has given you, the many opportunities for service, and the help he furnishes, what a grand life you may live for him! A life of praise, joy, glory, and thanksgiving! Years of work that will redound to the Master's glory! Can you with such bright prospects as the Lord promises, refuse to consecrate your strength, your all to him? —T. L. Cuyler.

Aunt Hannah on the Parliament of Religions.

Well I'm glad enough I'm home again—felt not my weary bones,
For I've seen an' heerd so much, too much, I cannot live heered in sum.
I thought the Fair was missin' an' th' Midway made me sweat,
But the Parliament of Religions was th' missin cut of all!

Even the Turks a-going round th' Midway hadn't Flair,
But our rulers re-reproved me when he seen me peep in that.
"Sacrilegious place" he called it, an' th' Turk "a child of sin."
But the Parliament of Religions took all them Scathes in.

It made the nights a little to see some heathen's air,
As we told us Christians 'bout our faults an' laid 'em out so bare,
But thats flowin' robes was feelin' an' th' air mighty tekin' folk,
So the Parliament of Religions clapped to every word she spoke.

I listened to th' Buddhist, in his robes of shinin' white,
As he told how like to Christ's their lives whole days was—a mite,
But I felt, as we was Christian folk, a Buddhist I can't be,
An' th' Parliament of Religions brought religious doubt to me.

Then I heered th' lean'some monk, dressed up in an orange dress,
Whispered that all humanity was part of God—no less,
An' he said we was not sinners, so I comfort took once more,
While th' Parliament of Religions heered with an approving roar.

Then a Catholic team got up an' spoke about Christ an' th' cross,
But th' Christians of th' other creeds they git their heels a toss,
When th' Baptist spoke th' Presbyterian seemed to be fightin' mad
Tel the Parliament of Religions sends jiny pore old soul feet sad.

I've listened to th' Buddhist, to th' Hindoo and th' Turk;
I've feel to find th' truth that is our different creeds may lurk,
Tel my poor old brain it buzzes like its going religious mad—
For th' Parliament of Religions nigh put out the light I had.

So I'll just leave all this rastlin' 'tel I reach th' other shir,
And treat all men as brothers while on this yearth I bide,
An' let "Love" be my motto 'tel I enter in th door
Of that great Religious Parliament, where creeds don't count no more.

A Great Mystery.

There is a hush in earth and sky,
The ear is free to that sight
In darkness, veiling from the eye
The many-colored spell of light.

Not heralded by fire and storm,
In shadowy outline dimly seen,
Comes Unsought the glorious Form
The once despised Nazarene.

Through waiting silence, voiceless shade,
A still small Voice so clearly flows,
A listening lifetime were o'erpaid
By one sweet recital of such notes.

"Fear not, believed thou art mine,
For I have given my life for thee;
By name I call thee, thee not mine,
Be praise and glory ever mine.

In me all spotless and complete,
And in my comeliness most fair
Art thou; to me thy voice is sweet,
Prevailing in thy feeblest prayer.

Thy life is hid in God with me,
I stoop to dwell within thy breast;
My joy forever thou shalt be,
And in my love for thee I rest.

O Prince's daughter, whom I see
In bridal garments, pure as light,
Betrothed forever unto me,
On thee my own new name I write.

Let 'neath the stars' uncertain ray
In flowing mantle glistening fair,
One, lowly bending turns away
From that sweet voice in cold despair.

Is it Humility, who sees
Herself unworthy of such grace,
Who dares not hope her Lord to please,
Who dares not look upon His face?

Nay, where that mantle trailing gleams
'Tis Unbelief who tarnishes,
Who rather rests in self-spun dreams,
Than trust the love of Him who died.

Faith casts away the fair disguise,
She will not doubt her Master's voice,
And droop when he hath bid her rise,
Or mourn when he hath said, Rejoice!

Her stained and soiled robe she leaves,
And Christ's an shining raiment takes
What his love gives, her love receives,
And meek and trustful answer makes:

Behold the handmaid of the Lord!
Thou callest, and I come to thee!
According to thy faithful word,
O Master, be it unto me!

Thy love I cannot comprehend,
I only know thy word is true,
And that thou lovest to the end
Each whom to thee the Father drew.

Oh! take the heart I could not give
Without thy strength-bestowing call:
In thee, and for thee, let me live,
For I am nothing, thou art all.

"If Ye do these things ye shall never Fall."

Peter in his second epistle, chap. i., makes the above assertion, and in it he tells us what "these things" are that we should do. He is writing to "them that have obtained like precious faith through the righteousness of God and of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." We see, then, that to "obtain like precious faith" is to do "these things." What does Peter say "these things" are we should do? The first four verses (chap. i.) tell us that faith is the essential thing to possess, for, (Heb. xi. 6) "Without faith it is impossible to please God." In verses 5-7 he enumerates the things we should do: "And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity." And in verse 8 he says: "For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." And (verse 10): "For if you do these things ye shall never fall," and by so doing "an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." (v. 11). And Peter thought it necessary to put his brethren always in remembrance of these things, although they knew them, so that they might not fall from grace. On the other hand, in verse 9, he says: "But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten he was purged from his old sins."

The apostle James also tells us some things we should do if we would never fall (Jas. i. 19-22): "Therefore, my beloved brethren, let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath; for the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God. Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted Word, which is able to save your souls." And continuing, he admonishes us that we should be "doers of the Word, and not hearers only."

Paul in I Thess. v. tells us that we should "be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love, and for an helmet, the hope of salvation." And further on in that chapter he exhorts his brethren to "be at peace among themselves; comfort the feeble-minded; support the weak; be patient toward all men; ever follow all that is good; rejoice evermore; pray without ceasing; in everything give thanks; quench not the spirit; despise not prophesyings; prove all things; hold fast that which is good; abstain from all appearance of evil."

Christ says (Matt. xxii. 37-39) we must keep the two great commandments, and Solomon also says we must "Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man." Eccl. xii. 13.

All these things we must do if we would not fall. But all these things will not save us if we are not "in Christ," so the getting into Christ is as important as the doing of these things. How do we get into Christ?

Peter was asked by the unbelievers and mockers on the day of Pentecost: "What shall we do to be saved?" His answer was "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Acts ii. 37-38. By baptism they were adopted into Christ, and Gal. iii. 26, 27, 29, says: "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. And if ye be Christ's, then ye are Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." Paul says (Rom. vi. 3-5) as many of us as are baptized into Christ, buried with him, planted in the likeness of his death, we shall, like as he was raised from the dead, be raised to newness of life at that great resurrection of the just. For "if we have died in Christ, we believe we shall also live with him."

Christ himself tells us (Mark xvi. 16): "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned."

In John xv. 4 we read that "Christ is the true vine, and we are the branches. He that abideth in me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit; for without me ye can do nothing." Without Christ we learn that we can do nothing, even though we live exemplary lives and do all "these things" which Peter, James, Paul and other inspired writers tell us we must do. Paul tells us if we "abide not in unbelief we shall be grafted into the vine." Rom. xi. 23.

Christ says: "I am the open door, by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out and find pasture." John x. 9. "And if any man is in Christ he is a new creature," says Paul (2 Cor. v. 17.)

To sum up the whole matter, we must have "One Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all" (Eph. iv. 5, 6); we must be obedient to the faith (Acts vi. 7); we must "obey from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you, being then made free from sin" (Rom. vi. 17, 18); and finally we must do all "these things" above named if we would keep from falling. Blessed are they that do his commandments.

Now brethren, as Christ prayed for Peter that his faith fail not, even so let us pray for one another that our faith fail not in these perilous times. We are living in the times of the end, when Christ is to be revealed, and we should strengthen one another with prayer and words of cheer. May we all be in readiness to go in to the marriage supper of the Lamb, is the prayer of your brother in Christ.

J. E. Hatch.

Dear Restitution:

Will you let me say a few words through you to the brothers and sisters? Dear ones, what are you doing for Christ? do you grasp every chance to do good? or do you sit with folded hands and say you have no chance. As long as you do not try you need not expect a chance. Christ says those that are not for him are against him, if you are not doing something for him you are doing something against him. Indeed, there are some who can't do much, but we can all do our share. The money you spend foolishly would help send some one out to preach the gospel. If you would only stop to think whether you could do without this or that. Dear brother, you could do without that cigar, and that last suit, you need not have paid so much for that. Dear sister, you could do without that ribbon, you might make your gloves wear a little longer, you need not have paid so much for your summer hat. The money you paid out for flower seeds and rose bushes. How much good might have been done with it. Think of the thousands who never heard the gospel. Do you expect to hear Christ say, well done thou good and faithful servant, or will he say, I never knew you. My dear brothers and sisters, it is high time to awaken out of sleep, for Christ will soon come, and oh, so few will be found watching, so few will be found with the wedding garment on. When you went to the ball the other night did you hear any thing about Christ? Did you think what if he would come and find you in the ball room, do you think he would go around among the dancers and pick you out as his followers? I don't, I am afraid he would say, I never knew you. Oh well, says one of the young folks, we must have somewhere to go to pass away the time, and there isn't any harm in dancing. We have Christ for an example, did you ever read of him partaking of any such pleasures, no indeed. He went about doing good, and when we have time we don't know what to do with, let us take our Bible and study God's Word, let us never be absent from our Bible class, we can do good by setting a good example for others if no other way. Do you know what the Bible says about the lovers of pleasure in these last days, see 2 Tim. iii. 1-5, let us turn away from such. We should live soberly, righteously and godly in their present world, looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. Your sister in hope of the soon coming kingdom.

A Symposium of Faith.

Under the above heading the Conference Board of the Church of God in Iowa, sent out about one hundred circular letters, and have received the following replies many of which were read at their conference greatly to edification. And as means for publication in book form were short a vote was taken that these letters be placed in my hands to be sent to The Restitution office for publication, and here I comply.

SERIES 8.

1. We believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.

2. We believe in the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began."

3. We believe in the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as the King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous; and the final destruction of the wicked.

4. A hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion as prerequisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as very essential for final salvation.

Benj. W. Woodward.
Mary A. Woodward.

"Forasmuch as many have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us," • • • It seemed good to me also, having had some understanding of God's plan of salvation. I have been a reader of God's Word for about thirty years, after getting the correct start in an understanding of his purpose, and I believe that God has not changed the plan, but that he saw the end from the beginning. Yes, declared the end from the beginning. Also it was his purpose to give eternal life on conditions of obedience to his divine law, and after man had transgressed, it was, and still is his purpose. The Father changes not. Twenty-five hundred years after man's fall it was still God's purpose to fill the earth with his glory. It is the same today, and will be till the grand work is done. God is not man that he should lie, or the Son of Man that he should repent. He has promised and is able to perform. I believe all the families of the earth shall be blessed through Abraham and his seed, and when Christ comes the second time and gathers together that seed from all parts of the earth, then that blessing will commence, and for one thousand years that work of blessing will be carried on, till all will have an opportunity to accept or reject, and the rejector will be destroyed by the second death.

I believe all the wicked will be (God) destroy.

I believe the gospel was preached to Abraham and that includes the gospel now. The gospel is the good news of the kingdom of God, and the things concerning his name.

I believe in the restoration of Israel, the literal resurrection of the righteous dead, the changing of the living righteous, and all be caught up to meet the Lord in the air and then descend with Christ to the Mount of Olives, and finally take his throne on the Mount Zion, from which the law will go forth to the nations, and the nations will finally cease warring, and finally there will be peace on earth, and the glory of the Lord shall fill the earth.

I believe a hearty belief of the gospel of the kingdom, and a repentance of our sins, and an immersion in water in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of our past sins, and then a Christian warfare to the end of this life will entitle us to an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of God's dear Son.

I believe that God preached the good news to Abraham, Isaac, and then to Jacob. David believed it, Paul taught it. Stephen declared it, and all that are Christ's are Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise.

I believe all the above statements. Why do I believe? It was the belief of the patriarchs and prophets, and all the good of past ages. It was the belief of Christ and the apostles. Fifty-five millions of saints gave up their present life rather than give up their faith in those precious truths. All or almost all of the apostles were put to death for their belief in the things promised. I want to stand in the same faith with all those good men and Christ our Savior.

J. S. Hatch.

1. I believe, that, God's purpose in the creation of man was, that man should, with his progeny fill the earth, that he should by cultivation subdue it, and intellectually standing at the head of creation on the earth, have dominion over—rule—govern the world. Gen. i. 26-28.

2. That, God's call and covenant with Abraham, Gen. xii. 1-3; xiii. 14-18; xvii. 1-8, renewed to Isaac, xxvi. 2-5, and to Jacob xxviii. 10-15, is but a detail of the work indicated in God's purposes toward man, as above mentioned, and forms the basis of all his subsequent covenants and work with man.

3. That, this earth, finally subjugated by cultivation, and thus made new is to become the final inheritance of Abraham resurrected and Christ returned. Gen. xiii. 14-18; xvii. 1-8 with Gal. iii. 16.

4. That, all parties of any and every nationality who fear God and work righteousness are accepted of him, Acts x. 35; that have believed upon Jesus as the Messiah, and have been baptized—immersed into his name have become, and are a part of the Christ-body, are the Seed of Abraham, and heirs according to the promise. Gal. iii. 27-29.

5. That the mighty nation—Kingdom promised Abraham was organized at Sinai, ruled over by Moses, Joshua, the Judges, Saul, David, Solomon, and David's heirs on to Zedekiah, when it was overturned by Nebuchadnezzar, and to remain overturned till the rightful heir, Jesus of Nazareth, returns to take control. Ezekiel xxi. 25-27.

6. That, this Kingdom of Israel, then restored, will be the Kingdom Heaven, the Kingdom of God, the Kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world, the Little Stone cut out of the mountain to fill the earth, the Fifth Universal Empire, the Kingdom over which Jesus is to rule, which is to have no end.

7. That, the Seed of Abraham—the Christ Body—who, with Abraham, are to take this Kingdom. Dan. vii. 18; made Kings and Priests Rev. v. 8-9, are through their reign and righteous government to bless the nations, the kindreds, and the families of the earth. Gen. xii. 1-3.

8. That, Jesus of Nazareth—the Messiah was of the Seed of Abraham, was of the Seed of David, was of the Loins of David, and therefore, the rightful heir of Abraham, and of David's throne and kingdom, of human parentage as traced in the genealogies, a human being, not of the nature of angels—Divine—but of the Seed of Abraham, made like unto his brethren in order to become a sympathetic priest and to conquer death.

9. That, to the above end Jesus bore the cross and despised the shame that he might obtain the joy, that because of this God raised him from the dead to the power of an endless life; that for his humbleness God exalted him and gave him a name above all names. Phil. ii. 5-9, and appointed him heir of all things. Acts i. 2, 9.

10. That, in the beginning God and man were at-one; that then by temptation and transgression man became alienated from God; that in order to re-union it became the right of the Omniscient and the Unerring one to submit the terms of reconciliation, and the duty of man to receive these terms; that the reception of these terms, their consideration, and with them a compliance brings the two parties again at-one, and that, therefore, this process of a reception of, and a compliance with, these terms of reconciliation is the process of at-one-ment, and therefore, that each and every one makes his own At-one-ment.

CONCLUSION.

Therefore, that, as Jesus was a human being, as his mission was to teach men how to live in this life in order to gain the life hereafter, and as God raised him from the dead and made him heir of all things pertaining to the inheritance, because of his moral worth, it follows as a sequence that God will raise up from the dead and assign a place in his kingdom all who are worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from among the dead. That all, however—few or many, from among Israel or the Gentiles, from the Orient or the Occident, from Africa's sunny desert or Greenland's icy mountains, who in this life form a character that will stand approved and can be appropriated to a good work in the world to come God will bring and so appropriate.

Respectfully,

G. M. Myers.

1. I believe in one God the Father, out of whom are all things; and who by his infinite power sustains all things; and by his wisdom guides all things, and is by his Spirit everywhere. Also One Lord Jesus Christ, the Only begotten of the Father. 1 Cor. viii. 6; John i. 14.

2. I believe that the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments reveal God's purpose in creation and redemption; and are to be taken in their literal import when all things are called by their proper names; and that they are able to make us wise unto salvation without human supplements.

3. I believe that the first man was of the earth, earthy, and that his tenure of life depended upon obedience; that death came by his sin; that his posterity die in him; that death completely unmakes him and returns him to dust, and all the faculties of his mind perish.

4. I believe that God instituted means whereby man could be redeemed from death and obtain incorruptible life beyond; that the promise of a Redeemer in the person of the Woman's Seed was the inception of the scheme; and that it was founded upon the principles of faith and obedience.

5. I believe the covenants to Abraham and his Seed, the Christ, of the Land of Canaan, and that they should bless all the families of the earth, and the covenant to David that the promised One should fill the earth with God's glory by means of a divine government administered from his throne, form another chapter of the redemptive scheme.

6. I believe that the Message of Gabriel to Mary, Luke i. 31-33, and the teachings of Jesus and his apostles, together with the good confession before Pontius Pilate, and the announcement from heaven that he is "the root and offspring of David," and that he "will return and build again the tabernacle of David" clearly identify Jesus as the rightful heir of David's throne, and the would-be King over all the earth.

7. I believe that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures for our justification; that he ascended to heaven and officiates as the Great High Priest over the House of God until the times of restitution, when God shall send him again as the Resurrection and the Life of all the faithful.

8. I believe that the gospel of Christ, which Paul Rom. i. 16 says is God's saving power, is none other than the Gospel of the Kingdom he preached. Mark i. 14, and which he commissioned his apostles to preach in all the world, Matt. xxiv. 14; xxviii. 19; and which Daniel said the God of heaven would set up and which should destroy all human governments and occupy all the territory, and should be given to the Son of Man, and also possessed by the saints, and to which he will welcome them with the words, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world;" that these and hosts of other exceeding great and precious promises involving eternal life, together with the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ comprise the gospel of our salvation;—the One Hope set before us to be realized when Christ appears the second time unto salvation or life.

9. I believe the conditions of salvation exacted of man to be, 1st Faith in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Anointed. 2nd. Repentance toward God, i. e. change of mind and conduct toward him. 3rd, To take on the name of Christ, and enter his service by immersion into him for the remission of past sins. 4th, To observe the commandments of Jesus and to wait for him from heaven.

10. That the present status of one who has believed and obeyed the truth with the heart is, that he is pardoned, has peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ,—is an adopted child, with the rights and the immunities of the only begotten One,—a joint-heir now, with a good hope through God's favor of seeing Jesus and being made like unto him, and reigning with him over the nations till the whole earth reverberates with God's praise, if faithful unto death.

Announcement.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Kansas, will be held three miles northeast of Oxford, in Cowley County, at Bro. Thomas Jackson's schoolhouse. This meeting will last about ten days, commencing August the tenth, 1894. There is some important business to transact. Business meeting will be on Saturday at two o'clock P. M. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can bring tents and come prepared to camp. The brethren at Oxford are wholesouled, hospitable folks, but it is too much for women to have to work all the time and get no good of the meetings, so let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master. The commotion of the world indicates his coming is very near. All speaking brethren wishing any information correspond with Bro. S. C. Oliver, Attica, Kan. A full program will be published in due time.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to The Restitution office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

Salvation only in Christ.

"Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is no other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." Acts iv. 12.

Dear brethren and sisters of like precious faith, let us remember that if we try to do away with the name of Jesus there is no salvation for us; and without the name of Jesus there is no forgiveness. But in his name we can rejoice "tho pressed by many a foe," though sickness or even death may come we may feel that it is all right—we are safe if related to him.

They that are afflicted must seem to be the ones that have the sweetest experience and that live the nearest to the Master. A young man that is strong and robus says, I have no need of a Savior. There's lots of time, but shall an accident happen or sickness come upon him until the doctor says, he only has a few more days to live, how differently he thinks. How much better then to seek him while he may be found; while we have our health and strength, then when sickness comes we can say, "Thy will be done," and realize that "All things work together for good to them that love God." In these hard times and times of great trial—the beginning of troubles such as the world has never known—we need a Savior, one that we can go to and receive strength—one that has passed through trial before us. Let us take courage, then remembering that the "Captain of our salvation was made perfect through suffering" just as every one of us, if we are his true followers, must be. "For as gold must be tried by fire so the heart must be tried by pain." "Through much tribulation we must enter into the kingdom of God." Not a night of wrestling with God for forgiveness as some say, but a lifetime of trial then, if we endure to the end we shall be saved and enter the kingdom. This life of probation or trial has a beginning. It begins just as soon as we become related to Christ—just as soon as we have appropriated his death as our death to pay the penalty for sin. Then, when we have started, we must grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. We must learn the first lessons first, or we will have errors that may cause us to stumble. When a child has gone to school long enough it commences to figure, then the teacher tells it that twice two are four. How absurd for that teacher to say twice two are ten, but there is as much reason in it as for a teacher in divine things to say that by nature man is immortal and try to prove it by the rules in nature and divine revelation. When a man dies we know we cannot communicate with him; we know we lay him away and he returns to dust. "The living know that they must die, but the dead know not any thing." I said in my heart concerning the estate of the sons of men, that God might manifest them, and that they might see that they themselves are beasts; for that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them, as the one dieth so dieth the other; yea they have all one breath; so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast, for all is vanity; all go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again." It is necessary for us to understand our nature first, and the cause of the condition that we are in, then we can have faith in the remedy God has provided; and we can then understand why there is none other name given whereby we must be saved but the name of Jesus, and can understand how that name saves us and what it saves us from. We must understand that we are sold under sin—that we are under a penalty of death eternal for sin, and that we are nothing of ourselves.

To redeem this carnal characteristic in us there must be implanted within our understanding the incorruptible seed, the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever; and this is the Word which by the gospel is preached unto you. Paul said to the disciples at Ephesus that before they were enlightened and before their obedience they were Gentiles in the flesh; without Christ; aliens from the commonwealth of Israel; strangers to the covenants of promise; without hope and without God in the world, and that by becoming united to Christ they had become fellow-citizens with the holy or sanctified ones and of the household of God, or of faith, and so heirs to the promises made to the fathers in the Israelitish nation. These promises consisted of all the land promised to Abraham, also an eternal life estate through one that was yet to be. Some may say, "How was eternal life promised to Abraham?" God told Abraham to look to the east, west, north and south, and all the land he could see to thee will I give it and to thy seed after thee for an everlasting possession. Paul said, concerning that promise, that Abraham didn't receive as much as to set his foot on, yet God promised to give it to him and his seed after him for an everlasting possession, when as yet he had no child. And he said not to thy seeds as of many, but to thy seed which is Christ. So we see that Abraham did not possess the land that was promised, but he is to possess it, and Christ will possess it with him, and all that are related to Christ are joint heirs with him to the same promise. Hence we see that eternal life was promised to Abraham; but between this promise of eternal life to Abraham and his children of promise there was this eternal death sentence for sin, so that redemption from that sentence was necessary before the promise of eternal life could be brought into force. The seed through whom these heirs were to get at this estate must be related to Abraham as a son and must also be of divine birth to be constituted a Savior—otherwise he could not take the place of the sinner in death, which was eternal, and which was necessary to satisfy the claim against man for the transgression. In Christ we see the person and the only person that can redeem us from the sentence of death for sin. Some one may say that Jesus was only dead three days and nights and how could that satisfy the sentence to eternal annihilation? Here we call to attention the fact that Jesus was both the son of the first Adam and son of God. In relation to the first he was born under the sentence of death for sin which the whole race inherit. Otherwise justice could not accept him as a sacrifice. In his death he forever ceased to be as the son of the first Adam and in his relation to the condemned race, but he was the Son of God, and in this relation God claimed him and raised him from the dead to die no more. His name Jesus then signifies his power to save his people from their sins; his death and resurrection proves his power to redeem them from death eternal all because he was of divine birth.

In this scheme of redemption we can see the wisdom of God. An angel could not be our redeemer because it could not be born under the penalty which the race inherit. A son of man only could not redeem us because death would have held him. It took the Son of God to pay the price of redemption for man. God in his infinite wisdom is never under any necessity of resorting to experiments. Jesus is not an experiment, but a real Savior. He never has to rectify mistakes. In his wisdom and foresight he has planned and engineered this scheme of redemption and placed it on the chart of prophecy to prepare his chosen ones for the events before they transpire. But it is only these that study, and studydiligently, and delight to contemplate its great results can really have any faith in it. The carnal mind that looks only for present good must for ever remain in the outer court of this temple of truth; while only those that anxiously enquire for truth are permitted to see the glories within that inspire a solid faith and hope; because straight is the gate and narrow the way which the few only find.

When a pleasure excursion party is going through the mountains they must have a guide. Christian friends, we must have a guide to keep us in this straight and narrow path. I feel the need of this guide the more this morning than ever before. This path leads through great trials—a wilderness of sin all around us—pit-falls, precipices and wild beasts to devour us if we leave this narrow path, but we have a lamp to our feet and a light to our pathway. Shall we not then give up our best energies and most ardent love to the contemplation of the divine Word. There are many kinds of religion in this world that are vain and that tend to lure us away from the one faith, but there is only one system of truth that can be divine or that can inspire a solid faith and hope. When the firemen all go on a strike and will not put in the fuel the locomotive cannot move; it has lost its power and the engineer cannot run it. If the preachers go on a strike and fail to put in the fuel, which is the Word of God, then the church has no power which is the Holy Spirit, and the engineer, our Master cannot run a church of that kind, that has a form of godliness but denying the power. Let us love the Word. Without it we have not the spirit and are worthless, and we cannot become related to Christ, because we cannot understand enough to have faith. But, let us notice for a little the method of our getting into Christ so that he will be our Savior; so that as members of the Divine family we may inherit the promised immortality. As the death due us for sin was suffered by our Lord through whom we inherit eternal life, as one having ceased to be to sin and after his resurrection alive only to God, so as death hath no more dominion over him, we must by some process become related to him, so that in him as Abraham's seed we may become heirs to the same promises made to Abraham. For as he died unto sin and thus sanctified himself, "obtained eternal redemption for himself," so as Paul said, "He that is dead is freed from sin," and as our relation to the first Adam brought us as sinners under the sentence of death for sin, in Christ as the last Adam and of divine birth, having died out of the sin-condemned Adam and his race, we must die to sin. For as soon as we become related to him his death becomes our death.

As we have understood and believed in this plan of redemption we yield ourselves over to be buried in water in the similitude of his death, burial and resurrection. Paul says (Rom. vi. 3-4), "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized, were baptized into his death? Therefore, we are buried with him by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life," or in a new life—the life that Jesus now possesses, having died out of his relation to the sin-condemned race; thus dead to sin and alive to God as heirs to the life that Jesus now possesses. When in this relation we can say with Paul (Gal. ii 19-20) "For I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God. I am (or have been) crucified with Christ (in the person of Christ) nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life that I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God who loved me and gave himself for me." May we all be able to say this with Paul. Then we will live holy lives, and men will take knowledge of us that we have been with Jesus and learned of him, as they did of Peter and John. Yours, looking for the Lord from heaven, and hoping to meet all the dear ones in the air when he comes.

Summer Tours.

The Nickel Plate Road has placed on sale a complete line of tourist tickets to resorts of the east, including Niagara Falls, One Thousand Islands, Lower Canada, the Atlantic Coast, and the mountains of New York and New England. Address B. F. Horner, General Passenger Agent, Cleveland, O., for descriptive matter and full information.—Aug. 31.

To Michigan Points at Reduced Rates via Pennsylvania Lines.

On July 10th, August 14th and September 18th, Home-seekers' Excursion Tickets to points in the State of Michigan will be sold at reduced rates via Pennsylvania Lines, good returning twenty days from date of sale. For details please apply to nearest Pennsylvania Line Ticket Agent.

Reduced Rates to Denver.

Unusual low rate excursions are being announced this year by the Pennsylvania Lines, and long distance journeys over them may be made at slight expense. For this summer exceedingly cheap excursions to Denver will be run over these Lines. The rates will be the lowest in effect for years and will enable persons to visit the West at slight cost. The dates and return limits for these special Denver excursions will be as follows:

On August 1st and 10th, account annual meeting League of American Wheelmen. Returning until the middle of September.

Although the new rates have been made for excursions of organizations, the sale of tickets will not be confined to members, but the public generally may take advantage of the low rate. The return limits will be ample for side trips in the West. Details may be obtained by applying to any Ticket Agent of the Pennsylvania Lines, or by addressing F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Have You Heard About

"Summer Outings," descriptive of picnic and seaside resorts along the line of the Nickel Plate Road; "Country Homes," a list of, open to summer boarders located on the Nickel Plate Road adjacent to the south shore of lake Erie; "Summer Tours" an illustrated and descriptive folder of famous resorts in the east; "Red Book" gives routes and rates for summer tours issued by the Nickel Plate Road? If you desire copies mailed free address B. F. Horner, General Passenger Agent, Cleveland, O.—Aug. 31st.

☞ It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

Country Homes.

Is the title of a pamphlet issued by the Nickel Plate Road, giving a list of places open to summer boarders along the south shore of Lake Erie. Write for a copy.—Aug. 31.

Poetry.

Whom I Serve.

Jesus Master, whom I serve,
Though so feebly and so ill,
Strengthen hand and heart and nerve
All thy bidding to fulfil:
Open thou mine eyes to see
All the work thou hast for me.

Lord, thou needest not, I know,
Service such as I can bring;
Yet I long to prove and show
Full allegiance to my King.
Thou an honor art to me,
Let me be a praise to thee.

Jesus Master! will thou see
One who owes thee more than all?
As thou will! I would not choose,
Only let me hear thy call.
Jesus! let me always be
In thy service glad and free.

The True Unity of Christ's Disciples.

We are necessarily witness-bearers both in our associated and individual capacity. As individuals we are duty bound, with due respect to the fitness of things, to testify in favor of all we know of the revealed will of God. As a united body, great or small, we are naturally restricted in our witness-bearing to those things which unite us—"striving together for the faith of the gospel;" and "walking worthy of God, who hath called us to his kingdom and glory." The faith thus to be contended for is "the common faith," possessed by the "babe in Christ" equally with the "chiefest of all the apostles." The "striving together" is a striving not with one another, but with the world outside, because it is by "standing fast in one spirit," and "with one mind," that this striving is to be carried on. The church is thus under the most binding obligation to present a united front to the hosts of the enemy, in "earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints." The great end to be achieved by this warfare is twofold—to maintain our own position, "continuing in the faith grounded and settled, and being not moved away from the hope of the gospel," and also to lead others to "come to the knowledge of the truth that they might be saved." In prosecution of this twofold object, the very first and most indispensable condition is that we "stand fast in one spirit, with one mind, striving together." Before we can strive together we must be together; and before we can stand fast in one spirit, we must be in one spirit; and before we can be in one spirit we must have an intelligent understanding as to what it is, neither more nor less, that makes us one united body. The body is first, the spirit next. "How can two walk together except they be agreed." It is impossible. What is the reason? Because to walk together two persons must be on the same road, and to be on the same road they must be travelling to the same place. In these two respects they must be entirely agreed else they cannot walk together. But these are all the conditions necessary, unless we include a third, that they are to walk at the same rate, so that the one may not go ahead of the other.

Now I think it will be acknowledged that the entire professing brotherhood are agreed as to the first article of agreement—they are each and all travelling to the same ultimate destination—they all have a confident anticipation that they shall be associates with the Christ in the possession and administration of the kingdom of God, when it shall be established upon the earth over Israel and the nations, at his coming with the clouds of heaven. There is not one of the household of faith who is not thoroughly agreed as to this ultimate destination.

Seeing, then, that we are all going to the same place, the next question is, Have we all chosen the same road? Two persons may be going to Washington, but there is more than one road, and unless they go by the same road they cannot walk together. How do we stand, then, in this respect? So far as I have been able to ascertain, we are substantially agreed in this also. We all profess to have entered by the door, which is Christ. We all profess to have been baptized into Christ by believing the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus the Christ. We have all believed that the kingdom of God, the approach of which was preached by Jesus and his apostles, is none other than the kingdom of Israel, restored again under the New Covenant, when a great national purgation of sins and of sinners shall take place, and when not only the nation of Israel, but all the kingdoms of this world, shall become the kingdom of our Lord, and of his Christ. And we all believe that Jesus the crucified, who bore our sins in his own body on the tree, is the Son of God, and is indeed the very Christ, he who is the Anointed of God, for the throne of his father David, to be established on God's holy hill of Zion, "Jehovah's servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and restore the preserved of Israel," as well as to be "for a light to the Gentiles, and for salvation unto the ends of the earth." We all believe that this great and exalted one shall, through his death, destroy him that hath the power of death, that is the devil, whether personal, impersonal, or both; and that by a resurrection from the dead, or that change to come upon those who are alive and remain to the coming of the Lord, the faithful doers of God's will in all ages, and under all past dispensations, shall be qualified for sharing that dominion, which shall be established over all the nations of the earth in the coming age. We all believe that the degrees of honor and authority to be conferred on the faithful shall be adjudged at the tribunal of the Christ, where every one of us shall give an account of himself to God. In this faith and hope we have all been baptized into Christ by the immersion in water according to Divine appointment. Having thus entered by the appointed door, we are journeying along the road that leads to the eternal kingdom, in an honest endeavor to walk worthy of our high calling, "and of him who hath called us to his kingdom and glory," "and to wait for his Son from heaven even Jesus, who delivers us from the wrath to come" and gives us an abundance into the kingdom.

We are thus agreed in all essential points, and it would require to be demonstrated with the greatest clearness, amounting to nothing short of a "Thus saith the Lord," that there is any good reason why those who are thus agreed cannot or ought not to walk together; why those who are one in all the substantial elements of the faith and hope of the gospel, as laid down by Christ, and as carried into practical operation by his apostles, in their preaching both to Jews and Gentiles, should not also be one in heart, and one in Christian fellowship. There is just one thing that I have observed which operates against this oneness of the brotherhood, and that is, that some brethren are apt to think so highly of some favorite opinion or theory as to exalt it to a position of equality with the very gospel itself. It is the same tendency which was shown in practical working by the Jewish converts at Antioch—"Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved." Where this tendency is yielded to there is an end of the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free; brotherly love is sacrificed to self-will, and sectarianism or heresy is the inevitable and sad result. It was in view of this class and their doings the Apostle said—"Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free. . . . For, brethren, ye have been called unto liberty; only use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another. For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another. This I say, then, walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh." Gal. v. 1, 6, 10, 12-16. The whole chapter is highly instructive on the subject of sect-making, which, under the designation of "heresies," is classed as one of the works of the flesh—ver. 20. Under this fleshly influence the church ceases to be the pillar and stay of the truth—"the truth as it is in Jesus," preached by him and his apostles to unbelievers, that truth which has been apprehended and believed by each member of the body of Christ at his introduction into that body, and is thus common to all. But on the other hand, becomes the pillar and ground of a multiplicity of opinions, and theories, and it may be even other truths, but which form no necessary part of justifying faith.

The evil resulting from this state of things is not confined to the circle of the brotherhood. The way of truth is evil spoken of. Those who are without, judge of us not so much by what we say as by what we do, and not so much by the intellectual rectitude of our position as by the moral and spiritual conditions manifested in our individual, social, and church existence. Hence the injunction of our Lord—"Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven." And one of his apostles—"Having your conversation honest among the Gentiles, that whereas they speak evil of you as evil doers, they may by your good works which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation." Sound wisdom in [illegible] for an unchristian spirit is [illegible]sily detected by the world [illegible] an unsound opinion or a [illegible] theory, and it is by this standard that many judge. Division thus weakens the influence of the Church, by repelling inquirers at the very threshold. But it does more—it scatters the forces of the Christian army, which, instead of presenting a united front to the enemy, can only engage in comparatively ineffectual skirmishing. Besides, in proportion as we multiply and complicate the doctrines we present in our public demonstrations of the faith that justifies, we diminish our power to arrest the attention, and to secure the intelligent enlightenment and willing obedience of honest and good hearts. Moreover, I would ask—Is it not trifling with the salvation of men to waste time in public addresses with matters which are not absolutely indispensable to salvation? Is it not like being anxious about the procuring food for a drowning man, when the thing most urgent is to save him from the watery grave? Or like being concerned about new clothes for one enveloped in the flames of a burning house, when his first need is to be pulled out of the fire? And are the energies and time of the brethren so superabundant that they could afford to deal so lavishly in expositions of secondary truths as would be necessary to secure a full understanding of them on the part of inquirers and promiscuous audiences? Paul certainly did not think so when he made known the saving truth—"I determined not to know any thing among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified." And we are enjoined to follow his example—"Be ye followers of me as I also am of Christ."

There is an idea in the minds of some that it is necessary to true fellowship that there should be a large measure of intellectual agreement and unanimity of opinion beyond the substantial elements of justifying faith, even although it should lead to small groups of two or three brethren meeting by themselves. Now, this is the natural tendency of the principle of division for any reason short of absolute denial of the one faith, or gross, wilful, and determined violation of positive Christian law. Grant the first division to be justifiable (and those who perpetrate it do justify it) and the door is opened for any number afterwards, that may suit the self-will of sin dominant in the flesh. Just so, when "there was no king in Israel, every man did that which was right in his own eyes." Brethren "we are under law to Christ." We should esteem it our meat and our drink to do his will. Like him, "We, who are strong, ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves. Let every one of us please his neighbor for his good to edification. For even Christ pleased not himself, but, as it is written—The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell upon me."

This, brethren, is the secret of church unity, and should lead us to respect a brother's opinion in which we cannot acquiesce, and love him none the less for the truth's sake that dwelleth in him; remembering that perfection consists not so much in the abundance of our knowledge, which has often to be relinquished, as in that excellence of character, the model of which has been furnished to us in the life and obedience of our Lord and Master Jesus the Christ. The wisdom which is from above is far more a moral and spiritual, than an intellectual endowment; "first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy."

And, after all, are not the things in which we are substantially one of transcendant importance in every respect, as compared with those in which we differ? The substantial elements of the faith ought to have the first place in our minds and hearts at all times. And in the hour of trial, the day of evil, and even in the dark valley of the shadow of death, when opinions and theories, which, in the vigor of the intellectual powers were regarded as of great soundness and value, may be fast fading from the mind, the grand verities of the faith and hope shall occupy a prominent place, the sure foundation which has been laid in Zion in the mission of the Son of God, in his obedience unto death as a sacrifice for sin, his resurrection from the dead, his exaltation to the right hand of his Father as our Great High Priest, and his promised coming again to establish his kingdom, and to bestow everlasting life upon all who shall have been faithful in past ages. These hopes in their substantial reality, irrespective of all secondary truths, even although more or less connected with the central truths, shall stand the test of time and retain their hold upon the mind and heart as long as memory shall last.

Brethren, let us "endeavor," for it needs an endeavor, "to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." It is by the bond of peace a firm determination to maintain the peace of the brotherhood—that we must keep, or guard, the unity instituted by the Father, through the instrumentality of his Spirit, in the body of Christ; even although the members of that body should be as incongruous in minor respects as were the Jews and Gentiles who constituted the body of Christ in the first century. This was difficult to them, and to many of the household of faith it is difficult now; but the greater is the merit of attaining to it. In our endeavor to do so, we may have much to overcome. We have to crucify the flesh, which is ever prone to exalt its thinkings, whether right or wrong, to a level with the most sacred things of the one body, one spirit, one hope of our calling, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all. In this work we have to study the things that make for peace, with as much, if not more, zeal and assiduity as we devote to the study of the Scriptures for the striving for the faith of the gospel. In studying the things that make for peace, we may even have to forego a portion of our individual liberty in witnessing for our individual views of Scripture truth in the assembly of the saints. While this would be a disadvantage to all, it is an infinitely lesser evil than the fomenting of discord by controversy, which should break the peace of the brotherhood. And there is surely enough in our common faith and hope, and in the helping on each other in the path to life and glory, to occupy the comparatively short time at the disposal of the brethren in their meetings together. If blessedness is the portion of the peace-makers, surely, since prevention is better than cure, the peace-keepers shall be blessed indeed.

Dear Restitution:

Brothers and Sisters let us do all we can to scatter the good seed. I think THE RESTITUTION the best paper I ever saw and would not do without it for five times its cost. There are only two of us of the one faith here. I have seen none of your faces but expect to when our Blessed Redeemer comes. I know that he will come for we have positive evidence of that.

"And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparrel, which also said, ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven, this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven, but every man in his own order, Christ the first fruits afterward they that are Christ's at his coming. For our conversation is in heaven from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory, and to wait for his Son from heaven whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus which delivered us from the wrath to come. For what is our hope or joy or crown of rejoicing, are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming when he shall come to be glorified in his saints. That thou keep this commandment without spot unrebuked until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ. I charge thee therefore before God and the Lord Jesus Christ who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day and not to me only but unto all them also that love his appearing. Looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the Great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation. Behold he cometh with clouds and every eye shall see him and they also which pierced him. And all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him." What do we care for the honors of this world when our faith grasps the eternal. Come Lord Jesus, come quickly.

Dear Restitution:

On Saturday night before the 4th Sunday in June, I had the pleasure of preaching at Silver City, and on Wednesday and Thursday nights following had good meetings on Iron Creek, and remained in the valley till the 2nd Sunday, and from first to last, had six ministers to hear me. Among the others were Seventh Day Adventists who expressed themselves as well pleased with our teaching. In some respects they excel us by the laying aside the tenth of their income for the advancement of the faith they profess to believe, and this looks like diligence in business. Will the Lord reward us if we do not "diligently seek him" We, "The Church of God."

When duty called me home, I was requested to come again, which looks like casting the net on the right side of the ship, as Sister Wiuse suggests.

The third Sunday I held meeting at the Bramley School-house, where Brother and Sister Henry S. Parker lives, and the 4th Sunday we had meeting in the morning at Shady Grove, and in the evening we celebrated the Lord's Supper at Sister Hills. She is afflicted with paralysis. Brother J. N. Merritt her door neighbor is a sufferer with rheumatism and is just able to go on his crutches, and both are delighted in the service of our Lord, and help me in carrying on the good work.

Brother Wm. Hamilton met us at Shady Grove and wants Bro. Muncrief and I to hold a meeting at his place to begin on Saturday before the first Sunday in August. I am now at the home of Sister Parker in Hot Springs, an esteemed sister whose delight is in the service of the Lord.

Good-bye loved ones, till we meet in our heavenly Father's house, the house of "many mansions."

Editor Restitution:

I will give you a little history of our little flock here. I moved to this place, Norton Co., Kansas, Sept. 20, 1892. At that time all there was here of the gospel faith was my wife one of my sons and myself. I commenced work and have fought a good fight so far and I hope and pray to God it may continue. I commenced preaching the Word at Pleasant Grove School House, in March, 1893. I held a protracted meeting at the end of which four were baptized in the all saving name of Christ. Since then we have had additions until at this time we number twenty-five. Since Bro. J. S. Prime was here in May last we have had five additions and still the glorious work goes on. Brother Prime told me something over a year ago that if I made any converts they will be good ones for you try to beat it into them. Well I sometimes think that is the way our dear beloved Savior talked to them. John viii. 44. I try to preach the Word in its purity. I do not shun any thing and try to declare the whole oracles of God, and thanks be to God the Father, and to his Son Jesus Christ the work goes on. Next Sunday I will baptize another young man and I think two or three more.

Yours for the truth.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUGUST 8, 1894. NO. 30.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Jesus Shall Come Again.

What a happy thought that is to those who love Him! He will come in the clouds of Heaven, and every eye shall see Him. They which pierced Him shall mourn because of Him, but they who love Him shall rejoice. "This is our God, we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation." We are journeying on, step by step moment by moment, hour by hour, day by day, month by month, year by year, and suddenly He shall come. We shall hear His voice, and shall be caught up to meet Him in the air.

But the dear ones in Christ will rise first—the mothers, the fathers, the brothers, the sisters, the children, the friends who have been taken away. How kind of God to tell us that!

Does not your heart leap at the thought of meeting the Lord? Mine does. We shall see those who are dearer to us than life on earth, but, best of all, we shall see the Lord. Our thoughts shall not be centered on one another, but they shall cluster around Him who died and rose again. And so we shall be ten thousand times more divinely knit together because all our love, all our heart's affections, are twined around the Blessed One, who hath redeemed us from our sins by His own blood.

What a meeting it will be! In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, we who are alive shall hear His voice, and shall be taken up to meet Him.

In the East, two shall be grinding at the mill; one shall be taken, and the other left. In London, two factory girls shall be working together; one shall be taken, the other left. As the family are sitting at the table, the wife in a moment shall be changed, and she will be gone from her husband's presence. What a wonderful day for the world!

It will come. By all the fulfilled prophecies of the past, in which there has not been the divergence of a hair's breadth from what God said should be, that day will come. How wise were those men of old who said, "So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." Are you waiting for Jesus—looking for, expecting Him? He will come, and when He comes He will bring the joy of Heaven with Him. We shall keep the Feast of Tabernacles before the throne. God shall wipe away the tears from off the faces of that great multitude whom no man can number. The good Shepherd shall lead His flock by fountains of living waters. Are you going to be there?

Immortal Youth of Jesus.

"His soul was not left in hades, neither did his flesh see corruption," Acts ii. 27; Ps. xvi. 10.

A touching story is told by a London paper of some miners who, not many years ago, working far underground, discovered the body of a young man who had perished in that suffocating pit forty years before. By chemical means in that great laboratory of nature decay had been prevented, and the body of the fine, sturdy young man looked perfectly natural—hair jet black, and not a convulsion mark on the face. No one knew him. A generation had come and gone while he lay sleeping under the ground. But a tottering old woman, who had heard the news, came hurrying from her cottage. She knew him. He was to have been her husband on the day after that on which he died. There were no dry eyes when this poor woman cast herself on his dead body, and poured into his deaf ears words of endearment unused for forty years. It was a touching contrast, the one so old the other so young. Time had gone on with the living, but had stood still with the dead.

Jesus was crucified at thirty-seven years of age—in all the beauty, glory, and strength of his young manhood. Just as he fell, so he rose. His flesh saw not corruption. John says, "We know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is."

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUG. 8, 1893.

☞ The address of any correspondent of the paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

How can a person love righteousness unless he hates unrighteousness?

HE is not in Christ who is not changed in heart and life. He is not in Christ who is controlled by his old appetites, old selfish and impure motives and principles. He who is in Christ has put away wrath and malice, and pride, and worldly ambition, and lives for the future.—has God for his portion.—looks not at things which are seen by the natural eye, but at things which are not seen, save by the eye of faith—eternal things.

WE recently met with what we call a noble sentence. It rings of the right metal; and reads as follows:—"I like life, and I like righteousness. If I cannot keep the two together, I will let life go, and choose righteousness." Another told-bit was this: "If you have not the joy of the Lord as your strength, there is a sad deficiency in your present Christian experience." And still another.—"We must do one of two things.—either learn to control the conditions of our lives, or let them control us." There is no mistake about that. And it should not take us long to decide that we cannot afford to drift with the tide.

THE Pall Mall Gazette after speaking of the comparative strength of the French and English navies and the great strides Russia is taking as a marine power, is fearful that in case of war the English Mediterranean fleet would be destroyed in detail before reinforcements could reach it, because nearly all of the French battleships are provided with satellites—i. e. torpedo gunboats, and but few of theirs have. It says that year by year the Russian fleet in the Black Sea has been growing in strength; and is built with the one design of intervening decisively against the English in the Mediterranean. It comprises new ships of tremendous power, and is bound to force its way through the Bosphorus and Dardanelles on the outbreak of war. It concludes by saying, "the Government talks of relying largely to the Channel Squadron. Better, far better send the ships to the Mediterranean, where they are so urgently needed. Modern war is so sharp and sudden in its inception that we may dismiss the convenient hope of a month's warning. Our rivals will not throw away the advantage they already possess. If we do not follow the example of France, and with true prescience concentrate our forces there, our fleet is doomed on the outbreak of hostilities. And who holds the Mediterranean holds India in its grasp."

The above shows how closely the nations are watching each other's preparation for the final struggle for supremacy that is sure to come. Let us hope it may not be far distant, and then when the smoke of battle clears away, an era of peace will dawn.

Admonish One Another.

To admonish one another, is the divine injunction. By the help of God we will obey. Will you, brother? Will you, sister? Will you remember that you have an influence for good or evil on all you come in contact with? Will you consider that as you have assumed the name of Christ the world is reading you through and through to find out what fruit you are rearing? In thinking of these things, do your hearts condemn you? Do you realize that it is no time to be asleep?—That you are on a dangerous coast? That there are breakers ahead against which you may dash at any moment? That the time for improving the Lord's money has about expired, and a demand for the interest will soon be made? Can you render a good account? Are your books posted? Do you lift up your heads or hang them down when heralds of his Majesty come on the breezes? You are moved one way or the other—there is no middle ground, or neutral, to stand upon.

We are living when it is fashionable to don (at least) the garb of the religion of Jesus—it is no longer a reproach to be called a Christian, but he who strives to live one, proves the truth of apostolic teaching that godly living in Christ is always followed by persecution. Are any of us trying to mix ungodly conduct with a godly profession? being wafted graciously before a pleasant breeze, swallowing goblet after goblet of this world's pleasures, and flattering ourselves that the Lord will recognize us because of our name? If so, what deluded souls we are! Oh, the woeful disappointment, the anguish it will cause to hear the dread sentence, depart, unless we call a halt, and revive the things that still remain. Brother and sister, if you are awake to the realities of the situation, and awaiting the consummation, by the ties of our holy calling, we entreat you to counsel, warn and encourage others, and above all, show them by example the effect of living the truth.

The Woman Question.

A brother writes: "Bro. Joblin, please give us through THE RESTITUTION some light on I Cor. xiv. 34, 35 and I Tim. ii. 11, 12."

We never have written or spoken a word publicly, that we remember, on what is called the "Woman Question;" but we have no objection to giving our views about it. It remains to be seen, however, whether it will enlighten any one. We trust it may, and write by request with this view.

I Cor. xiv. 33 shows that something had caused confusion in the meetings of the Church at Corinth, and to correct this the apostle says in the next verse, "let your women keep silence in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak: but they are commanded to be under obedience, as saith the law; and if they would learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home, for it is a shame for women to speak in the church."

The same apostle writing to Timothy says, "Let the women learn in silence with all subjection: but I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence: for Adam was first formed, then Eve; and Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression."

That is one side of the woman question, but like all others, it has two sides. We have here, two strictures relative to woman's speaking and teaching in the church. The other side is as follows:—On the day of Pentecost Peter full of Holy Spirit quotes Joel's prophecy and explains the extraordinary occurrences of the day by it. "And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh, and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy," etc., so that both sexes are included in the company. The next verse says, and on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit and they shall prophesy, or teach, see ver. 11.

In I Cor. xi. we read that "every woman that prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered dishonoreth her head;" while on the other hand the preceding verse teaches that every man must be bareheaded while praying or prophesying. And if any one doubt as to what this prophesying means they are directed to the 3rd and 5th verses of the 14th chapter, where it says that "he that prophesieth speaketh unto men to edification." The lesson is, then, that women must neither speak to the edification of the church, nor offer public prayer in the church while uncovered.

In Phil. iv. 3 we are still in company with Paul, and he says, "I entreat thee also, true fellow, help those women which labored with me in the gospel, with Clement also, and others also my fellow-laborers, whose names are in the book of life."

We are still with Paul and his fellow-laborers in Rom. xvi., and they were truly a noble and staunch band of helpers in Christ Jesus, and laborers in the Lord, of both sexes, including Phebe the servant of the church at Cenchrea, Priscilla, Tryphena and Tryphosa.

In Acts xxi.: we are still with Paul and his company—this time at Cæsarea, in the house of Philip the evangelist, all four of whose virgin daughters did prophesy. What did Paul call there for? Did he go there to put a stop to their prophesying, or to lodge and visit? Surely not to prevent their prophesyings, or else Luke would have said so. He said nothing of the sort, so we may reasonably conclude there was nothing so very wrong about it. And if they prophesied, where did they prophesy? Did they shut themselves up in a room, or go abroad into the fields where none could be edified? This is too unreasonable to suppose. We believe they preached the gospel of the blessed God to every body that would listen, in church or out.

But the objector suggests that we are forgetting that it says they are commanded to be under "obedience, as also the law saith,"—there had been no change in that respect." True, and glad of it; and you will know why, presently. In the first place Micah vi. 4, shows that Miriam was one of the three chosen by God to lead Israel out of Egypt to the promised land,—and we learn elsewhere that she was the solo singer after crossing the sea safely,—and we find that the wife of Lapidoth—Deborah—was a prophetess, and judged or ruled all Israel from one end of the land to the other. Here we have a notable, wise, patriotic leader and mouthpiece for the nation, who was as energetic as wise. "Up," said she to the commander of the forces on the eve of a battle,—"Up, hath not God commanded," etc... take ten thousand men," etc. See Judges iv.

Next we come to Huldah the prophetess—a faithful warner of impending judgment, and wise counsellor of the young king Josiah, then we have Anna a prophetess. Luke ii. 36. Surely the balance of the testimony is in favor of woman telling all she knows about God and Truth and righteousness and judgment to come.

But what are we going to do with I Cor. xiv. 34, 35, and I Tim. ii. 11, 12? We do not propose to do anything with them. They must stand just as they are. Then do we mean to say that Paul contradicts himself, and that a consensus of all the testimony shows two opposing rules regarding women? By no means. We have perfect confidence in Paul—believe him just as we believe Jesus; believe he was directed by the Spirit, both when he wrote these two passages, and also when he wrote to the Galatians that in Christ Jesus there is neither male nor female,—all are one in him. And so, when he writes to all the saints at any place he means both brethren and sisters, male and female. And we hold that when he writes to such a church and exhorts them to "let the Word of Christ dwell in them richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in their hearts to the Lord, he meant both male or female, or else he would have said so. And be it observed that he shows that singing is one way of teaching and admonishing one another—and to strictly construe those two passages to the neglect of others is to exclude women even from singing, and writing.

We hold that the want of harmony is not real—only apparent. No one has a right to feel perplexed over I Cor. xiv. 34, 35 if he has not studied the whole chapter, and see what a confused condition of things existed because of their zeal for spiritual gifts, and that, too, without regard to the edification of the Body—talking in unknown tongues because they could thus talk, and the brethren not understanding enough of it to be able to say amen to it.

Dr. Adam Clark says it was the custom of those times for men in the audience to ask questions, to object, altercate and attempt to refute a speaker in the synagogue, but this liberty was not allowed any woman. Doubtless this is what Paul had reference to when he said, "As also saith the law." It would seem that the women in the church had been following this course, and asking questions and contradicting, or teaching, or usurping authority and thus causing confusion. If they fail to understand what is said, they must not interupt, but, ask their husbands about it when they get home. Plainly to our mind, the speaking to LEARN, and perhaps debate to dispute to that end, is what is forbidden: and not the imparting knowledge, or words of comfort or exhortation. In this way Paul is in harmony with Paul and divine usage. We do not know what the brother thinks and it makes no difference. This is how we look at it.

A Symposium of Faith.

Under the above heading the Conference Board of the Church of God in Iowa, sent out about one hundred circular letters, and has received the following replies many of which were read at their conference greatly to edification. And as means for publication in book form were short a vote was taken that these letters be placed in my hand to be sent to THE RESTITUTION office for publication, and here I comply.

SERIES 4.

The foundation of my belief is this: the observation of nature convinces me that there is an intelligent governing power that controls the universe. Therefore, I believe in God, and accept nature as a revelation of his power and wisdom. Natural religion however, is the religion of fear, and has always led to polytheism and idolatry, while the Bible presents to us as the character of God as infinite in love and goodness, and shows that as our Creator he alone is entitled to our obedience and worship.

This conception of the Supreme Being satisfies my reason and I accept of it as truth. But I am led to inquire, how did man become possessed of this conception of the Divine nature, surely he never learned it from nature, nor could he have originated it in his own mind. Therefore, the Bible must be a revelation of divine truth.

Starting then with two demonstrated facts—the existence of God, and the Bible as his truth, revealed to man, I learn from the Bible:

1. That man was placed upon this earth to have dominion over it, and had he obeyed God, that dominion would have been everlasting, but that having sinned he became subject to death.

2. That God made a covenant with fallen man that the earth should be redeemed from the curse of sin and that those who believe God and walked in his ways should inherit it forever.

3. That in the "fulness of time" Jesus Christ came as the Redeemer of the earth.

4. That Christ lived a life of perfect obedience to God's laws, and was therefore, not subject to death, but that he might draw all men to him he submitted to the power of wicked men and was by them crucified and put to death.

5. That Christ arose from the dead and demonstrated to man that God can and will restore those to life who put their trust in him.

6. That Christ taught that he would again come to earth and would then establish an everlasting kingdom and that all who believed in him should be resurrected to everlasting life.

7. That man's first sin was disbelief in God's Word, and belief in the word of Satan, that man should not surely die.

8. That belief in Christ embraces two points,—1st, that "man must surely die," and 2nd, that Christ died and rose from the dead, and that only through his merits can man hope for a future existence.

9. That the "Kingdom of Heaven" while "not of this world," is to be upon this earth, when Christ shall come to reign with all his holy angels with him.

10. That the time of his appearing "draws nigh and is even at the door."

Very truly yours,

H. R. BLASH.

1. I believe that God is the Creator of the universe, and all that it contains. That associated with him in this work were angels.

2. That man the last act of creation was made upright and pure, but mortal; but with the privilege and capability of having life forever. But, yielding to temptation, fell, and the judgment of God was pronounced and the penalty—death, was passed upon him, and so upon all who partake of his nature. Gen. vii. 21 22; Rom. v. 12, and cut him off from the means of living forever.

3. That God meant that man should live as long as he lives, and so gives him an opportunity to redeem himself and fit himself for eternal life. He was put on a trial of faith, whether he believed God would fulfill his promises, and so promised man an everlasting inheritance on the earth, and hence,

4. I believe that God will fulfill his promise through the appointed way, to those who accept the Son of Abraham, the Son of God.

5. I believe that God will establish a government on earth, which shall subdue and control all other governments; that his Son will be the King who shall rule them, and that those who by their faith and life, attain to the life of God will be co-rulers with him. Dan. vii. 27; Rev. ii. 26 27.

6. That the saints who shall attain to this high state will be changed from a corruptible to an incorruptible state; those dead, resurrected from the death state, those living changed to immortality, that to be in favor with God and his Christ, they must be in entire accord with, and obey them even unto death; first by immersion in water as a death to sin, and then by a godly life; and so be more than conquerors with him who shall save by a mighty hand and an outstretched arm, but the sinner shall be cut off from life and never see the light.

A. HAGSON.

I believe in God, and the Scriptures which constitute the Old and New Testament is God's revealed will to man. My understanding of this is my faith.

1. I believe God is the Creator and upholder of all things.

2. I believe man through disobedience came under condemnation of death, and the whole world is in the condemnation. Rom. v. 18. All lost in Adam.

3. I believe Jesus Christ is the only begotten Son of the Father. John i. 14, and through his righteousness all are justified to life. Rom. v. 18.

4. I believe in the resurrection of all classes. John v. 29.

5. I believe the mission of the gospel is to gather out a people for his name, and this will constitute the mystical body of Christ, he being the head. Acts xv. 14. This company will constitute the ruling elements in God's kingdom, established on earth, and it will destroy Satan's kingdom with all its machinery. Dan. ii. 44.

6. I believe in the restitution spoken of in Acts iii. 21.

7. I believe Israel will be restored to the land of their fathers, Ezek. xxxvi. and xxxviii. chapters and their deliverer will cleanse them from their sins in the day of their deliverance. Rom. xi. 26.

8. I believe we are in the time of the end spoken of by Dan. xii. 4.

9. I believe in order to an acceptance to the kingdom when Jesus comes, it is absolutely necessary to comply with the terms of the gospel of our Lord.

Yours in Christ.

I. G. ROBERTS.

I. We believe that God's Word teaches that man in his present constitution is mortal; that he was formed of the dust of the ground and returns to dust again. Gen. ii. 17; Job xiv. 10; Gen. iii. 19.

2. That there will be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just, and the unjust: that the righteous dead will be raised at the second coming of the Lord, and the rest of the dead—a mixed class, will be raised at the end of the thousand years reign of Christ over the nations. Acts xxiv. 15; 1 Cor. xv. 23; Rev. xx. 5.

3. That the wicked who have rejected all offers of mercy and grace will be utterly destroyed—blotted out of being. Ps. xxxvii. 20, v 10; Mal. iv. 1; Heb. x. 27.

4. That the Lord Jesus will come personally at the beginning of the Millennium; when sin and crime abound and scoffers, professedly Christian will question the fact of his coming. Acts i. 11; Matt. xxiv. 37, 38, 39; 2 Peter iii. 4.

5. That he will take the throne of his father David, the throne of his glory, and jointly with his "called out ones," the saints immortalized, will reign over the twelve tribes of Israel and over all nations. Luke i. 32; Dan. vii. 27; Rev. xx. 4.

6. That the earth renewed and beautified and rendered abundantly fruitful, its barren deserts reclaimed and the curse removed will be the eternal home of the saved, and of the obedient subject nations. Rev. v. 10; Matt. v. 5; Ps. xxxvii. 11.

7. That Judah (Jews) and Israel (the ten tribes) separated until now will be united and form one nation or kingdom under the Messiah in the land promised to Abraham and his seed, a land extending from the hills of Hamath to the river of Egypt, and from the Great Sea to the River Euphrates, a country larger than any country in Europe except Russia. Ezek. xxxvii. 21, 22; Jer. xxiii. 6.

8. That after destroying the open and avowed enemies of his kingdom, and the existing forms of worldly governments, Christ with the saints as joint rulers, will bless all nations with peace and prosperity, and satisfy every rational want. Dan. ii. 44; Ps. ii. 8, 9; Gen. xxii. 18; 1 Cor. xv. i. 4; Acts viii. 12.

9. That the gospel embracing the historical facts that Jesus the Son of God, died and was buried and rose again, and the promise of his coming to establish his kingdom and to reign over Israel and the nations must be believed and obeyed in order to the remission of sins and future salvation.

10. That Jesus was begotten by the Holy Spirit, was born of a woman, a virgin, was like other men, mortal, but endowed with the divine nature at his resurrection from the dead. Matt. i. 18; Rev. i. 18.

JOHN L. WINCE.
MRS. S. R. WINCE.

I believe in the promises God made to Abraham concerning the blessings of the nations and the earth. Gen. xii. 3; xviii. 18; Gal. iii. 8, and in the covenant God made to Abraham in regard to the land of Canaan. Gen. xvii. 8; Ps. cv., and in the Restoration of Israel in their own land. Micah iv., Zach. viii.

I believe in the resurrection of the dead, 1 Cor. xv., Acts iv. 2, and the second coming of Christ on the earth with the saints to establish his kingdom and reign over all nations of the earth, and that the law will go forth and all people will serve him.

I believe in the restitution of all things spoken by all the holy prophets since the world began. Acts iii. 21; Ps. lxxxv.

I believe that all the promises center in Christ and the kingdom.

Yours in hope of the kingdom.

Iowa Tent Work.

The Iowa Tent is at this writing yet at Alden. We have been here a little over two weeks, and have preached 28 discourses. Five have so far been baptized here. There is a good interest and attendance. Many are investigating and we trust good is being done.

The subject of baptism was presented in two discourses. This seemed to stir up the people. They have generally been taught that sprinkling is just as good as baptism. Some are beginning to see the error and are demanding baptism at the hands of their pastors. If they do not comply there will be trouble. Some do not yet see that baptism is the obedience to the faith of the gospel, but they regard it as merely a duty.

Faith in the gospel must precede baptism to be effective. To be baptized without faith in the gospel of Christ, will not answer. We are not here merely to persuade people who are in the churches to come and let us baptize them, because someone has failed to do this, but to instruct them in the gospel and to lay the foundation for a trust in the promises of the gospel by believing the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. A person with the faith of the gospel and who obeys it is baptized into Christ, and is then a member of his Body. And it will then make no difference whether he ever joins any society or not. The fact that a person belongs to a denominational society and then demands baptism without the knowledge of or faith in the gospel will avail nothing. But faith in the things of the kingdom, and in the name of Christ were considered of first importance in the days of the apostles, and no one was baptized by them who did not believe these things. A few examples will serve to show that faith preceded baptism.

1. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Mark xvii. 15, 16.

2. "And many of the Corinthians hearing believed and were baptized." Acts xviii. 8.

3. "When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women." Acts viii. 12.

4. At the house of Cornelius Peter preached and called attention to the Word which God sent unto Israel which was the gospel, and even after they had received the Holy Spirit they were commanded to be baptized. Acts x. 34-48.

Judging from these examples and other instances named in the Bible we conclude that a sound gospel faith—a faith which rests upon the promises of the gospel, must precede baptism in order to remission of sins, and covenant relationship to God.

We are willing to receive and welcome all who want to be baptized and not turn any away, but we want to impress them with the necessity of an intelligent faith in the gospel, and a hearty repentance toward God as indispensible pre-requisites to baptism. They are then the children of God by faith in Jesus the Christ. They have then put on the Anointed and are heirs according to the promise.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

The Voyage.

I.—ANCHORED.

O weary days and nights, so still, so still—
The useless sails hang flapping stiff and slow;
We plan and chafe, and yet our helpless will
In vain tries over all what to change, to know
In our forlorn. We hear the strong winds blow
And feel us in the East, the West we see—
Great ships and small go sailing past and free
II.—ADRIFT.

O fearful days, and fearful nights whose
The swift waves crash and leap all over us;
No sailor's eye but trust, despair, can hold;
We think we can't hear each other's cried,
We think God would not mind us if we died;
We feel forgotten, helpless, cast away;
We shut our eyes and do not even pray.
III.—ON SHORE.

O peaceful days, and peaceful nights whose
Calmed be uttered! O green shores of life
In good We greet! Shall we ever cease
To smile that through such a land-ship strife
We rejoice! That doubt and fears could
We relief
That we could fail to see how God's good hand
Our wayworn and drifting planned?

Who believes on the Lord Jesus Christ?

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." Acts xvi. 31.

The above is the most momentous question ever framed by mortal lips, and one that is but little understood by the religious world. Sinners everywhere are told to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and they will be saved, without either party having but little conception as to what is meant by believing on the Lord Jesus Christ. It is not a personal name like John Smith, or Peter Jones. Jesus is his personal name, but the word Christ is his official title. To illustrate, we may speak of Grover Cleveland, President. Grover Cleveland is his personal name, but the word President, is his official title. So likewise the word Christ, is Jesus' official title. And if we would intelligently believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, we must understand the import of his title. The Analytical Concordance compiled by Robert Young, L. L. D., a work of acknowledged authority among all denominations, says of the word: "Christ (Kristos in the Greek,) anointed. The official appellation of the long promised and long expected Savior, denoting his Kingly authority, and mediatorial position as the Servant of the Lord."

Let me call special attention to Acts ii. 36: "Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ." Here is something that must be "assuredly" known, and that is, "that same Jesus" is "Lord and Christ." That is equivalent to saying, that he has made Jesus "Lord of lords, and King of kings." The Jews needed no instruction that the phrase, "Lord and Christ," related to the long-expected king of Israel, but they doubted that God had made Jesus "Lord and Christ." But when convincing evidence was given them that God had really made the very same Jesus whom they had crucified, "both Lord and Christ," they were pricked in the heart and said, Men and brethren, what shall we do? They were told to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins. This is the same as Paul and Silas told the jailor to "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ" and he should be saved. After belief, he was baptized the same hour of the night. In accord with the above, is the angelic announcement, found in Luke ii. 9, 10, 11: "And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord."

The phrase "Christ the Lord," means the anointed King, who was born that day. Jesus himself when before Pilate confessed to that end was he born, and for that purpose he came into the world.

In harmony with the above is Matt. ii. 1, 2: "Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, Saying, Where is he that was born king of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him." These wise men of the east having learned that there was born in "the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord," come all the way from Arabia, to worship him, and arriving at Jerusalem, they made inquiry as to where he could be found. Did they ask where is he that is born "Christ the Lord?" Why no, they asked for just what the phrase signifies: "Where is he that is born King of the Jews?" Now, "When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him. And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born." Matt. ii. 3, 4.

The wise men asked, "Where is he that is born King of the Jews?" Herod asked, "where Christ should be born?" Now notice the answer: "And they said unto him in Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written by the prophet. And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Judah, art not the least among the princes of Judah: for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel." Matt. ii. 5, 6. In answer to the question as to "Where Christ should be born," he was told that the "Governor who shall rule my people Israel," should be born in Bethlehem. Hence "the king of Jews," the "Christ," and "Governor that shall rule my people Israel," are all used as meaning the same thing. Another Scripture in harmony with the above, is found in John i. 41-47: "He first findeth his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, we have found the Messias, which is, being interpreted, the Christ." Then "Philip findeth Nathaniel, and saith unto him. We have found him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write. And Nathaniel said unto him, Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip saith unto him, Come and see. Jesus saw Nathaniel coming to him, and saith of him, Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile? Nathaniel saith unto him, Whence knowest thou me? Jesus answered and said unto him, Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig tree, I saw thee. Nathaniel answered and saith unto him, Rabbi, thou art the King of Israel."

Here "Messias" "the Christ," and "the king of Israel," are used as meaning the same. See also Acts xvii. 1-7: "And Paul as his manner was, went in unto them, and three sabbath days reasoned with them out of the Scriptures. Opening and alleging, that Christ must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead; and that this Jesus, whom I preach unto you, is Christ. And some of them believed, and consorted with Paul and Silas; and of the devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women not a few. But the Jews which believed not, moved with envy, took unto them certain lewd fellows of the baser sort, and gathered a company, and set all the city on an uproar, and assaulted the house of Jason, and sought to bring them out to the people. And when they found them not, they drew Jason and certain brethren unto the rulers of the city, crying, These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also; whom Jason hath received: and these all do contrary to the decrees of Cesar, saying that there is another king, one Jesus."

Here Paul declares "that this Jesus, (Savior) whom I preach unto you, is Christ," and because he thus preached, some who did not believe, assaulted the house of Jason, and took him and some of the brethren before the rulers and charged them with preaching another king, Jesus." This is just what the Jews did with Jesus, because he said he was the Christ, they accused him before Pilate with making himself a king. See Luke xxiii. 1-3: "And the whole multitude of them arose, and led him unto Pilate. And they began to accuse him, saying, We found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Cesar, saying that he himself is Christ a king. And Pilate asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And he answered him and said, Thou sayest it."

The phrase "saying that he is Christ, a king," shows clearly what the word Christ means. Jesus confirmed the above, when Pilate asked him: "Art thou the king of the Jews?" for he confessed that he was.

Mark xv. 31, is another clear evidence as to the Bible definition of the word Christ. "Likewise also the chief priests mocking said among themselves with the scribes, He saved others; himself he cannot save. Let Christ the King of Israel descend now from the cross, that we may see and believe. And they that were crucified with him reviled him."

"Christ the king of Israel,"—those same scribes gave a like definition to Herod, when he asked them "Where Christ should be born?" they told him in answer to his question, that the prophet said, the "Governor that shall rule my people Israel" should be born in Bethlehem, hence telling them where Israel's Governor should be born, was their answer as to where Christ should be born.

We have certainly a remarkable testimony in Acts viii. 5, 12, illustrating what it means to believe in Christ. "Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them." Now refer to verse 12, and we will find just what they learned from Philip preaching "Christ unto them." "When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women." Here we learn decisively that when Christ is preached, the kingdom of God is preached, it would be impossible to preach the Christ as "Governor of my people Israel," without preaching the restoration of the kingdom to Israel. The one is involved in the other. Another of Philip's auditors at Samaria was the eunuch. When he believed Philip's teaching, "And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. And he commanded the chariot to stand still, and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him." Acts viii. 36-38. What did the eunuch confess he believed from Philip's teaching? He confessed that he believed that "Jesus the Christ was the Son of God." We could not suppose that Philip would preach a different message for salvation to the eunuch from that which he preached to the men and women who believed his teaching "concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ," when he preached "Christ" unto them. To analyze the confession of the eunuch, we have first, Jesus the Savior, next the Christ, which is "Christ a king," Luke xxiii. 2, and in the next verse Jesus endorses this definition, by saying it was true that he was really "the king of the Jews," and in Mark xv. 32, we have the definition of "Christ," as "the king of Israel." So in preaching Christ to the eunuch, he preached him as "the king of Israel," and if "the king of Israel," he preached the restoration of "the kingdom to Israel," which is the "kingdom of God," hence, in preaching "Christ" to the eunuch, he preached the "kingdom of God" to him just as he did to the others at Samaria.

As we have seen from the Scriptures what it means to believe on Christ, I will now add a few testimonies as to its importance. What do you suppose is the condition of one who denies that "Jesus is the Christ?" I will let the Word of God tell you. See 1 John ii. 22: "Who is a liar but he that denies that Jesus is the Christ?" Now, we know no liar can be in a saved condition. This reminds me of what I once heard in one of the meetings of the Y. M. C. A., in Chicago. The secretary made an official announcement that the doctrines of the second coming of Christ and baptism, were not to be taught in the noon meetings of that association. In denying the second coming of Christ, they denied the privilege of preaching Jesus as the Christ, the coming king of Israel. Another leader I heard glory in the fact that he did not preach the second coming of Christ, "who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ?"

Now what is the condition of those who believe that Jesus is the Christ? We will let the same Holy Book answer. See 1 John v. 1: "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God: and every one that loveth him that begat, loveth him also that is begotten of him."

Now, suppose we do not know what it means to believe "that Jesus is the Christ," can we believe that which we do not understand? We all know that that is impossible. Hence to be "born of God," we must know what it means to believe that "Jesus is the Christ."

In Acts xviii. 24, we have the case of an eloquent earnest man who preached earnestly the Word as far as he knew it. "And a certain Jew, named Apollos, born at Alexandria, an eloquent man, and mighty in the Scriptures, came to Ephesus. This man was instructed in the way of the Lord; and being fervent in the spirit, he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, knowing only the baptism of John. And he began to speak boldly in the synagogue: Whom, when Aquila and Priscilla had heard, they took him unto them, and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly. And when he was disposed to pass into Achaia, the brethren wrote, exhorting the disciples to receive him: who, when he was come, helped them much which had believed through grace. For he mightily convinced the Jews, and that publicly, showing by the Scriptures, that Jesus was Christ." We learn from this record, that Aquila and Priscilla went to hear him preach, and perceived where his faith was defective, and took him aside and "expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly," and then "he mightily convinced the Jews, publicly showing by the Scriptures that Jesus was Christ." Oh would that we had many Aquilas and Priscillas at this day who would correct the defective faith of many earnest men and women of this day who do not know how to believe in Jesus "as the Christ," because there is life in that belief. See John xx. 30, 31: "And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book: But these are written, that ye might have life through his name."

There is life in that precious name, "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ, is born of God." We sometimes sing:

"On Christ the solid rock, I stand,
All other ground is sinking sand."

A greater truth was never sung, when it is sung with the understanding. Alas! how few understand what it is to stand on Christ as a solid rock. And of a truth all "other ground is sinking sand." The confession that Jesus is the Christ is the faith which must precede baptism. On the day of Pentecost when they knew assuredly that God had made that same Jesus whom they had crucified both Lord and Christ," they were baptized for the remission of sins. The same was required when Philip preached Christ, at Samaria. In Acts xviii. 1, we read, "When Silas and Timotheus were come from Macedonia, Paul was pressed in spirit, and testified to the Jews, that Jesus was Christ." For the result see verse 8-10: "And Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house; and many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized. Then spake the Lord to Paul in the night by a vision, Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace: For I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee: for I have much people in this city."

Coming back to our text in Acts xvi. 30-33: "Sirs, what must I do to be saved? And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved. And they spake unto him the Word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house. And they took them that same hour of the night, and washed their stripes, and were baptized, he, and all his straightway."

In the light of the testimony we have given would it not be well for each one to take the advice of 1 Cor. xiii. 5, which says: "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves." It is not my province to examine any one. You must "examine yourselves," "prove your own selves." After having examined or proved your own selves you find your faith was defective when you was baptized, that you had no clear conception as to what it was to believe in Jesus as "the Christ," I entreat you in name of Jesus my

OBITUARY.

Lucile M. Regal, daughter of Benjamin and S. V. Regal, aged fifteen years, eleven months, and sixteen days, died at Patmos, Ohio, May 16, 1894.

This dear young sister understandingly embraced the truth at the age of twelve, and since that time has held firmly to the one faith. She leaves a father, mother, three sisters, two brothers, and many friends to mourn their loss. Her mother is the devoted Sister, S. V. Regal, whose name appears in THE REVIVALIST. Dear Lula naturally possessed a loving disposition, and being the youngest in the family, there is a vacancy in that home that can never be filled. Her suffering and death was from that dreadful disease Typhoid fever. During her long and severe sickness of three months, she was always patient and kind. Her friends were always greeted with a smile, and when her voice was too weak to express her gratitude for kind acts, she would raise her feeble hand and place it on our cheeks and smile. How our hearts ached to see her suffer and finally yield to the grim monster death, but our hearts are lifted up from despair by her firm faith in the promises of Jehovah. To know that she believed in Christ the King, that he should be "called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God give unto him the throne of his father David, and that he should reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there should be no end." Luke i. 32, 33. She was not ashamed to own him as King, and to acknowledge that through the gospel life and immortality is brought to light.

Words of comfort were spoken by Dr. J. H. Thomas of Pittsburgh. The hand of affliction has again rested upon the little church of Salem, Ohio. It is less than a year since our earnest worker, Olive D. Townsend was laid to rest. O how fast the enemy death claims us, in three short years five of our little band have been snatched from us. We are bowed down with grief, but are striving to hold fast the beginning of our confidence firm unto the end. Few as we are in numbers, we meet each first day for worship. We have a chapter for a lesson, also a subject, each one taking an active part, thus striving to build one another up in our most holy faith, after which we commemorate the Lord's death by partaking of the emblems of his broken body and spilt blood.

May we have strength to prove faithful to the end. Your Sister in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

Nancy Barber.

Resign thyself unto his will
And then submissive say,
The Lord did give and has a right
To leave or take away.

What if thy loved one had been spared
To wander here below,
Or taste the sorrows thou hast shared,
Or naught but trials know.

In that bright world beyond the tomb
Which Jesus will prepare,
She'll meet her loved ones all again,
And in God's kingdom share.

☞It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

Country Homes.

[illegible] Wilson, Kansas, [illegible] Sept. 14 to 24, 1894.

As we look back over the pleasant gatherings we have had at this season of the year, we wonder if this will not be the best we have ever had, we trust it will. In order to make it so we earnestly request every church in the state to send at least one or more delegates, and as many isolated brethren as can possibly do so come. We want you to see for yourselves just what we are doing and assist in devising ways and means for future work.

Bring your tents, camping outfit, ten day's rations and your hearts full of love for the Master, and enjoy association love feast with the brethren as you have never done before. Elder A. J. Kephart of Iowa, who undoubtedly is the best worker and as able a preacher as there is within our ranks, has signified his intentions to be at this meeting. Those who cannot come send us letters of encouragement. Any further information can be had by addressing,

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Kansas, will be held three miles northeast of Oxford, in Cowley County, at Bro. Thomas Jackson's schoolhouse. This meeting will last about ten days, commencing August the tenth, 1894. There is some important business to transact. Business meeting will be on Saturday at two o'clock P. M. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can bring tents and come prepared to camp. The brethren at Oxford are wholesouled, hospitable folks, but it is too much for women to have to work all the time and get no good of the meetings, so let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master. The commotion of the world indicates his coming is very near. All speaking brethren wishing any information correspond with Bro. S. C. Oliver, Attica, Kan. A full program will be published in due time.

S. C. Oliver, Pres.
E. F. Randolph, Sec.

The annual conference of the Church of God, known as the Northern Nebraska, and Southern Dakota Conference, will be held two miles south-east of Fairfax, South Dakota. This meeting will begin Friday night, Sept. 7th, 1894, and will continue as long as to be found of interest in the Master's cause. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can bring tents and come prepared to camp the brethren at Fairfax and vicinity are ready to do all they can to make it pleasant for all the brethren that may come from abroad. Brethren, don't forget this meeting as we want your help, as we are just opening up a new field of labor in South Dakota. So, let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master's cause, for the condition of the world indicates his coming is very near at hand.

Wm. H. Denson, Sec'y.

An Important Query Concerning Sickness.

A friend of mine asked me the other day what I thought about Christians being sick, and if there was any sickness among the members of the primitive church. The question is an important one, and requires a careful and Scriptural answer. The main thought that prompted the query I believe was this--that sickness in general is the result of sin, or the transgression of physical law, and that as the believer has been made free from sin, morally, he ought to be also physically free. I could not answer the question satisfactorily to my own mind without thinking it over, and investigating the matter a little. If any of my readers differ from the conclusion I arrive at, and think them erroneous or unscriptural, I am open to conviction, and ready to embrace something more Scriptural.

We know that there is a great deal of sickness and disease among the people, whether Christian or not. Apparently it has always been so. When Jesus entered upon his mission, he preached the gospel of the kingdom in connection with the healing of all manner of sickness and disease. See Matt. iv. 23; ix. 35. He also gave his apostles power to do the same, Matt. x. 1; Mark iii. 15. And at one time when many were brought unto him to be cured, the historian says, "he cast out the spirits with a word, and healed all that were sick; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, himself took our infirmities, and bare our sickness." Matt. viii. 16, 17. And the apostle Peter says, "Who his own self bare (carried) our sins in his own body to the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness; by whose stripes ye were healed." 1 Pet. ii. 24. Query. Did the death or sacrifice of Christ only cover moral guilt? or, did it not reach to the purification of the whole person? Is the salvation of the gospel only for the mind, soul, or spirit? This savors too much of the popular doctrine of salvation for immortal souls. We believe that Christ died to save sinners,—wholly, completely—spirit, soul, and body. As a people, we do not believe in dividing man into parts. We believe man to be an unit. Christ's death was for the whole man. The whole person dies to sin, and is buried in the grave of waters, and rises to live a new life,—a type of his future literal death, burial, and resurrection. The believer of the gospel when he obeys from the heart this form of doctrine, is then made free from sin, and has purified himself in obeying the truth. Rom. vi. 17, 18; 1 Pet. i. 23. Can a person be free from sin, and be pure, and holy, yet be polluted in body by disease induced by filthy practices, or the violation of physical law? How was it with the Lamb of God? He was without sin, or spot, or blemish. He is our example. "Be ye holy, for I am holy."

It is admitted that our redemption will be full and complete at the resurrection. So far as the redeemed are concerned there will be no imperfection amongst them in the kingdom of God. No disease, no sickness, no pain, no cripples, or blind, or deaf, or dumb; because there will be no sin. "Christ appeared at the end of the ages (Mosaic) to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." Heb. ix. 26. "He was manifested to take away our sins;" and "for this purpose was the Son of God manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil." 1 John iii. 5, 8. As the sacrifice of Christ was to put away sin, and to destroy the works of the devil, then if the believer is free from the dominion of sin, why not saved now from the results of sin, or the works of the devil? Peter told Cornelius when preaching in his house, that Jesus after he was anointed with the Holy Spirit and with power, went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil, for God was with him. Acts x. 38. We know what Jesus did—he cured all manner of sickness and disease among the people. Sometimes Jesus connected his miracles with forgiveness, as in Matt. ix. 2-8; Luke v. 18-26. The woman who had a spirit of infirmity, being bowed almost together for eighteen years, and on whom he laid his hands, and made straight, he said had been bound by Satan for that length of time. Whatever it was that caused the infinity, the bond was loosed, and she glorified God. All the sick, infirm, lame, blind, deaf, dumb, etc., that he healed, and they were many, were said to be "oppressed of the devil"—they were sufferers physically, in consequence of sin. That disease is connected with sin is evident, for Jesus connected the cure of it with forgiveness. To a man sick of the palsy, he said "Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee." This language offended the scribes, they said it was blasphemy. But Jesus replied, "Whether it is easier to say, thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise and walk?" And then to prove to them that he had power on earth to forgive sins, he commanded the man to arise, and take up his bed. Matt. ix. 2-8. Also, on another occasion, he found a man lying on a bed, who had been infirm for 38 years. Jesus had compassion on him, and said, "Rise, take up thy bed, and walk." The man did so, and did not know who had cured him, till Jesus met him in the temple, and said to him, "Behold, thou art made whole: sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee." John v. 1-16. This implies that the infirmity which the man had suffered from so long, was caused by sin. But now the infirmity was removed, and the sin forgiven; the effect he was to sin no more, lest it might be worse with him. But how was it with the Church established by the apostles? Were those who were admitted into fellowship with Christ and each other, fully forgiven their sins, for his name's sake? Certainly they were. We read, "And the Lord daily added those being saved to the congregation." Acts ii. 47. Undoubtedly they were saved from their sins when immersed into Christ. Query. Were they not also saved from bodily diseases at the same time, if they had any? Jesus gave his apostles authority not only to preach, but to "heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out demons; freely ye have received, freely give." Matt. x. 7, 8. Seeing that the apostles possessed this power, we can scarcely suppose that any sick or diseased person entered the church. It is doubtless a fact that all persons who believed the gospel, repented, and were immersed, received a full and free pardon, and began to serve the Lord Christ with a clean record. When Ananias was sent to Saul to tell him what to do, etc., he found him blind; but he put his hands upon him, "and immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales: and he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized." Acts ix. 17, 18; xxii. 12-16. And if Saul was delivered from this infirmity, why not others, if in any way afflicted, when baptized for the remission of their sins? From the accounts given in the gospels and Acts of the Apostles of the miracles performed, bodily diseases and infirmities were very common among the people. Multitudes flocked around Jesus and his apostles for healing; and none were refused who applied. But not every one who received healing through Jesus, or his apostles, were believers. Of the ten lepers that were cleansed, only one returned to give thanks, and he was a Samaritan. Luke xvii. 11-19. Many followed Jesus from curiosity and low motives. To some Jesus said, "Ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves and were filled." John vi. 26. However that might have been, we do not read of one sufferer who was refused relief. Jesus was the great Physician. He said, "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." "A great multitude followed him, because they saw his miracles which he did on them that were diseased." John vi. 2. This was truly "a great multitude," five thousand men, besides women and children. There were sick among them; "he was moved with compassion toward them, and he healed their sick;" and before he sent the multitude away he fed them all. See Matt. xiv. 14-21; Mark vi. 34-44; Luke ix. 11-17; John vi. 1-14.

It may be asked, if sickness and disease result from sin, and those thus afflicted are "oppressed by the devil," are not those who receive Jesus as their Savior, freely forgiven their sins, and delivered from the power of darkness? Jesus sent Saul of Tarsus, as his minister and witness, to the Gentiles, "to open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me." Acts xxvi. 18. Whatever view may be entertained by Christians now as to this matter, it is scarcely reasonable to suppose that believers were made members of the apostolic church, and yet were under the dominion of the adversary; or in other words, that morally they were made free from sin, but physically they "were oppressed by the devil"—that morally they were purified and made clean through the blood of Jesus, but as to their bodies they might be full of disease, and therefore impure and unclean. The apostle Paul says, "If any man defile the temple of God, him will God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which ye are," 1 Cor. iii. 17; and "know ye not that your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit in you, which we have of God?" 1 Cor. vi. 19. Is an impure or diseased body a proper abode for holy Spirit? Can God be glorified in such a body? Will God accept such a body as a living, holy sacrifice? Rom. xii. 1. The sacrifices and offerings prescribed under the law were to be the purest and the best. "Whatsoever hath a blemish, that shall ye not offer; for it shall not be acceptable for you." Lev. xxii. 20. Jesus, the Lamb of God, was holy, pure, without blemish, "who did no sin." His sacrifice was acceptable—he "offered himself without spot to God." Pure, without spot or blemish, as to his entire person—spirit, soul, and body. And Christ "left us an example, that we should follow his steps."

Perhaps no one will dispute the statement that sickness and disease result from sin. The apostle John says, "Sin is the transgression of law;" and "he that committeth sin is of the devil," 1 John iii. 4, 8; "and he that is begotten of God keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not," 1 John v. 18. Who can say what the beloved John means when he says, "there is a sin unto death," and "there is a sin not unto death?" unless it refers to some sickness or disease inflicted upon a child of God on account of some particular sin. The one not unto death can be prayed for, and forgiven, and the sinner restored to health again; the other being unto death cannot be forgiven, and therefore not to be prayed for. And it seems that the provision made for brethren in the church who sinned and fell into condemnation, or were under judgment, as we read of in James v. 12-20, plainly refers to bodily diseases which came upon them as a punishment for transgression. So also the reference to the judgments the apostle Paul speaks of in 1 Cor. xi. 27-34, which came upon those in the church who were guilty of eating and drinking unworthily at the Lord's Supper. "For this cause," says he, "many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep. For if we would judge (or examine) ourselves, we should not be judged." This kind of judgment he calls a chastisement or correction from the Lord, which if it produces reformation will save us from being condemned with the world. In 1 Cor. v. we read of a judgment inflicted upon a fornicator—a brother in the Corinthian Church. The apostles commanded the brethren, when assembled together, "in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, to deliver such an one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." And then he reproves the church for their boasting in this matter. It is probable that this fornicator was a prominent person amongst them, and there was danger that this little leaven of wickedness might corrupt the whole church, therefore they are commanded to purge out the old leaven. Read the 11th verse. These characters are not to be associated with—with such, no not to eat. It appears that the judgment inflicted upon this person produced repentance, for Paul in his second letter gives orders to restore the penitent to the favor of the church. Read the account in 2 Cor. ii. 1-11.

"To deliver over to Satan" is a peculiar mode of expression used by the apostle Paul, and evidently implies the infliction of bodily disease upon the offender, as in the above case. The design is to save the sinner. In 1 Tim. i. 20, a reference is made to Hymeneus and Alexander, two prominent teachers, who concerning faith had made shipwreck, overthrowing the faith of some, saying that resurrection is already past. (2 Tim. ii. 17, 18), whom Paul said he had "delivered unto Satan, that they might learn (by punishment) not to blaspheme." That the apostle had this power of punishing vile offenders is evident from an incident recorded in Acts xiii. 6-12, of blindness for a season inflicted upon Elymas, the sorcerer, who sought to turn away Sergius Paulus from the faith. This power of the apostle is implied in 2 Cor. x. 8; xii. 20, 21; xiii. 10. Also in 1 Cor. iv. 18-21; 2 Cor. ii. 16; x. 2; xiii. 2.

The apostle Peter, through his gift of discerning spirits, detected the lying hypocrisy of Ananias and Sapphira, in the church at Jerusalem, and was the means of the judicial punishment of death coming upon them. This awful and speedy judgment which fell upon these offenders, no doubt would have a salutary effect upon all those who witnessed it; for it is said, "great fear came upon the church, and upon as many as heard these things." Acts v. 1-11. There are only two believers mentioned by name—Epaphroditus and Trophimus—who are spoken of as sick persons in all the epistles. Epaphroditus had been sent by the church at Philippi with necessary things for the relief of the apostle Paul at Rome, and while performing his service "was sick, nigh unto death." Phil. ii. 25-30; iv. 15-19. The other was Trophimus whom Paul left at Miletum sick. 2 Tim. iv. 20. God restored the former in mercy to Paul; while the latter for some reason Paul left sick.

Why is there now so much sickness and disease among those who profess to belong to Christ? Is it God's will that we should be sick, and so many die of diseases? I cannot so think. It is no pleasure to him for his children to suffer. "He does not afflict willingly nor grieve the children of men." Sam. iii. 33. But if we break his laws—natural or revealed—the penalty is ours. Bodily suffering is the sure effect of the transgression of physical law, just as surely as spiritual and eternal death follow the breach of God's revealed will. He takes no pleasure in the death of the wicked. Ezek. xviii. 23, 32. He has made ample provision for his people, if obedient to his laws, both for the present and the future. "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." 1 Tim. iv. 8. Submitted in love to the brethren.

A Letter to a Friend. A new edition of this popular work has been printed. It is not necessary to say a word about this work to the older readers, but to the new ones we say the subject treated of is the "Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the One Hope, One Faith, and One Baptism." It was written some years ago by the late Mr. O. O. Woodruff, and it is truly "A letter to a Friend." Many editions have been printed and distributed until this little 32 page tract is acknowledged as the most effective missionary that can be handed out. Price 10 cts. each. Send and get a supply to distribute.

Future Probation. By Wm. G. Moncrieff. We have received an invoice of the new book of 148 pages, written by William Glen Moncrieff, subject, "Future Probation: Is That Awaiting Any of the Unrighteous?" Bro. Moncrieff is a writer well known to our readers, and of undoubted ability. This book is paper covers, and sells for 12 cts. each, and can be had at this office.

A Deed and a Word.

A little spring had lost its way
Amid the grass and fern:
A passing stranger scooped a well,
Where weary men might turn;
He walled it in, and hung with care
A ladle at the brink;
He thought not of the deed he did,
But judged that toil might drink.
He passed again, and lo! the well,
By summer never dried,
Had cooled ten thousand parching tongues,
And saved a life beside.

A noiseless man, amid a crowd
That thronged the daily mart,
Let fall a word of hope and love,
Unstudied from the heart:
A whisper on the tumult thrown,
A transitory breath—
It raised a brother from the dust.
It saved a soul from death.
O germ! O fount! O word of love!
O thought, at random cast!
Ye were not lilt at for fame,
But mighty at the last.

Various Requests and Replies.

1. A brother writes, asking what Jesus means by "coming down from heaven," "from above," "being sent into the world," etc., and "having seen the Father." He says he does not believe in the pre-existence theory, but is somewhat at a loss to explain these phrases to others.

In reply I would say that I answered similar queries at length through THE RESTITUTION, I think about 18 months ago, to which I refer the brother. They were asked by Bro. J. H. Otis, of Los Gatos, Cal. But lest he may not be able to obtain a copy containing that article, I will briefly suggest a few thoughts on the subject.

No one supposes that Jesus came personally from heaven, or that it is necessary to eat his flesh and drink his blood literally in order to have eternal life. Yet he said, "As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father; so he that eateth me, even he shall live by me. This is that bread which came down from heaven." John vi. 53-58. This can only be true spiritually. In the same connection, verse 63, Jesus declared, "It is the spirit that makes alive; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." The words spoken by Jesus constitute the bread of God—the manna—which came down from heaven, and which giveth life unto the world. By a figure of speech, called metonymy, by which one word is put for another, Jesus said, "I am that bread of life;" "I am the living bread which came down from heaven; if any one eat of this bread, he shall live for ever," etc. This eating he calls believing in verse 6, 7: "He that believeth on me hath everlasting life." To believe on him is to believe the record which God has given of his Son; (1 John v. 10;) and to believe the words he spoke, "for he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God," John iii. 34; vii. 16; xii. 40, 41. "There was a man sent from God, whose name was John." John i. 6. He was not in heaven when he received his commission to baptize, but in the wilderness. Luke iii. 2. Yet his authority was from heaven. Matt. xxi. 23-27; Luke vii. 30. So Jesus received his authority from his Father in heaven when he was anointed with the Holy Spirit, at his immersion in the waters of the Jordan. In the synagogue, at Nazareth, he recognized the fact that he had been called and qualified for a great mission. Luke iv. 16-21, 43. He was sent by God to the children of Israel to preach the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and this is called a voice "from heaven." Acts x. 36, 37; Heb. xii. 25-29; Luke iv. 43; Matt. 24. Jesus said many times that he was sent—sent into the world—that God his Father sent him—anointed with Holy Spirit and sent to preach the gospel of the kingdom of God. There must have been a time when God sent his Son into the world, and when he came. Was it at birth, or when thirty years of age at his baptism? Without doubt his mission began when anointed. His conception, his birth, his training, his life, was preparatory for the work he was appointed to do. In this sense he was sent and came from God, or from heaven. Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews, said to Jesus, "Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God; for no man can do the miracles that thou doest, except God be with him." John iii. 2. Jesus sent and qualified his apostles to teach all nations, and in prayer to the Father says—"As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I sent them into the world." John xvii. 18. And as to "seeing the Father," it cannot mean ocular vision, for it is said, "No man hath seen God at any time." The Greek word translated to see, also signifies to perceive, to discern with the mind. It was in this sense Jesus said, "He that seeth (theorun) me seeth (theorun) him that sent me." John xii. 45; xiv. 9. And to the Jews he said, "your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day; and he saw it, and was glad." John viii. 56. It was by faith in God's promises that he saw or discerned Messiah's day. Heb. xi. 13. "The natural (animal) man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolish unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." 1 Cor. ii 14. Hoping that these few remarks may be helpful to our brother; I proceed now to reply very briefly to another query as follows—

2. "Why is the first day of the week not rendered first sabbath, as it is sabbaton in the Greek." Instead of replying in my own language, I will give an able criticism by Prof. Whiting on the word sabbaton, which I hope will be satisfactory, and decide the matter.

"The Hebrew word 'sabbath' has been transferred by the translators of the Septuagint and by the New Testament writers. You are aware it signifies a rest, 'a lying by from labor.' In the Greek it appears in two forms, one is sabbaton, a neuter noun of the second declension, as if from a nominative sabbat, or sabbas. The genitive plural is sabbaton, (long o, as in our word tone.) An English reader when he sees the nominative sabbaton (short o, as in not,) would be likely to confound it with the genitive plural, or vice versa. So much for the form of the word. Now for its use.

1. "Sabbaton signifies 'a rest,' 'a sabbath'—especially, the seventh day of the week. By a metonymy it is also used as the interval from sabbath to sabbath; that is, 'a week.' So in Luke xviii. 12, dis tou sabbaton, 'twice in a week.' In other instances, this word is used after numerals, as 'first,' and in Matt. xxviii. 1, after mean, 'one' by Hebrewism for 'first.' So Mark xvi. 9, 'early the first day of the week,' proi prote sabbaton. So Luke xxiv. 1; John xx. 1.

2. The plural form, sabbata, is often used with the singular signification. This may be regarded as a Hebrew idiom. In these cases it is in the genitive or dative case, plural, sabbaton, or sabbasi. For examples of genitive plural, see Matt. xxviii. 1; Luke iv. 16; Acts xiii. 14; xv. 21; xvi. 13. For dative plural, Matt. xii. 1; Mark ii. 24; Luke iv. 31; vi. 2. I believe that there are only two instances in which sabbata (in nominative plural) is properly translated sabbaths, viz.: Acts xvii. 2; and Col. ii. 16. In the Septuagint, sabbata (nominative plural) is used as a singular—Exod. xvi. 23, 26. Now, as to the passages to which you refer—"Mark xvi. 9—prote tou sabbaton is 'the first day of the week.'

"Mark xvi. 1—diagenomenau tou sabbaton, is 'the sabbath being passed.'"

"Mark xvi. 2—tes mias sabbaton, (plural,) is 'of the first day of the week.'"

"Luke xxiv. 1—the same."

"John xx. 1—te mia ton sabbaton, is 'the first day of the week.'"

"John xx. 19—ton sabbaton, 'of the week.'"

"1 Cor. xvi. 2—kata mian sabbaton, is 'on the first day of the week;' and Acts xx. 7 is exactly the same; i. e. mia sabbaton.

"Now, then, I regard Col. ii. 16 as decisive on the sabbath question. We are to let no man judge (i. e., have authority) over us in respect to the distinction of meats or drinks, as clean or unclean, and in respect to holy days, or new moons, or sabbaths. It is in vain to say that other days beside Saturday were 'days of rest,' or sabbaths. The plural (genitive) sabbaton, will include all days of rest. Its most general reference, as we all know, is to the most frequent (sabbath) day of rest."

By a careful examination of the above criticism and passages, our brother will see that to render prote tau sabbaton, or mia sabbaton "first sabbath" instead of "first day of the week," as he suggests, would be incorrect. According to the lexicons, sabbaton sometimes means a week, and numerical adjectives preceding sabbaton, denotes the days of the week. Matt. xxviii. 1 will serve to illustrate every other instance in which sabbaton is preceded by a numeral. The word sabbaton which first occurs in this verse the Jewish sabbath, which had just ended; these cond occurrence is mian sabbaton—mian one or first (heemeran) day, understood, and sabbaton, of the week; literally, "the first of the week," which consisted of seven days. And so of every other instance in the New Testament. Hoping the above will be sufficient to settle the Sabbath question, so far as the original is concerned, I submit it for the consideration of the inquirer, and all readers interested in the subject. Another subject of inquiry is left for another paper.

B. WILSON.

Knowledge, Faith, and Opinion. No. 1.

Dear Restitution:

I have received from Indiana the following card:—"Brother Elton, will you please write an article for THE RESTITUTION, showing the difference between knowledge, faith, and opinion? Yours for the love of truth.—H. I. F."

In reply would say, though these words are often used interchangeably, they have a different meaning. A person will often say he knows a thing when he only believes it, or thinks so. We frequently hear it said that "Seeing is believing," but it is not. If we see a thing we know it, but if some one told us of it we would believe it—provided we had faith or confidence in the truthfulness, or reliability of the informant. If we had not we may doubt its truth, and in that case it would only be an opinion. We would say, "he says so many things that are not true, we dont know whether to believe him or not. It may be so, or it may not, we are doubtful about it." We may rather incline to think it true, or not as the case may be, and that would be our opinion.

Opinion is what we think, but there is room for doubt. Faith is what we believe—and to have full assurance of faith the testimony must be good—no room for a doubt, but as to our knowledge that is what we learn by our own observation—something we see, hear, feel, taste, or smell. Now let me try to illustrate. Suppose a party of us take the train for some place fifty miles away or so, to spend the day. We all arrive in safety and are enjoying the sights very much, when lo! see away in the west a storm arising! It approaches nearer and nearer, and will soon be upon us. We repair to such places of shelter as the place affords, but there is not room for all. Some stay under the trees with their umbrellas. See the lightenings flash, hear the thunders roll. And the rain—we not only see and hear but some have felt. This continues for some time, we are right in the midst of the storm. A magnificent oak with its extending branches that has stood the storms of many years stands near us under which branches stands a horse and buggy containing a lady and a gentleman. The storm is terrible and we are looking that way thinking we would not like to stay under a tree during so terrible a storm when oh! see! the lightening has struck that splendid tree and shivered it to pieces, and the horse and the two occupants of the buggy are killed! and every one very much frightened. Oh we wish we were at home. But after while the best that could be done has been, and the day wears away, we must soon make for the station to meet the train. We do so and the train has come and we are on our way home. But long before we reach home, we notice everything as dry and dusty as when we went in the morning. We arrive at our homes, and find all well just as we left them, and they know nothing of the terrible storm we were in, so we tell them all about it—the awful lightening, the terrible thunder, the pouring rain—of the lightning striking the tree and killing those under it, and they, knowing us to be reliable, believe what we say, though they know nothing about it, they had no idea of there having been a storm.

Now, we told them what we knew and they believed on our testimony and if they tell others (and of course they will) they will not tell what they know but what they believe, and these again and again, and it will still be a matter of faith to the hearers (faith comes by hearing) so long as the reporters are believed. But not being written the reports will soon vary and perhaps be conflicting, so that some will begin to wonder if there had any such thing occurred and perhaps doubt it, so that some would be of opinion there had been such a storm and others that there had not. So that the very same things are to us matters of knowledge (we know) to those we told matters of faith (they believed us) and so on so long as believed—but after while the farther it went from us the weaker the faith grows till it is doubtful—some being of opinion there was such a storm, others that there was not. Thus opinion is something in which there may be doubt

Now I think that even my younger readers will see the difference between knowledge, faith, and opinion.

The weight of these three as evidence would be first knowledge—second faith, and third opinion. If a man knows a thing there is an end of all dispute—at least with him. But in matters of faith we need to see well as to the reliability of the witnesses. We must have good witnesses, or the testimony will not be good. We often hear now about testimony meetings—the members testify for Jesus. Now whatever such testimony may prove as to themselves it proves nothing for Jesus. It may prove that they believe in Jesus, but nothing as to Jesus himself. Whether he was born, lived, died, rose again, ascended up on high, or not—anything we may say counts for nothing. We dont know anything about it. We only believe on others testimony, and this has been true for eighteen hundred years. We may have examined into the evidence, and become fully convinced that the witnesses who wrote the accounts were reliable and therefore their testimony true. They left their dying testimony and fell asleep. We dare not add to, nor take from that. It is our duty and privilege to learn all we can about the writers and what is written. The just by faith shall live. This is now the only way we can learn the way of life, so far as I know or believe. No one can give us a word, or idea that has come from God since the death of John on Patmos (perhaps) notwithstanding all the so called miracles and baptism of the Holy Spirit. I do not believe in any thing of the kind. We have the Word of God which is able and ample to save us if we believe and are guided thereby. Now though we can have no knowledge of the things written, but only faith in the records themselves—at least some of them were written by eye-witnesses—by those who saw and heard the things they wrote, so that what they wrote were matters of knowledge to them. They saw Jesus perform the wonderful things they record, they heard him speak, and it was done, they eat and drank with him, felt and handled him. It was not a matter of faith or belief with them that Jesus raised Lazarus from the dead—they knew—we believe on their testimony. Had these things not been written but handed down by tradition only, I am inclined to think we could not have had full assurance of faith in their truthfulness. True we have not the identical writing of the apostles but only copies of their writings, and for all the care taken, some little difference may have crept in, yet substantially we have them as they wrote them, so that we virtually have the record from the first hands and thus we may feel pretty sure it is true. Mr. Ingersol made a point that the books we have were written more than four hundred years after the things recorded were said to have occurred. In this he was wrong, as the books he refers to were copied of books written by eye-witnesses. This he must know, as very large portions of these writings had been quoted during the earlier centuries both by friend and foe. They therefore must have been in existence then or they could not have been quoted by either. In reading the Scriptures therefore, we do not have to imagine many hands between us and the things recorded, but only one, the writer who saw what he writes about. We thus get near to our Lord.

I will reserve a few thoughts for another paper.

As Light is so is Responsibility.

This is a theory which is fast obtaining in our land—a principle which is being taught and believed by many as the great standard of Christian character. It is believed that those who are honest and live up to the light they possess, will insure to themselves life eternal in the world to come. Where, let me ask, do we find such a doctrine taught in the word of God? In what book, chapter and verse is it to be found? Acts x: 1-4, is sometimes quoted in support of the theory. It is said that Cornelius was a devout man, and one that feared God with all his house, and gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God always. And God said "thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial." Therefore it is claimed that he must have been in a saved state. True, we read that he was a devout man, but where does it say he was in a saved condition? His prayers and alms came up before God, and because of this, he said unto him, send men to Joppa, and call for Peter, he shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do. If in a justified state he yet had a work to perform. Why, if in a saved condition, did God command him to send for Peter, who was to tell him words whereby he and his house might be saved?

Paul was a very devout man, so much so, that he thought he ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus. Acts xxvi: 8. He even consented to the death of the martyr Stephen, but did God justify him for so doing? Can such a theory be correct? If true, then let us at once cease to contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. Let us cease to distress the poor, and to open the coffers of the rich in order to build other churches. Let us cease to organize different bodies, which are only formed by the ruin and dismembership of others. Cease to proclaim the blessed truths of the Gospel to enlighten those who are walking in darkness and in the shadow of death, but which are walking up to the light they possess. Let the Hindoo mothers continue to cast their helpless infants into the dark waters of the rolling Ganges; let the car of Jugernaut roll on, crushing its blind ignorant worshippers in the dust, beneath its mighty wheels; let the funeral pile be kept burning; let all those forms of worship, and many others go on, if the doctrine be correct that as light is so is responsibility.

Are not these heathen acting according to their understanding of worship or religion? Who will dare to say they are not? But say you, we do not believe they will be saved in this life or age, but will have a chance in the next to form characters according to God's plan. But if the above theory be correct, why not save them in this age? They have acted up to their standard of religion. Why take them over to the next, and lessen the chances of their salvation there, by perhaps rejecting the plan which might then be presented to them for salvation? Down here in the nineteenth century it will not do to present a definite Gospel and a definite Faith, lest we shall be esteemed as bigots or uncharitable by others. Be charitable, yes, charitable. But reader, which of two individuals shows the greatest amount of charity to a fellow being, and is most acceptable in the sight of God, he who says to a sinner, "come, repent, and be good, and if you cannot go with us join some other church, identify yourself with some organization. For God's sake join some church; it makes no particular difference what one, only help to support some theory; be good and all will be well." Or he who presents to him the truth of God, showing him that there is but one Gospel; but one plan of salvation; but one Bible Faith, and but one Hope? But one way of becoming a child of God, and that way is by believing the One Gospel, not any Gospel or theory? Which let me ask again, has the greatest charity for his fellow being, he who thus warns him of his danger, by showing him God's plan of salvation, or he who tells him there is no particular danger, only he must be honest and good?

Friends, charity is to be admired, and is commendable in all, but in exercising charity for others, and wishing and trying to have them repent and be saved, we should not lose sight of, nor forget to present to them the plan by which God proposes to save mankind. We read that God is the same yesterday today, and forever. If it was necessary over eighteen hundred years ago to understand, believe and obey the Gospel in order to salvation, it is equally necessary for us today. We may question its propriety, as did Naaman, when he was commanded to dip in the river Jordon in order that he might be healed. But, like him we must obey if we expect to receive the promised blessing from the hand of God. There is but one plan by which God proposes to save man. "There is no other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." Acts iv: 12 But one door through which we can enter, and that is through Christ. John x: 7. "He that climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber." John x: 1.

This may look to some as uncharitable, but it is nevertheless the plan that has been given to us to follow. The road to God's kingdom is not as broad as many would like to have it, but Christ says that it is a narrow way, and but few will find it.

May we see to it that we acquaint ourselves with God's plan of salvation, obey the same, and not be found at the last day aliens from the Commonwealth of Israel, and strangers to the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world. But may we build upon rock, and when the coming storm of the last great day shall burst in all its fury upon a sinful world, we may stand, having on the wedding garment.—Leroy S. Bronson, June 1870.

What the Bible does not, and does Teach.

1. The Bible does not teach that man is an immortal being, or that he is possessed of an immortal soul.

It does teach that he is wholly mortal, and dependent upon Christ for immortality.

2. The Bible does not teach that the wicked will live forever, either in torment or out of it.

It does teach that they will perish, come to nought, be burned up root and branch, be destroyed, and be as though they had not been.

3. The Bible does not teach that good people go to heaven when they die, or that they will ever go there to recieve their rewards.

It does teach that all, good and bad, when they die, go to Sheol, or Hades, which is the place of forgetfulness, and of darkness, where perfect silence reigns; in other words—the grave. From thence when Jesus comes, the righteous will spring forth, and be rewarded upon the earth; and the wicked, at the appointed time, will emerge to recieve the just reward of their deeds.

4. The Bible does not teach that the reward of the righteous consists in an everlasting singing and playing in heaven.

It does teach that they will reign with Christ upon the earth, and rule over the nations.

5. The Bible does not teach that there is God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost, and that these three are but one God.

It does teach that there is one God—He who created all things; and one Jesus Christ, who is the Son of the one God; and one Holy Spirit, which is the creative agent of God, as well as the promised Comforter of His people.

6. The Bible does not teach that men will be saved irrespective of faith and obedience, or in other words, that men who are honest and whose works are esteemed by the world as good, will be saved.

It does teach that those who are united to Christ by baptism, after a hearty belief of the Gospel, will be saved.

7. The Bible does not teach that all men will be saved.

It does teach that those who do the will of the Father in heaven, by believing in Christ Jesus His Son, will be raised at the last day, and enjoy the blessing of an eternal life, or existence.—T. W. in Our Best. 1876.

"SIR,"—said the Duke of Wellington, to an officer of engineers, who urged the impossibility of executing his orders, "I did not ask your opinion; I gave you my orders and I expect them to be obeyed." We may learn a lesson from this; when the Captain of our salvation gives a command he expects to be obeyed. He does not consult us. Be thou faithful unto death, is what he says, and will take care of consequences.

ACCOUNTS come to us from regions lately devastated by forest fires that make our heart ache; and from other sections where, after all the toil of planting and tending crops, hopes are blasted in a few days by wilting winds, scorching sun and lack of rain, and families leave their homes in utter despair. We notice, too, that millions are being pocketed by a few through there misfortunes. Nature is surely disordered, and wickedness in high places make matters worse. If those who suffer had an insight into Jehovah's purposes, and could look beyond the disastrous present to the reign of peace and plenty, and could realize, by faith, that they will be divine agents of Jehovah in restoring all things the prophets have predicted, it would not seem so bad. But to live for the present, and feel that the present has nothing for them is sad indeed. May the divinely appointed administration of affairs soon be inaugurated we devoutly pray.

FOR a week representative Evangelical Lutherans of Ohio and Indiana have been holding a meeting in Cleveland. At the closing session of the convention the doctrinal thesis discussed was:—"That God had such a deep interest in our conversion, righteousness, and salvation that, before the foundation of the world, he, for Christ's sake, and without any regard to our conduct, elected and ordained us to the adoption of children, and to eternal life." Speakers who supported this declaration made the following points:—"We teach and believe according to the Scriptures and our Lutheran confession, that God, long before the foundation of the world, elected or predestinated unto life and salvation those who shall be saved. We do not endorse the view which lately has been advanced, that God has elected us on account of our faith. God's grace and the merits of Christ alone are the causes of our election;" and yet strange to say, they presently say, "If men are lost it is not the fault of God, but man's fault; if sinners are saved, it is by the grace of God." This is both blasphemous and contradictory. We hope the contradictions will overcome its evil effect on the ... make the saints of God sing for joy because he hath shined into their hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. 2 Cor. iv. 6.

WE recently saw a picture of a Greek Church at Juneau, Alaska; it was in "Glimpses of America." A note at the foot discloses the sort of work done by missionaries from Russia. It said:—"The prevailing religion among the nations of Alaska is a mixture of the doctrines of the Greek Church, and the ancient totemism of the aborigines. The missionaries wisely (?) concluded that it was better to convert the natives to Christianity, and bring them up to civilization by a gradual process, rather than attempt a sudden transformation; hence the singular combination of the rites of a ludicrous superstition with the beneficient teachings of the Man of Galilee." Alas, little of the teachings of the Man of Galilee do the Greek missionaries know themselves; they might have instituted a civilizing process, but of course their converts are no more fit for the kingdom of God than they were before. The gospel of Christ is the power of God unto Salvation, to this gospel, the missionaries themselves are blind, and hence are blind leaders who, if Jesus be true, land with their converts in the ditch.

Josephiteism. No. 5.

The gulf between us and Josephites is a great one. They believe the world was without gospel for some 2000 years; we believe the promise of the Woman's Seed to bruise the serpent's head was gospel to Adam and Eve—promise of the Anointed One to come, and reject the silly theory about God's ineffectual efforts to impregnate Israel his wife with truth, and the fatal error that Joseph was the father of Jesus in opposition to the announcement that he should be called a Son of the Highest because of the overshadowing power of his spirit upon Mary a virgin. We believe that God had an only begotten Son, and reject the horrid conclusion of Josephites that the little sinner born to Joseph was ADOPTED by God 30 years later, after obtaining pardon of his sins by washing in water without any cleansing blood, and that therefore it was not necessary for him to die on our account; men could have been saved without it.

This is doctoring Divinity with a vengeance. Quacks are they all. They never graduated in the school of Christ and have no diploma from him. They are not in the Christ of God, but in a Christ of Joseph, after being duly notified that "the flesh profiteth nothing."

We must keep the gulf in mind, because some Josephites are not so frank as the writer quoted. They are "so good," and "so quiet" that one would hardly suspect what pernicious views they hold, and what poisonous wares they traffic in. It is the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Israel to sin. It is the climax of apostacy, as is very evident from the claim that Divine nature of existence was imparted to the son of Joseph at his baptism, and lived right on while the Joseph part of him died. Think of it! Two personalities in one being from his baptism on. Is not the serpent coiled up in this?

We can fellowship believers of the serpent's lie, and the immortal and omnipresent and almost omnipotent Devil, and a sky-kingdom for ghosts of men, and a Triune God, and disciples of Bradlaw and Ingersoll when we fraternize with Josephites. The Spirit warns us that "evil communication corrupts good manners—to go not in the way of evil doers—to come out and be separate from and touch not the unclean thing, if we would be God's sons and daughters; and that the plagues written in the book will be visited upon those who mutilate it.

Josephites flounder about terribly, to get rid of the difficulties involved by denying that Gen. ii. 15 is the first chapter of Redemption's story—a promise of the coming Redeemer, the one begotten Son of God. Why do they wrestle again and again with this? Why not cut it out, seeing it stands clearly in their way, as they have already cut out scores of other passages? Why, indeed;—Just because the Josephite system would crumble in their own hands if they cut this out. It is built upon THEIR THEORY of the Woman's Seed, without the shadow of a proof. They will let Gen. iii. 15 stand.

But how Josephites stultify themselves, as well as the gospel. "The miracle business" is most despicable to them—it is a veritable "infidel breedor;" and after all have to embark in the "miracle business" themselves in order to frame a plausible excuse for coming to a particular person for eternal life, instead of to their Woman's Seed, a multitude of good people. They make the unit son of Joseph into two persons miraculously, we suppose, as we know of nothing in nature like it! Do they? If not, have they not gone into the "miracle business?"

We read in the 2nd chapter of Hebrews of some one crowned with glory and honor on account of suffering death. This is said to be Joseph's son. He was made inferior to angels so that he could die in behalf of every man. This is supposed to be Joseph's eldest son, and the lawful inference is that his brothers were equal to angels. If they were not, why tell us that this one was inferior to them? If all his sons were inferior to angels and therefore capable of dying, it would look, from the Josephite standpoint, as if Joseph could have furnished several Saviors if they had been wanted.

It would be interesting to know from a Bible point of view, when Jesus was made inferior to angels. The answer is, he was made thus when made of a woman. It was GOD'S SON who was made of a woman, not Joseph's, and afterward adopted of God. If Joseph was the father of Jesus, he was not made of a woman. The Divine statement of natural law in the case is "that man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man." This settles the matter with every honest-hearted Bible believer, that Gen. iii. 15 and Gal. iv. 4 stand or fall together.

According to the Josephiteism we have the profound announcement in Heb. ii. 9 that Joseph's eldest son partook of flesh and blood; as if the world would not have known that without being told. We predict that this passage will be cut out before long.

Another Josephite authority makes the clear statement that "Jesus was not Son of God till he was raised from the dead." The Father's recognition at his baptism disproves this,—as also John i. 49 "Thou art the Son of God," and John iii. 16 "His only begotten Son, showing that he had sons not begotten.

If the Josephites use this 3rd of John v. 16 it must be in this way: "God so loved the world (of mankind) that he gave the eldest begotten son of Joseph, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life." One cannot help wondering why Joseph's sinful son should be set up as an object of faith, when such tremendous results were involved. On their own showing God as yet had no Son to give. And as they admit that he could die no more after his resurrection, he has not given him since. and so, Josephiteism being true, God has never given his Son at all, and the inevitable conclusion is that they have no Savior at all.

Josephites are trying to sap the very foundation of Truth. One would have thought they would at least admit that as disobedience brought death, only perfect obedience on the part of some one of the human race would bring life; but, lo, and behold they would reject a sinner for a Savior;—a Savior who himself needed a Savior—a Savior who could not save himself we repeat; one whom God could not save without violating the revealed principles of his government—either clearing the guilty, which he says he will not do, or remitting his sin without the shedding of blood—or justifying him without faith, or by not executing the threatened penalty of his law, and thus violating his own Word and making the serpent's Word true.

It makes us sick at heart to see men who ought to know better, over-riding these great principles of the divine economy, and parrot-like, repeating the smart, blasphemous, but oft refuted objections of third-class skeptics.

What a fatal delusion it must be, that blinds them to the fact that if Jesus was a son of Joseph, and a sinner, as claimed, the everlasting covenant or will, or testament is not of force; Joseph's son has not been raised, in that case; is still dead, and will never live again. Wills are not of force as long as the testator liveth. God was the maker of that will, and cannot die. What was to be done? He provided against this state of things from the beginning. He would have one son begotten by the overshadowing power of his spirit on a virgin, without the intervention of man; he would manifest himself to the world in that body formed of woman; he should come in the Father's name, and should speak the Father's loving words, and do his wonderful works, and be in reality. God with us, possessing his spirit without measure, and so would resist every sin. It was this spotless Son that God's love for the world caused him to give, so that believers in him might not perish, but have everlasting life. What a God of love we have!

But how does life for us depend upon his death? Well, the life-giving covenant was not yet of force,—had never been more than typically confirmed. The testator was living, and would never die; and if matters remained thus it would never give life to man after death; so God appointed a representative testator—His only begotten Son, on whom before birth he bestowed his own name. He was made lower than the angels so that he could suffer death in place of man as the apostasy will have it. Oh the depths of the wisdom and knowledge of God; we but faintly comprehend the meaning of Eph. iii. 11 even after long devout meditation,—Paul says it was given him to preach the unbounded wealth of Christ and to make all men see the fellowship of the mystery (great Truth or secret) hid in God who created all things, and make known to the governments and authorities the diversified wisdom of God according to his eternal purpose, or plan of the ages!! But we comprehend enough to know that the p. r Josephites do not know his plan, and as a matter of course, egregiously blunder. The good God PLANNED that the blood of his own Son, should be the blood of the New Covenant—make it of force. Amen. This is how it was shed for us, and that

The Great Teacher.

I love to feel that I am taught,
And, as a little child,
To note the lessons I have learnt
In passing through the wilds.
For I am sure God teaches me,
And His own gracious hand
Each varying page before me spreads,
By love and wisdom planned.

I often think I cannot reach
The lesson I must learn,
And then, in weariness and doubt,
I pray the page may turn;
But time goes on and soon I find
I was learning all the while;
And words which seemed most dimly traced
Shine out with rainbow smile.

Or sometimes strangely I forget,
And, learning o'er and o'er,
A lesson all with tear-drops wet,
Which I had learnt before.
He chides me not, but waits awhile,
Then wipes my heavy eyes:
Oh, what a Teacher is our God,
So patient and so wise!

Dark silent hours of study fall,
And I can scarcely see;
Then one beside me whispers low
What is so hard to me.
'Tis easier then! I am so glad
I am not taught alone;
It is such help to overhear
A lesson like my own.

Sometimes the Master gives to me
A strange new alphabet;
I wonder what its use will be,
Or why it need be set.
And then I find this tongue alone
Some stranger ear can reach,
One whom He may commission me
For Him to train or teach.

If others sadly bring to me
A lesson hard and new,
I often find that helping them
Has made me learn it too.
Or, had I learnt it long before,
My toil is overpaid,
If so one tearful eye may see
One lesson plainer made.

We do not see our Teacher's face,
We do not hear His voice;
And yet we know that He is near,
We feel it, and rejoice.
There is a music round our hearts,
Set in no mortal key;
There is a Presence with our souls,
We know that it is He.

His loving teaching cannot fail;
And we shall know at last
Each task that seemed so hard and strange,
When learning time is past.
Oh! may we learn to love Him more,
By every opening page,
By every lesson He shall mark
With daily ripening age.

And then, to 'know as we are known'
Shall be our glorious prize.
To see the Teacher who hath been
So patient and so wise.
Oh joy untold! Yet not alone
Shall ours the gladness be;
The travail of His soul is as
Our Savior-God shall see.

What is Truth?

"Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice. Pilate saith unto him, what is truth?" John xviii. 37, 38. This question was asked of Christ when he stood before Pilate, and will be answered by reference to other Scriptures. In John xvii. 17, Christ, when speaking of his Father, says: "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy Word is truth." By reference to John xiv. 6, we read: "I am the way the 'truth' and the life; no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." So we see Christ was the living embodiment of truth. John i. 1 says he was the "Word," and in verse 14 says, "And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, * * * full of grace and truth."

Now, let us call upon Paul to define the line of demarkation between truth and falsehood. In 2 Cor. xi. 2, 3, we read: "For I am jealous over you with godly jealousy, for I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ (the truth). But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve (by falsehood) through his subtilty, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ."

What false words did the serpent use to beguile Eve? Gen. iii. 4, 5 says: "And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die. For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil."

What did the Lord say to the pair previous to their temptation? "But of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Now, who spoke the truth, God or Satan?

Has Satan got ministers who teach as he taught—"thou shalt not surely die?" Yes, for 2 Cor. xi. 13-15, says: "For such are false prophets, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ. And no marvel, for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light. Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness, whose end shall be according to their works."

What say the popular teachers of the day? Do they not say we are "immortal" and "shall not surely die?" And in teaching this falsehood, are they not Satan's ministers? They teach the "immortality of the soul" and "reward at death" theory (the "ye shall be as gods" theory, according to Satan), which is falsehood of the most apparent kind. Paul saw the danger that threatened the Corinthian church by these false prophets, and he warned them that it was a "doctrine of devils." And he also warned the Thessalonian brethren (2 Thess. ii 8-12) as follows: "And then shall the wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming: even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie, (Then shall not surely die) that they all might be damned who believe not the truth (Christ), but had pleasure in unrighteousness."

Now, let us hear the Savior's words, spoken four thousand years after Satan beguiled Eve in the Garden of Eden. Did he recognize that falsehood as being a truth, or did he reprove the wicked Jews who taught it? Let us hear the Savior (John viii. 44): "Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there was no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own; for he is a liar, and the father of it." What was the lie? Ye shall not surely die (immortality of the soul, as at present taught by the sects).

In what sense was he a murderer, then? Because he brought wholesale death upon the majority of the human family by causing his ministers to teach them that lie, and they by believing it will be shut out from eternal life.

Paul also makes Satan the father of sin in his letter to the Church at Rome (Rom. v. 12): "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned."

How all lovers of the truth (Christ) should hold on to that truth, and strike with a strong aim at that falsehood (immortality in this life) taught by Satan's ministers. His strong delusion is everywhere taught, but those who diligently seek Christ and search the Scriptures, and do not depend upon getting enlightenment by proxy, will have their eyes opened to the truth, so that they will not "fall into the ditch" with the "blind leaders of the blind." Let us watch and pray lest we enter into temptation. Your brother in Christ.

J. E. Haton.

He is Risen from the Dead.

"If Christ be not raised your faith is vain, ye are yet in your sins." 1 Cor. xv. 17. This world has many beautiful and pleasant things, but they all vanish away like the mists of the morning. What a dreary world this would be if we had no hope of any thing better. "If Christ is not risen then they which have fallen asleep in Christ are perished." Nothing but a life of trouble and toil a reaching out for things which satisfy us not, disappointment, sickness and at last eternal death. If Christ is not risen, how could we ever give up our precious loved ones, and yet when death comes to claim them we are helpless. We must give up to the dread monster. We give them the best medical attention and the tenderest care, but all the science of this world cannot save when death is at the door. Then weep on Oh, mourner, until you can cry no longer. Bow your head to the stern decree. If Christ is not risen, those dear ones will never return from the land of the enemy. They will remain in the tomb. But dear Jesus, the comforter came, the Lamb of God was slain up on the cruel cross, was made a sacrifice for our sins, he bore the shame, was tortured, mocked, spit upon, and dragged from court to court amid a howling mob thirsting for his blood, and at last was nailed to the cross between two thieves. He died forsaken of men, and seemingly forsaken of God, he cried with a loud voice, "My God, my God! why hast thou forsaken me?"

He was buried, arose from the tomb, was the first from the dead, that we might live. Behold what a bright halo he has cast around the "Christian tomb." Robbed death of its terrors, we shall live again, if we go down into that tomb it will only be a short sleep. "And we shall awake to sing around the great white throne, eternal life and lasting pleasures forever more." And I saw a great white throne and he that sat on it, from whose face the earth and heaven fled away, and there was found no place for them, and I saw the dead small and great stand before God and the books were opened, and another book was opened, which is the book of life, and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it, and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them, and they were judged every man according to his works. And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death, and whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." Rev. xx. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15.

O! strive, dear reader, to escape that second death from which there is no rising. Is your name written in the book of life? If not, why not? Have you any good reasons? God has placed the book in every one's reach, it lies open before you. O! why will you refuse to accept the precious gift of immortality. Jesus says, "I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in me though he were dead, yet shall he live." John ii. 25. What is it to have no fear of death, perfect peace, perfect happiness, perfect satisfaction always.

David says, "As for me I shall behold thy face in righteousness, I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Psa. xvii. 15. O then make haste to put on the wedding garment and be ready to meet the Bridegroom when he comes to make up his jewels. We shall soon see our Lord our King and our Savior. We shall soon hear the glad cry, go ye out to meet him. I am listening to the grand celestial music when he appears in the heavens with all his angelic host. Lord Jesus, come quickly. We are waiting and watching and hoping every evening will be the last, till that bright morning shall dawn.

Viola V. Skeels.

Dear Restitution:

The Apostle John says: "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Cheer up dear brothers and sisters in Christ, let us do all we can for our dear Master for his promises are sure. We all have trouble and difficulties to overcome, but if we put our trust in him and ask him who has been tried and tempted in all points like as we are, he is willing and able to help in every time of need, and forgive wherein we fail in our weakness, knowing that he will not allow us to be tempted above what we are able to bear. We must like obedient children be guided by God's Word for it is a lamp to our feet, and a light to our path. It is able to make us wise unto salvation, that we may be able to run the race that is set before us, knowing that if we proove faithful unto the end there will be a crown of life laid up for us that fadeth not away. Oh, how often I have been made to rejoice that I was permitted to come to a saving knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. It cheers me in my lonely hours and comforts me in distress. Many times I feel gloomy and almost discouraged, but when I look forward to that glorious time when we shall be made kings and priests and rule over the nations and bring them to Christ my gloom vanishes away, and I rejoice that I am counted worthy to suffer persecution for this dear name. Now, dear ones, it is our duty to do all we can to get the truth before the people that they may rejoice also, that we may all rejoice together bringing in the sheaves. These are perilous times, we must be on our guard having on the whole armor of God and the breastplate of righteousness. Be anxiously waiting and watching and longing for our blessed Savior's appearing and kingdom that we may exclaim, lo this is our God we have waited for him and he will save us. May this be our happy lot is the prayer of your sister in Christ.

Mary M. Parker.

He that cams down from Heaven.

Dear Restitution:

Who is this Son of Man which came down from heaven, and how is it that he came down from heaven, and is in heaven at one and the same time?

Now let us reason scripturally, as we are warned of many false prophets who are gone out into the world, not only so, but of your own selves, says the apostle, "shall men arise speaking perverse things." What for? To draw away disciples after them.

His origin is with the Father in heaven, tells the story simply, and more easily to be understood. John iii. 13.

As Levi is said to have paid tithes in the loins of his father Abraham. See Heb. vii. 5, 10.

Now, as Levi's origin was with Abraham, his father, so also was Jesus the Christ with his Father, and as far above or superior to Levi, as the Divine is above the human.

In the 8th No. of The Restitution Bro. Geo. Moyer, if I understand it, gives us a good article from a private letter. It is worthy of a careful and prayerful reading.

Praise God for these gracious helps. Brethren pray for me and mine. I am yours in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

R. A. Humphreys.

Dear Restitution:

I send you an item of news. The brothers and sisters of the Church of God, meeting in Bland and Heller's hall, Cleveland, Ohio, have again had their hearts cheered by the addition to their number of four more brothers and sisters (two each). On the evening of Aug. 7, 1894, quite a number of us assembled on the shore of Lake Erie, at Collinwood (we live near the lake). The moon, though not very large, shed her silver beams over the lake, which was almost smooth, scarcely any wind blowing. These, the two brothers and the two sisters having made the good confession, were buried with Christ by baptism into his death, and raised again to walk a new life, being then made free from sin they became servants of righteousness. May the Lord bless and preserve them and us unto eternal life in his kingdom.

We are candidates for immortality.—Prof. Parsons.

Adam forfeited the blessing of immortality.—Thomas Scott.

The King of kings, and Lord of lords, who only hath immortality. —Paul.

I believe the constitutional immortality of the creature is a contradiction.—Dr. D. Thomas.

In fact, no such doctrine is revealed to us.—Archbishop Whateley.

Christianity treats man not as immortal, but as a candidate for immortality.—Dr. J. Parker.

The final destiny of man as a sinner is that he shall be as though he had not been.—E. W. P. Tamblon.

The earliest Christian writers considered immortality as the peculiar portion of believers in Christ. —J. M. Denison.

The immortality of the soul is rather supposed, or taken for granted, that expressly revealed in the Bible.—Tillotson.

It is most plainly declared that there is no immortality at present possessed by those who are not in Christ.—Joseph Stratford.

That the soul is naturally immortal is contradicted by Scripture, which makes our immortality a gift dependent on the Giver.—Richard Watson.

The doom of the wicked is everywhere spoken of in holy Scripture in terms which imply obliteration of their entire being and existence. —Wm. Ker.

If there be one blessing more than another, which the Scriptures agree in ascribing to Christ as its author; and for which the believer is taught that he is wholly indebted to redemption, it is immortality. —De de Burgh.

From the beginning to the end of the Apostolical Fathers, there is not one word said of the immortality of the soul. Immortality is asserted by them to be peculiar to the redeemed.—Henry Constable.

Every one which seeth the Son and believeth on Him may have everlasting life; and I will raise him up at the last day.—Jesus.

Little Sins.

Many a brave man who outlived storm after storm of shot and shell died at last from the ravages of things bought of his own sutler, while others came home to marry death at the altars of dissipation. Hundreds of men who have borne the great trials of life with a spirit of sweetness and resignation that made their lives appear to others great Gibraltars of grace, have in the retirement of home got mad in a minute simply because the milk was sour or there was too much flour in the gravy. Multitudes of Christian women, who have passed through the deep waters of affliction with a spirit of unbroken peace and a trust in God that grew stronger and stronger as the sky became blacker and blacker, have gone down so deep in the cave of gloom that it seemed as though the very sun itself had become a great black iceberg; just because the hired girl could not fry potatoes to suit them, or "that boy" would not ever wipe off his muddy boots when he came into the parlor. And people who had made a solemn covenant with themselves and God that they would praise the Lord at all times though the heavens should fall have got clear out of patience because somebody happened to talk too long or pray too loud in the prayer-meeting. No, it is not the great dragon sins that come out against us and slay us, as we go happily on our way toward God, but the little insignificant and contemptible viper sins that steal upon us while we sleep, and poison us with their sting. Mosquitoes drink more blood than lions.

A Model Man.

A live Christian takes abundance of exercise. Too many members in our churches are dry-rotted with total inactivity, like some of the old frigates chained up to the dock in the navy-yard. One essential to a good working Christian is staying power. We have plenty who are ready to bustle about while the novelty lasts, or willing to do what they are bribed to; but "well-doing" comes to simply nothing unless there be "patient continuance" in it, through all weather. Too much of the so-called Christian work in our land ends in a spasmodic spurt of enthusiasm. An able-bodied able-hearted, long-winded worker, who labors on, year in and year out, from sheer love of it, is a priceless treasure in any church. His inner life is hid with Christ; his outward life is an irresistible argument for Christianity, and a reservoir of blessings to the community. He is prayerful; he is patient; he is persevering; he is philanthropic; he is powerful with the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. These five P's constitute the model of the live Christian.

Use the Pen.

How much of good has been done in this world by the pen! How many precious thoughts have been preserved, perpetuated, and disseminated, which would have perished and been forgotten had it not been for the pen. There are many persons who might do great good if they would use the pen, especially if they would use it with pains, and care, and labor. There are persons who sit down and scratch and scribble a hasty screed, and send it away with all its imperfections on its head, and are exceedingly offended if it fails to find a place in a paper, along with other writings that have been produced with toil and care and prayer, that have been revised and re-written again and again until their authors feel that they have done all they could to perfect them, and have then submitted them to the judgment and the revision of others, and so finally have sent them forth.

It is no mere pastime to use the pen in writing for the press. It requires patience and perseverance, care and skill, labor and prayer; but those to whom God has given "the pen of the ready writer," and who are willing to take the pains necessary to prepare something for others to read, will find the labor is not in vain, and the prospect of reward and blessing is both hopeful and encouraging.—Christian.

Suspicions among thoughts are like bats among birds—they ever fly by twilight.

In counsel it is good to see dangers, and in execution not to see them except they be very great.

MARRIED.

In West Seattle, Wash., at the home of the bride's mother, on Wednesday evening, July 25, 1894, Mr. C. W. Cropp formerly of New Zealand to Miss Carrie W. Young, daughter of the late Geo. W. Young.

The family with a few friends were gathered together to witness the occasion which was a pleasant one, save the absence of the dear father, who had looked forward with pleasure to this happy union. May God bless them in their new relations, and may they continue faithful to him, and to each other so long as life is granted to them.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

Announcement.

It becomes our pleasant duty to announce our annual meeting. The beautiful natural park at Cambridge, Nebraska, has been selected again as the place and the time Sept. 14 to 24, 1894.

As we look back over the pleasant gatherings we have had at this season of the year, we wonder if this will not be the best we have ever had, we trust it will. In order to make it so we earnestly request every church in the state to send at least one or more delegates, and as many isolated brethren as can possibly do so come. We want you to see for yourselves just what we are doing and assist in devising ways and means for future work.

Bring your tents, camping outfit, ten day's rations and your hearts full of love for the Master, and enjoy such a love feast with the brethren as you have never done before. Elder A. J. Eychaner of Iowa, who undoubtedly is the best worker and as able a preacher as there is within our ranks, has signified his intentions to be at this meeting. Those who cannot come send us letters of encouragement. Any further information can be had by addressing.

J. J. Carr, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Indiana will be held at Argos, Ind., commencing Thursday evening, Sept., 6, 1894, and continuing over the following Sunday.

The churches are especially requested to send in delegates, and all lovers of the truth are cordially invited to come and enjoy a good meeting.

J. F. Wagoner, Pres.
A. C. Roberts, Sec.

The annual conference of the Church of God, known as the Northern Nebraska, and Southern Dakota Conference, will be held two miles south-east of Fairfax, South Dakota. This meeting will begin Friday night, Sept. 7th, 1894, and will continue as long as to be found of interest in the Master's cause. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can bring tents and come prepared to camp the brethren at Fairfax and vicinity are ready to do all they can to make it pleasant for all the brethren that may come from abroad. Brethren, don't forget this meeting as we want your help, as we are just opening up a new field of labor in South Dakota. So, let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master's cause, for the condition of the world indicates his coming is very near at hand.

Wm. H. Denson, Sec'y.

Kansas Evangelist Fund.

This fund is raised for the purpose of sending an evangelist to isolated brethren that are desirous of having the Gospel proclaimed in their vicinity and are not able financially to bear the expense.

Those wishing to have an evangelist sent to them, can correspond with the Secretary, L. A. Chaplin, Ashton, Kansas. Those wishing to contribute to this fund may send the amount to the Treasurer, W. H. Bernard, Oxford, Kansas.

Lady, with her people was laying
Down beside her mother's knee;
And like the way she ended
"God bless us all—especially me!"

And her words set me to thinking.
Was she selfish more than I?
Had not my own heart, half that gateless,
Made the same unchrist-like cry?

And my prayer that night was humbler,
For I plainer seemed to see
God's great mercy, and the weakness
Of us all—"especially me!"

A Symposium of Faith.

Under the above heading the Conference Board of the Church of God in Iowa, sent out about one hundred circular letters, and have received the following replies many of which were read at their conference greatly to edification. And as means for publication in book form were short a vote was taken that these letters be placed in my hands to be sent to THE RESTITUTION office for publication, and here I comply.

G. M. MYERS.

QUES. 1.

1. We believe that man is mortal, and that he lives by breathing the breath of life and in death all life and animation ceases, and the spirit is no part of the man or of the breath, but the animating power or principle that causes man to live and become animated and belongs to God.

2. That the earth in its restored state will be the everlasting abode of man.

3. That Jesus the Christ the head of the body is the promised seed in whom all nations of the earth are to be blessed.

4. That all mankind will be delivered from the Adamic sin, and that the second death sentence will not be passed upon any for deeds done in this life, or this side of the resurrection.

5. That every one will receive a just recompense of reward for deeds done in this life, whether good or bad.

6. That when man has paid the penalty for his sins in this life, he can have eternal life by obedience to the law of that age, and becomes subject of the kingdom only.

7. That we that put on Christ, or be anointed by baptism are born of the water, and begotten of the Spirit, and at Christ's coming will be born of the Spirit, and be made immortal, and become the sons of God, in fact partaking of his nature and become Kings and Priests and joint-heirs with Jesus the Christ. This body or house of sons are to subdue the earth and have dominion. Deliver the groaning creation from the bondage of corruption, and bless all the families of the earth. And rule the world in righteousness, and fill it with the knowledge and glory of God as the waters cover the sea.

8. That Christ will reign over the living nations one thousand years before the devil is bound, and after that the resurrection of the dead, and the destruction of the wicked and the final restitution of all things.

9. One God, one faith, and one baptism.

10. That Israel will inhabit the promised land, and the apostles will reign over them, and the Gentiles will inhabit the dominions.

11. That the signs of the times in which we live declare plainly that the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus the Christ is near at hand, to raise the dead that are in Christ, and change the living, and take the reins of government and commence the great work of restoring all things, and to bless all nations, and is a solemn admonition to us that we should examine ourselves to see that we are prepared to stand before him, and we as a people have no right to mix up in the affairs of this world, but that we should separate ourselves from them, and be separate and showing by our daily walk that we are looking for our Lord and Savior Jesus, the Christ. To this end we are looking, waiting, and laboring, spending our means and time, and our prayer is, Come Lord Jesus and come quickly.

S. C. OLIVER.
O. B. CLEVELAND.

Brothers and Sisters:

Let all your deliberations be done in the name and spirit of our absent Lord. But the spirit of love prevail, and keep your minds centered on the great reward that is before you. This may be the last time you may all meet this side of the coming of our Lord. Let nothing be done or undone that you should do, or wish undone. My prayer is that much good may be done and the truth be presented in its purity. Let all bitterness and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking be put away from you, with all malice, and be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.

Submitted in love.

S. C. OLIVER.

I will with pleasure give a synopsis of what I believe the Bible teaches in regard to God, the earth and man.

I believe the Bible teaches there is but one true God. Jer. x. 10; John xvii. 3.

"He is my salvation, and I will prepare him a habitation." Ex. xv. 2.

May we square our lives by that rule that is given in 2 Peter i. 18.

God made the earth and all things therein, and he called them very good. Gen. i. 27; ii. 3.

Do we find that state of things existing now? We will all say no. Will this state of things always exist? No.

Man was made and given dominion. He (the man) gave way to temptation, by which he lost his position and even his life. This did not change God's plan or purpose.

We see the earth peopled, and this was necessary in the carrying out of God's plan. He made the earth to be inhabited, and that man shall praise him (God) and let all the earth be filled with his glory. This I believe will be carried out by the second Adam, Christ the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. God has made great and precious promises to Abraham and his seed which is Christ. Gal. iii. 16.

In order that we may share those blessings we must become a part of that body, as children of God. How are we to become children? By faith in Christ. Gal. iii. 26.

How are we to be in that body? Baptized into Christ. Gal. iii. 27. "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's Seed, and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii. 29.

What must we do to share the promise? Stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free. Gal. v. 1.

Is that all? No, we are to carry out the fruits of the Spirit, love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith. Gal. v. 22.

What will we get by sowing to the Spirit? Life everlasting.

I believe we were chosen before the foundation of the world. Eph. i. 4. When God's purposes is fully accomplished by Christ in destroying death, and him that hath the power of death, that is the devil, Heb. ii. 14, "Then will the earth be filled with the knowledge of God as the waters cover the sea." What a glorious state of things that will be when every creature is heard praising God.

May we so live that we may share the great reward offered to us in the gospel. This is the prayer of your brother in Christ.

G. R. CROWS.

1. I believe there is but one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus. 1 Tim. ii. 5, 6.

2. Who gave himself a ransom for all to be testified in due time.

3. That due time hath never come to all in the past ages, nor in the present, but will come in the future ages.

4. I believe in a restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began. Acts iii. 21.

5. As the means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth with Christ as King of kings and Lord of lords, and the immortal bride as joint-rulers with him in the government of the mortal nations. The restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of all that die in Adam. Eternal life only through Christ. I also believe in conditional immortality. I further believe that after this age closes up, the chance to get eternal life and immortality through Christ is at an end.

6. I believe that the seed of the woman will bruise the serpent's head or destroy the that had the power of death, that is the devil, or the works of the devil, and the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death.

7. I further believe that God has been choosing this seed out during the past ages, and is still choosing, or rather calling this seed, this Christ, seed, head and body, through the preaching of the gospel. The seed that are to bless all the nations, families and kindreds of the earth, not damn, but bless, and restore, and rule the nations in righteousness.

8. I believe that Christ and his bride will be seated upon the throne of his glory, as kings and priests, and that the restored children of Israel will dwell in their own land that was promised to them, staked out to them by lot. And they will build houses and inhabit them. And further that the Gentiles will seek to be taught and educated, so that ten men will take hold out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of a Jew, saying, we will go with you, for we hear that God is with you.

9. I also believe that the gospel of Christ is God's power of salvation that draws men to Christ. A hearing of the gospel, and a belief of that gospel and repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as the seal of the righteousness of the true faith. In the act of baptism we take upon us the name of our husband, have his name called upon us, in that act we become joint-heirs with Christ to the promise that God hath made to Abraham and his seed, the Israel-seed, the free-woman's seed.

10. I believe none will be crowned Kings only the overcomers. Further believe that an innumerable company will come up out of the great tribulation and stand before the throne with no crowns, but palms in their hands. I further believe that none will die the second death except the wilful sinner after he has once been enlightened and gone back and attributed all to the devil, that class will die the second death. All obedient people that do his (Christ) will outside of the city will be permitted to eat of the tree of life and enter into the city and life forever, but not until they had there due time granted them after the tree of life is restored to them after the curse is removed, the last wicked man destroyed. When every thing that hath breath will be heard praising God in heaven, on the earth, in the sea. "All that are in them heard I saying, blessing, and honor, and power be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever." Rev. v. 13; Ps. cl. "Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord. Praise ye the Lord."

JOHN FOOR.

OBITUARY.

At half past five o'clock, Tuesday morning, July 17, Mrs. George Henry of Walkerton, Ind., passed away, having, since the Sunday night previous, lain in a death like stupor. For some years she had been a sufferer from a form of diabetes which had lately been somewhat increasing in severity but she was able to be about her work in and out as usual, until Sunday evening, without warning, she fell into the unconscious state from which she never for a moment rallied. Her being stricken down so suddenly was a severe shock to the community where she has been known for so many years, and where her genial disposition and kindness have endeared her alike to relatives, neighbors and friends. Her maiden name was Catherine Hively and she was born in Columbiana Co., Ohio, April 23, 1834. In her youth she came to this country with her parents and since then has always lived in or near this vicinity. She was married to Geo. Henry, April 12, 1856, and was the mother of seven children, of whom five are living, two sons, Preston and John, and three daughters, Mrs. Nancy Hudelmyer, Mrs. Mary A. Brown and Mrs. Alzira L. Harmison. She is survived by her aged mother now in her 80th year, and by three brothers and four sisters, who join her bereft husband in mourning her loss. In her early married life she became a Christian, uniting first with the United Brethren church and afterwards, under the preaching of Elder Richard Corbaley, became a member of the Church of God. The funeral services were held on Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock at the M. E. church, Rev. Stockbarger officiating.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Brethren:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to help minister to them be answered by those nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund discussed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount as subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to organize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

Love.

"Love suffereth long, and is kind; love envieth not; love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not its own, is not provoked, taketh not account of evil; rejoiceth not in unrighteousness, but rejoiceth with the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Love never faileth."—1 Cor. xiii. 4-8.

Love formed me in the wilderness of mind
Of polished grace, which I myself had seen.

Love on its shoulder boldly did lay
Me, weary with the crookedness of the way.

Love fed me with the sincere food of honey dew,
With the best manna in the land were found.

Then Love, whose spirit speaks and ever watcheth over us,
The wise lover—first to plant and last to reap—

From its own wealth did the Love-gift to mortal bring,
What things I see, and hear, and smell, and taste, and touch.

Love, the sense that lives and strikes and feels and kills
Unbounded, strikes, that will say not I'll.

The bond-servant of Love alone is free;
And other freedom is but slavery.

There o'er the painful earth a mystic power,
The Man of griefs, became the Man of Love.

Nothing is true but love, nor aught of worth;
Love is the incense which doth sweeten earth.

O merchant at heaven's mart for heavenly ware,
Love is the only coin which passes there.

The wine of love can be obtained of no Jew,
Save Him who trod the winepress all alone.
—Archbishop French.

Acts of the Apostles. Chap. 8.

1. And Saulus was consenting unto his taking away. And there occurred that day a great persecution against the church that was in Hierosolumn: and they were all scattered throughout the provinces of Joudain and Samuria except the apostles.

2. And reverent men took charge of Stephanos and made a great lamentation over him.

3. And Saulus was outraging the church going his way into houses, house by house, and dragging away men and women, delivering them up to prison.

4. Then those who were scattered passed along through announcing the good tidings of the Word.

5. And Philippos went down into a city of Samareia and heralded the Christ to them.

6. And the multitudes with one accord gave heed to the things spoken by Philippos, as they listened and saw the signs which he caused.

7. For many were there of them who had unclean spirits that went out crying helplessly with a loud voice; and many paralytics and maimed were healed.

8. And there came to be great joy in that city.

9. Now a certain man by the name of Simon had previously been practising magic-arts in the city and astounding the nation of Samareia, saying that he was some great one himself.

10. To whom they were all giving heed from small to great, saying, This is the ability of God that is called great.

11. And they had been giving heed to him, because for a considerable time he had astounded them with his magic-arts.

12. But when they had put faith in Philippos announcing the good tidings concerning the kingdom of of God and the name of Jesous Christ they were being baptized both men and women.

13. And Simon himself also experienced faith and was baptized adhering firmly to Philippos, and as he beheld signs and great works of ability occur was astounded.

14. And when the apostles in Hierosolums heard that Samareia had excepted the Word of God, they sent unto them Petros and Joannes;

15. Who when they had gone down offered votive-prayer for them that they might receive sanctified Spirit.

16. For not yet had it fallen upon any one of them; but they had been baptized only into the name of the Lord Jesous.

17. Then they laid their hands upon them and they received Sanctified Spirit.

18. And when Simon saw that through the laying on of the apostle's hands the Spirit was given, he offered them utilities (probably money here)

19. Saying, Give to me also this official-power (or qualification) that upon whomsoever I may have laid my hands, he may have received Sanctified Spirit.

20. But Petros said unto him, Thy silver together with thee be for loss, because thou hast supposed that God's beneficence (or lit. giving) was being acquired with utilities.

21. There is no part nor lot for thee in the word. For thy heart is not upright in the sight of God;

22. Repent therefore of this thy evil, and beseech the Lord, if perchance the thought of thy heart may have been remitted unto thee.

23. For in the gall of bitterness and a bond of iniquity I see that thou art.

24. And Simon answering said, Do ye beseech the Lord for me that none of these things of which ye have spoken may have come upon me.

25. Then when they had gone through the testimony and talked the Word of the Lord they returned to Hierosolumn and announced the good tidings to many villages of Samareia.

26. And an angel of the Lord talked with Philippos saying, Arise and go thy way down at mid-day, by the way that goeth down from Hierousalem to Gaza. This is a wilderness.

27. And he arose and went his way. And lo a man an Aithiopean eunuch of ability belonging to Kandake queen of the Aithiopeans, who was over all her treasury, and he had gone down with the intention of worshipping (going homage) in Hierousalem;

28. And was returning and seated in his chariot and reading the prophet Hesaias.

29. And the Spirit said unto Philippos, Go and join thyself to this chariot.

30. And Philippos ran forward and heard him reading Hesaias the prophet and said, Dost then forsooth comprehend what thou art reading?

31. And he said, How indeed could I unless some one should guide me? And he invited Philippos to mount and be seated along with him.

32. And the portion of the Scripture which he was reading was this, Like a sheep as it were was he led to slaughter and like a lamb as it were before his shearer dumb, even so he opened not his mouth:

33. In his humiliation his legal trial was taken away, and of his generation who will discourse? Because his life was taken away from the earth.

34. And the eunuch answered Philippos and said, I pray thee of whom is the prophet saying this? Of himself or of some other?

35. And Philippos opening his mouth and beginning from this Scripture announced the good tidings of Jesous to him.

36. And as they were going along the way, they came to some water; and the eunuch saith, Lo water. What hindereth my being baptized?

37. Not in the best text.

38. And he directed the chariot to stop; and they both went down into the water, both Philippos and the eunuch; and he baptized him.

39. And when they had come up out of the water, the Lord's Spirit snatched Philippos away, and the eunuch saw him no more, though he went his way rejoicing.

40. And Philippos found himself in Azotos, and passing through he announced the good tidings to all the cities, until he came into Kaisareia.

COMMENT.

We see in this "persecution" one of the ways God has of sowing the gospel-seed.

Saulus means "Crazy Conceit."

Paulus "little."

Philippos "a friend of horses."

Samareia a sign current.

Simon—a swearer.

"Ability" instead of "power" R. V.

Notice the emphasis here placed upon the name "Jesous Christ."

Petros "a pebble" or "piece of stone."

Joannes "Jo the faster."

"Sanctified Spirit" instead of "the Holy Ghost" no article used in either the 15 16 or 17th verse and "it" is the pronoun instead of "he" to be supplied as the subject of "was fallen" R. V.

"Qualification" instead of "power" R. V.

No article with Spirit in the Bible verse.

"Giving" instead of "gift" R. V.

"Word" instead of "matter" R. V.

"Beseech" instead of "pray" R. V.

"Gone through the testimony" instead "testified" merely R. V.

"Hierosoluma" "a hallowed place desecrated."

"At midday" instead of "toward the south" R. V.

"Aithiops"—"scorching to the sight."

"Gaza" "a treasure."

"Kandake" a name common to all of the queens of Ethiopia.

"Hesaias" instead of "Isaiah" R. V. Meaning "I have delighted to heal."

"Comprehend" instead of "understand" R. V. There is another word in the Greek for "understand."

"Invited" instead of "besought" R. V.

"Opened" instead of "openeth" R. V. This is a complete tense, the aorist here. The passage is quoted verbatim from the Septuagint, and is not poetry in the sense of blank verse.

"Legal-trial" instead of "judgment. R. V.

"Announced the good-tidings" instead of "preached" R. V. If it had been like a good deal of the "preaching" nowaday he would'nt have "gone on his way rejoicing" I think.

"And Philippos found himself" instead of "was found" R. V.

"Kaisaria" Kaisar's or Cæsar's land or place.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUGUST 22, 1894. NO. 32.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the literal restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the literal setting up of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and his immortalized saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the literal reign of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a literal belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Spiritual Body.

My text is Rom. ii. 6, 7: "Who will render to every man according to his deeds: to them who by patient continuance in well-doing, seek for glory, and honor, and immortality; eternal life." In this passage there are three objects to be sought for, glory, honor, and immortality, by a "patient continuance in well-doing," with promise of eternal life to all such seekers. What glory shall we seek? "For our citizenship is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." Eph. iii. 20, 21. Again the apostle Paul writes to the Colossians (iii. 3, 4) your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." The testimony of the apostle Peter is similar. "That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ." 1 Peter i. 7. John writes, "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure. 1 John iii. 2, 3. When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory. And he shall set his sheep on his right hand. Then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, come ye blessed of my father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Matt. xxv. 32. That kingdom will be glorious. The apostle James says, "Hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom (how) that God hath promised to them who love him." "He that overcometh (in the good fight of faith) the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and his angels." Rev. iii. 5. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." Rev. iii. 21. These are a few of the great and precious promises of future glory to those who comply with the conditions given. We are also instructed to seek the honor that cometh from God instead of the honor that cometh from man. Said the Savior to the Scribes and Pharisees, "How can ye believe in me, who seek honor one of another, and seek not the honor that cometh from God only." Jesus said "If any man serve me, him will my Father honor." John xii. 26. But this future glory and honor is clearly conditional. It must be sought for by a patient continuance in well-doing. It is of great consequence to seek also for immortality, which is offered to all on the same condition as the glory and honor it must be sought for in the same way, in order to be gained. The seekers spoken of realize that they are mortal, subject to pain and death, and they desire to be immortal and thus get a glorious victory over death and the grave, by becoming immortal, spiritual bodies. Paul writes to the church at Rome. We groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to-wit, the redemption of our body. For we are saved by hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then we with patience wait for it." Rom. viii. 24. The apostle makes, in the declaration, the being saved identical with the redemption of his body, and his salvation or his redemption he was waiting for. Only "saved by hope." The hope of salvation was a part of the Christian armor that he must wear till death. See 1 Thess. v. 8. How long will Paul and other Christians have to wait for the redemption of their bodies? and by what means will they be redeemed or saved? They will have to wait till the Redeemer comes again. Look at his testimony (Luke xxi. 25): "And there shall be signs in the sun, moon and stars: and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity, the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven (the atmospheric heaven) shall be shaken. And then shall they see the son of Man coming in a cloud, with power and great glory." And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads: for your redemption draweth nigh." So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him, shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." That great salvation or redemption will be the first great object of his second appearing. The same signs will show that the "kingdom of God is nigh at hand," When will "this mortal put on immortality?" Some religionists tell us that man was created with an inside spiritual body that escapes death when the visible body dies—that all are born with two bodies—one mortal and the other immortal and spiritual. But we have no account of the creation of two bodies. We read in the second chapter of Genesis that the Lord God formed man out of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul. The word nephesh here translated soul is rendered creature every time it is used before, and should be translated uniformly in the same connection. But if God created two living creatures—one mortal and the other immortal, some record would surely have been made of it. The first man was for his sin sentenced to death without excepting any part. "All the days that Adam lived were 930 years: and he died." Gen. v. 5. Similar is the testimony given of the death of the patriarchs and prophets. At his death bed, Jacob told his 12 sons, bury me (not my remains) in the cave that is in the field of Ephron the Hittite. "There they buried Abraham and Sarah his wife; and there I buried Leah." Gen. xlix. 30. The prophet Isaiah "declares thy dead men shall live, (come to life) together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust, and the earth shall cast out the dead." Isa. xxvi. 19. "Many that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake—some to everlasting life." Dan. xii. 2. There is no account in these or any other Scriptures of two bodies in man—one of them deathless, the other mortal—hence the necessity of seeking for immortality. But some eminent men say they expect to gain the spiritual body that they think will be prepared for them as soon as they die. An eminent D. D. has quoted some Scriptures to prove this theory. The Sadducees brought before Jesus an objection to the resurrection of the dead. They suppose a case of 7 brothers who were married to the same woman, —they dying one after another, and last of all she died. Whose wife will she be in the resurrection?" The answer was that the marriage relation will not exist in the future state. Then Jesus quotes the words of the Lord to Moses before the burning bush. "I am the God of Abram, Isaac and Jacob. God is not the God of the dead but of the living; for all live unto him." The object of the Savior was to prove the resurrection which they denied—not to prove that those Jewish fathers were already alive. They were alive unto him, because he had purposed to raise them from the dead—so that he was not the God of the eternally dead, as he would be if he should not raise them from the dead.

Another Scripture is quoted to prove the theory. "And as it is appointed unto man once to die, but after this the judgment: so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many: and unto them who look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Heb. ix. 27-28. It is contended that the judgment will be immediately after death. But there is no proof that the judgment will be immediately after death, but it is expressly said, before the sentence is finished, that Jesus will appear the second time for salvation, (which will be the redemption of the body). Paul writes to Timothy, that "he will judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom." If so, he will not judge them at death. The learned and honorable advocate of the spiritual body at death, shows clearly that "world to come," is none or age to come, and eternal life is not promised till that future age. See Luke xi. 28-29. Then Peter said we have left all and followed thee, and he said unto them, verily I say unto you, there is no man that hath left house, or parents or brethren, or wife, or children for the sake of the kingdom of God, who shall not receive manifold more in this present time and in the age to come life everlasting. We cannot therefore gain immortal bodies till that age begins. This emphatic testimony of our Savior, when correctly translated, disproves the false idea that the "seekers" will gain immortality and eternal life at death. The apostle Paul, in the 15th of 1st Cor., shows that the "gospel of salvation" and the gospel of the promised kingdom, which he had preached to them, and, by which "they were saved," would be through the coming of Christ and the first resurrection. That he had preached unto them the gospel which they had believed,—that Christ died for our sins,—that he was buried and rose again according to the Scriptures on the third day, was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve—after that, he was seen of above 500 brethren at once; of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep. And last of all he was seen of me also, as one born out of due time. Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen; and if Christ be not risen then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea and we are found false witnesses of God, because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. Then he adds, we have only hope for this life, and "are of all men most miserable." But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man (shall be made alive) in his own order: Christ the first fruits, (was made alive) afterward they that are Christ's (will be made alive) at his coming. If he does not come, those who are Christ's will never be made alive. "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus what advantage will it be to me if the dead rise not? It would be an infinite advantage not to die at all, but go to heaven alive as soon as one ceases to breathe, if there should be no resurrection at all. "Let us eat and drink; for tomorrow we die." "Be not deceived—some have not the knowledge of God." "I speak this to your shame." "It is sown in corruption, (when put in the grave) it is raised in corruption;" it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power: it is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. (A body of flesh and bones" like Christ, after he rose from the dead)—yet a heavenly body. "Now this I say, brethren flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption. Behold I show you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall be changed in a moment from being natural mortal bodies, and thus become heirs of the kingdom of God in this life, they will inherit the kingdom in the next age. How did Paul comfort the mourners who had lost their Christian friends? He says, I would not have you to be ignorant concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also who sleep in Jesus will God bring (from the dead) as he brought Jesus from the dead. For this we say unto you by the Word of the Lord, that we who are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent (go before) them who are asleep." How will it be? For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ will first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." (After that great meeting in the air, what next?) The Lord my God shall come and all the saints with thee, and his feet shall stand on the Mount of Olives again and he shall be King over all the earth." Zech. xiv. These show when and how the living and dead saints will become spiritual bodies, and need no explanation. "Wherefore," says Paul, "comfort one another with these words." 1 Thess. iv. 18. "Blessed and holy are those who have part in the first resurrection—they shall reign with Christ 1000 years of millennial peace and glory. Rev. xx.

E. HOYT.

Who are you Working For.

We say, "We are all for Jesus: all our time, talents, reputation and store." That means a great deal. If we fully realized what it means, there would be no grumbling or complaining about work. The employer who has the care of children would not worry so much, would not scold so much. The cook in the kitchen would not get sordid or cross. The waiters in the dining room would not get so snappish. The clerk at the counter would not wear such a frown and scowl. The foreman in the shop would not be so crabbed with those under him. The conductor on the car would be more obliging. The teamster would treat his team kindly. The dairyman would treat the cows well, and never water the milk. The merchant would never lighten the weights, nor shorten the yard-stick. The farmer would never put the poorest material in the middle to hide it. The contractor would never use lighter material than that agreed upon. The carpenter would do honest work. The butcher would never use spoiled meats to make sausage. The preacher would not rehearse some other man's sayings as his own. The doctor would not prolong his visits when the patient did not need his care. The widow and orphans would be well cared for. The poor would have the gospel preached to them.

All things would go smooth if we were only all for Jesus.—M. W. Kelly.

Why Is It?

What a difference it makes with some church members as to what they spend their money for. If it is to beautify their homes or for the pleasure of this life, it is used as though it were a necessity. But if the church needs a window pane or any incidental expenses needs to be met it is like pulling teeth for them to contribute their share. Now it is as much the duty of a member of the church to keep up his part of the church expenses and to keep up the church and grounds in nice condition as it is to take care of his own home and beautify it.

☞ It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning: and use safely.

THERE being five Wednesdays in August, our next issue will bear date of Sept. 5.

AT the meeting held by Brother Wagoner a few miles east of here, over last Sunday, another one of our Sunday School scholars, Miss Idonia Cordill, daughter of Brother H. F. Cordill, decided to join with those who are striving for places in God's kingdom, and was immersed into the saving name. May she faithfully perform all the duties of her Christian life, and at last enter in where are joys forevermore.

ERRATUM.—A line having dropped out of "Josephiteism" No. 5, 8d col. 6th line from top, we are made to say the opposite of what was intended. It should read:—"Suffer death as God's representative testator," instead of in place of man, as the apostasy will have it.

ENCOURAGED by some responses to our statement that a fund was needed to be used for sending papers, etc., to those unable to pay, we have decided to start such fund and call it "OUR HELPING FUND." Only those who feel it a duty and privilege to be able to contribute to this cause, are solicited. If you do not want the blessing that will come for doing kindness to the poor of the little flock, keep your money, by all means. Some one else will get it, for rest assured "the Lord will provide."

IN reply to Sister Wood, who wishes to know the meaning and origin of the word "Diaglott" we say, It is composed of two Greek words, dia meaning "that from which a thing proceeds, or out of which it arises;" and glott—from glotta tongue, or language. We presume that Bro. Wilson meant by this title for his work, that it contained the exact language employed by the Spirit. If this be not correct, will Bro. Wilson please correct it. A few words would be in place in any case.

"SURELY your turning of the things upside down shall be esteemed as the potter's clay; for shall the work say of him that made it 'He made me not? or shall the thing framed say of him that framed it, he had no understanding?" This passage was brought to mind by the assertion of a D. D. that "Jesus was a Prince and a Savior while on the cross and in the grave, and that was the reason he was exalted." Surely this is turning things upside down, in view of the fact that he was raised again for our justification. A Prince and a Savior while on the cross and in the grave is the latest. What next?

J. T. H. WRITES:—"Dear RESTITUTION, will some one give me light on the soul question. Will 1 Kings xvii. 21, 22 and Matt. x. 28 harmonize with the soul-sleeping doctrine? And what is the soul of man." 1. In reply to our correspondent we say, that we read nothing about the soul-sleeping doctrine in the Scriptures. The enemy must have started that name, and no doubt helps to confuse him. We read that man dies, and goes to the grave where there is neither work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom. See Eccl. ix. 5-10—all the faculties of the mind fail in death. But why? By turning to Eccl. iii. 20 he will see it is because the MAN goes to dust, not because he is asleep. And the 19th verse shows there is no difference between the death of a man and that of a beast: they die alike, and all go unto one place (v. 20). This of course contradicts the popular notions on the subject.

2ndly. 1 Kings xvii. 21, 22, and Matt. x. 28 cannot conflict with the above Scriptures if the Bible be the book of God. Apparently 1 Kings xvii. 21, 22 favors the popular view; but it is only apparent. If our correspondent will turn to 1 Kings xix. 2, 3, he will find Jezebel threatening that she will take the LIFE of the prophet Elijah by that time tomorrow,"—and the next verse says the prophet arose and went for his LIFE, and came to Beersheba." And when we tell him that the word life in these two places and a hundred others is the same that is rendered soul in chap. xvii. 21, 22 he will begin to see what was the matter with the child—he was dead: the prophet prayed that his life may be restored to him, and it was.

Another point that might help is this: The word nephesh rendered soul in chap. 17, and life in chap. 19 means breath, and is rendered life because it imparts life. God unmakes both man and beast—causes them to die, by depriving them of breath in Psa. civ. 29. It will be seen from this that it was the animal life of the child that was restored. It is to be deeply regretted that the translators rendered the word nephesh in thirty or more ways: but they did.

He asks what the soul of man is. Let him bear in mind what has been said, and then read in Gen. ii. 7 that the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul." A living soul was not put into the man; the man became a living soul; the very expression applied in the 19th verse to every creature named by Adam, but rendered "LIVING CREATURE;" so that the man became a living creature by means of breath. The primary meaning of soul, then, is creature, or person, or being. He was a lifeless creature before receiving the breath, a living creature afterward.

In coming to Matt. x. 28 which is so often referred to, to prove the immortality of the soul, we remark that it proves the opposite of that. That which is immortal cannot be destroyed. the passage shows the soul can be destroyed, and therefore it cannot be immortal. This proves too much as all can see. Surely he who had power to create man has power to destroy the works of his own hands; and having that power, this passage shows where he will exert it,—in hell, soul and body, both to be destroyed in hell. But what is hell? Is it a subterraneous gulf of fire and sulphur now burning and to forever burn? No! the wicked are to be recompensed in the earth. Prov. ii. 31,—they are to be brought forth out of the grave where, as we have seen, they go to dust, at the day of judgment, to be punished. See 2 Peter 2nd chap. and 9th verse, and Job xx. 30, and for the manner in which this destruction is to be brought about, and the completeness of it see in Mal. iv. 1 and Psa. xxxvii. 20. As to the word hell, in this place, it is from Gehenna, meaning the Valley of Hinnom, outside of Jerusalem, where the rubbish and dead carcasses of the city were consumed. As to the word soul in the text, it is the same word that is translated life in the 39th verse, and this furnishes the key to the passage. Our paper is full, but will crowd in this: send 25 cents to Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va. for his "Key Words," and "Twelve Words" and they will help out these difficulties.

Sabbath left Out.

We do not deny that God ended his work on, and rested the seventh day, and that he blessed and sanctified it. Why? Let the Bible tell it. Because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made. Gen. ii. 2, 3. The record does not say one word about God giving the day to any one else of his creatures. It does say God sanctified it. Why? Because he had rested. Not one word said about sabbath observance until the children of Israel came out of Egyptian bondage twenty-five hundred years after creation. Is that not singular, if as some people say, that the sabbath was observed from creation until the deliverance of the children of Israel, after which he gave the sabbath to the children of Israel to keep as a holy day, Ex. xvi. 25, is the first time the sabbath is mentioned in my Bible, and God in giving his laws to Israel gave them the sabbath, and penalties for violating those laws.

They were not allowed to kindle fires, Ex. xxxv. 3, or pick up sticks on the sabbath day, Num. xv. 32-36. The penalty was death then and there.

Those laws were given to literal Israel when God made a covenant with them and Moses tells us God made not this covenant with their fathers, Deut. v. 1-3. Please let the Bible be its own interpreter. If therefore, perfection were by the levitical priesthood, (for under it the people received the Law) what further need was there that another priest should rise after the order of Melchisedec, and not be called after the order of Aaron? For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law. Heb. vii. 11, 12. "Behold, the days cometh saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the House of Israel, and with the House of Judah, not according to the covenant that I made with the fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they broke." Jer. xxxi. 31, 32. See also Heb. viii. 5-10; ix. 1. 15 which says, Christ is the Mediator of the New Testament.

Now, I would like for some one to tell me where the seventh day sabbath is commanded in the New Covenant. I have not found it yet. "I will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth, and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him and it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him, Deut. xviii. 15, 18, 19, also Acts iii. 22, 23. "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him." Matt. xvii. 5, last part. How are we to hear him? Only by believing and obeying his commandments, which he says, "If ye love me keep my commandments." John xiv. 15. "And Jesus came and spake unto them saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and earth. Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptising them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen. Matt. xxviii. 18, 19, 20.

We are commanded to hear Christ, and he says, "If ye love me keep my commandments." Pray tell me where Christ ever commanded us to keep the sabbath. Yes, Christ told his disciples to teach whatsoever he commanded them, and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. Luke xxiv. 47. Hear Paul. "Now therefore, ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints and of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord." Eph. ii. 19, 20, 21.

Where did they teach sabbath observance in the New Covenant, or any penalty for not keeping it? Paul says, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." Rom. i. 16. Now we are getting to something that has salvation in it, and that is what we want.

"And he said unto them go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Mark xvi. 15, 16. To believe the gospel and be baptized, we have the promise of being saved.

Then said Peter unto them, repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins. And ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Acts ii. 38.

"But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women." Acts viii. 12.

"And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" Luke vi. 46.

"If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love. Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you. John xv. 10 14.

Where did Christ or his apostles ever command us to keep the sabbath? "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of new moon, or of the sabbath days." Col. ii. 16, read the whole chapter. also Rom. vii. 1 4; 1 Cor. ix. 20, 21; 2 Cor. iii., and the book of Gal., and finally all the teachings of Christ, and his apostles, and if you find where they commanded sabbath observance, you will do me a favor by letting me hear from you.

Dear household of faith:

I know the home circle will all be glad to welcome two more sisters into the family, and it is our pleasant duty to give you their names. Luella Ashley and Lulu Chaffee were by Elder Woodward buried with Christ by baptism July 22. Now dear ones who have been growing in strength for years remember earnestly and prayerfully these two sisters. They need the strong help of earnest, faithful souls, give freely of your earnest prayers. One of them is just now passing through sore trials, the other, young with life before her. She has had the moral courage to tell her girl friends that she is through with dancing. Thank God for that. It is with deep regret that we see some of our young soldiers who willingly enlisted in the ranks of Christ, promising to love, serve and follow him, dishonoring their fair name of Christians by attending the dance, the theater, and other places where Satan loves to lead them. What are those words, have they been forgotten so soon. Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing and I will receive you, and will be a father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty. Think of asking Christ to attend a ball, or saying to him. If you will go to the circus I will pay your fare in, and if we would shrink from having him accompany us thither we should fear to go. We never read of him in any worldly amusements, but see him wearily climbing the mountain side that he might pray alone, or accompanied by his three disciples we see him kneeling and praying in the garden of sorrow. Why all this, to be Savior for you and me, dear ones, and the more we enter into sweet and earnest communion with the dear Father, the less we desire those things which are sure to spoil our religious life. We need not consult our friends to know whether it is right to dance, for listen to John, Paul. "Now therefore, ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints and of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord." Japan's Army and Navy.

Immediately after the civil war the Emperor of Japan, who had decided to "Europeanize" his country and his court, saw first the immediate necessity of organizing the army. Young men were sent to study in the military schools of France and England, while French and English instructors were engaged to come to Japan. It was in 1868 when the French Empire seemed to be leading Europe, and had covered itself with glory in Algeria, Italy, and the Crimea. The Japanese did not hesitate in copying the French army as much and as well as they could. French instructors were called to Japan, and the old huge, grotesque iron mask helmets—which were supposed to frighten the enemy—chain and lacquer armor, were replaced by modern uniforms copied from the French. The Japanese of all times have always been great warriors, fearless, full of courage and energy. nearly the whole of the male population being accustomed to the use of arms. They are able to stand any amount of fatigue. After the war of 1870, the influence of France in the Japanese army yielded before that of Germany. Prussian officers were called to Japan, and the French "kepi" was replaced by the German flat and round military round cap. But of late the French army have come to the front again, and many of the best Japanese officers are graduates from St. Cyr, the Polytechnique and Saumur.

The army uniforms and equipments of the modern Japanese officer are exactly like those of the French. I have seen in Tokio many a young officer who, had he been walking or riding in the Champs Elysees, would have been undoubtedly taken for an officer of the French artillery. The Emperor's uniform is that of a commander of artillery in France, the red band on the trousers being replaced by a gold one, and a similar uniform is worn by the male members of the imperial family. As for the soldiers, they still wear the German cap, the rest of the uniform, however, being made like that of the French.

Since 1874 conscription is law in Japan, and every male inhabitant in the country is subject to military service from 17 to 40 years of age. The Japanese land forces are divided into:

1. Standing army three years' service.
2. Standing army reserve, four year's service.
3. Reserves, five years' service.
4. Territorial army, eleven years' liability to serve.

The standing army reserves are required to serve sixty days each year, but the territorial army is called out only in case of war or grave emergency. A sweeping system of exemptions exists, but as it is the standing army comprises about 50,000 soldiers. In a few days the number can easily be raised to 210,000, comprising only men who have served, for the most part, three years.

The proportions of the different arms are: infantry 102,382, cavalry 1,459, artillery 7,881, engineers 3,522, transports 55,000, gendarmes 1,436, military schools 2,940, central staff 2,044, imperial guard 5,501.

There are 450 staff officers, 3,389 commissioned officers and 10,391 non-commissioned officers.

The infantry is armed with an eight mil'imeter repeating rifle, designed from European models by a Japanese colonel, and is considered superior to those of Germany and France. It much resembles the Lebel system. The magazine, when fully loaded contains eight cartridges; it has a ninth one in the breech and a tenth in the chamber, and it can be used as a non-repeater. The sights are graduated up to a range of 2,000 meters. The powder used is smokeless and produces very little noise. The bullet is of hardened lead, covered with copper.

The artillery is magnificently equipped with field quick-firing guns, and they are drilled with a coolness, smartness, and rapidity that would hardly be excelled. It is, however, to be feared that the Japanese artillery will not see much active service in Corea, the country being exceedingly mountainous and having no roads over which the guns might be transported. The Japanese cavalry, on the other hand, whose number is altogether out of proportion to the remainder of the army, is extremely defective. There are but few horses in Japan, and they are not worth much. In spite of the greatest efforts the government has been unable to find a race of horses that could be acclimated. Nearly all the cavalry officers are graduates of Saumur, and can be relied upon as knowing their business thoroughly.

The Japanese navy has been copied from that of England, though of late nearly all the cruisers and torpedo boats not built in Japan have been ordered from France. The dockyard at Yokosuka and the arsenal at Koishikawa are not behind Woolwich and Portsmouth in much except size and first-rate torpedo boats, and the most elaborate ordnance are turned out there. The cruisers and gunboats are among the finest vessels of their class afloat, and they are manned and officered entirely by Japanese. Some years ago Japan gave up building or buying large ironclads, of which she has only five. On the other hand they have thirty-two cruisers and forty-two torpedo boats. The Hashinsima and Matsusima, of French build, are of 4,277 tons. The Chiyoda steams over nineteen knots, Naniwa (English built, of 3,650 tons) has about the same speed, while the Yoshino, Armstrong's latest, has made over twenty-three knots, and is considered the fastest vessel of her class in the world, the United States cruiser Columbia excepted. Most of these Japanese cruisers are not sufficiently protected, many not at all, and could not possibly engage the heavy armored Chinese ironclad's at close range.

All branches of the two services are admirably organized, as well as in any European country. The coasts are defended by modern forts, well armed with quick-firing guns, and are provided with electric search lights, strategical railroad lines, telephones, telegraphs, etc.

The Minister of the War Department in Japan is Count Oyama, whose wife, a very pretty and most charming woman, was educated in the United States. The count is a very good man, full of energy, yet wisely conservative. Japanese officers in general are most anxious to fight, to have a chance of showing their military talent. They have the highest opinion of themselves and are full of confidence in the men they command. "We want a war," they say, "no matter with whom." The Japanaese are convinced now that they can whip almost any nation in the world, especially as they know that neither the United States nor any of the European powers could afford to send a fleet strong enough or with enough soldiers on board to fight them with any chance of success.

At the time of the civil war in Japan ambulances were unknown there, and the wounded were left to take care of themselves or to die in the greatest agony on the battle field. The loss of life, therefore, was much greater than it ought to have been, and the sufferings of thousands of men were really awful. Her Majesty, the Empress of Japan, who is recognized by all as a most clever, charming, and good hearted woman, began, a few years ago, to interest herself in the Society of the Red Cross, as she did in the hospitals and schools. Happily advised by an English woman, Mme. Saunoiya, the Vice Grand Master of the Imperial Court, she decided to establish an ambulance service. The first step toward this was the opening of schools for the training of nurses—schools which will stand comparison with the best in Europe. The Japanese have now a magnificent service of ambulances, and it is pleasant to think that hundreds of well-trained nurses and admirably organized field hospitals are following the Japanese army. There are not many Japanese surgeons worthy of the title, but the many European physicians established in Japan will doubtless give all the help they can, as will the foreign fleet surgeons and the missionaries.

The Chinese have no such organization, and in case they should be victorious it is doubtful if they will respect the white flag with the red cross. By orders of the Empress of Japan, all the ladies of the court or of official position are now working hard making "charpie," linen bands, etc., for the service of the Red Cross.—N. Y. Herald.

Hospitality.

To dip one's hand with another man in the dish, or to eat with a man at table, is a proverbial expression among not a few people of the East, for the strongest obligation of gratitude or of friendship. The Bedouin Arabs—that remarkable people whose condition and habits are to this hour in accordance with the doom pronounced upon their remote ancestor, Ishmael, that "their hand is against every man, and every man's hand against them"—though they ruthlessly assault and plunder travelers of all descriptions, who cross their path, yet pass without injuring him, and even protect and befriend the merest stranger who, by any providence has either eaten their bread, or induced them to eat his. The Turks, in particular, hold themselves solemnly bound, if a man but touch their salt, or they touch his, never to do him an injury. A remarkable instance of the force of their national opinion on this point occurred, at one time, in the case of a public robber. This person, known by the name of Yacoub ibn Leits Saffer, broke open the treasury of the Governor of Sistan, with an intention to carry off plunder; and observing in the duskish light of the place, that something on which he fixed his eye sparkled as if it had been a heap of gems, he eagerly seized it with his hand, and was not a little disappointed to discover that it felt soft. Putting a little of it to the tip of his tongue, he found that it was salt, and he immediately left the treasury, without carrying off even the smallest article. The Governor having learned next morning that his treasures had been endangered, but left untouched, issued a proclamation offering not only pardon but favor to the house-breaker, if the latter would make himself known. Yacoub soon afterwards appeared, and was asked by the Governor, how it happened that, after having broken into the treasury he had not taken anything away? The robber, in reply, narrated the affair as it had occurred and added, "I believed that I had become your friend when I had tasted your salt, and after this, the laws of friendship would not permit me to touch anything that was yours."

No stronger case than this, of the moral influence of the laws of hospitality, can well be imagined. But how deeply do the hospitable sentiments of Mohammedans, of plundering Arabs, of even a Turkish highwayman, put to blush multitudes of professing Christians! There are persons in our land—members of Christian churches, and no unimportant actors in some affairs of our Christian institutions—who will sit at a neighbor's table or invite him to sit at theirs, and afterwards speak of his character or of his family, as if they had worked themselves into hospitable contact with his person, for the degrading purpose of becoming spies upon his actions, or witnesses to his injury. I have heard of cases in which a professing Christian has even gone so far as even hospitably to invite a man, when at his table, to excess of eating or of drinking, with the avowed design of ascertaining if his friend was a glutton or a wine-bibbler. Surely instances of conduct so contrasted to the conduct of even lawless Turks and Arabs, are exceedingly rare! But even the absence of positive moral influence from hospitality—such influence as incites to kindliness and friendship—is disgraceful and unchristian. Exhortations to hospitality abound in the Bible; and all were, in the first instance, addressed to Orientals, to a people who anciently entertained exactly such opinions as still prevail among some tribes of the East; and they are to be understood as inculcating not alone the giving of entertainment, which merely by itself is no more than giving of alms, but the incurring of an obligation to practice neighborliness and friendship. Let the law of hospitality be thus understood, and it will co-operate with other laws of the Bible in instructing Christians as to the proper selection of their society.

Rates to Pittsburgh.

For six days—from September 5th to 10th, inclusive—excursion tickets to Pittsburgh account the G. A. R. National Encampment will be sold at low rates from every ticket station on the Pennsylvania Lines. Tickets will be good returning until September 25th, inclusive, and one stop over will be allowed on the return portion. These lines connect the principal cities and towns of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Indiana with Pittsburgh, and are the only ones over which through trains from all portions of those States arrive at Union Station convenient to headquarters, hotels and boarding houses.

They are the main avenues of travel to Pittsburgh from the great Lakes on the north, the Mississippi on the west, and the Ohio river on the south. Connecting lines will sell excursion tickets over these direct routes. Any desired information as to rates and time of trains over the Pennsylvania lines will be cheerfully furnished by J. E. Hanes Agent, Plymouth, Ind.

Poetry.

Saved by Hope.

Though the morning life may be gloomy and clouded,
The sunshine is storms and its showers may rave;
Though in the evening is darkness, black darkness to shroud,
And close in and hovering the night of the grave;
Yet the faithful, as yours, with hope strong and cheering,
Press forward and thank take not doubting nor fearing,
With this as their book for the glorious appearing
Of Him who came lost to seek and to save.

Though the world in the degree of affliction may lead us,
And those whom we love stand aloof in our woe;
Though foes with false friends may combine to decrive us,
And darkness the cloud that surrounds us below;
Yet the day star shall rise on the gloom of our sorrow,
Though grief comes to-night, yet joy comes to-morrow,
From the fountain of life we may comfort still borrow,
That earth and its pleasures can never bestow.

A Symposium of Faith.

Under the above heading the Conference Board of the Church of God in town, sent out about one hundred circular letters, and have received the following replies many of which were read at their conference greatly to edification. And as means for publication in book form were short a vote was taken that these letters be placed in my hands to be sent to THE RESTITUTION office for publication, and here I comply.

SERIES B.

1. We believe that Jesus Christ is the Savior of all men especially of them that believe. 1 Tim. iv. 9, 10. Save them from the Adamic fall, restore all men back to the condition to which Adam was in before his fall. Gen. ii. 7.

2. I believe there is but one God and one Mediator between God and man, the Man Christ Jesus. He gave himself a ransom for all to be testified in due time. 1 Tim. ii. 5, 6.

3. That due time hath never come to all in the past ages, nor in the present, but will come in God's due time.

4. I believe in the restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began. Acts iii. 19, 21.

5. I believe in the establishing of the kingdom of God on the earth with Christ as the King of kings and Lord of lords, and the immortalized saints as joint-rulers over the mortal nations, when the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdom of Christ. We believe in the literal restoration of the whole house of Israel, and of the resurrection of all that died in Adam, and in eternal life only through Christ. We also believe in conditional immortality. I further believe that this is the only age that eternal life will be offered through Christ.

6. We further believe that the Seed of the woman will bruise the serpent's head or the last enemy which is death.

7. We further believe that God is selecting the seed of the woman, the one seed that is to bless all the nations and to rule the world in righteousness, through the preaching of the gospel of Christ which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes the one seed, Christ the head, the church the body.

8. We believe that Christ and his chosen will be seated upon Christ's throne in the world to come as kings and priests. We further believe the children of Israel will be restored back to their own land, the land of Canaan, they will build houses and inhabit them, plant vineyards, eat the fruit and drink the wine thereof.

9. We also believe that baptism is for the remission of sins. Acts ii. 38. After we have been taught the gospel of the kingdom of God in the act of baptism we take upon us the name of Christ, the name of the husband. We become joint-heirs with him, have his name called upon us, the seal of the righteousness of the true faith. Gal. iii. 16, 26 to the end.

10. We believe that none will be crowned kings except overcomers. We further believe that an innumerable company that no man can number will stand before the throne. Someone else took their crowns, but they had palms in their hands, they came up out of great tribulation. No second death only of them that sin against the Holy Ghost. In the restitution all that will do his, God's will, will be permitted to eat of the restored tree of life, enter through the gates of the city and then they will live forever, and when the last sinner has been destroyed there will be no more death, and everything that hath breath will be heard praising God.

SAMUEL HOFFMAN.

Brethren of the Iowa Conference:

I suppose that I express almost if not entirely, a unanimous sentiment when I say, that I do not believe in creed writing. But I give the following synopsis of my own views, acknowledging as a foundation that "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the Man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works.

1. I believe that there is one God the Father, who is Spirit, and from whom proceeds the Spirit by which he created and upholds all things, and by the overshadowing power of which Christ was made of a woman, made under the law, that he might redeem those under the law, as well as to be the ransom for all others, to be testified in due time. Deut. vi. 4; John iv. 24; xv. 26; Gen. i. 2, 26; Luke i. 35; Gal. iv. 5; 1 Tim. ii. 6.

2. This only begotten Son of God is the one to whom the promises made to Abraham relate. He is the promised seed in whom all the nations of the earth shall be blessed, and the one that shall inherit the earth. He is the heir to David's throne and kingdom. By being baptized into Christ we become co-heirs with him, and shall inherit the promises. Gen. xiii. 14 to 17; Gen. xxii. Rom. iv. 13, 16; Isa. ix. 7; Gal. iii. 16, 27, 29.

3. As prophet he has made known the Father's purposes; as lawgiver he has made known precepts to govern his believers now; and shall send forth from Mt. Zion and Jerusalem the laws that shall rule Judea and Israel, and shall in the ages to come subjugate and control all nations. John viii. 28; xii. 47, 48; Isa. ii. 1, 4; 1 Cor. xv. 26.

4. When he shall leave the position of High Priest at the right hand of the Father to become King of all the earth, the mediatorial office will be continued upon his throne and by the royal priesthood, who shall be priests unto God, and unto Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years. Heb. xi. 24, 28; Zech. xiv. 9; vi. 12, 13; 1 Pet. ii. 9; Rev. xx. 6.

5. The second advent of Christ will bring a period known as the world (age) to come, when Judea and Israel shall dwell safely in their own land. The nations that have escaped the destruction of his judgments shall be blessed by the promised seed, consisting of Jesus as the head and the church as the body. Acts i. 11; Luke xx. 35, 36; Ez. xxviii. 25, 26; Matt. xiii. 37, 43; Dan. vii. 18, 14, 27; Col. i. 18.

6. Man is wholly mortal. The trumpet must sound, the righteous dead be raised incorruptible, and the living changed to immortality at the coming of Christ and an everlasting kingdom established and fill the whole earth. 1 Tim. vi. 15, 16; 1 Cor. xv. 51, 55; Ps. lxxii. 8, 14, 17.

7. After "the ages of the ages" shall have passed—which shall consist of the one thousand years peaceful age and the little season age of judgment—the last enemy death shall be destroyed. There will be new heavens and new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. Wicked man will not exist. The devil and all his works will be destroyed. Nothing but absolute perfection will exist during the ceaseless ages of the Eternal One, and the unending duration of those that shall be made like him. Rev. xx; xi. 15; 1 Cor. xv. 27; Rev. xxi; Heb. ii. 14; Mal. iv; 1 John iii. 2.

8. A practical Christian life must be entered upon by faith, repentance, and immersion for the remission of sins, by which means the gospel is obeyed and the saving name taken upon us. A life consecrated and devoted to Christ. By patient continuance in well-doing, seeking for honor, glory and immortality that as faithful believers we may inherit eternal life in the kingdom of God. Mark xvi. 16; Luke xxiv. 47; Acts x. 43; 2 Pet. i. 5, 11; Rom. ii. 7.

Yours, in the hope.

W. L. SKEELS.

1. I believe in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, and in the person and character of their Author, the Great Jehovah, as therein revealed.

2. In Jesus the Christ his only begotten Son and in the sacred united Spirit influence of the Father and the Son.

3. That in the Scriptures alone may be found God's purpose in creating our earth and race. That in them alone is revealed man's future destiny or life; and there too we learn that that future life depends on a knowledge of the one living and true God, and Jesus Christ whom he sent. John xvii. 3.

4. That man was created mortal—and so all his posterity are like him. That he was made a free will agent with power to form a character as he chose. That he was tested by a command forbidding from the tree of knowledge of good and evil, which command he disobeyed. He was then expelled from the garden, least he take of the tree of life and live forever in sin. That transgression ended the age of sight which was followed by the age of faith as indicated in Gen. iii. 15.

5. That the seed of the woman here referred to is the Christ of God, his only begotten Son, who came into the world as foretold by the prophets—as the seed of the woman—the seed of Abraham—the seed of David—as the King of the Jews. That he came in our nature and was tempted and tried as we are. That he endured the cross for the joy that was set before him, viz: the rulership of the kingdom of God upon earth, and power over death, by resurrection.

6. That to attain to a resurrection and future life we must believe in the gospel of the kingdom—be immersed into the name of Christ for remission of sins—and live righteously to the end of life.

7. That there is no resurrection, or life to come, only for those who are in Christ.

8. That Christ's second advent is very near. That when he comes he will bring his reward (eternal life) with him. He will raise the sleeping saints and change the living to immortality. He will then be King over all the earth, and his saints will, with him, rule over the mortal nations which will be subjects, not heirs, of the kingdom.

9. That the chief of these nations will be Israel and Judah united. Israel's ten lost tribes—the Anglo-Saxon race embracing the multitude of nations promised Abraham.

10. That the Book of Revelation is as it were, a panorama of symbols covering the entire Christian era—that we are now in the end of the little season, when satan is loose, and gathering the nations for the final battle.

MRS. CARRIE WILLIAMS.

1. I believe in God the Creator of all things, and that all things were created after a plan from the beginning, and will reach a perfect consummation during the succeeding ages. Gen. i. 1; Acts xv. 18; Eph. i. 9, to 14.

2. That the earth was made for the dwelling place of man throughout the ages, Ps. cxv. 16, and to become the kingdom of God after mankind had been developed by contact with evil and the appropriation of natural resources. Rev. xi. 15; Matt. xxv. 14 to 34.

3. That Jesus of Nazareth was the only begotten Son of God, and became the Christ and the future King of the world by obedience, and that it was for him that all things were created. 1 John iv. 9; Rom. viii. 18; Heb. ii. 10.

4. That Adam the first man and Eve his wife, being the beginning of humanity were on probation for the whole human race, (for the dominion of the earth) and by their failure death came upon all mankind, as it is appointed to men once to die. So Christ the second man and the church his bride are on probation for the whole spiritual race, he becoming the first of that race by overcoming sin and the world, and being raised from the dead, conquered death and so redeemed the whole race from death. The church or bride will overcome and so gain the first resurrection, and with Christ bring all things into subjection to his righteous government. In the Old Testament natural death is the only penalty given for sin, so in the New, the second or Spiritual death is the penalty, but that cannot attain until they have a second or spiritual life to lose. John iii. 16, and sin against perfect light. Probation now is for heirship to the kingdom and a failure must affect that relation. Rom. vi. 7; 1 Cor. xv. to end of chapter.

5. That in order to attain unto this heirship, we must receive an adoption by believing in Jesus as the Anointed, or Christ of God, as the Redeemer of mankind by a resurrection having died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and raised again for our justification to life, and manifest this faith by submitting to it in the figure of baptism, becoming dead to sin thus becoming a new creature, or entering on a new life, follow his perfect example and overcome the world. Rom. viii. 17; Eph. i. 5.

6. That we must prepare for the work of the kingdom by finishing the work that Christ began, preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and the necessity of a pure life. 2 Tim. iv. 2; 1 John iii. 5, 6.

7. That Christ will so come again in like manner as he went into heaven, in the body incorruptible, and come soon. That he will raise the dead both the just and the unjust, but in their own order, and change the living saints to his incorruptible nature, and with them as kings and priests reign from sea to sea; and mankind having had the experience of evil will submit to this righteous rule of Christ. Thus he will make a perfect work in righteousness, and God will not have made man in vain. Each will fill the place he is fitted for, and each receive the reward merited. Dan. vii. 27; Rev. xxii. 12; v. 10.

L. P.

I believe in the teachings of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and of all inspired men, both prophets and apostles. Discarding all man-made doctrines as sinful, wicked, and pernicious,—proof, 2 Tim. iii. All Scripture given by inspiration is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness. Matt. v. 9. But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commands of men. Mark vii. 7. Howbeit in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

Submitted in love of the truth.

WALTER WELLS.

Letters to Iowa Conference.

Dear young workers for the Master:

My heart bounded with gladness when I read Bro. Eychaner's programme for your Iowa Conference, and I said, "O how I wish I could be there!" Do you know why? It is because you, who are young in the cause of your Lord, are to have a share in the blessed work. I want to hear you read your essays, hear you speak, and hear your voices join in glad songs of praise. I want to paint for you the grandeur of your privileges in this matter of work and of worship. It is thought the glory and the boast of a life time to have had the honor of being presented at the royal courts of England, France or Germany, but to be permitted to come into the courts of the royal majesty of the heavens, how much greater the honor! And you are not only permitted to come into his presence, and to pay homage at his fee, but are given the blessed privilege of drawing others. Having secured your citizenship in the heavenly country, with all its glad hopes and prospects, and having certainty of salvation, you can sound out the Word of the Lord, that your faith to God-ward may be spread abroad, and others be brought to turn from idols to serve the living and the true God and to wait for his Son from heaven. Try with all the power that God has given you to touch the poor lost ones their need of a Savior. Show them that without citizenship in the heavenly country, they cannot become one of its inhabitants, can have no part in its blessings, nor enjoy the unending life of its children, and that this citizenship come only through Christ. Make Christ the center and the glory of all themes, for a gospel with no Jesus in it is no gospel. In Christ we have the citizenship and all its attendant privileges and blessings, out of him, there is nothing, no hope, no promise, no life, all darkness, despair, the oblivion of a hopeless tomb. Make God's goodness and love as great as possible to your own souls, and then let the resultant joy of prospective salvation gladden and quicken every pulse of your being, until the words of entreaty rush from your lips like a torrent over the rocks, and the hearers knowing from beaming eyes and tones of gladness that you have been with Jesus and been taught of him, come and obey and start for the kingdom.

Live in prayer, in study of God's Word and in faithful meditation. Never lose sight of the coming Christ, for the time of the end is here.

S. BONANA WINCE.

To the Conference of the Church of God:

Circumstances will not permit of us being with the brethren at this meeting, we feel that we are deprived of a great privilege, for we are sure that these meetings are doing much good. One year ago, after a long study on the promises of God and the conditions laid down in the Bible whereby we can gain eternal life, myself and my wife were baptized into Christ, and we feel it our duty to speak a word of encouragement to those who have not embraced the privilege and have not put on Christ. We fully realize that the work to be done is a great and good work. By the grace of God we will ever push forward and would ask the prayers of the brethren to assist us, that we may be able in our feeble way to bring souls to Christ. If we do not have the ability to do great work we will content ourselves in doing small things and trust in the Lord that he will help us in our efforts. Let us exhort one another and put forth every energy to do the Lord's will, that we may be ready when he comes whose right it is to gather his own. What a joyful meeting that will be, let all think of it and work with more earnest zeal. There are no brethren here in this locality and we seem to stand alone in the faith. We are well pleased with this climate and think it a pleasant place to live. If any of the brethren contemplate a visit to California we insist that they come this way and we will endeavor to make it pleasant for them. May the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all is our prayer.

MR. & MRS. W. O. STEFFA.

To the brethren assembled:

I send you greeting and many regrets that I am not able to be present in your gathering, but I know that it will be for your advancement in the truth, in our faith, and furtherance in the gospel. The times indicate matters to be in a very critical condition, but not such as to expect the near return of the Lord, for I do not think the times of the Gentiles are yet full, but nevertheless it behooves us to be ready and to be like those who shall await the return of their Lord from the wedding. You all know how the world has gone after worldly things, how many have departed from the faith, and are depending upon their own righteousness, and not upon Christ's resurrection for their salvation. Let me urge you to be steadfast in the faith, unmovable and build yourselves, that you may each be a stone in the temple that the Lord may build. Glorious things are in store for the faithful overcomers. I feel it is our duty in every way that is possible that we forget the things of this world, and although in it not of it. Keep aloof from all things that you would be ashamed to have the Lord come and find us engaged in, for you know in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man will come. Never has there been such a time for watchfulness as now. From labor troubles and strikes and all organizations which have not the Lord's cause in hand keep away. They will entrap you in the cares of this world, and you will not see the Lord when he comes. With faithful greetings to all of the household. Your brother in the Lord.

Knowledge, Faith, and Opinion. No. 2.

Dear Restitution:

From what was said in my other article, I think my readers will understand the difference between knowledge, faith, and opinion,—that knowledge is what we see or acquire by our own sense, that faith is believing what others say, and opinion is what we think.

There is room to differ in opinion there may be many opinions, as opinion is what we think, and we don't all think alike—many men, many minds. Scarcely any two men can think alike in everything, while as God has revealed but one faith, sent but one gospel, there can be but one faith, and a brother may even be weak in faith, still he is to be received, but as to his opinion, don't bother him, Rom. xiv. 1, by "doubtful disputations." I think Paul means difference of opinion.

It would be useless to try to bring every one to the same opinion on doubtful matters, and if we had evidence sufficient to remove all doubt then the doubtful matter would cease to be doubtful, and so would be no longer an opinion.

Now what I have said about faith applies to faith in general, all faith. As to what is the one faith is not my topic now.

As to our religion our knowledge occupies a very small place or part. We really know but very little except that we may know much or little of the testimony. Faith occupies a much larger space and that will vary too according to whether we are much or little acquainted with the record. But I venture to say that nearly all my readers would be surprised to think how large a space is taken by what we think—our opinion, and many of us are apt to crowd our opinions forward into the place of faith. How many times have I known crotchets pushed to the front—and you must embrace them or division occur.

Most of the divisions today are caused by differences of opinion. The different parties do not differ in what the Bible says, but in what they think it means.

It is sometimes said they agree on essentials but differ only on non-essentials, (opinions or things that are doubtful,) this being so is it not a shame that the people of God should be divided on non-essentials. It seems to me it would be more excusable if they had essential matters to divide on, but let us go to our Bibles and see how large a space our opinions occupy. Let us begin at the beginning, Gen. i. 1. "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." Now that is a plain statement—we can all believe it without difference in faith, but how about opinion? "In the beginning" when was that? was it some six thousand years ago? or sixty thousand, or six hundred thousand, who can tell us?

"And the earth was without form (waste) and void." How long was it in that state? Who can tell? Faith believes it was so—in that we can all agree, but as the record does not say how long there can be no faith on that point, but opinion comes in and one thinks this, and another that, but they will differ hundreds and thousands, and even millions of years!

We can believe that in the beginning originally, or at first, God did as it said, but we cannot say how long ago.

We are also introduced to God in this verse, and notwithstanding all that has been said and written of God, how we differ—both learned and unlearned as to the Being of "God." "Elohim" is the word and it is a plural name—and in the same chapter "God" "Elohim" said "let us make man in our image, after our likeness," verse 26, and in chap. iii. 22, "And the Lord God said, behold the man is become as one of us to know good and evil." Now, we certainly believe what is said of God (Elohim) but I don't think our idea of him will agree. I mean, be the same. My own views of God are certainly very different from many others, but I will not give them here. I only want my readers to think and then confine themselves as closely as possible to just what the Bible says. Now, let my readers read on and see that while we can all agree in faith, yet there will be but few verses in which we may not differ in opinion.

And the evening was, and the morning one day.—Now, the six days passed and the seventh God rested. Now what is meant by day? Opinion comes in again, for who can tell? The word day, is used in so many senses that it would be presumption for any one to say absolutely which is meant. With some people four or five hours in their office is a day, and a witness' appearance at court may be a day. Then we have our eight hour day, our ten hour day, twelve hour day, and twenty-four hour day. Sometimes we say "everydog has its day." So we say King George's day, Alexander's (the Great) day, David's day, the day of Salvation, and so on. Now, how long was either one of the six days? The Bible does not say, so we cannot believe, we can only think, and so long as we believe what is written we are one in faith, but in opinion! How various! The Bible does not say we must all be of one opinion.

I cannot here notice everything. "But the Lord God (Jehovah Elohim) planted a garden Eastward in Eden." Can any one tell us just where that was? Opinion again, and surely every one is entitled to his own.

Well, the man and the woman are placed in the garden with the privilege of eating freely of the fruit of all the trees there excepting only one—of that one he is forbidden to eat on pain of death. Now we can all believe readily what the record says, but oh! how many things we would like to ask about! What tree is that the fruit of which they must not eat? Some speak of it as the apple, others the grape, again the fig, but the Bible does not say, and so there can be no faith on that point. You may take your choice, for myself I have no definite opinion. I doubt if it were either one named, or that we have in existence even, we can only guess any way. But the record goes on to tell us many things.

It relates a conversation between the serpent and the woman, and the result. Immense information in a few words, all of which we can readily believe. But oh! how many things it leaves out that we would like to know. Was the serpent a serpent? Could he talk? How could he say what he did to the woman? Was it the devil in the form of a serpent, or was the fruit a kind of fruit eaten by serpents? And so the woman seeing the serpent eat, and knowing how wise the serpent was it was merely the thought suggested to her. We sometimes say, "Actions speak louder than words,"—was it the actions of the serpent said? And so I may go on and ask questions, but no one can tell more than is stated. But she ate and gave to her husband and he ate also! Momentous event!! By that event we all became sinners, because we were not born before he, or they did it. What next? Will God do as he said he would? They seem to be ashamed of themselves, and hearing the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden they try to hide, but it is no use. They must answer for what they have done. The Elohim begins his inquiry with the man, then the woman—then the serpent—and see the excuses! (I don't believe, or think rather that mankind has changed much since) then in pronouncing judgment the other way, 1st, the serpent, then the woman and last the man. Now here again though the sentence on each is plain enough, so we can all believe, yet how many and diverse are the opinions drawn from the sentence pronounced upon each of the three. 1st as to that on the serpent, but this paper is long enough so I leave other thoughts for another paper.

Undenominational Religion.

The place of honor in the Nineteenth Century for August is assigned to an article by Mr. Gladstone on "The Place of Heresy and Schism in the Modern Christian Church." He distinguishes at the outset between the facts of heresy and schism, as they stood in the Apostolic age, and the two corresponding facts as they now present themselves to us. Then he directs attention to the historic dealings of God with his chosen people, comparing in this connection the treatment awarded to Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, and to their followers, with the providential method pursued, after the great schism of Jeroboam, with the Ten Tribes or Northern Kingdom. Mr. Gladstone thereafter states that he asks no more than that we should apply to the questions of heresy and schism, now that they have been permitted all over Christendom to harden into facts seemingly permanent, and to bear, not thorns and thistles only, but also grapes and figs, the principles which Holy Scripture has set forth in the history of the two Hebrew kingdoms, and which a just and temperate use of the method of analogy may extract from the record. He next turns to an objection which might be advanced against him from the point of view of the catholic churchman. By the catholic churchman, he explains, he means simply one who adheres with firmness to the ancient or catholic creeds of the Church. Mr. Gladstone's argument points to an alteration in the ancient modes of dealing with those who declined to accept these venerable documents, and, he states, he might be asked whether he proposed to resign or abandon those portions of the old creeds which do not now command, as they did four centuries ago, an universal acceptance. For instance, he proceeds, "I believe in one baptism for the remission of sins." To the non-Episcopal Protestants, especially those of the English tongue, he feared, these words conveyed no very definite meaning, and were in no sense an article of faith. People were not, it seemed, to condemn them as they would have been condemned of old for contumacy in the non-acceptance of that article; but "we are, in the rather hollow phraseology of the day, to dwell much on the matters in which we agree, little on those in which we differ." The question is next taken up, is it the effect, it might be asked, the drift of those explanations, to land us in the substitution for our ancient and historical Christianity of what is known as undenominational religion? Were not belief in Christ and union with Christ the main, the all-important matters, and why, he asks, should we not together put forward the assertions in which we agree, and leave to the separate care of those who hold them and think them material all adventitious provisions which are supplementary to this grand and central purpose of the gospel? In dealing with two aspects of undenominational religion, it is pointed out that there might be upon earth four hundred and fifty millions of professing Christians. They were broken up into sections which were not at peace, but at war. They all, however, professed the gospel. But with all the segregation, and not only division but conflict of minds and interests, the answer given by the four hundred and fifty millions, or by those who were best entitled to speak for them, to the question what is the gospel, is—with exceptions so slight that we may justly set them out of the reckoning—still the same as it was in the Apostolic age: the central truth of the gospel lies in the Trinity and the Incarnation, in the God that made us, and the Savior that redeemed us. When he considered what human nature and human history had been, and how feeble was the spirit in its warfare with the flesh, he bowed his head in amazement before that mighty moral miracle, that marvellous concurrence evolved from the very heart of discord. Such, as he apprehended, was the undenominational religion of heaven, of the blissful state. In alluding to spurious undenominationalism, he expressed himself as not in favor of the State authorizing by law in public elementary teaching an undenominational scheme divested of many salient points needful in the view of historic Christendom for a complete Christianity. What he contemplated and sought to recommend was a readjustment of ideas, and not surrender, in any quarter, of considered and conscientious convictions, or of established laws and practices. The Christian Church, no longer entitled to speak with an undivided and universal authority, and thus to take her place among the paramount facts of life, is not thereby invaded in her inner citadel. That citadel is, and ever was, the private conscience within this sacred precinct, that nurtured the forces which by a long incubation grew to such volume of strength, as legitimately to obtain the mastery of the world. It would be a fatal error to allow the voice of that conscience to be put down by another voice, which proceeds, not from within, but from without the sanctuary. The private conscience is indeed for man, as Cardinal Newman has well said, the vicegerent of God. And why, it would be further asked, was this readjustment of ideas to be the work of the present juncture? In answer, he requested we should study to discern the signs of the times. Was creation groaning and travailing together for a great recovery, or was it not? Were the persons adverse to that recovery banded together with an enhanced and over-weening confidence? They loudly boast of their improved means of action, and were fond especially of relying on the increase of knowledge. Knowledge forsooth! God prosper it. But knowledge was like liberty; great offences were committed in her name, and great errors covered with her mantle. The increase of knowledge could only lead us to an increased acquaintance with him who was its source and spring. Let the champions of religion now know and understand that it is more than ever their duty to equip themselves with knowledge, and to use it as an effective weapon, such as it had proved, and was proving itself to be in regard to the ancient history of our planet and of man. It was the extension of wealth, the multiplication of luxuries, the increase of wants following therefrom, of wants every one of which was as one of the threads which would separately break, but which in their aggregate bound Gulliver to the earth. This is the subtle process which more and more from day to day was weighting the scale charged with the things seen, as against the scale whose ethereal burden lies in the things unseen. And while the adverse host was continually in receipt of new reinforcements, it was time for those who believed to bestir themselves and to prepare for all eventful issues by well examining their common interests, and by keeping firm hold upon that chain which we are permitted to grasp at its earthward extremity, while at its other end it lay "about the feet of God."—Edinburg Scotsman.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

Announcement.

It becomes our pleasant duty to announce our annual meeting. The beautiful natural park at Cambridge, Nebraska, has been selected again as the place and the time Sept. 14 to 24, 1894.

As we look back over the pleasant gatherings we have had at this season of the year, we wonder if this will not be the best we have ever had, we trust it will. In order to make it so we earnestly request every church in the state to send at least one or more delegates, and as many isolated brethren as can possibly do so come. We want you to see for yourselves just what we are doing and assist in devising ways and means for future work.

Bring your tents, camping outfit, ten day's rations and your hearts full of love for the Master, and enjoy such a love feast with the brethren as you have never done before. Elder A. J. Eychaner of Iowa, who undoubtedly is the best worker and as able a preacher as there is within our ranks, has signified his intentions to be at this meeting. Those who cannot come send us letters of encouragement. Any further information can be had by addressing,

J. J. CADY, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Indiana will be held at Argos, Ind., commencing Thursday evening, Sept., 6, 1894, and continuing over the following Sunday.

The churches are especially requested to send in delegates, and all lovers of the truth are cordially invited to come and enjoy a good meeting.

J. F. WAGONER, Pres.
A. C. ROBERTS, Sec.

The annual conference of the Church of God, known as the Northern Nebraska, and Southern Dakota Conference, will be held two miles south-east of Fairfax, South Dakota. This meeting will begin Friday night, Sept. 7th, 1894, and will continue as long as to be found of interest in the Master's cause. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can bring tents and come prepared to camp the brethren at Fairfax and vicinity are ready to do all they can to make it pleasant for all the brethren that may come from abroad. Brethren, don't forget this meeting as we want your help, as we are just opening up a new field of labor in South Dakota. So, let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master's cause, for the condition of the world indicates his coming is very near at hand.

WM. H. DENSON, Sec'y.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 5, 1894. NO. 33.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION proposes the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins. As pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

The Hardest Time of All.

There are days of real sorrow
In the seasons of our life;
There are cold, despairing moments,
There are hours of mental strife.
There are times of stony anguish,
When the tears refuse to fall;
But the waiting time, my brothers,
Is the hardest time of all.

Youth and love are all impatient,
Seeking things beyond their reach;
And the heart grows sick with hoping,
Ere it learns what life can teach.
Far before the fruit be gathered,
We must see the blossoms fall;
And the waiting time, my brothers,
Is the hardest time of all.

Loving ones, and loving ever,
It is sad to watch for years
For the light whose sinful shining
Makes a rainbow of our tears.
It is sad to mourn at morning,
All the hours to eventide;
Oh! the waiting time, my brothers,
Is the hardest time for all.

We can bear the heat of conflict,
Though the sudden crushing blow,
Beating back on gathered forces,
Forces momentarily low.
We may rise again beneath it,
None the weaker for our fall;
But the waiting time, my brothers,
Is the hardest time of all.

For it wears the eager spirit,
As the salt waves wear the stone,
And hope's gorgeous garb grows threadbare
Till its brightest tints are gone.
Then amid youth's radiant treasure,
Silent snows begin to fall;
Oh! the waiting time, my brothers,
Is the hardest time all.

Yet at last we learn the lesson,
That God knoweth what is best,
And a silent resignation
Makes the spirit calm and blest;
For, perchance, a day is coming,
For the changes of our fate,
When our hearts will thank him meekly
That he taught us how to wait.

Acts of the Apostles. Chap. 9.

1. And Saoul still breathing in threatening and murder towards the disciples of the Lord, went to the chief-priest,

2. And asked from him letters to Damaskos unto the synagogues, that if he should find any of that way, men and women, he might lead them bound to Hierousalem.

3. And as he was going his way it came to pass that he was drawing nigh to Damaskos, and suddenly, there shone round about him a light from out the heavens,

4. And as he was about to fall to the ground, he heard a voice saying unto him Saoul, Saoul, why persecutest thou me?

5. And he said, Who art thou, Lord? And he, I am Jesous whom thou art persecuting.

6. But arise and go into the city, and it will have been told thee what it behooveth thee to do.

7. And the men who were journeying with him stood speechless, hearing the voice but seeing no one.

8. And Saoul arose from the ground, and when his eyes were opened, he saw nothing, and leading him by the hand they conducted him to Damaskos.

9. And he was three days not seeing, and he ate not neither did he drink.

10. And there was a certain disciple in Damaskos by the name of Ananias, and the Lord said unto him in a vision, Ananias, and he said, Lo it is I, Lord.

11. And the Lord took unto him, Arise and go thy way to the narrow street called Straight and inquire at Joudа's house for a Tarsean by the name of Saoul, for lo he is offering votive-prayer,

12. And hath seen a man by the name of Ananias (meaning "without sorrow"); come in unto him and lay hands on him, that he may see.

13. And Ananias answered, Lord I have heard from many about this man, all the evil things that he hath done to thy saints in Hierousalem.

14. And here he hath official-power from the chief-priests to bind all those who invoke thy name.

15. And the Lord said unto him, Go thy way, because a chosen instrumentality is this one for me, to carry my name in the sight of nations and kings and sons of Israel.

16. For I am going to show him all that it behooveth him to suffer for my name's sake.

17. And Ananias went and entered into the household and laid his hands upon him and said, Brother Saoul, The Lord hath sent me, Jesous namely, who appeared to thee on the way thou wast going, that thou mayest see and be filled with sanctified spirit.

18. And straightway there fell from his eyes as it were scales and he saw and arose and was baptized,

19. And when he had taken sustenance was strengthened; and he came to be with the disciples in Damaskos some days;

20. And straightway in the synagogues he heralded Jesous, that he is the Son of God namely,

21. And all who heard were astounded and said, Is not this the one who was ravaging in Hierousalem those who invoked this name? And did he not come here for this purpose to lead them bound to the chief-priests?

22. But Saoul was enabled all the more and was confounding the Joudaians dwelling in Damaskos, deducing the proof that he was the Christ.

23. And when some days had been fulfilled the Joudaians formed a plot to destroy him.

24. But their plot was made known to Saoul. Now they were covertly watching the gate-ways by day and by night that they might destroy him.

25. And his disciples took him by night and let him down through the wall, lowering him in a basket (a fish basket).

26. And when he had arrived in Hierousalem, he attempted to join himself to the disciples; and they were all afraid of him; not putting faith in the fact that he was a disciple.

27. Barnabas however received him and conducted him to the apostles, and he discoursed to them how he had seen the Lord on the way, and talked with him, and how he had spoken openly in Damaskos in the name of Jesous.

28. And he was with them going his way in and out in Hierousalem, speaking boldly in the name of the Lord,

29. And he talked and discussed with the Hellenists and they attempted to destroy him;

30. But the brethren becoming aware of it conducting him down to Kaisaieia, and sent him away to Tarsos.

31. And the church then throughout all Joudaia and Galilaia and Samareia had peace, being built up and going its way in fear of the Lord; and it was filled with the help of the sanctified Spirit.

32. And it came to pass that as Petros was going through them all, he went down also unto the saints dwelling at Loudа:

33. And he found there a certain man by the name of Aineas who had been lying on a bitter for eight years and who was a paralytic,

34. And Petros said unto him, Aineas, Jesous Christ healeth thee; arise and spread thy bed for thyself: And straightway he arose.

35. And all those inhabiting Loudа and Saron, who had turned unto the Lord, saw him (or knew him).

36. Now in Joppa there was a certain female disciple by the name of Tabitha which being interpreted is called Dorkas: she was full of good acts of mercy which she was doing:

37. And it came to pass in those days that becoming enfeebled she died: and bathing her they placed her in an upper chamber;

38. Now Loudа being nigh to Joppa, the disciples heard that Petros was there, and they sent two men unto him, urging him, do not delay coming through to us.

39. And Petros arose and went along with them, and when he had arrived they conducted him to the upper-chamber; and all the widows were standing by him lamenting and showing the under-garments which Dorkas had made when she was with them.

40. And Petros putting them all out and kneeling offered votive-prayer: and turning unto the body, he said Tabitha, arise, and seeing Petros, she sat up.

41. And giving her his hand he stood her up: and calling the men saints and the widows he presented her alive.

42. And it became well known throughout all Joppa: and many put faith in the Lord.

43. And it occurred that he abode some days in Joppa with a certain Simon a tanner.

COMMENT.

"Saoul" Crazy-conceit is the meaning of the name.

"Breathing on" instead of "breathing" R. V.

"Damaskos" "a conquering one."

"The heavens" instead of "heaven" R. V.

"As he was about to fall" instead of "and he fell" R. V.

"What it behooveth" instead of "what thou must" R. V. He didn't have to if he wasn't willing. God makes us willing if necessary "in the day of his ability."

"Ananias" meaning without sorrow."

"Tarsos" something made of wicker-work—probably so-called originally because of its trade in wicker-ware.

"Come" instead of "coming" vision is always represented by the complete tenses as something past.

"Invoke" instead of "call upon" thy name.

"Instrument or instrumentality" I think is better than "vessel" or "vessel of election" R. V.

"Sanctified Spirit" instead of "the Holy Ghost" R. V. No article here.

"See and saw" instead of "receive" and "received sight" R. V.

"Was enabled" instead of "increased in strength" R. V.

"Some" instead of "many" days R. V.

"He" Paul not "he" Barnabas R. V.

"Kaisareia" "the emperor's place."

"Was filled with" instead of "was multiplied" R. V.

"Through them all" instead of "all parts" R. V. Too indefinite.

"Loudа" "Loud's place."

"Litter" instead of "bed" R. V.

"Aineas" "one who praiseth."

"All who had turned unto the Lord" instead of "and they turned unto the Lord" R. V.

"Dorkas" "a gazelle."

"Joppa" "Jop's place."

"Men-saints" instead of "saints" R. V.

"The widows" were saints also probably.

Our Sunday School Work. No. 2.

From a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. 2 Tim. iii. 15.

Thank God, the Holy Scriptures are able to make even a child "wise unto salvation." Oh, how precious it is, that the plan of salvation contained therein is so plain that even a child can comprehend it. In proof I submit to you some seventy questions answered by Mary Asleksan, a girl only twelve years old, a member of Sister Whitehead's class in the Chicago Sunday School.

The following are the questions submitted by Sister Whitehead, and the answers given by Mary, entirely unaided by any other older person.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

What do you believe the Bible to be?

I believe the Bible is the Word of God.

What does it teach us?

It teaches us that we are mortal souls.

Who is God?

God is the Almighty, Creator, or Father.

Do you believe in him?

I do believe in him.

Who is Adam?

Adam is the first man God made.

Out of what was he made?

Out of the dust of the earth.

What did he become when God breathed into him?

He became a living soul.

What was he before he breathed?

A dead soul.

What is a soul?

A soul is a person.

Was Adam an immortal soul?

No, a mortal soul.

What did he do to displease God?

He ate of the forbidden fruit.

What did his sin bring into the world?

His sin brought death into the world?

Who told the first lie, and what was it?

The serpent. Ye know ye shall not surely die. Gen. iii. 2, 4.

Who is the Seed of the woman?

Christ is the Seed of the woman.

What will he do to the lying serpent?

He will bruise his head. Gen. iii. 15.

What are the promises made to Abraham?

Land. Gen. xii. 1. Heir of the world. Heb. xi. 8, 9. In thee shall all nations be blessed. Rom. iv. 13, Gal. iii. 8.

Who is the promised Seed?

Christ.

Has he come yet?

Yes.

Did Abraham possess the land?

No.

Will he ever possess it?

Yes.

He is now dead—how will he get it?

In the resurrection he will be raised and possess it.

How was the gospel preached to Abraham?

The good news was told to Abraham by the promises.

How are all nations to be blessed in him?

Through Christ's reign.

Who is Christ?

Christ is the Son of God and his mother Mary.

What does the word Christ mean?

Christ means Anointed.

What did the angel say about him?

He shall be great, and called the Son of the Highest, and possess the land and throne of David. Luke i. 32.

From what royal line is he descended?

The royal line of David.

On whose throne is he to sit, and where will the throne be?

On David's throne, in Jerusalem.

Over whom is he to reign?

Over the house of Jacob forever.

What is Jesus to be besides a King?

A prophet and high priest. Heb. iv. 14; Acts iii. 22.

Why did he die?

If he did not die we would have only one life.

Why is he called "our passover?"

Because he is the Lamb of God, and the sin of the world is taken away by him.

Why was the lamb slain at the passover?

If the blood was not sprinkled on the door post, the first born would be killed.

What are the wages of sin?

Death.

What are the "glad tidings?"

Everlasting life.

From what are we saved if we accept Christ?

Eternal death.

What is the gift of God?

Eternal life.

What are the three things we must do in order to get that gift?

Repent, believe, obey.

If we are baptized without belief and repentance, will it do us any good?

No, it will not.

Must we be sprinkled, or buried in water?

Buried in water.

Why must we be buried?

When we are baptized, we are buried with Jesus by baptism into death, and then walk in newness of life.

What do we leave in the water?

Disobedience.

What are we baptized for?

For remission of sins. Acts ii. 38.

What is baptism a type of?

Of death.

Was Christ mortal or immortal when he was put into the grave?

Mortal.

What was he when he came out of it?

Immortal.

From what does he save us?

Death.

Where is he now?

At the right hand of God.

Is he always going to stay there?

No.

What will he do when he comes again?

He will raise the dead in Christ first.

Does he raise all the dead at his coming?

No.

When do the rest of the dead rise?

One thousand years after.

What becomes of the wicked?

They shall be burned up. Mal. iv. 1.

What is the reward of the righteous, is it eternal life only?

No, some will be rulers.

How many years does he reign on the earth?

He shall reign over the house of Jacob forever.

Do we go to him, or does he come to us?

He comes to us.

If we die before he comes where do we go?

We rest in the grave.

Who will hear his voice when he calls?

The righteous.

Shall we hear him if we are not one of his sheep?

No.

Must we climb the fence to get to him?

No.

How shall we get through the door?

Through Christ only.

Who is the door?

Christ is the only door.

Must we sin after we have had our sins forgiven?

No. We have an Intercessor with the Father.

Supposing we continue in sin, shall we get forgiveness?

No.

What are the fruits of the Spirit?

Love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, etc.

If we stand still and do not grow what will become of us?

We would die. John xv. 6.

Who will give us strength to overcome, if we ask him?

Christ.

What will become of the living when Christ comes?

They will be changed.

What is the duty of every Christian?

To be ready when he comes, and help others to be Christians.

MARY AGLAKSAN.

These questions and answers were handed to me today (Sunday, July 19,) as I was about to open the church service, with a request for baptism. I certainly am delighted with them. I am of the opinion that many of mature years could scarcely give more intelligent and scriptural answers. Mary will be baptized next Sunday.

Why could not some Sister lead a public class for our children, in THE RESTITUTION? I think it will do good. What do you think about it, Brother Underwood?

W. H. WILSON.

[We will be more than pleased if some sister will undertake such a work. It can well take the place of much controversy that is wasted effort. It is hard for one looking on to discover the lovely, Christ-like points, when following a long discussion. By all means let truth be set forth, with proofs given, and with this done our duty thereafter is exhortation. Give us a children's Bible class, and instruct the young. They are our hope. Sister Whitehead, can you undertake this? We know of no one so able as you. ED.]

Selected.

Three Essentials to Christian Hope.

1. "Have faith in God." Mark 11: 22.

2. "Have your faith unto holiness." Rom. 6: 22.

3. "Have an Advocate with the Father." 1 Jno. 2: 1.

"Essential, necessary to the existence of a thing; important in the highest degree."—Nutting.

These three conditions are "important in the highest degree." They form a tripod upon which depends the Christian's hope. Without faith in the being, power and promise of God hope is impossible. "He that cometh to God must believe that He is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him." Heb. 11: 6. And more, since hope is not presumption, but has faith for a basis—"Faith is the substance [substructure, basis] of things hoped for." Heb. 11: 1—we must believe the promises of the Word.

2. Since without holiness no man shall see the Lord, it behooves us to be careful that we do not rest on the soundness of our faith and the graciousness of our Advocate. One so wise, mighty, pure and so infinite in the perfection of his attributes can not tolerate willful disobedience, hence, holiness is essential to Christian hope. None others should talk of hope. Let them rather, mourn their sad state and seek the garb of white. "Wash you" is the divine behest for, "there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth."

3. But since it is written, "There is none righteous," "There is not a just man on earth, that doeth good and sinneth not," "They are all gone aside," and have "sold themselves for nought," "If I justify myself, mine own mouth shall condemn me: if I say, I am perfect it shall prove me perverse," says Job. And none but God can "bring a clean thing out of an unclean," neither can the rich "by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him," and as none can say, "I have made my heart clean, I am pure from my sin," we see at once the need of an Advocate. When we look at self we discover weakness; when we look upon the world, behold, it lieth in wickedness; when we look up to God, we are rebuked by his law, and overwhelmed by the majesty of his throne.

But as hope fails in the presence of the "justice and judgement of His throne" we are assured that "mercy and truth go before His face." Yes were it not for the fact that "justice and mercy go hand in hand;" that law and love embrace each other in the dealings of God; we would be without hope. Love does not infringe upon justice in securing pardon for the penitent. Justice recognizes extenuating causes for much of the sin that is in the world, and unites with love in finding a way "that He might be just and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus." "God so loved the world" that He "laid salvation on our mighty to save." Nor can I believe that the unregenerate alone need an Advocate. I have not quoted the foregoing Scriptures as descriptive of the conduct and condition of God's children; yet I think we all need an Advocate as we are on dangerous ground so long as we are on trial.

I have no sympathy with the idea that Christians can not sin, nor with the opinion that they may do many things that they would dare to do if they were not Christians." God is no respecter of persons. He will not excuse in one what He condemns in another. "My little children these things write I unto you, that ye sin not (may not sin," R. V.), and if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous: and he is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but for the sins of the whole world." 1 Jno. 1: 1, 2. Yes, we must have faith and works—nor can we dispense with an Advocate.—B. F. in Our Hope.

A Great White Throne.

The true life is ever lived in the sight of great white throne; a throne in times of perplexity; white, in the moments of temptation. God reigns in absolute purity. There are solemn hours, even upon earth, when, in silent thought, we seem in a very special sense to be brought to stand before our holy Judge. Then other considerations disappear. We are alone with God. Heaven and earth flee from our minds. There is no place for them when in the presence of the great Judge of all, and we see our errors and sins in the white light of his throne.

These hours are hours of revelation. Books are opened. The secret things are laid bare. There is no closed book in his presence. Not the acts alone, but the thoughts and intents of the heart are all made known. And judgment proceeds on the secret records. It is then that the Book of Life is opened. The hour of judgment is the hour of salvation.

The secret of spiritual life is not found amidst the noise and turmoil of earth. The Book of Life is not opened in the glare of commerce, nor even in the light of public worship. To find our names written there we must be alone with God and stand before his white throne. All our lives have to be judged and condemned. All other books must be opened first, and their records fully known. Then when the judgment is past and the sinner stands guilty before God, the secret of divine mercy through Christ is revealed, and the terror of the lake of fire passes away. Instead of the second death there is the second life. It is in these rehearsals of the great awful coming day of judgment that the soul finds its redemption. It is the sense of ruin that brings sinners to Christ. There is no escape from condemnation. It must be either now or at the day appointed. But earnest souls that seek the great white throne on earth read there in the opened Book of Life the promise of the Lord, "He that believeth shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life." It is, then, by simple faith, not by sight, that the condemned sinner discovers his own name written in the Lamb's Book of Life.—The Freeman.

A man's nature runs either to herbs or weeds; therefore let him seasonably water the one, and destroy the other.

A Business Question.

Business of all kinds reported dull. Money hard to get. This has been the cry, and we have tried to be patient with our friends who have asked for a "little time" in which to pay their dues. We are almost to the "end of our string," and now we ask you who have been favored by us in granting time to make long due payments, to now send us the money. We must have what you owe us right away. Will you make arrangements and send us our dues? This is "a Business Question." Please consider it on the line of "our side" and see what you would like us to do if we were in your place.

We not only speak what we believe, but as we believe. If faith is weak, so will be the utterance."

ROBERT Ashcroft truly says, "The mistakes of others, however pious they may be, can never be any good excuse for you, so long as you are capable of searching for yourselves."

S. J. C. EDWARDS says, "now any sane man can read the Gospel of Luke and the Acts of the Apostles, especially the latter, and imagine that the whole narrative is the invention of some faddist, is the mightiest joke of all time."

Jesus manifested God's loving character and was the teacher of the Father's truth, the messenger of his will, and is the mediator of his covenant. He was also the sacrifice for sin, the conqueror of death and is the Savior of life, and the prospective—Anointed—King over all the earth.

God is Love. Proof of this abounds. Poor, ignorant and unworthy as we are he takes notice of us and a deep interest in us: has pity for the erring, pardon for the guilty, love for the pure, kindness for the humble and promises of immortality for those who trust him.

THE Budgets of the 16 states of Europe show that the annual expenditure for army and navy rose from £128,000,000 in 1884 to £140,000,000 in 1893, and the taxes raised from £537,000,000, in 1885, to £640,000,000 in 1893. £3,000,000,000 or fifteen thousand million dollars has been expended in that direction between 1884 and 1893.

THEORETICALLY our hope centers in the coming of Jesus from the heavens to take the kingdom his faithful followers are to share with him; but are we really expecting him? Are the glories of that future tangible truths to us? In other words, is it the chief business of our life to prepare for that event? If not, we had better never have had the theory.

"A MAN needs something more than the cold maxims of philosophy, or the dissipation of pleasure, or the routine of business to support his spirit under the pressure of sorrow. These often aggravate the evils they are intended to cure. If we wish to obtain a shelter from the storms of life, we must seek it, not in the schools of philosophy, or in scenes of frivolity or false pleasure, but in the hopes and consolations of the gospel."

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

Josephitism. No. 6.

We propose, now to examine the grounds upon which Josephites set aside the genealogies of Matthew and Luke and other Scriptures, and some of the arguments of those who, not having advanced that far, try to find proof of their notions in the Word.

To begin with the latter. It is claimed that "both the genealogies of Matthew and Luke give the descent of Jesus through Joseph." A great mistake surely. From Abraham to David they coincide, but then diverge. One is that of Joseph through Solomon, the other of Mary through Nathan. The two lines come together in the family of Salathiel during the captivity; but in the days of the grandson they separate and do not again approximate until Joseph and Mary come together.

Matthew brings the line from Abraham down to where "Jacob begat Joseph, the husband of Mary, of whom was born Jesus who is called Christ." Here our readers will be ready to ask why it does not say as it all along said, "Abraham begat and Isaac begat, and Jacob begat, etc., etc.? Why did it stop saying begat, when it had said it 39 times, and could have said it the 40th time? In accordance with the rule, why did it not say Joseph begat Jesus, if he did? Ah, Joseph did not beget Jesus, or it would have said so. It is the Woman's Seed that is to bruise the serpent's head, not man's. God had said he would be the father of David's ever-living and reigning Son,—and that a virgin should conceive. This explains the absence of the 40th "begat." But the complete answer is found in the 18&25 verses, where it is shown how God became the father of Mary's child—she was caused to conceive by the miraculous power of his spirit. If this passage be read carefully it will be seen that Joseph is only introduced as the legal husband of Mary.

The genealogy in the 3rd of Luke, although not so plain, is quite as fatal to the Josephitism. It is claimed that "Luke believed Joseph was the father of Jesus. Is this reasonable? Why did he not say so, if he believed it? Why did he say, (as was supposed) the son of Joseph? Who supposed it? Would the man who recorded what the angel said to his mother, viz.—"That he should be called the Son of the Highest, and who says in the 32nd verse that God was his father,—would he suppose Joseph was his father? Would he either record a lie or state that he had both God and a man for his fathers? Does not the mention of a supposition, show that people generally supposed it, but that he did not? What would our Josephite writer think it meant if a person were to write that a child born of his wife was supposed to be his son? Would he not regard it as a pretty strong hint that some one else was its father?

The words in question are parenthetic. A parenthesis is an incidental remark thrown into a sentence that can be read with, or without it. To get the sense of the passage let us read it without the parenthesis:—And Jesus himself began to be about thirty years of age, being of Heli. This is surely the sense, because Matthew i. 16 says that "Jacob begat Joseph the husband of Mary, of whom was born Jesus who was called the Christ." If Josephites are not reckless enough to say that both Jacob and Heli begat Joseph, and so had two fathers, is it not safe to say it is absolutely certain that Jesus was of Heli, through Mary, who was as much a daughter of David as Joseph was a son of him? This harmonizes the two genealogies, and warrants us in putting the marks of parenthesis ( ) in their proper place. As they are in the text they only enclose a part of the parenthesis. It says, "being (as was supposed) the son of Joseph." As we know by Matthew that Joseph was the son of Jacob and therefore not son of Heli, it should read, "Being (as was supposed the son of Joseph)." And without the parenthesis it reads:—"And Jesus himself began to be about thirty years of age, being of Heli." Here Luke tells the facts in the case, and then (in parenthesis) tells what was commonly supposed, viz. that he was a son of Joseph. The words, "the son," are not in the original, and so the Word of the Spirit enables us again to stop this deadly error. Joseph was not of Heli, but Mary was, and God's truth is vindicated. Jesus was the Son of David according to the flesh.

We do not have to reason thus out of the Scriptures with the more advanced Josephites. They slash right and left into what we call the Word of Life; and we propose to expose some of their reckless work, and examine the reasons why they virtually throw away the New Testament. They say the genealogy by Matthew is not that of Jesus "at all" through Joseph, unless Jesus was his son. They either overlook the explanation given of the generation of Jesus Christ in the 18th verse, or else disbelieve it.

We are next told that among the primitive Christians there were some called Ebionites and Nazarines who were one and the same people, and comprised all the Hebrew Christians who disbelieved the story of the miraculous nativity, receiving only the gospel of Matthew, but a copy of which did not contain those chapters. Take a good look at this, the very foundation of Josephitism. Some Christians (? oh!) rejected three of the gospels and the first chapters of Matthew, even rejected Paul's epistles and called him an apostate from the law, and Josephites do the same, because they did.

Our readers cannot fail to see that if the Ebionites are authority for rejection of three of the gospels and the miraculous conception, they are also authority as to Paul's epistles, and then what becomes of the New Testament? We want them to see they will be in the company of some of the rankest infidels that ever lived after awhile if they listen to those pious creatures (?) who now pretend to teach Josephitism from the Bible, and claim to be Christians.

Years ago Dr. Marsh said in his translation of Michaelis vol. 2, part 2, p. 138 that 355 Greek manuscripts had then been collated, and in all except one, the codex Ebernensis, containing the first chapters of Matthew, and even THIS ONE, begins at the 18th verse and gives the very evidence that is disputed on the nativity.

Make a note of it—EVERY known manuscript in existence contains the evidence of the miraculous conception; and, if we are not mistaken, the number has now swelled to over eight hundred.

Put it down; no Nazarine or Ebionite gospels now exist; they have perished; the Josephite God ought to be severely reprimanded for this. What a careless piece of business!! Shameful to allow the false to be preserved and the true destroyed. What a recommendation for the God of the Josephites!

We also want our readers to make a note of what Dr. Angus says in his Bible Handbook, of the Syriac Translation of the New Testament. He says:—From internal evidence it is believed that the translators were Jewish Christians; and both internal evidence and tradition agree in ascribing it to the first century, and contains these first chapters of Matthew. This proves that the one they translated from contained them." And surely those translators were better qualified to judge of the merits of various versions than are these upstart Josephite critics, or rather iconoclasts of the 19th century.

Would the God of Abraham whose word and oath were involved, allow the only accurate gospel to perish, and take infinite pains to preserve a false one? Why would he allow the evidence of the heirship of Abraham's Seed to be lost?

We deny that the Ebionites and Nazarines are the same people. Jerome distinctly says, "The Nazarines professed to believe in Christ the Son of God, born of the Virgin Mary. This shows that their gospel contained the first chapters of Matthew.

The learned Frenchman, Beausobre, in his introduction to his New Testament says, "These Nazarines not entertaining any erroneous opinions concerning Jesus Christ, it is very probable that they have been confounded with the Ebionites, who did not appear till afterwards.

It is worthy of note that Barnabas, Clement, Polycarp, nor Papias say a word to indicate that they did not believe in miraculous conception; and Ignatius speaks distinctly of his Virgin mother.

Another historic fact worthy of mention in this connection, is that Irenæus is the first writer who speaks of the Ebionites as a sect of the second century who separated from the general body of Christians and rejected nearly the whole of the New Testament.

The latter Josephites say the Nazarines were Christians of Jerusalem, Bethlehem and Nazareth." Jerome says "they lived at Beræ in Syria," and is further helps the cause of truth by pointing out Ebionites in the second chapter of Matthew (after from the existing gospel, so that they, contrary to the Josephites, did have the first chapters. They are at fault again, and we may still believe on the testimony of Matthew that Jesus is the Son of God by miraculous conception.

Matthew's first chapters are rejected because it is alleged

The Children.

[illegible] to keep them so,
Soft, warm and young,
The wee, feeble fingers,
The babbling tongue.
Tears that we kiss away,
Smiles that we win;
Fair locks of brown or gold,
As guilt-free of sin.

Only to keep them so,
Pure, fair and pure,
Of our full strength so
Sweet in their entire
Dear from all they shrink from,
Clear eyed, clear brow;
Oh! yours, whose all glistens
They fearlessly draw.

Time to keep them so,
Sweet hours, fleet hours,
Power like that look for us,
Sweet tone—the tone?
Can't that we train it so ever,
Feet fast upon it,
Faithful only angels wonder,
Each new word a pitfall.

Guide to keep them so!
Words and men
Are the tools that circle us
Lovingly then.
Gentle and good to us,
Patient and strong,
Guarding our weaknesses,
Bearing us long.

Tenderly watching us,
Fold thought and step,
That scarcely keep us more
With life's rapid days,
Stand to us—walking,
Our counsel above us!
But, only to have them so
Just as they were!

A Symposium of Faith.

Under the above heading the Conference Board of the Church of God in Iowa, sent out about one hundred circular letters, and have received the following replies many of which were read at their conference greatly to edification. And as means for publication in book form were short a vote was taken that these letters be placed in my hands to be sent to THE RESTITUTION office for publication, and here I comply.

SERIES 1.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in the Lord:

It would be indeed a feast of happiness and joy to me to be present at your social meeting, to be cheered by faith and hope from hearts aflame with the love of God, a kind of foretaste of the grand gathering of the saints in the near future, when the saints of past ages who have long slumbered in dust shall awaken all glorious and incorruptible, to die no more; who, with the living ones who shall have been changed from mortal to immortality, be caught away for a meeting of the Lord in the air, as he shall descend from heaven to earth, then we may if we so elect have the glorious privilege of setting down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and all the blood-washed throng. Grand prospect! Glorious hope!

I have heard of your work, have watched your efforts, and have rejoiced in spirit, invoked the blessing of God upon your efforts in trying to turn erring souls from darkness to light, from the service of satan unto the service of God. To this end I would offer a word of exhortation, because these are times of great peril, hard times have come. The forces of evil are combined against us, and are seeking by every artifice to ensnare the servants of the Lord. The faith that was once for all delivered to the saints is being assailed on all points. Are we able to stand against the wiles of the wicked one? Have we buckled on the whole armor of God? If so, we are safe.

Are prepared to stand against questions of doubt, against the invitations to sinful pleasure, against selfishness and the greed of gain? With the armor on we are strong in the Lord, without it weak and helpless. Faith alone, is dead, but with its companions it is a power, has and will yet accomplish wonders. Its companions are virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity. These are the necessary additions which will enable those possessing them to stand. They shall never fall, for so an abundant entrance will be administered unto us into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. He who would teach purity, must himself be purged from impurity. It is the design of God that the Gospel purify. If we hinder it in its purpose by sowing to carnality, sowing seeds of sin and destruction in our path, the glorious gospel of God will benefit us none. We cannot be dead to sin and live in sin at the same time.

The gospel is the power of God for salvation unto those believing, those not believing shall be condemned. The fearful, the unbelievers, abominable, and all vile characters, sorcerers, idolators, and all liars shall have their part in the lake of fire which is the second death. Because of fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affections and covetousness, which is idolatry, the wrath of God cometh.

If we would be saved from wrath we must receive, believe, and obey the glorious gospel of the Son of God. Our affections must be placed upon the things about the kingdom of God, and the heir to the throne and kingdom of the Lord over Israel.

The disciples were properly instructed by their and our teachers. They had the advantage of us in the fact of personal contact. They walked with him, talked with him, ate and drank with him after his resurrection. We believe through their word.

In God's time the kingdom will be restored to Israel. The theocracy will be set up at the time spoken of by the prophets. The judges will be restored and counselors as at the beginning, for he will come who is appointed Judge of quick and dead, and will raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen down, and will close up the breaches thereof, and will raise up his ruins, and will build it as in days of old. Then will be fulfilled the message of the angel to the mother of Jesus. Luke i. 32, 33. Then times of restitution begins.

In Christian love.

H. MURRAY.

Dear ones of the precious faith:

We have been requested to write a synopsis of our faith. We do so gladly for it contains themes that are very dear to us, but dearest of all to the Christian's heart is the second coming of Christ, our blessed Savior, God's only Son, who in his infinite mercy he gave, to be put to death, that through him we might have eternal life. If we will but believe on him and make our calling and election sure, his second coming will be a grand and glorious one for us, otherwise it will not. Job xix. 25; Jas. v. 7-8; 2 Tim. iv. 8.

Eternal life is the natural desire of God's people. There is beauty and grandeur in the thought of a life after this, in which our burdens will all have been forgotten. O the rest and the peace. Think of it, no more sorrow, no more partings. The poverty-stricken one will know nothing of poverty any more. To such the promise is given, and not to the rich of this world. Jas. ii. 5; Matt. v. 3.

To ascertain where this life is refer to Col. iii. 3, and when it is to be received, Mark x. 30.

Man in his present state is mortal, see Job iv. 17, and subject to death, but his desire is to finally be made immortal so he cannot die. First he must seek for immortality, Rom. ii. 7, and to prove when it is to be put on, refer to 1 Cor. xv. 50-58.

Paul the apostle in his epistle to Timothy will prove to you who has immortality now. 1 Tim. vi. 15-16.

There is a reward to be given to the faithful but they are not going away any place to get it, for it is to be brought to them. 1 Peter i. 4-7, 13; Rev. xxii. 12. Neither do they get their reward at death, it would not benefit one that was dead for the dead know not anything, Eccl. iv. 4, 5, 6, 10. They are asleep, 1 Thess. iv. 13, 14, 16. They rest Rev. xiv. 13. They are in the dust, Isa. xxvi. 19. These quotations will prove that the dead sleep in their grave. Our loved Savior had to enter the darkness of the tomb before he came off conqueror over death. We are not better than he, but he is coming back to this earth after the great and final changes take place and the earth is beautified and made new. Then the meek will inherit the land, the beautiful new made earth, Rev. v. 9, 10; Matt. v. 5; Ps. xxxvii. 11, 29.

To the ungodly and wicked the second coming of Christ will be a calamity. Their last chance of salvation will be gone; they have been dealt with mercifully and given ample time to consider the error of their way, but they heed not the warning, and lo! when he appears it will be too late. Imagine if you can their feelings, the loving prophets and apostles have endeavored to lead them aright and teach them the laws of God, but they were 01 so heedless, and would not obey, so they must be destroyed. Acts iii. 23; Rom. vi. 23; 2 Thess. i. 7, 8, 9.

When God lays down a law it is law, and must be obeyed, machinues to get around it and enter the kingdom in a round-about way.

We must believe, repent, and be baptized. Yes, baptism is a very important act. Christ was baptized, we should most assuredly follow in his footsteps. Baptism is a burial, Rom. vi. 3-5. Our bodies must be washed with pure water, Heb. x. 22. No one should disregard this very important commandment.

We ask an interest in your prayers and trust that when the judging time comes we will not be found wanting.

When Jesus comes to reward his servants,
Whether it be noon or night;
Ye that to him will be faithful watching,
With your lamps all trimmed and bright?

Your brother and sister, looking for the Life Giver.

ALEX & AZUBAH M. SCOTTEN.

To those assembled in Conference; Dear Brothers and Sisters:

Who have obtained like precious faith with me through the righteousness of God and of Jesus our Lord. May grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the righteousness of God, and of Jesus our Lord.

Beloved in the Lord, you, have heard the word of the kingdom, or the gospel of the kingdom, and understood it, as the Savior has said, see Matt. xiii. 33. When I write to you and think of the exceeding great and precious promises as the source from which we have obtained this faith, I believe the more we comprehend it the more we all feel like earnestly contending for the true faith once delivered to the saints.

Have you noticed how favor and peace from our Father in heaven was to be bestowed upon us, or obtained on the principle of multiplying? The apostle makes use of the word multiply. Multiply what? Knowledge. Knowledge concerning what? The covenants of promise, which, if we are unacquainted with will cause us to be without hope and without God in the world. See Eph. ii. 12, compare 1 chap. 13 verse with chap. iv. 18.

Brothers and sisters let me ask you, have you been about your Father's business? Have you been multiplying? If so, you have the assurance of God's favor, and that peace of mind that passeth all understanding. Jesus has said, Peace I leave with you. Please observe this favor and peace is obtained through or by multiplying, by acquainting ourselves with the revelation of God's will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding, that we may walk worthy of the Lord, being fruitful in every good work and still increasing in the knowledge of God. Now let us try in our weakness to grasp the greatness of those promises upon which our faith and hope is based.

The apostle tells us in the same chapter from which we have been reading, that, we shall be partakers of the divine nature when we attain to these promises, having escaped the corruption that is in the world, through lust. The Divine nature we know is the immortal and deathless nature. Praise the Lord, O my soul. Let all that is within me bless his holy name, for he hath promised to us great things. Promises that are not only great, but they are exceedingly great and precious.

In Eph. i. 19, Paul tells us that this exceeding greatness has been manifested to us in the person of Jesus when the Father raised him from the dead. Now we hear him saying to those that believe in him, Because I live, ye shall live also. Again he says, I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore, and have the keys of hell and of death. The beloved John says, this we know, that when he (Jesus) shall appear we shall be like him for we shall see him as he is. O blessed thought, can it be that I shall live again, and when I live can I say with Jesus, who has become the first fruits of them that slept. I was once dead but now I am alive forevermore. May we all so run that we may obtain, and let us never forget for one moment that if we are ever permitted by God's favor to feel and know the power of an endless life, and be made like our Blessed Savior, we must be like him in this life. Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus.

In conclusion, let me quote the words of the great apostle to the Gentiles (our preacher,) For what is our hope or crown of rejoicing, are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming? Soon may he come. Amen.

J. L. PRIME.

1. I believe in one God: and this God "knew no other God," in the days of Isaiah, xliv. 8, see also Isa. xlv. 21-22, and 1 Cor. viii. 6.

2. None of the foundation stones of the building of God not even Christ, the chief corner stone, Eph. ii. 20-22; 1 Pet. ii. 4, 5, existed before they were made, Gal. iv. 4, only in the purposes of the Most High, Eph. i. 4-11.

3. The wave-sheaf of Lev. xxiii. 10-12 was a figure of the Church of the First Born, of Heb. xii. 23; Rev. xiv. 1-5, and constitutes the building of God, the tabernacle of God, Rev. xxi. 3, the city that Abraham looked for, Heb. xi. 10, the body of the Christ, 1 Cor. xii. 13, composed of the living stones of 1 Pet. ii. 5-9. A royal priesthood, not to be organized until every stone or member is fitly framed and made perfect by a resurrection unto life. They (or which) make up what is looking in the prophets, Heb. xi. 40, and will be gathered by the angels to the place of the organization, Matt. xxiv. 28-31; Luke xvii. 37. This is in accordance with the Pattern, 1 Kings vi. 7, a shadow of heavenly things, Heb. x. 1.

4. The Church of the First Borns are the Sons of God, for whom the whole creation are looking, Rom. viii. 19-22, the Desire of all nations, Hag. ii. 7, and kings and priests unto God, after the kingdoms of this world have become the kingdoms of Christ, Rev. xi. 15. Their work will be the restoring of all things, Acts iii. 21.

5. Any idea of consciousness in death is a myth of paganism. Eccl. ix. 5.

6. If Christ had not risen from the dead his death and sufferings would have done us no good, 1 Cor. xv. 17, 18. We should now have no Mediator.

7. The New Covenant and the promises connected with it, called the good news of the kingdom was preached to Abraham 430 years before the shadows or patterns of it were given, Gal. iii. 17. These conditions made Abraham look for the city that had foundations, which is the same as the one spoken of in Eph. ii. 22; Heb. xii.; 1 Cor. iii. 9. This New Covenant is made only with those in whom the Spirit has written God's Law in their affections so that they delight in it, Rom. vii. 22; Ps. cxix. 97.

8. The Holy Ghost, or Holy Spirit, or Spirit of Truth, is a name given to the Angel of God's presence who stands for Spiritual Israel, Dan. xii. 1; Isa. lxiii. 9. The Steward over Abraham's house was a type of this angel in the same way that Abraham was likened unto God, Rom. iv. 17. Abraham in this figure is made father of us all, Rom. iv. 16, while Sarah, the free-woman, is mother of all the spiritual seed, (or New Covenant Children) Gal. iv. 31, (In the figure) while the bond-woman's (Hagar Covenant's) children are controled to obedience by the circumstances surrounding them.

9. The fifth Empire, or Kingdom of David's Son is to be on the earth, Matt. v. 51, during the one thousand years of Rev. xx. 4-7.

DARIUS MYERS.

1. I believe in one God, the Creator of the heavens and the earth, and of all things that are therein, "in whom we live, move, and have our being" who was revealed to the fathers of the Hebrew nation, and who through the Scriptures of that nation has been revealed to those who have accepted those writings, and believed their teachings as the result of Divine inspiration.

2. I believe that God, through his Spirit is everywhere, that no life could exist if it were not for his all-pervading presence, and that the visible works of nature are evidences of this existence, power, and providence.

3. I believe that the Holy Spirit is not a personality, but as a part of the all-pervading Spirit of the One God, and Creator, it manifests itself in a peculiar manner in the enlightenment, and conception of the Divine life in the Soul of the elect believer.

4. I believe that though God permits evil, yet that he cannot transgress any law that he has made, nor violate any promise that he has given.

5. I believe that no law of God can be broken without sin being committed, that all his promises will be fulfilled, that he is a God of love, that his mercies will endure forever, that the time will come when the earth will no more be affected by the edenic curse, that evil will cease to exist, that the human race will no longer be infected by a tendency to sin, or subject to death.

6. I believe that man by nature does not possess an immortal soul, but is liable to death, yet on conditions of keeping God's laws, and following the teaching and example of Jesus, he may obtain immortality, which is a "Gift of God."

7. I believe that God, through holy men of ancient times, revealed the coming of a Redeemer or Messiah, who would more fully reveal his will, and the means by which mankind might become free from the power of sin, partake of the divine nature, and live forever.

8. I believe that it is the duty of every believer in the faith and hope of the gospel to try to enlighten and instruct those who are in ignorance of the Truth as revealed in the Scriptures. To try to follow the example of Jesus, and keep God's laws. To be honest, industrious, temperate and moral, avoid war and fighting, politics, and such occupations and associations as have a tendency to harm our fellow men, and lead to temptation.

A Discrepancy Explained.

P. B. Stouffer:

Dear Brother: Your kind letter upon the difficulties of chronology, came duly to hand. I am sorry to say that it was left at home, and I cannot reply as I could if I had the points of your difficulty before me. But as I remember it, it was in regard to the discrepancy of 60 years in the age of Terah.

If Abraham was born when Terah was 70 years old, and died when Abraham was 75 years old, the sum of these ought to bring 145, Terah's age at his death. But 205 is stated to be his age, hence 60 years of discrepancy.

1. It is shown that Abraham was 75 years old when he left Haran. Gen xii. 4.

2. This is also shown in another way, viz:—Ten years after they came to Canaan, Sarah gave Hagar her maid to Abraham, Gen. xvii. 3, and one year after Hagar bear Ishmael making 11 years in Canaan. At this time Abraham is said to be 86, Gen. xvi. 15, 16, making him 75 when he left Haran.

3. There is a third argument to prove that Abraham was 75 when he left Haran, viz:—Ishmael was born when Abraham was 86 as above. Now when Ishmael was 13 years old Abraham circumcised him. 86 plus 13 equals 99 as the time of Abraham's age at this time. If he was 75 when he left Haran. Here again the dates agree for Abraham was 99 at the time, Gen. xvii. 23-27.

4. Again in that same year God appeared to Abraham and told him Isaac should be born. Abraham laughed and said he would be 100 years old and Sarah ninety, Gen. xvii. 17. But Isaac was born when Abraham was 100 Gen. xxi. 5, and one year from the circumcision of Ishmael and Abraham thus again proving his age 75 when he left Haran.

These four lines of argument establish the fact that Abraham was 75 when his father died, the discrepancy is therefore with the age of Terah at Abraham's birth, or in the statement of his age at death.

The Samaritan Pentateuch gives the age of Terah at Abraham's birth as 70 years, so too does the Modern Hebrew and the Septuagint and Josephus. Where then is the difficulty? It evidently is in the statement of his age at death. The Hebrew and our common Bible gives his age at death as being 205 years while the Samaritan Pentateuch gives his age at death as being 145 years. Taking the Samaritan Pentateuch as the correct (145) years there is no difficulty.

The Hebrew has been altered by the Jews to defeat the idea that Christ was the Messiah and born in the sixth or rather at the close of the sixth thousand year days of the world's history. In order to accomplish this they shortened the time of the birth of the eldest son in the father's age. For example, "Selah lived 30 years and begat Eber," Gen. xi. 14. Now this period to the birth of the eldest son was shortened 100 years, and as the entire time of the patriarchs was found by reckoning to the birth of the eldest son and from his birth to the birth of the next son, etc., it is evident if these can all be shortened and add the amount to the time after the birth of the eldest son it will not alter the age of patriarch but will alter the age of the world by hundreds of years. By comparing the Samaritan with the Bible as we have it there is thus made a difference as follows:—

The time shortened up to birth of eldest son Arphaxad 100 years, Selah 100, Eber 100, Peleg 100, Reu 100, Serug 100, Nahor 50, equals 650 years between the flood and Abraham.

In a work by Dr. Russell "Connection between Sacred and Profane History," he says, page 70, "A learned author the celebrated Abulfaragius, asserts that the Jews, believing it to have been foretold in the law and in the prophets, that Christ was to be sent in the last times in order to produce a reason or apology for rejecting him, altered the chronology of the world. The epoch were computed by the generations of the patriarchs or the age at which the eldest son was born, the Rabbis subtracted from Adam's age when he begat Seth, 100 years and added them to the remainder of his life and they did the same in the lives of most of his posterity down to Abraham."

Now the object of this alteration was to prove that the period since Adam was only 4000 years and that the time for the appearing of Messiah was not yet due, hence Christ was an imposter.

You know that the Septuagint was made more than 280 years B. C. and this reveals the difference in these chronological tables. Arphaxad according to the Septuagint was 130 at the birth of Cainan instead of 30 years as in A. V. Ether 134 instead of 34, etc., in this way the record has been shortened about 2000 years.

These alterations probably affected the case before us in the same way having added 60 years to his real life making him 205 when in reality he was only 145 at his death. I know of no other way to explain the difficulty for there are the above four lines of argument to prove that Abraham was 75 when he left Haran.

But, you did not tell why you reject the idea that the children of Israel were in Egypt 430 years instead of 215 as Usher's chronology makes it.

Would be glad to hear from you on both these again, and if I have shed any light on this question you are welcome to it. Let us have the truth. Yours,

A. J. EICHANNA.

P. S. There is another way out of the above difficulty, viz: The Hebrew letters being used as numerals it was easy to mistake them for a different number and in adding make the difference. See Geikie's "Hours with the Bible," page 74.

In Memoriam.

Anthony A. Foor, son of Henry and Mary Foor, and subject of this sketch, was born in Miama Co., Ind., May 10, 1850. He was reared on the farm on which he was born. From childhood he had a kind and quiet disposition. When he became a man he not only became interested in the pursuit of worldly goods, but of heavenly things as well. In openly declaring his faith in the Gospel of the kingdom of God he was baptized into Christ by his uncle John Foor, of Kansas. Although there was no local church organization in his neighborhood with which he could unite and thus gain spiritual strength by help from other members of the body, yet he, unlike many others who start for the prize but soon grow weary in well-doing, continued to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the Master, and in all his trials, temptations and troubles, and he, like many others, had sore troubles, he was a successful conqueror, taking the Word of Truth as the man of his council. In his dealings with the world he was honest and truthful, and thus gained the confidence of all with whom he had business transactions. He was loved and esteemed by those who knew him best. He was a very industrious man, and not being a strong man physically, he was apt to overtax his powers of endurance. He had been exercising on his wheel, and walked into the drugstore where he was taken violently ill. He was removed to his boarding place, and a few days afterward to the home of his parents, two miles in the country, where a dutiful father, a kind mother and two loving sisters, together with neighbors and medical attendants did all in their power to alleviate his suffering and drive away disease; but they were powerless. The enemy's hold on its victim was too strong. Typhoid fever and heart failure combined were too much for his constitution to bear, and eight days after the violent attack he fell asleep in Christ. He died July 20, 1894, his age being 34 years, 2 months and 4 days. Of his immediate family relatives he leaves a father, mother and two sisters to mourn the loss of a kind, cheerful and dutiful son and loving brother.

Failing to secure the services of a minister of like precious faith to conduct the funeral services, the writer being in Minnesota at the time, the pastor of the M. E. Church of Macy, Ind., and with whom he had associated in life and was well acquainted, was invited to conduct the services, after which interment took place in the Odd Fellows' Cemetery.

Bro. Foor was an earnest and fearless defender of the truth, never ashamed of the truths he believed, however unpopular they might seem to be. The last time the writer met him was five weeks before his death, at the June Conference at Old Antioch when his parting words were, "Bro. C., you know of my troubles, I have shed many bitter tears, but I am happy in hope of the soon coming kingdom." With these words, so expressive to us, we separated never to meet again in this life. But while our eyes are dimmed with tears and our hearts ache with sadness in the loss of friends and loved ones with whom our associations in life have been so pleasant and profitable, yet we rejoice in the thought that although they were taken in the prime of life, and we are left to mourn, yet theirs was a life well and profitably spent, and the rich rewards of the righteous awaits them at the resurrection of the just. The stricken family of our beloved brother has the heartfelt sympathy and prayers of those who have been called upon to pass through the deep waters of sorrow occasioned by the cruel hand of death. But we take comfort in the thought that—

"The shining land is just ahead,
Our hope so bright and fair,
Then's God we'll never sin again,
There'll be no sorrow there."

Diary of a Holiday at Bethlehem.

There is not much room for active work, for two missions are already established here. The F. E. S. have a small school with Bible work, and the Germans have charge of the native church and congregation. Alas! a very small one. There are no Moslems living in Bethlehem, and, I believe, no Jews, but Greeks and Latins hold the fort tenaciously. They, the Armenians and the Abyssinians, each own a portion of the famous Church of the Nativity, and various convents are built round the Church. So great has been the quarreling that a guard of soldiers is posted at what was once the great door; and even down in the crypt, where the manger is pointed out, there is, at least, always one soldier, of course, a Moslem. What must his thoughts be as he watches the image and picture worship in that dimly-lighted, incense-perfumed vault? Moslems abhor and despise all that savors of idolatry.

The Bethlehem costume is very characteristic. The men's is distinguished by the very large full turban wound round the fez, giving quite a patriarchal air, for so many of the wearers are bearded. They are rather fine, manly men, especially when they don the outer garment, or "abuy" with its quaint pattern and stiff fullness. The women wear the usual long blue robe and girdle, but over this is a curiously worked short jacket, almost a Zouave, whilst the chemisette is one mass of colored needlework, like cross-stitch. The women work it themselves. Our man's little child-wife, only fifteen years old, is an adept to it. But the headdress is the chief characteristic. The "tarboosh" is covered with cross-stitch to which are sewn, each one separately, numbers of silver coins according to the owner's wealth. The rich ones have to pay the penalty of being rich, for the weight of the "tarboosh" becomes enormous. It is shaped like a sun bonnet, higher behind than in front, so that when the white veil is added, the head has a most peculiar shape. The sleeves are loose, wide and open; when busy, the wearers tie them up behind their necks. They are often bare-armed and bare-legged, but never bare-headed. The man and women (she is fifteen), who act as our servants, dress in this way. They live in the lower part of our cottage, while we climb a stair and emerge on to a stone platform, opening on to which are three doors. The first opens into a tiny place into a tiny place with a stone ledge all the way round for shelf and table. Here we keep saddles, iron, bacon, pots and pans, and here our general factotum squats in solitary state washing up, which, with making a charcoal fire and boiling our kettle twice a day, is almost his only regular work. Next to our pantry is the dining room, long and low, with vaulted roof and broad window seats. The former keeps the rooms marvellously cool, at 80 degrees, while in Damascus it has this year been over 100 degrees. A piece of matting in the centre of the room, a table, a cupboard and three chairs comprise the furniture; but in various recesses we have trailing green plants. We seldom sit there except for meals, so we keep the table partially laid, looking quite tempting with its array of fresh fruit and the picturesque stone water-bottle. Grapes, peaches, apples, melons and figs are what we get just now; tomatoes grow in the garden and there is plenty of goats' milk. The Latin fathers keep cows sufficient to supply themselves with milk, but no one else in Bethlehem indulges in such a luxury. From our windows we look out on the back of the old church, near which two venerable cypresses darkly wave. Away to the N. E. we see the hills which separate us from Jerusalem, and further to the E. the Mountains of Moab, and the "Shepherd's Plain." The Moab Mountains are wonderful, grand, distant and mysterious; they seem to have a beckoning power. They have been hazy ever since we came, dimly grouped at sunset by a crimson glow which seems to steal in under the mist veil. Between us and them there is a circle of low, swelling hills, and beyond these lies the Dead Sea. Being outside the town we can only see it from one side; it is being steadily added to, though I do not know what sort of inhabitants are preparing for the number of half-built houses, far too grand for Bethlehemites. Stone is plentiful, and there is a fair water supply, part of it brought from Solomon's Pool, and part drawn up from the many wells. The school is three minutes walk down-hill from our house.

About 3 P. M., we mounted and set off for the famous Frank Mountain, thought to be ancient Herodium. It stands curiously alone, in shape something like Tabor, but unwooded—a sort of sugared plum-pudding. On the summit are ruins of amphitheatre form, with one or two curious little underground chambers, beautifully roofed. For a long time it was supposed that Herod was buried there, but lately his sarcophagus has been discovered near Jerusalem. The view from the summit is beautiful. the Dead Sea lies stretched out in lonely silence, the mountains of Moab rise grand and majestic, appallingly near when one realizes how long it takes to reach them. In the N. W. the mountains rise and fall in gentle undulations, culminating where Bethlehem lies nestled in a cosy nook, partly on and partly between two protecting shoulders.

A VISIT TO JERUSALEM.

Under the guidance of Cowan we were piloted through the busy, picturesque street, arched and angled in every imaginable fashion, out through the beautiful, pinnacled Damascus Gate to the spot outside the walls where a low doorway had been cut in the rock foundation leading into the famous quarries under the city. This is where Solomon found materials for the Temple, when the stones were hewn and prepared without any sound of axe, or tool, reaching the ears of those above. And one understands it all after plunging into these vast depths of utter silence where the very walls and roof are just as the masons left them bearing plain marks of the exact shape and size of many of the stones cut from them. Each block was shaped before being taken from its place, and here and there one has been left unfinished; some in the course of time have loosened themselves and fallen. In one of the chambers is a mysterious little spring, near which we wrote our names on the soft, white rock. The water is salt. In another place we stood on the brink of a dark, deep chasm down which one awful day a traveler fell and was found dead by one of the guides who knew the intricacies of the winding passages and caverns. The drip, drip of water was distinctly audible, but that and our own subdued tones were the only sounds that broke the intense subterranean stillness. Not even a bat flew out from the shrouded walls and our candles failed to throw a gleam of light on more than our own figures. We broke off specimens of the soft rock, and on returning to the entrance we were met by a rush of such hot outside air that we felt faint and giddy.

A VISIT TO RACHEL'S TOMB,

at the cross-roads between Hebron, Bethlehem and Jerusalem. Last week it was the gathering of the Jews for four days, a custom of theirs at the close of each Jewish year. Consequently the tomb was open, and when we entered I was reminded of a miniature Wailing Place. Men, women and children were there, reading their appointed portion, weeping, kissing the walls. The actual tomb is in the centre of the chamber; it was thus built over some 40 years ago, and permission was only given on condition that one end of the erection should be a small mosque. This explains the dome always seen on pictures of Rachel's tomb.

The other day we took a long ride to the top of a hill west of Bethlehem, from which there is a view of the Mediterranean. It seemed incredible at such a distance, but, fortunately, the day was clear, and when we had reached the summit of the hill, sure enough there—far away up in the sky as it seemed—something was gleaming in the sunlight, and by degrees our eyes became accustomed to the line of coast limiting the plains in which Jaffa and Gaza lie, in the distance to the right some white buildings marked Bethel, Ramallah, and Beereth; the rest of the panorama was an ocean of hill-waves, over the nearest of which lay our way home.—Miss Saunby-Smith of Dawsons in Jewish Herald.

Announcement.

It becomes our pleasant duty to announce our annual meeting. The beautiful natural park at Cambridge, Nebraska, has been selected again as the place and the time Sept. 14 to 24, 1894.

As we look back over the pleasant gatherings we have had at this season of the year, we wonder if this will not be the best we have ever had, we trust it will. In order to make it so we earnestly request every church in the state to send at least one or more delegates, and as many isolated brethren as can possibly do so come. We want you to see for yourselves just what we are doing and assist in devising ways and means for future work.

Bring your tents, camping outfit, ten day's rations and your hearts full of love for the Master, and enjoy such a love feast with the brethren as you have never done before. Elder A. J. Eychaner of Iowa, who undoubtedly is the best worker and as able a preacher as there is within our ranks, has signified his intentions to be at this meeting. Those who cannot come send us letters of encouragement. Any further information can be had by addressing.

J. J. CADY, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Indiana will be held at Argos, Ind., commencing Thursday evening, Sept., 6, 1894, and continuing over the following Sunday.

The churches are especially requested to send in delegates, and all lovers of the truth are cordially invited to come and enjoy a good meeting.

J. F. WAGONER, Pres.
A. C. ROBERTS, Sec.

The annual conference of the Church of God, known as the Northern Nebraska, and Southern Dakota Conference, will be held two miles south-east of Fairfax, South Dakota. This meeting will begin Friday night, Sept. 7th, 1894, and will continue as long as to be found of interest in the Master's cause. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can bring tents and come prepared to camp the brethren at Fairfax and vicinity are ready to do all they can to make it pleasant for all the brethren that may come from abroad. Brethren, don't forget this meeting as we want your help, as we are just opening up a new field of labor in South Dakota. So, let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master's cause, for the condition of the world indicates his coming is very near at hand.

WM. H. DESSON, Sec'y.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

PRESENTS FOR FRIENDS.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of 8-page tract; and one of "Seeking and Finding," all for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth. Send to Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va.

Rates to Pittsburgh.

For six days from September 5th to 10th, inclusive—excursion tickets to Pittsburgh account the G. A. R. National Encampment will be sold at low rates from every ticket station on the Pennsylvania Lines. Tickets will be good returning until September 25th, inclusive, and one stop over will be allowed on the return portion. These lines connect the principal cities and towns of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Indiana with Pittsburgh, and are the only ones over which through trains from all portions of those States arrive at Union Station convenient to headquarters, hotels and boarding houses.

They are the main avenues of travel to Pittsburgh from the great Lakes on the north, the Mississippi on the west, and the Ohio river on the south. Connecting lines will sell excursion tickets over these direct routes. Any desired information as to rates and time of trains over the Pennsylvania lines will be cheerfully furnished by J. R. Hanes Agent, Plymouth, Ind.

☞ It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

To Michigan Pointsare Reduced Rates via Pennsylvania Lines.

On July 10th, August 14th and September 18th, Home-seekers' Excursion Tickets to points in the State of Michigan will be sold at reduced rates via Pennsylvania Lines, good returning twenty days from date of sale. For details please apply to nearest Pennsylvania Line Ticket Agent.

For information apply to the best hunting and fishing resorts reached by the Wisconsin Central Lines.

Poetry.

"Who shall roll away the Stone.

What poor weeping ones were saying
Eighteen hundred years ago,
When the waste work Faith is tracing,
May in fear and heart of woe
Looking at our trouble, lying
In the dark and cold unknown,
We too often ask with sighing
"Who shall roll away the stone?"

Thus with care our spirits are filled,
When they fail At first care to flee,
And, in joyous song unfaltering,
Rise in rapture, Lord, to thee;
For before the day was ended,
Oft we had with joy to own,
Angels have from heaven descended,
And have rolled away the stone.

Many a storm-cloud overspreading o'er us
Never passes on in its rain;
Many a grief we see before us
Never comes to give us pain
Oft those in the feared to-morrow
Vanishing comes, the cloud has flown
Ask not then in foolish sorrow,
"Who shall roll away the stone?"

Burden not thy soul with sadness,
Make the wiser, better, choice;
Tread the path of life with gladness,
Quit doubt thee, man, rejoice;
In to-day's bright sunshine basking,
Leave to-morrow's care alone;
Spoil not present joy by asking,
"Who shall roll away the stone?"

Christ's Ministry.—How Long?

A sister writes me for some information on this point, as she is somewhat puzzled by the chronological dates given in our Bibles, as to the time of our Savior's baptism and death, and the generally accepted statement that the length of his ministry was three years and six months. She asks me to reply through THE RESTITUTION.

In reply I cannot promise my sister to definitely settle chronological data. I can examine dates given by others, and perhaps be able to show errors in them, and yet be unable for want of accurate knowledge to supply what is wanting. I am aware that there is something wrong about the dates in the margin of our Bibles, giving the time of the baptism, ministry and death of Jesus. So far as I am able to judge, the facts recorded by the evangelists do not warrant the dates given, nor the statements of many who have written upon the subject.

1. Let us examine the chronology given. In the margin of Matt. iii. we have A. D. 29, when "John the Baptist came preaching in the wilderness of Judea, and saying, Repent ye; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Luke iii. has the same date; and informs us that John was the son of Zacharias, (a priest, chap. i. 5,) and "came into all the county about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins," and that he did this "in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Cesar, Pontius Pilate being governor of Judea, and Herod being tetrarch of Galilee, and his brother Philip tetrarch of Iturea and of the region of Trachonitis, and Lysanius the tetrarch of Abilene. Annas and Caiaphas being the high priests." Mark i. and John i. have the same date. Matt. iii. 13; Mark i. 9; Luke iii. 21, record the baptism of Jesus. In the margin A. D. 27 is given as the time when it took place. This is merely a guess, as there is nothing in the text to warrant it. Matthew, Mark, and Luke place the temptation immediately after the baptism. Then a jump is made in the chronology to A. D. 30, given as the time of John's imprisonment, Matt. iv. 12; Mark i. 14, where it is stated that "Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God." Now there is something wrong in the dates here given. If correct, then John's ministry preceded Christ's, and continued for over three years, until Herod cast him into prison. Of Jesus we read that after his temptation he returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee, (Luke iv. 14,) and at Nazareth, in the synagogue, he read Isa. lxi. 1, 2, and applied the prophecy to himself, (verses 18-21.) Surely there cannot be a period of three or four years between his anointing and the beginning of his work. How is this gap to be filled? Why make so long an interval between his baptism and the commencement of his mission? No reply can be given that is reasonable and satisfactory to the Bible student.

2. It is generally understood and believed that our Savior's ministry was about three years and six months, whereas according to the confused dates given in the margin of our Bibles, there is a period of about seven years from the anointing of Jesus to his death, A. D. 27 to A. D. 38. Some writers say that this period covers the last week of the prophetic seventy weeks of Daniel ix. 24, sixty-nine of which ended at the anointing of Jesus, and that the seventieth week of seven years was equally divided between the ministries of John and Jesus. The chronology given seems to favor this theory. This would make the crucifixion terminate the seventieth week. Others say that Messiah was cut off in the midst of that week, of course understanding that verse 27 of that prophecy applies to him. If it be correct, then, three years and a half were left over for the apostles to fill up after the crucifixion. I think the facts related by the evangelists in their histories concerning John and Jesus, are against these chronological theories.

3. It is stated in Luke iii. 23, that at the baptism and anointing of our Savior, he was about thirty years of age. Now John was about six months older than Jesus, and as he was a priest's son, "sent from God," he was also about thirty years old when he began his work. (See Num. iv. 3, 35, 39, 43, 47). John then had been preaching and baptizing six months when Jesus came to him for baptism; and he continued to do so until his imprisonment. Jesus did not wait until John was silenced by Herod, before he commenced his mission. In John i. 29, 36 it is recorded that the Baptist directed the attention of his own disciples to Jesus, saying, "Behold the Lamb of God;" and in the same connection we find that Andrew, and Peter, and Philip, and Nathaniel all recognized Jesus as the Messiah, and became his disciples. Then in John iii. 22-36 the reader will find positive proof that Jesus was in the land of Judea with his disciples, baptizing, before that John was cast into prison. Some persons came to John, saying, "Rabbi, he that was with thee beyond Jordan, to whom thou barest witness, behold, the same baptizeth, and all men come to him." Mark John's reply, (verse 30), "He must increase, but I must decrease." And when Jesus knew that the Pharisees had heard that he "made and baptized more disciples than John, (though Jesus himself baptized not, but his disciples,) he left Judea and departed again into Galilee," John iv. 1-3. How long it was after this to John's death by Herod, I find no means to positively ascertain. It will not do, however, to depend on the date given in the margin opposite to the record of his murder. In Matt. xiv. 3; Mark vi. 17, the time given is A. D. 30, while opposite Luke iii. 1, the 15th year of the reign Tiberius Cesar, when John commenced his mission, we have A. D. 26—a period of some four years for the length of his ministry. As Jesus probably began his mission about six months after John entered upon his work, and the time of his death is marked A. D. 33, we have according to these dates, Jesus and his disciples preaching and baptizing for about three years prior to John's death, from A. D. 30, and three years more afterwards, from A. D. 30 to A. D. 33, giving six years at least as the length of our Savior's ministry. This period is too long for those who contend that it was three years and a half from his baptism to his death, and who claim that he was to be cut off in the midst of the seventieth week of Dan. ix. 24.

4. Unless we can find something more reliable than the chronological dates given in our Bibles, for the beginning and end of Christ's ministry, we cannot possibly determine its length, nor at what age he died. It is claimed by those who say that he was crucified in "the midst of the week," that he attended four passovers. If this can be proved, then his ministry may have been 3½ years long. Upon an examination of the record given by the four sacred historians, I find that three of them—Matthew, Mark, and Luke—only mention one passover that he attended, the one of which he said to his twelve apostles, "With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer," Luke xxii. 15. In the record given by John there are three passovers mentioned. The one referred to in chapters xii. 1; xiii. 1; xviii. 28, 39, is the same as the one mentioned by the other historians, and occurring at the crucifixion. It is highly probable that the passover recorded in John ii. 13, is also the same. We read that at this passover Jesus showed his authority, by driving out of the temple the merchants and money-changers, etc. This circumstance is related by other historians as connected with the last visit of Jesus to Jerusalem, and only a few days before he suffered. See Matt. xxi. 12; Mark xi. 15; Luke xix. 45. If the passover mentioned by John as connected with this event is not the one occurring at the crucifixion, then Jesus drove out these defilers of the temple twice, viz., at the beginning and end of his mission, which is scarcely probable, although our chronology gives A. D. 30 for the first, and A. D. 33 for the second. In John vi. 4 we read—"And the passover, a feast of the Jews, was nigh." The marginal date given is A. D. 32—a mere guess—as the text affords no proof. All the evidence we have is, that it was at the time when Jesus performed that wonderful creative miracle of feeding 5000 men, besides women and children, with five loaves and two fishes. This was done near the lake of Tiberius, where the multitude of people were probably on their way to keep the feast at Jerusalem. Nothing is stated as to whether Jesus went up or not at that time. There are two other feasts mentioned by John which Jesus did attend. That of John v. 1 is simply called "a feast of the Jews." That of John vii. 2 was "the feast of tabernacles." John was writing for the information of those not familiar with Jewish customs, and hence often introduces explanatory words and phrases. I may also say for the information of the reader, that there were three feasts to be kept by the Jews at Jerusalem, according to the law. See Deut. xvi. 16, 17; Lev. xxiii. 5, 12, 35. Jesus being a Jew kept the law, and went up to Jerusalem like others, to keep the feasts enjoined by the law of the Lord. These feasts were,—the feast of the passover, the feast of pentecost, and the feast of tabernacles. From a fair and impartial examination of the evidence afforded by the four histories of the ministry of Jesus, I find no positive proof that he attended more than one passover, and that was the one he kept with his disciples, when he as our paschal lamb was slain for us. John vii. 2, 14, 37, proves that Jesus attended "the feast of tabernacles;" and John v. 1 states that he went up to Jerusalem to keep another feast, but what kind is not mentioned. To say it was the passover, or feast of unleavened bread, is an assumption; it might have been the feast of pentecost; at any rate the record does not inform the reader what feast it was.

In conclusion, I find from careful examination of the histories of our Savior's ministry, that the chronological dates given in our Bibles are not to be relied upon; that there is no evidence that a period of about seven years elapsed between Christ's baptism and death; or that he did not begin his work for about three years after he was sent at his anointing; or that his ministry lasted three years and six months; or that he attended four passovers. Evidently there is a theory to serve by those who contend for these dates, and a strenuous effort is made to make the chronology support the theory. If the baptism of Jesus was A. D. 27, his crucifixion did not take place A. D. 33, as our marginal dates give the time. Even if it was correct that his ministry was 3½ years long—that he attended four passovers—and was cut off in "the midst of the week," as some claim, and which the facts do not confirm, then his death occurred some three years earlier, or about A. D. 30. But as there is no proof in the record given that Jesus, during his ministry, attended more than two passovers, and probably not more than one, it would shorten the time still more perhaps about two years—making A. D. 28 or 29 as the true date of the crucifixion. Hoping that these few remarks may assist our sister, and the reader, in the examination of the record on this subject, I leave it for their consideration.

B. WILSON.

Acts of the Apostles. Chap. 10.

1. Now there was a certain man of prominence, Kornelios by name, a centurion of the cohort called the Italian.

2. Reverent and one who feared God along with all his household, and who was doing many acts of mercy to the laity (or royal-people) and who was beseeching God constantly:

3. He saw in a vision plainly, about ninth hour of the day, as it were an angel of God come in unto him and say to him, Kornelios,

4. And regarding him attentively and becoming afraid he said, What is it, lord? And he said unto him, Thy votive-prayers and thy acts of mercy have gone up for a reminder before God.

5. And now send men to Joppe and summon a certain Simon who is also called Petros:

6. He is being entertained as a guest with one Simon a tanner, whose house is by the sea-side.

7. And when the angel who was talking to him had departed, calling two of his house-servants and a truly-reverent soldier of those devoted to him;

8. And telling them all the circumstances, he sent them to Joppe.

9. And on the morrow as they were journeying along and drawing nigh to the city, Petros went up to the house-top to engage in votive-prayer about the sixth hour,

10. And he became hungry and wanted to eat (lit. taste). And while they were getting it ready an ecstasy occurred to him,

11. And he beholdeth the heavens opened and an instrumentality as it were a great fine-linen cloth being let down with four divisions (or groups, these groups being the commonly accepted divisions of animate life, from which food is taken) upon the earth;

12. And in which were all the fourfooted (domestic and wild-animals) and creeping things (including fish) and flying-things of the heavens.

13. And then occurred a voice unto him, Arise Petros, sacrifice and eat

14. But Petros said, By no means, Lord, because I have never yet eaten anything common and unclean.

15. And a voice again a second time said unto him, What God hath cleansed do not thou consider common,

16. And this occurred for the third time; and straightway the instrumentality was taken up into the heavens.

17. And while Petros was at a loss to know in himself what the vision he had seen might be, lo even the two men sent by Kornelios and who had enquired along for the house of Simon stood at the gateway;

18. And calling out inquired if Simon, the one also called Petros was being entertained as a guest there.

19. And while Petros was earnestly thinking about the vision, the spirit said to him, Lo, men who are seeking thee.

20. Moreover arise and go down and go thy way along with them without any hesitation, because I have sent them.

21. And Petros went down unto the men and said, Lo, I am he whom ye seek, what is the reason ye are here?

22. And they said, Kornelios a centurion, a justified man, and one who feareth God and is testified to by all the nation of the Joudaians, was oracularly told by a sanctified angel to send for thee to come to his house and hear oracular words from thee.

23. Then inviting them in he entertained them;

24. And on the morrow he arose and went out along with them, and some of the brethren from Joppe went along with him, and on the morrow they entered into Kaisareis, and Kornelios was expecting them, having invited together his relatives and nearest friends.

25. And it came to pass when Petros had entered in Kornelios met him and falling down at his feet did him homage.

26. But Petros raised him up saying, Arise, I also am a man,

27. And in company with him he entered in and findeth many who had come together;

28. And said unto them, ye know well how unlawful it is for a Joudaian man to cleave to or come in unto one of another tribe; and God hath shown me that I am not to call any one common or unclean.

29. Therefore and without any opposing talk have I come when sent for. I inquire then for what word ye sent for me.

30. And Kornelios said, From fourth day unto this hour have I been offering votive-prayer during the ninth hour in my house; and lo, a man stood before me in shining apparel,

31. And saith, Kornelios, thy votive-prayer hath been heard, and thy acts of mercy have been remembered in the sight of God.

32. Send therefore to Joppe and summon Simon who is also called Petros. He is being entertained as a guest in the household of Simon a tanner by the seaside.

33. Straightway then I sent for thee, and thou hast done well in having come. Now then we are all in the presence of God to hear all the things enjoined on thee by the Lord.

34. And Petros opened his mouth and said, Of a truth I apprehend that God is not a face-taker;

35. But in every nation the one who feareth him and working righteousness is acceptable to him.

36. The one who announceth peace through Jesus Christ, the word namely, which he hath sent unto the sons of Israel, this one is Lord of all.

37. Ye yourselves know the oracular-word that came to pass throughout all Joudaia, beginning from Galilaia after the baptismal rite which John heralded;

38. (Ye know—understood) of Jesous from Nazaretis, how God anointed him with sanctified spirit (no article) and ability and how he went through doing works of beneficence and healing all those who were oppressed by the Diabolos, because God was with him;

39. And that we are witnesses in respect to all that he did (not eye-witnesses here) both in the province of the Joudaians and in Hierosolem; he whom they took and hung upon a tree;

40. Him God awoke on the third day and gave to become manifest,

41. Not to all the laity (or royal-people) but to witnesses chosen by God, namely to us, who ate and drank along with him after that he had raised him from among the dead;

42. And he enjained on us to herald to the laity and go through the testimony, that he is the one defined by God to be judge of living and dead;

43. To this one all the prophets testify that through his name every one who putteth faith in him receiveth remission of sins.

44. While Petros was yet talking these oracular words, the sanctified spirit fell upon all those listening to the Word.

45. And the faithful of the circumcision, as many as had come along with Petros, were astounded that also upon the nations the giving of the sanctified spirit was being poured out.

46. For they heard them talking with tongues and magnifying God. Then Petros answered and said,

47. Can any one forbid the water that these be not baptized who have received the Sanctified Spirit as we also have?

48. And he directed them to be baptized in the name of Jesous Christ. Then they requested him to remain some days.

COMMENT.

"Laity" instead of "people" generally R. V.

"Was beseeching" instead of "prayed" R. V.

"Plainly" instead of "openly" R. V.

The "as it were" modifies "an angel, etc." instead of "about ninth hour," V. V.

"Thy votive-prayers" instead of "thy prayers" R. V.

"Entertained as a guest" instead of "lodgeth" R. V. He was not boarding.

Petros was not Simon's "surname" but the new name given him by Christ.

"Devoteel to him" instead of "waited on him continually" R. V.

"And telling them all the circumstances" instead of "and rehearsed all things into them" R. V. I don't suppose he rehearsed all the history of the race up to that time.

"To engage in votive-prayer" instead of "to pray" R. V.

"An ecstasy occurred to him" instead of "he fell into a trance" R. V. This is very misleading. It was no ordinary trance but the usual vision-ecstasy.

"Instrumentality" instead of "vessel" R. V.

"A great fine-linen cloth" such as table-spreads were then made of as they are now instead of "sheet" R. V.

"Let down with divisions" or groups or courses instead of by "four corners" R. V.

"Sacrifice" instead of "kill" R. V. Those who observed the Levitical law in those days were not allowed to kill or slaughter animals; but must observe the form of sacrificing them.

"A sanctified angel" instead of "a holy angel" R. V.

"Oracular words" instead of "words" merely R. V.

"Nearest" instead of "near" friends R. V.

"How unlawful" instead of "how that it is unlawful" R. V.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

"For what word" instead of "with what intent" R. V.

From fourth day until this hour I have been offering votive-prayer during ninth hour" instead of "Four days ago until this hour I was keeping the ninth hour of prayer" R. V. What does this statement mean? Read carefully the 30-37-38 and 39th verses and compare with the C. V. and R. V. and then ponder on the difference of thought.

"Awoke" instead of "raised" in the 40th verse R. V.

"After that he (God) had raised him from the dead" instead of "after he (Christ) rose from the dead" R. V.—that is of course without any help—of himself.

"Laity" instead of "people" R. V.

"Receiveth" not "shall receive" R. V.

"Oracular words" instead of "words" R. V. There are words and words with God as well as men.

"The faithful" instead of "they which believed" R. V.

"Giving" instead of "gift" R. V.

The Power Behind the Life.

To the casual observer of men they appear to be very much alike. That in general they act very much alike, are prompted by similar motives for the accomplishment of similar ends. But a closer scrutiny—a more careful examination of motives prompting action and of the ends sought by the effect put forth, develops a wide difference in the ruling influences, back of all the outward activities. Here is where men often mistake and greatly misjudge each other. The Apostle Paul exclaims, "It is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or man's judgment."

This same apostle was a grand illustration of the idea we would bring out. In early life, self-righteous, ambitious, a violent, maddened persecutor. In after life, a zealous disciple of him whom he had despised, counting all things but loss for Christ Jesus. Outwardly the same energetic man, but in power unseen back of life, oh, what a change! In one case moved by the spirit of persecution and death; in the other, obedient to the heavenly vision.

See the same difference in men in the busy round of daily life as you meet them; apparently much the same—yet how different! One devising schemes of self-indulgence self-aggrandizement, mischief, iniquity and wrong; the other, plans of benevolence, deeds of pity and compassion, love to God, and love to man—such are the forces back of visible life, often unrecognized, despised and rejected; but it is there silently working out unnumbered blessings in the dark ways of sin and sorrow.—Religious Herald.

A Word for the Boys.

If we are to have drunkards in the future, some of them are to come from the boys who will read this. Well, here is a plan that is just as sure to save from such a fate as the sun is to rise tomorrow. It never failed, it never will fail, and it is worth knowing. Never touch liquor in any form. This is the plan, and it is worth putting into practice. You don't drink now, and it seems as if you never would, but your temptation will come, and it will probably come in this way:

You will find yourself some time with a number of companions, and they will have a bottle of wine on the table. They will drink, and offer it to you. They will think it a manly practice, and very likely they will look upon you as a milksop if you don't indulge with them. Then what will you do? Will you say, "No, no, none of that stuff for me!" or will you take the glass, with your common sense protesting and your conscience making the whole draught bitter, and then go off with a hot head and skulking soul that at once begins to make apologies for itself, and will keep doing so all its life? Boys do not become drunkards.

LET us be men with men, always, and always children before God.

IF you are pleasing God, brother, you know it, and should not make yourself miserable because some men are displeased.

HOWEVER strong the believer may feel, he is not strong enough to meet the enemies of God and Truth with anything less than a full suit of the armor of God.

AT the institution of the passover, Jehovah, in giving instructions to Moses, told him, that after they were settled in the land which he would give them, and the children should enquire, "What they meant by this service" they should say: "This is the Lord's passover, who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt" etc., thus early making them acquainted with the history of God's dealings with them, and teaching them to observe all his ordinances. From this it would appear that it would be well for parents not to hush down their little prattlers when they make curious inquiries about the emblems of Christ's broken body and shed blood, but treat them as if they were something that concerned them also, and should at no distant day interest them—that Christ our passover has suffered for us.

Josephiteism. No. 7.

In further setting forth what we think of the Josephiteism we remind our readers of the desperate attempts made to discredit the first chapters of Matthew and Luke. It is not quite clear to us why they are so anxious to be rid of these chapters, if, as they affect to believe, they both give the genealogy of Joseph. They should not recklessly throw away the testimony on which their doctrine is founded. They tell us Joseph is the father of Jesus. That is their gospel—all their salvation and joy. They can fellowship none who do not believe that, and they show its importance, in their estimation, in that way. That is consistent. But of course if that idea be not true their faith and hope are baseless, and to be baseless is to be worthless.

Let them throw away these chapters if they want to,—and having done that, ask them to prove Joseph, and therefore Jesus, were sons of David without these chapters. If the Ebionites did not have the first chapters of Matthew and rejected Mark and Luke and John altogether, how did they know any thing about Joseph or his son Jesus either? Some of our modern Josephites want to prove that Joseph was the father of Jesus by John i, 45, but they should scorn the testimony of a man who was capable of writing what they hold to be a lie, viz:—that Jesus said "God so loved the world that he gave his ONLY BEGOTTEN SON, that whosoever believeth on him might not perish, but have everlasting life." Of course if he would record one deliberate lie they can found no doctrine on anything he would write;—he could not be trusted at all.

We now notice more of the reasons given for rejecting the first chapters of Matthew. It is said to be an evidence of forgery when Matthew, a Hebraw, writing to Hebrews, explains the word Immanuel to mean "God with us." Hard pressed for an argument, surely, because our gospel comes to us from the Greek, and hence the necessity of explaining a Hebrew name in it.

It is next objected that the second chapter commences abruptly with the statement that Jesus was born in Bethlehem, so that we are "naturally and necessarily left to conclude that this was the usual place of residence of his parents." There is no necessity about it. What reasoning! A child is born in Bethlehem, therefore his parents usually resided there! Think of a saving truth being proved in that way!

Then it is thought probable that Matthew would not have written "Bethlehem of Judea, because he was a native of Judea, writing to inhabitants of Judea." He does not seem to know there was a town named Bethlehem in Galilee, near Nazareth, which made it necessary to specify which place of that name was referred to.

It is next claimed "that there is a gross chronological error" in the statement that Jesus was born in the days of Herod the King. This is a very grave charge indeed, and it become a positive duty to examine the ground of it. If it be well grounded we ought to know it at once; there is no use in believing a thing that is not so. We think every reasonable and honest person will agree to these two propositions. 1. That it is necessary to produce history which conflicts with Luke's statement; and 2nd. to prove that that history is accurate before this serious charge can be sustained. Have Josephites done this? Have they verified the history relied upon? No! It suits them to take things for granted, when they think them opposed to gospel history. If Josephus, the Jew differs from Luke the Christian, and inspired historian, they take Josephus for it because it suits them, and verify nothing.

Luke says the taxing or enrolment affected the whole world; and Josephites reject this because they say "no Jewish, Greek, or Roman historian alluded to the extraordinary taxing in the days of Herod the Great: and that it would be morally impossible for it to escape mention if it affected the whole empire." But bear in mind (1) that an assessment was made every fifth year. (2) Augustus Cesar was the first to extend this to the provinces. (3) Josephus does say that "the whole nation was called upon to swear allegiance to Augustus and the king in the days of Herod. (4) Historians record only what seems important to them; the omission of what to them was not important is no proof at all that it never happened. (5) Luke, one of the most painstaking and faithful historians that ever wrote did mention it, and we ask why he is discredited? The answer is, because he opposes the Josephiteism. (6) Of Luke it might be said he was on the spot, and wrote with exactness: Josephus wrote later, and less explicitly, but certainly confirmed Luke.

We think our readers will want stronger and better testimony than any we have found yet, before they discredit Matthew and Luke.

Josephites say "Cyrenius was not made governor of Syria till ten or twelve years after the death of Herod; how then, can this taxing have been made at the time of the birth of Jesus, and while Herod lived?"

This is another very serious charge, and it remains to be seen, whether it has a good foundation? The first step of an earnest searcher for truth, usually, in a case like this, is to see if the passage be correctly translated, and if it will bear any other construction. Some reason our author to take it for granted that the common translation is correct. Does he not know that Dr. Lardner speaks of quite a number of translations by learned men that, possibly, might help him out of the difficulty, if he wants to be? Ah, yes; he admits this, but carefully avoids them;—does not quote them to his readers for fear of what might happen.

Lardner says, "The words of the original have in them an uncommon ambiguity, and he translates them as follows: "This was the first enrolment of Cyrenius, governor of Syria. This makes it appear that Cyrenius made two enrolments,—he was governor of Syria when Luke wrote, but it does not say he was governor of Syria when the first enrolment was made.

Archbishop Newcombe's translation reads in this way: "This was the first enrolment of Cyrenius, afterwards governor of Syria." This is decidedly helpful and comforting to one who believes in the Bible and its Gods and when it is known that Josephus shows that Herod was under a cloud about the time Jesus was born, and that Augustus had said: "that whereas of old he had used him as his friend, he should now use him as a subject," the reader will see that this indicates that the execution of the decree had for some reason been suspended until the time stated by Luke. We do not presume to say which, if either, of these translations is correct, but we have shown up scholars who strive to find out how to harmonize the Scriptures, on the one hand, and on the other, a class striving to array them against themselves, and that presumes to say what Luke ought to have written,—and "ought to have introduced Elizabeth again," etc., etc.

Another chronological difficulty is claimed in the third chapter of Luke, and the first verse. Our scholar says, "If then, our Lord was born four years before the death of Herod he must have been thirty-six years of age instead of beginning to be about thirty." What proof is offered that he was born four years before Herod's death? This is what is offered to prove it: —"According to the very lowest computation [of men, of course] from these chapters, our Savior must have been between two and three years of age when Herod died." Here the computations of men are taken in preference to the plain statements of fact by Luke.

It is not true that between two and three years is the lowest computation. Lardner's computation is "that Jesus was about a year and seven months old;" and besides this, the assumption of four years is made to increase the difficulty. True, an attempt is made to prove it. It is said that "Philip became tetrarch of Trachonitis on the death of Herod, and reigned thirty-seven years, dying in the twentieth year of Tiberius, so that in the fifteenth year of Tiberius Philip had reigned thirty-two years."

But Lardner, quoting from Clement of Alexandria, shows there were two different computations of the reign of Tiberius in his day, owing to the fact that Tiberius had been for some time associated with Augustus in the empire: for after stating that Augustus reigned forty-three years, and Tiberius twenty-two, he adds, "But some reckon Augustus reigned forty-six years and four months, and Tiberius twenty-six years and six months, one being the length of the sole reign, and the other the sole and joint reign combined; the difference of eight years in the two totals representing four years of joint reign counted to each ruler. If Josephus used one computation and Luke the other there would be a deduction of four years from Philip's reign at the fifteenth of Tiberius, making it the twenty-eighth instead of the thirty-second. Add to this the year and a half which Jesus lived before the death of Herod and we have twenty-nine and a half years, and we see the Grand Old Book is vindicated, "Jesus began (to teach) when he was about thirty years of age, and Matthew was correct in saying he was born in the days of Herod.

It might not be out of place here, to say that Josephus in Book 14, chap. 9 says Herod was only fifteen years of age when made governor of Galilee: and as being about seventy years of age (book 17, c. 6) when attacked with his last illness, although only about forty-four years intervened,—a difference of ten or eleven years. Surely we cannot afford to set the gospels aside on the testimony of one capable of such a mistake as this. But such mistakes often occur in the best histories, and, as Lardner remarks, "It is no disparagement to the sacred historians that we are sometimes at a loss to settle precisely the very year of some events they have related."

The sum of the reasons for rejecting the account of the nativity is this:—A few people did not believe it in the early days of Christianity; and there are some things which Josephites cannot explain in harmony with other histories; and some things that appear to them very improbable. And the fact that not a particle of documentary evidence against it is produced, is pretty good evidence that they had none to offer: and the alledged faulty chronology of Luke is only discredited on the equally faulty authority of other historians.

In giving our opinion of the Josephiteism we have treated it throughout as skepticism. Those who claim it a Bible doctrine are extremely verdant. If they are earnest, and faithful and intelligent enough, in defence of their opinions, they will ultimately graduate as full fledged rejectors of the New Testament, and have little regard for the Old. They will follow the lead of those who begin the gospel with Abraham—2000 years too late, and those who think that all the saved will have saved themselves, that is, paid an equivalent for their salvation by good deeds. That the sacrifice of Christ and the doctrine of the atonement have nothing to do with our salvation—this is where they must land if they follow on to know the Josephiteism as it is, and grow in the favor of Josephites. If they are not verdant, they are politic, and craftily trying to entrap those who have a profound regard for the Scriptures.

In closing this hasty glance at one of the Master-pieces of Satan in these last days, we must say that we are more profoundly impressed than ever before, with the utter impossibility of a son begotten of Joseph, or any other man, ever sitting upon, and ruling the world from David's throne, forever. God said, "I will be his Father." He also said, "I will raise unto David a Righteous Branch," and named him "Yahveh our Righteousness." What! Righteous for us? Righteous instead of us? Oh, no; righteous here by,—fulfil all the requirements of the law, and so be competent to confirm the life-giving covenant, and not see corruption—be raised to life, and become the Prince of life to all who would accept him;—be the grand repository of life for all the faithful.

Josephites utterly fail to account for that ONE unique, godlike, divine character developed in human nature, who spake as never man spake before or since, because they reject the truth that he was made of dust organized as woman, and not mentally and morally warped by a human father. HOW then, did God raise a Righteous Branch to David? David was a sinner, Solomon was a sinner, Nathan was a sinner, Joseph and Jacob and Heli and Mary were all sinners; how, we ask again, did he do it? Did he take the biassed organism begotten by Joseph and use him as a live machine, not allowing him to sin? Would he have been a righteous Branch that way? Did he do this? Or, did he cause the seed of Joseph to be miraculously incapable of sin? No! He said, "I will be his Father!" and more than that the Spirit in the Psalmist says of the body prepared, "Thou art he who took me out of my mother's womb: thou didst make me to hope when I was upon my mother's breast [no wonder he could talk to the doctors when twelve years old] thou art my God since my mother bare me," Marg. R. V. Ps. xxii. 9, 10. It cannot be denied that this is an exceptional case. This evenly poised organism was just the soil for the germination of divine ideas, and disposition, and the grand result was—he knew no sin and the unique man is accounted for—thank God. He perfectly obeyed the law that shovels us all into the pit, and then he triumphed over death, and made a way for us to follow him;—became the embodiment of Jehovah's purpose, and the object of faith, the only means of approach to him,—the only name by which we can be saved.

It is our earnest prayer that both writer and readers may cherish more and more that golden text which says, "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him might not perish, but have everlasting life;" and, while life lasts go daily to Calvary by faith, where redeeming love concentrates, so that the love of the world may die within us under the power of this hallowed affection; and that when he comes again as Jehovah's King and conquering hero it may be ours to follow the Lamb wherever he goes, have his name in our foreheads, and be led by him to living fountains of water—and sorrow and suffer no more.

A Symposium of Faith.

Under the above heading the Conference Board of the Church of God in Iowa, sent out about one hundred circular letters, and have received the following replies:

SERIES 8.

I believe in the existence of one God, the Creator and Preserver of all things.

I believe in one Lord Jesus Christ who was begotten by the Holy Spirit, born of the Virgin Mary, went about doing good, was crucified and gave up his life in order that salvation might be brought within reach of all, was raised from the dead, ascended into heaven and will come back to earth again to raise the dead, change the righteous living, and reward all according to their works. I believe in the Holy Spirit that emanates from God by which he not only created the universe but now pervades the same, and by it is not far from every one of us, gives strength to and answers the prayers of his children when consistent with his will.

I believe the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments are able to make us wise unto salvation and all that would be truly taught of God must come to its pages.

I hold that a belief of the gospel of the kingdom of God, repentance of and forsaking all past sins and then obeying from the heart that form of doctrine that has been delivered to us in God's Word, by being immersed into the Christ is required of all in order to a forgiveness of sins, and then a holy life will insure eternal salvation to all who thus seek for it.

I believe immortality is conditional and will not be conferred upon any except such as are found worthy when the Lord comes.

I believe that all the finally impenitent will be punished with complete extinction of their animated being.

ELIAS SAPLE.

I believe in One God, a holy spiritual, form, or body.

That Jesus Christ is the only begotten Son of God.

That he shed his blood, and died a literal, cruel death on the cross, to purchase eternal life for all who believe his gospel and "seek for immortality by a patient continuance in well-doing."

I believe the "gospel of salvation and the gospel of the kingdom." The original for gospel is "Evangelion," which means a "good message," (as angel means a messenger.) One definition in the Greek Lexicon is, a "joyful message," brought by Jesus Christ and all the holy prophets and apostles of a literal future salvation, and literal kingdom of the Messiah, and the "Blessed and Holy," who will have part in the first resurrection and reign over the tribes of Israel and a remnant of the nations, in the near age to come of 1000 years.

The territory of the promised kingdom will be the holy land assured to the patriarchs for an everlasting possession. The rulers will be the Lord Jesus, at his second advent and his immortal saints. The subjects of the kingdom will be all those who submit to him and to the "law that shall go forth from Zion," when Jesus shall take the throne of his father David, and reign over the house of Jacob and be King over all the earth in that day. The subjects of the kingdom will be mortal, yet far happier than in this age. They shall not build, and another inhabit; they shall not plant and another eat; for as the days of a tree are the days of my people, and mine elect shall long enjoy the work of their hands. They shall not labor in vain, nor bring forth (children) for trouble; for they are the seed of the blessed of the Lord, and their off-spring with them. The wolf and the lamb shall feed together, etc. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, saith the Lord." Isa. lxv. 23. "There will be peace on earth and good will among men."

After that age, the rest of the dead will live again when a large number of those who have died during the one thousand years will be found in the Book of Life, who will live and reign with those saved at the second advent, forever and ever. Rev. xxii. 5, 20-12, in the new earth and new Jerusalem.

The end of the world is coming." And when these things begin to come to pass, then Jesus says, "look up and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh. So likewise, when these things come to pass know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." Then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud, with power and great glory. The Savior has forewarned us and shown us now to be ready for that great day. "Take heed to yourselves lest at any time your heart be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, (in the multitude of banquets that the church and world are having) and cares of this life so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth. Watch ye therefore, and pray always that ye may be counted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man." Luke xxi.

Soon we shall begin another one thousand years of the world's history. The six thousand years are nearly finished, and the next one thousand years beginning in about six years, may be the one thousand of millennial reign and rest to the people of God of all ages. We as a people have had to leave friends, and kindred, and churches perhaps for this gospel of salvation, and the kingdom, and we have received manifold more in this time, with some persecution, (but nothing compared with what millions have suffered before us) and we have the golden promise of life everlasting, not at death, but in the age to come, (Aione, to come.)

For over fifty years I have earnestly contended for this faith once delivered to the saints. Thy kingdom come.

E. HOYT.

Announcement.

The Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of God, in Iowa will convene at Glad Brook, at the New Church. This meeting will last four days, commencing Oct. 4th and continuing until Oct. 7th inclusive. All of like precious faith are cordially invited. Brethren, all that possibly can "come." The Glad Brook people have a fine place of worship and extend a hearty invitation to all, and we can be assured of a good meeting. Let us show them our appreciation of their invitation by our presence. Glad Brook is situated at the junction of the Chicago and Northwestern and Chicago and Great Western Railways, 20 miles northeast of Marshalltown, and is very easy of access by rail. All desiring to attend this meeting will please confer with Bro. G. P. or Albert Allard so that arrangements can be made to take care of you. Brethren, let us be up and doing, and make this meeting a memorable one. "The coming of the Lord draweth nigh, are we ready?"

Poetry.

A Petition.

Thou who didst on Calvary
Bow Thy pure head to die,
Hear from the skies Thy dear,
Dear, Redeemer, pity me,
Even me, Lord, even me,
Hear my Savior even me.

Weak, weak and weary,
All Thy cross I fain Thee bear,
Take me to Thy Calvary,
Save me from self-pleasure,
From sin Lord, even me,
Hear me Jesus, even me.

Bound and ever King of Love,
Strife I promise to stay by Thee,
Let me rise at last to Thee,
Free, the glory in Thy sky,
Even me, Lord, even me,
Blessed Jesus, even me.

Yea Man giveth up the Ghost and where is he? Job xiv. 10.

A short time ago I listened to a discourse from the above Scripture by a Baptist minister he said the giving up the ghost was the separation of mind and body, and that Job intended by this question to convey the idea that man was somewhere and conscious. He then endeavored to prove what he called immortality of the soul or the consciousness of man after death. He offered no Scriptural evidence but his proofs were that when an Indian dies his horse, dog, bow, arrows, and provision were buried with him, and the reason for so doing was that the Indian believed that consciousness did not end with death, but in death there was a transition from this world into another where the hunting would be much better than in this. The next evidence was that the Egyptian believed that in three thousand years the soul would return and unite with the body: then he had a good deal to say about the expansion of the mind, thus in fifteen minutes after death one could know more than he had in all his life before, that the mind is absolutely unlimited. Passing by the Indian and Egyptian we will notice his views of mind and what becomes of it. Our every day observation disproves the statement of the minister, for we see man making an effort on certain lines and some will fail though they try ever so hard; then again we see man as an infant, as a lad, and as a man of middle age; during all this time his mind has been enlarging from that of the babe to that of the statesman, doctor, lawyer and other professions, one continual advance, and as we watch him mount higher and higher the ladder of knowledge, we sometimes wonder at the possibility of the mind, but in a few years we see him declining: he had reached the top (limit) with great effort but now he is going down without effort, the road seemed to have been prepared before and he rushes along at the speed of the express until we see him with the lad of fifteen, acting smart, talking saucy, and shuffling his feet as do the young men in their teens; but how is this, why did not his mind continue to expand if it was unlimited? It was limited, and so he is soon gone, gone the way of all the earth, to the place where there is no work, no device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom. Eccl. ix. 10. If the mind is unlimited it could acquire all knowledge and therefore be all wise; it could devise ways and means to execute any plan desired and therefore be all powerful, it would then be equal to God, it would be God as much so as God is God; then the statement of Moses and Paul that there is one God would be untrue. Now let us examine Job's own language and see if we can find out what his belief was: he commences the 14th chap. by letting us see that man born of woman is of few days (short, margin) and full of trouble: we understand what it is to be short of money when we want to buy a house, we mean we don't have sufficient money with which to acquire the property desired, and so man is short of days, he is not able to reach over into the better time where he will not be full of trouble. In the 2nd verse man is compared to the flower, it comes forth with all its beauty and fragrance and continues a short time and is gone: so it is with man, he cometh forth the tender and innocent babe, he is watched over with anxious solicitude by his parents with the fond hope that he may become one of the great men of the times, but the hand of the enemy death will cut him down: he fleeth also as a shadow and continueth not. If man live right on either in heaven or in hell in a conscious state there would never be a time when he would cease to be, he would always continue, but Job says he continueth not: this don't look like Job believed in a continued existence. In the 7, 8, 9 verses he continues to illustrate his idea by reference to the tree: he says for there is hope of a tree if it be cut down, that it will sprout again, and that the tender branches thereof will not cease: though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof die in the ground, yet through the scent of water it will bud, and bring forth boughs like a plant. Now here is a description of the possibility of a tree in which Job has given us a statement of what we all must acknowledge to be a fact. Bear in mind now that Job's subject is man and that he is making a comparison between man and other objects, he says for there is hope of a tree, but man dieth, yea man giveth up the ghost, and where is he: v. 10, the 7, 8, 9, and 10 verses are a comparison of the future of the tree and man. There is hope of the tree, but the opposite with man, and while Job asks a question here it is equal to a positive statement: Job's idea could not have been more forcible if he had said there is more hope of the tree, but not so with man. Let us follow Job into the 11th and 12th verses where he continues to give the fact by illustration. As the waters fail from the sea and the floods decayeth and drieth up: so man lieth down and riseth not, till the heavens be no more; they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep. When water is evaporated it ceases to be water, and when man dieth he returneth to the dust of the earth and as man he has passed out of existence; and this Job positively asserts in the tenth chapter and ninth verse, also Obadiah xvi.

The minister said man would know more in fifteen minutes after death than in all his life before. Job says when man lieth down he shall not wake nor be raised out of his sleep. v. 12. We know that when man is asleep he is unconscious and I would like to know how he could learn while in that condition. I wonder if that is the way the minister does his learning, at least he seemed to have been unconscious of the connection of his text. In the 21st v. Job says his sons come to honor and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them. Strange that one who could know so much in fifteen minutes would not know whether his sons come to honor: but when a man leaves the plain statements of the Word we may expect strange things. There is no mistaking the place to which. Job expected to go for in the 13th and 14th verses he says, O that thou wouldst hide me in the grave, that thou wouldst keep me secret till thy wrath be past, that thou wouldst appoint me a set time and remember me. If a man die shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait; till my change come. He not only lets us see where he expected to go, but he was willing to wait: some people in these days are not willing to wait, but they want to rush away on angel wings into the immediate presence of the eternal Father, but Job was like the church at Thessalonica, who had turned from idols to serve the living and true God and to wait for his Son from heaven, 1 Thess. i. 9, 10. Job tells us in the 17 chap. 13, 14, 15, 16 verses that if he waited the grave would be his home (nothing said about heaven or hell). I have made my bed in the darkness, I have said to corruption thou art my father, to the worm thou art my mother and my sister. they shall go down to the bars of the pit when our rest together is in the dust. This harmonizes with Paul when he says the first man is of the earth earthy, 1 Cor. xv. 47, and also with what God said: dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return. Gen. iii. 19. Man is not a dual being as the minister told us. We have no account of God making two men: and whatever was Job was that which should rest in the grave; but at the end of the set time though the skin worms destroyed his body yet in his flesh he should see God, whom he should see for himself and not another, ch. xix. 26, 27. The teaching of Job is very plain and a great contrast to the teaching of the present day.

A. W. DARBY.

Synopsis of a Discourse at Oxford, Kan, Conference, Aug. 18, 1894.

I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; preach the Word. 2 Tim. iv. 1, 2. Paul solemnly charges Timothy to preach the Word and a more solemn charge was never given to mortal men. The importance of the subject demands just such a charge as this. Men and women are dying in their sins, Paul and others are sent out to hunt up the lost ones and bring them in. They carry a message of mercy to a dying world, which message is summed up in three words—preach the Word. First, I would enquire the meaning of this apostolic demand, preach the Word. Peter you tell us the meaning of this measure, and what it is. Listen, But the Word of the Lord endureth forever. And this is the Word which by the gospel is preached unto you. 1 Pet. i. 25. Then to preach the Word is to preach the gospel. Then Paul would have Timothy to preach the gospel, and why? Let Paul tell. For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. Then I would understand Paul to teach that this gospel of Christ is God's moral motive power, or plan of saving men and women who believe of both Jew and Greek. This being true, we can see why it was that Paul used the straight edge on both men and angels who dare pervert the gospel of Christ by preaching smooth things to draw away disciples after them. Now I would enquire, what is the gospel of Christ, in other words what did Christ talk about when he preached the gospel, or what did his gospel or good news relate to? Lets see. And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness, and all manner of disease among the people. Matt. iv. 23; ix. 26, Jesus went forth proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom of God, that kingdom that prophets had talked so much about in times of old, that kingdom that Daniel alluded to when he says—And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever." Amen. No wonder Jesus was delighted in telling about this coming kingdom of God, which is to be under the whole heaven and be given to the people of the saints of the Most High. Jesus will then be King of kings and Lord of lords, he shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth. This kingdom was the burden of the message he bore to the world. And this gospel of the kingdom of God was to be preached in all the world for a witness to all nations. Hence Jesus sends his disciples to preach the kingdom, and to heal the sick. "And they departed and went through the towns, preaching the gospel, and healing every where." Luke ix. 2, 6. Then to preach the Word is to preach the gospel, and to preach the gospel is to preach and show the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. Philip went down to the city of Samaria and preached Christ unto the people, and when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ they were baptized both men and women. There is however another proposition or factor in this gospel system, that we dare not shun to declare, as it was among the first things that Paul delivered unto the Corinthians, by which they were saved, if they kept in memory what Paul preached unto them, unless they had believed in vain. For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and that he was buried and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures.

Then to be saved by the gospel that Paul preached, we must first hear it, understand it, believe it, and obey it. And we must believe more than some folks believe, we must believe that Christ died for our sins according to, or in fulfillment of the prophetic Scriptures. And what have the prophets said about Christ dying? Isaiah in prophesying his death says: "when thou shalt make his soul (life) an offering for sin, because he hath poured out his soul unto death." Read the 53 chapter and believe it with all your soul. Now when these tragic scenes had been enacted, and Jesus had come forth to die no more, he sends his disciples forth into all the world to "preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Conclusion. Those who hear, believe and obey this gospel of the kingdom of God will be saved, on the other hand those who hear and believe it not, will be condemned, and condemn does not mean to save, to curse does not mean to bless, neither does death mean life. It is high time we were enquiring for those old paths, for many have departed from the faith, and have sought out many inventions. Jesus says, I am not come to call the righteous but sinners to repentance, and as sure as God is calling Jews and Gentiles by the gospel, so sure are Jews and Gentiles sinners before God. The middle wall of partition between Jew and Gentile has been broken down, and God is grafting the Gentiles into the Abrahamic stock, making them one in Christ Jesus. What are the conditions of unity or reconciliation for Jew and Gentile, Jesus says—"Thus it is written and thus it behooved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead the third day. And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. Luke xxiv. 46, 47, As sure as Jesus our risen Lord and Master, has uttered these words, just as sure does he regard all nations as sinners before God. And if men and women among all nations wish to be saved, they must of necessity hear, believe and obey the gospel that Jesus and his apostles preached. This gospel is world wide in its application—to every creature to all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. Now come away for a few moments, and listen to Simon Peter as he discourses to that vast multitude of men and women, he charges them with the death of Jesus of Nazareth, whom God hath raised up in fulfillment of his oath to David to sit on his throne. Here Peter in his first sermon preaches a straight and full gospel, the death, burial and resurrection of Christ to sit on David's throne, and when they believed Peter preaching these things they like the Samaritans are convicted of sin, and enquire of Peter and the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren what shall we do? Then Peter said unto them, Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. You will take notice that faith, repentance and baptism are divinely set forth as the conditions of pardon and that this was only the beginning, and must and did go to all nations. Yet notwithstanding all this straight testimony, some folks have an idea that the Gentiles are not counted as sinners before God, and are not to be baptized for the remission of sin, but are simply in baptism adopted into the Christ body, and then they can sin and become responsible, so it would seem that the preacher and the gospel is not a blessing to the Gentile world. Thank God brethren inspired men do not talk this way. Hear one will you. In that celebrated conference at Jerusalem, Peter says of the Gentiles, "And God which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us; and put no difference between us and them purifying their hearts by faith." If God makes no difference, why should we? And to claim that all Jews are sinners because they killed the Prince of Life is very unjust and unfair, as not one in a thousand had any say in the matter, and those who did falsely accuse and betray him unto death, did it ignorantly, so says Peter, Acts iii. 17, while Pilate the Roman Gentile governor acquiesced to their clamor, and gave sentence against him, and did it all against his better judgment, and yet he and the Roman soldiers that did the work are supposed by some to be innocent. Then again if God did cleanse all the Gentiles from sin, at their reception as shown to Peter in the vision, then all the world stands clear before God except the poor Jew. Now I have no idea that Cornelius was a saved man until he was baptized As God has but one plan or way of serving men and women, this must be so. "He shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do," ch. x. 6. "Who shall tell thee words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved," ch. xi. 14. "And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the lord," ch. x. 48. I know the record says he was a devout man, and one that prayed to God always. The record also states that those Jews on the day of Pentecost were devout men, and when Peter opened his mouth at the house of Cornelius he said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is accepted with him." Again, "To him give all the prophets witness that through his name, whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." If this applies only to the Jew, why does Peter preach it to the Gentiles? O why? Jesus sends Paul to the Gentiles, what for? To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they (the Gentiles) may receive forgiveness of sins." How can that be if they are not sinners? "And you (Gentiles) hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins." Eph. ii. 1, Paul tells the Roman brethren that they had been the servants of sin, but they had obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine (which was baptism) being then made free from sin. And from the fact that God now commandeth all men everywhere to repent, proves all men everywhere to be sinners. In conclusion let me say—"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him, should not perish but have everlasting life."

T. E. ADAMS.

"Thus Saith the Lord of Hosts."

"Behold evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth. And the slain of the Lord shall be at that day from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth. They shall not be lamented, neither gathered, nor buried: they shall be dung upon the ground, for the Lord hath a controversy with the nations, he will plead with all flesh." Jeremiah. xxv.

"Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe, for their wickedness is great." Joel iii.

I listened through the music and the sounds of revelry,
And all the hollow mirth of mad joys of jubilee;
I heard beyond the cheering and beyond the trumpets blare,
The steady tramp of those vast feet that were marching in the rear.
Tramp—tramp—tramp—tramp—
They seem to shake the air,
Those vast crowding footsteps of the anti-christ in the rear.
Tramp—tramp—tramp—
In dogged grim despair.
They have a goal, these footsteps of the army of the rear.

In reply to enquiry of Brother Leonard Davis, RESTITUTION, June 13th. I would say that I do not think the King of the North of Dan. xi. 40, and the Anti-Christ of 2 Thess. ii, are the same.

In giving reasons, I do so with diffidence, realizing the difficulty of understanding prophecy and reserving right to alter my views with progressive knowledge.

Dan. xi. is comprehensive, covering the period from Daniel to the upstanding of Michael, it calls for historical knowledge and King James' translation is obscure as to personal references.

The terms "King of the North" and "South" describe different epochs, and while preserving the same nucleus often embrace much larger scope of territory.

The three Kings, verse 3, represent probably Cambyses, Smerdis, and Darius, the fourth, far richer than they all, Xerxes.

The mighty King of v. 3, is Alexander the Great, whose kingdom, at death, was divided into four, viz:—Egypt, Syria, Thrace and Greece, and did not descend to his posterity.

The South, v. 7, means Egypt, the King's daughter, v. 6, Berenice who made a treaty with the King of the North (Syria,) she was in fact contracted to him in marriage and poisoned also.

Her brother avenged her death, v. 7, and overthrew the King of Syria after conquering him.

In verse 11, the King of the South seems to have been Ptolemy Philopater, the King of the North, Antiochus.

The "robbers of the people" v. 14, the Romans, the upright ones, v. 15, the Jews, The "daughter of women" who "war not for him." Cleopatra, who sided with her husband against Antiochus her father.

The King of the North, v. 40, is Syria, represented in our day by Turkey or the Mahommedan power, the King of the South, Egypt, as in v. 5.

This part of the prophecy remains unfulfilled, for it is to be "In the time of the end," and it may be Russia representing Turkey after its dismemberment.

Here I believe Egypt is represented by Great Britain and her offshoots, the "young lions thereof."

The King of v. 36 I regard as the anti-Christ of 2 Thess. ii. and the he who plants his tabernacles (pitches his tents) between the seas in Palestine, v. 45.

This Anti-christ seems to be some individual yet to arise who will represent and control the anarchistic element of the world after the overthrow of most existant governments.

The Gog of Ezekiel xxxviii. is Russia, also representing a vast aggregation of nations and peoples, such as Northern Europe and Asia, China, Asiatic Turkey and so on, thus is the King of the North of Daniel xi. 40.

After describing Antichrist, Dan. xi. xxxvii. 37–39 verse 40 tells us that in the time of the end "the King of the South shall push at him, and the King of the North shall come against him like a whirlwind, by which I understand these two Kings or powers will simultaneously attack Anti-christ and his hosts, or that the King of the South will crowd him politically and bring on the northern attack, but that Anti-christ will here at least, hold his own.

In a subsequent war, verses 44–45 of Dan. xii. Anti-christ comes to his end presumably at the same time that Gog is destroyed, Ezek. xxxviii. and when "all nations shall be gathered together against Jerusalem." Zech. xiv.

This phrase "against Jerusalem" does not necessarily imply to fight against Jerusalem, but that they are assembled in the vicinity to fight each other. Perhaps Anti-christ and Gog may be opposed to the Jews and their sustainers, or the three powers may be engaged in a three cornered fight.

Verse 40 looks as if the Russian Empire (gog,) representing Imperial Despotism and Heathenism, and the Anglo-Saxon race representing Christianity and law and order will temporarily at least combine against anarchy, represented by Anti-christ, which is a danger to both of them.

On the other hand Gog and Anti-christ may combine in their last fight to crush the Jews and their Anglo-Saxon allies who will be saved only by the intervention of the arch-angel Michael and the appearing of Christ as Conqueror.

Space is too limited and my time too occupied just now to do more than briefly outline general views.

The Russian and Anglo-Saxon alone seem likely to continue to wax in power and extent and retain their autonomy—their interests will ever clash, and their scheming and fighting never cease until Shiloh comes.

They struggle for the supremacy which means the trade of the world.

Sooner or later Russia will absorb the Asiatic dominions of Turkey and then the King of the North will be indeed a formidable power. He will reach out for Constantinople and the Mediterranean sea-board the key to the marts of the world.

Here she will be opposed by Anti-christ representing the socialistic and anarchistic nations of Europe and all the Adullamites they have gathered under their bloody banners.

The Anglo-Saxon race (with the Jews) will form a third party bitterly opposed to Gog and Anti-Christ, and hated by each in return.

As a matter of necessity the United States will be drawn into the vortex, fighting against despotism as personified by Gog, and lawlessness as personified by Anti-christ.

I think in Scripture there is no direct allusion to the United States except as an integral part of the Anglo-Saxon race representing the ten (so-called) lost tribes and the same applies to the Australian and other offshoots of this race, referred to in Ezekiel xxxviii. as the Merchant of Tarshish with all the young lions thereof.

There will be no neutrals in this war, for thus saith the Lord "I will shake all nations, the land shall be utterly emptied and utterly spoiled. I will make a man more precious than fine gold, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, ye shall certainly drink." Party lines will be clearly defined there will be no neutrals on earth.

The opening scenes of this bloody drama are now taking place before our eyes, for the mystery of iniquity doth already work and the day of the Lord is in the near Valley of Decision. Coxey and his bands are but the advance guard of that vast Army of the Rear, that will usher in the lawless one and his anarchical reign.

Tramp—tramp—tramp—
Awake and have a care,
There's menace in the marching of the army of the rear.

I hear defiance ringing from the men of rags and dirt,
I hear wan women singing that sad "Song of the Shirt."
And o'er the sounds of menace and the moan-ings of despair,
I hear the steady trampling of their feet along the rear.
Tramp—tramp—tramp—
Like fog in the air
Those vast crowding feet, those footsteps of the army of the rear.
Tramp—tramp—tramp,
There's danger in despair,
There's terror in the marching of the army of the rear.

"They're brutes," as say the wealthy "and by steel must be dismayed,"
"Be brutes among them" rich men—"They are brutes that ye have made,"
They want what God has given them, they wan their earnest share,
And that is why they're marching and will march beyond the rear.
Tramp—tramp—tramp—
Awake and have a care
Ye proud and haughty spurners of the wretches in the rear—
Tramp—tramp—tramp—
They'll show what want can dare,
Our brothers and our sisters of the army of the rear.

"For as a snare shall it come on the face of the whole earth. Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man."

"Ye are the Children of the Light, therefore let us not sleep as do others; but let us watch and be sober, for the end of all things is at hand, be ye therefore sober and watch unto prayer."

Iowa Tent Work.

The Iowa Gospel Tent is yet at Popejoy where we will probably remain until next Monday, Aug. 27. We have just returned from the river where I immersed three more in the name of the Lord Jesus. This makes 18 in all here and at Alden. Others are thinking deeply and may yet obey. We are presenting the gospel as best we can, calling upon the people to repent and believe. Pray for us that we may have wisdom to rightly divide the Word of Truth.

Be not Weary.

Tho' He knows the way is dreary,
Knows the weakness of our frame,
Knows that hand and heart are weary;
He, 'in all points,' felt the same;
He is near to help and bless:
Be not weary, onward press.

Look to Him who once was willing
All his glory to resign,
That, for thee the law fulfilling,
All his merit might be thine.
Strive to follow day by day
Where His footsteps mark the way.

Look to Him, the Lord of Glory,
Trusting death to win thy life;
Owning on 'that wondrous story,'
Canst thou falter in the strife?
Is it not now life to know
That the Lord hath loved thee so?

Look to Him who ever liveth,
Interceding for His own:
Seek, yea, claim the grace He giveth,
Free by from his priestly throne.
Will he not thy strength renew
With his Spirit's quickening dew?

Look to Him and faith shall brighten,
Hope shall soar, and love shall burn;
Peace unknown the heart shall lighten—
Rise! He comes thee, return.
Be not weary on the way,
Jesus is thy strength and stay.

Selected.

The Attraction of the Bible.

God made the present earth as the home of man; but had he meant it as a mere lodging, a world less beautiful would have set off the purpose. There was no need for the carpet of verdure, or the ceiling of blue—no need for the mountains and cataracts and forests—no need for the rainbow, no need for flowers. A big round island, half of it arable and half of it pasture, with a clump of trees in one corner and a magazine of fuel in another, might have held and fed ten millions of people; and a hundred millions, all made on the same pattern, big and round, might have held and fed the population of the globe.

But man is something more than the animal which wants lodging and food. He has a spiritual nature, full of fine perceptions and deep sympathies. He has an eye for the sublime and the beautiful, and his kind Creator has provided man's abode with ailment materials for these noble tastes. He has built Mont Blanc, and reared the lake in which its shadow sleeps. He has intoned Niagara's thunder, and has breathed the zephyr which sweeps its spray. He has slugged the step with its cadence, and spread the meadow with its fragrance and daisies. He has made it a world of fragrance and music, a world of brightness and symmetry, a world where the grand and the graceful, the awful and the lovely, rejoice together. In fashioning the home of man, the Creator had an eye to something more than convenience, and built, not a barrack, but a palace,—not a work-house but an Alhambra: something which should not only be comfortable, but very splendid and very fair, something which should inspire the soul of its inhabitant, and even draw forth the "very good" of complacent Deity.

God also made the Bible as the guide and oracle of man; but had he meant it as a mere lesson-book of duty, a volume less various and less attractive would have answered every end. A few plain paragraphs, announcing God's own character, and his disposition towards us sinners here on earth; mentioning the provision which he has made for our future happiness, and indicating the the different duties which he would have us perform,—a few simple sentences would have sufficed to tell what God is, and what he would have us do. There was no need for the picturesque narrative and the majestic poem,—no need for the proverb, the story, and the psalm. A chapter of theology, and another of morals; a short account of the incarnation and the great atonement, and a few pages of rules and directions for the Christian life, might have contained the main truths of Scripture, and have supplied us with a Bible of simplest meaning and smallest size. And in that case the Bible would have been consulted only by those rare and wistful spirits to whom the great hereafter is a subject of anxiety, who are really anxious to know what God is, and how they themselves may please him. But in giving that Bible, its divine Author had regard to the mind of man. He knew that man has more curiosity than piety, more taste than sanctity, and that more persons are anxious to hear some new or read some beauteous thing than to read or hear about God and the great salvation. He knew but few would ever ask, "What must I do to be saved?" and therefore he made the Bible not only an instructive book, but an attractive one,—not only true but enticing. He filled it with marvelous incidents engaging history, with sunny pictures from Old World scenery, and inflecting anecdotes from the patriarchal times. He replenished it with stately argument and thrilling verse, and sprinkled it over with sentention wisdom and proverbial pungency. He made it a book of lofty thoughts and noble images, a book of heavenly doctrine, but withal of earthly adaptation.

In preparing a guide to immortality, infinite Wisdom gave, not a dictionary nor a grammer, but a Bible, a book which, in trying to reach the heart of man, should captivate his taste; and which in transforming his affections, should expand his intellect. The pearl is of great price, but even the casket is of exquisite beauty. The sword is of ethereal temper, and nothing gets so keen as its double edge; but there are jewels on the hilt, and the tracery on the scabbard. The shekels are of the purest ore, but even the scraps which contains them is of texture more curious than that the artizan of earth could fashion it. The apples are gold, but even the basket is silver. James Hamilton.

God's Constant Providence.

Providence has no Sabbath. No night stops on it; and from its labors God never rests. If I compare small things with great, it is like the motion of the heart. Beating our march to the grave, since the day we began to live, the heart has never ceased to beat. Our limbs may grow weary, not it. We sleep; it never sleeps. Needing no period of repose to recruit its strength, by night and day it throbs in every pulse, and constantly supplying warmth and to the most as well as the noblest organs of our frame, with new zeal, daily, unfired energy it drives the blood along the bounding arteries, without any exercise of will on our part, and even when the consciousness of our own existence is lost in dreamless slumber.

If this be a just view of divine providence, may we not rest wholly? Shall we not bid our troubled spirits be quiet? "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord," says the inspired volume. There is an unslumbering eye upon us—there is a heart of infinite love beating responsive to every need of our earthly life: there are arms of omnipotence underneath and around us. Let us be still—quiet as an infant in its mother's arms. Let us commit all our interests to the keeping of our heavenly Father. Dr. Guthrie.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

Announcement.

It becomes our pleasant duty to announce our annual meeting. The beautiful natural park at Cambridge, Nebraska, has been selected again as the place and the time Sept. 14 to 21, 1893.

As we look back over the pleasant gatherings we have had at this season of the year, we wonder if this will not be the best we have ever had, we trust it will. In order to make it so we earnestly request every church in the state to send at least one or more delegates, and as many isolated brethren as can possibly do so come. We want you to see for yourselves just what we are doing and assist in devising ways and means for future work.

Bring your tents, camping outfit, ten day's rations and your hearts full of love for the Master, and enjoy such a love feast with the brethren as you have never done before. Elder A. J. Eychaner of Iowa, who undoubtedly is the best worker and as able a preacher as there is within our ranks, has signified his intentions to be at this meeting. Those who cannot come send us letters of encouragement. Any further information can be had by addressing.

J. J. CADY, Sec.

The annual conference of the Church of God, known as the Northern Nebraska and Southern Dakota Conference, will be held two miles southwest of Fairfax, South Dakota. This meeting will begin Friday night, Oct. 7th, 1892, and will continue as long as to be found of interest in the Master's cause. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can bring tents and come prepared to camp the brethren at Fairfax and vicinity are ready to do all they can to make it pleasant for all the brethren that may come from abroad. Brethren, don't forget this meeting as we want your help, as we are just opening up a new field of labor in South Dakota. So let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master's cause, for the condition of the world indicates his coming is very near at hand.

WM. H. BERNARD, Sec'y.

The regular annual meeting of the Church of God at Lake Shore, Clarke Co., Washington, will be held at the new school house five miles north of Vancouver, beginning Friday night, 21 and holding over the fourth Sunday. It since meeting will be held Saturday at 2 p. m., all are invited to be present at this meeting. Come and let us have a good time. Gentle times will soon be in the past and the time for the saints to take the kingdom is near at hand, perhaps nearer than we think. It behooves us then to do all we can, and it must be done soon. Now brethren and sisters, let us make arrangements to be at this meeting, we need your presence, your counsel and encouragement that we may all be strengthened in the blessed cause. Those from a distance can be met at Vancouver with teams by addressing the undersigned at Vancouver. Please write at least one week before and try to be in Vancouver by 2 p. m. Parties will please call at Bro. S. M. Secrist's store so they may be found. Now brethren and sisters and friends of the cause of the Master, don't fail us but come. Yours in hope.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

PRESENTS FOR FRIENDS.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of 8 page tract; and one of "Seeking and Finding," all for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth. Send to Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va.

☞ It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the one. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

Cheap Excursions to the West.

An exceptionally favorable opportunity for visiting the richest and most productive sections of the west and north-west will be afforded by the Home-Seekers' low rate excursions which have been arranged by the North-Western Line. Poetry.

An Old Parable.

A sower went forth to sow.
On his cheeks was the health-hit glow
Of the young and strong,
And the life that is long
And the brain that is swift to know.
He had no measure
To gage his pleasure,
But, sowing his seeds
Of deeds and deeds,
He had little care
Was it wheat or tare
Which he sowed broadcast
In the earth. At last
Thick and strong were the reeds,
Alas! that they were but weeds.

A sower went forth to sow,
In his heart was the faith-fed glow,
And the love and zeal
Of the men who feel
That only the best should grow.
He sowed for others,
All men his brothers;
And fair were the seeds
Of designs and deeds
Which with palms and care
And in earnest prayer
He sowed broadcast
In the earth. At last
His fields were filled with the best,
And earth, rain and sun did the rest.

A reaper, with low-bowed head,
And heavy, reluctant tread,
Was forced to stand
On his weed-spoiled land.
Which none might reap in his stead.
Too late repentings,
Regrets, lamentings!
The crops from the seeds
Of his evil deeds,
To his shame and sin,
Must be gathered in.
He turned with pain
From the task; but in vain
Did he loiter, struggle, or weep.
That which he sowed he must reap.

In harvest, when fields were white,
A reaper went forth in the light,
And the radiant morn
And the golden corn
Filled his soul with a strange delight.
There was no weeping
In his glad reaping;
But wonder at wealth
Which had come as by stealth—
For his sheaves were great,
Then his heart, elate,
Asked the angels, Why?
And their low reply
Was heard by his ears alone—
"Thou art reaping what thou hast sown."

The Humility and Condescension of Christ.

"Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." Phil. ii. 5.

Of all the good and noble characters who have appeared upon the stage of human existence, our blessed Savior has the pre-eminence. He is the sun in the moral and spiritual firmament, before whose brightness the stars disappear. The sacred writings furnish us with a galaxy of bright luminaries, spanning the moral heavens of by-gone ages, which far outshines anything that the history of the world can furnish. I only need mention the great cloud of witnesses enumerated in Heb. xi. for proof of what I say. And yet these all lived in former dispensations, when the mystery of God's will was only partially revealed. They had light, but it was only as starlight, or the light of the moon, as compared with that of the sun. God's promises were given to them, but they saw their fulfilment afar off. Nevertheless they believed that God was able to perform, and would verify his word. Their faith formed their characters. In Abraham it produced obedience; in Moses, self-denial; in Joshua, courage; in David, faithfulness, etc. Yet these and other brilliant examples of special traits of character, developed by faith in God's promises, were far from being perfect. It remained for Jesus, God's Son, the promised seed of the woman, to exhibit in himself a perfect moral character, well-pleasing to God, and a correct example for others to imitate.

Christ Jesus our Lord, the spotless Lamb of God, was slain for us; and now in him "we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his favor," Eph. i. 7; and seeing that we are in him God has made him "unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption," 1 Cor. 30. O what boundless wealth we have in the Anointed One! He is every thing we need to make us complete in him, that is, "perfect, thoroughly fitted for every good work. Truly, this perfection of character is what all Christians ought to labor after. The apostle Paul exhorts—"As ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him; rooted and built up in him, and established in the faith, abounding therein with thanksgiving." Col. ii. 6, 7. This is what he calls continuing in faith, being grounded and settled, and not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which he preached. Chap. i. 23, v. 6. Christ has left us an example that we should follow his footsteps. 1 Pet. ii. 21. That example is far-reaching; every phase of character is touched by it. And the beloved apostle John says, that "whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him. He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself so to walk, even as he walked." 1 John ii. 5, 6.

The humility and condescension of Jesus Anointed were prominent traits of his character, and worthy of our study and imitation. He was no common man. Though born of woman, and the promised seed of Abraham, yet he was the only begotten Son of God—begotten as the angel Gabriel informed Mary his mother in Luke i. 35. Hence God was his Father, and as a son he inherited all the high moral qualities of his divine parent. No wonder that at the tender age of twelve years, he should astonish the Jewish rabbis with his "understanding and answers," and that he thought and said to his parents, "know ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" Nevertheless, he did not enter upon that important work until officially recognized, when about thirty years of age, at his baptism, being anointed with the Holy Spirit and power, and a voice from heaven said, "Thou art my beloved Son: in thee I am well-pleased." Luke iii. 21-23; iv. 18; Acts iv. 27; x. 38. John, who baptized Jesus, saw the dove-like Spirit descend and remain upon him, and he said, "I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God." John i. 34. That Jesus was fully acquainted with his Divine fatherhood is clearly manifest from the frequent allusions that he made to God being his Father, and his many assertions that he was the Son of God. He was also well instructed in the law and the prophets, and knew that all the types and shadows of the law, and the glorious predictions concerning the Messiah and kingdom, all centered in him, as the Son of David, and the Son of God. He also knew what was predicted of him if he should choose to follow the line of duty,—sorrow, persecution, suffering, and death. See Luke xii. 50; John xii. 27. No one of human kind, however exalted in rank, or esteemed by men, can compare with Jesus in his ancestry, birth, perfect manhood, and his future glory. All this he knew from his education, his knowledge of the Divine Word, and the full measure of the Holy Spirit which he possessed. To be related naturally or by marriage to an earthly monarch is esteemed by men to be a great honor, and to be the son of a king, or the heir to the throne of an empire is of the highest dignity: but in Jesus, though apparently of humble parentage, we have the heir to the throne of David, the future king of Israel, and monarch of the world, to whom all nations shall come and do homage, as "King of kings, and Lord of lords." And though he came to his own inheritance, yet his own people, the Jews, received him not: (John i. 11); they esteemed him as a root out of dry ground—they hid their faces from him, despised and rejected him, and finally conspired against him and killed him. Isa. liii., Matt. xxi. 28, 30. Yet although he knew all this, by the Word of God, and the Holy Spirit he had, he endured the cross, and despised the shame, on account of the joy that was set before him. Heb. xii. 2, 3. Here is the pattern to imitate, the glorious example to follow: "Learn of me," said Jesus, "for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls." Matt. xi. 29. He manifested no pride, or haughtiness of spirit, but was rather as a servant among men. "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus;" the apostle Paul desired that his brethren at Philippi should be of like disposition or character as their Lord, especially as to his humility. Hence he shows them, that though the anointed Jesus, was in a form of God, (being his only begotten Son), and of course did not esteem it an usurpation (of dignity,) to be like God, (as his Son, and saying, "I and my Father are one;") but divested himself, or laid aside for the time being this divine honor, and having been born of a woman, (though begotten by God,) and being in condition as a man, he humbled himself, taking a bondman's form, becoming obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Jesus, the "Christ, though he were a Son, yet learned obedience by the things which he suffered;" Heb. v. 8; "And for the suffering of death he was crowned with glory and honor," ii. 9. "Before honor is humility:" the cross before the crown: the sufferings first, the glory afterwards. The prophets "testified beforehand the sufferings of the Christ, and the glory that should follow." 1 Pet. i. 11. "O fools," said the risen Jesus, "and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken: ought not the Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?" Luke xxiv. 25, 26. Yes, Christ Jesus was a sufferer—"he suffered for us, leaving us an example, that we should follow his steps," 1 Pet. ii. 21. And again Peter exhorts, saying—"Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might lead us to God;" (1 Pet. iii. 18;) "forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered in flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind;" and "rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy," iv. 1, 13. And Paul declares—"If we suffer, we shall also reign with him:" and "if so be we suffer with him, that we may also be glorified together. For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." 2 Tim. ii. 12; Rom. viii. 17, 18. If we would follow Christ's example, we shall walk in his steps, arm ourselves with the same mind, and "consider him who endured such contradictions of sinners against himself, lest we become faint and weary." Heb. xii. 3.

"Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus: who was faithful to him that appointed him." Heb. iii. 1, 2. The apostle could not introduce a more exalted person for the consideration of the Hebrew believers, than Jesus, one of their own race. Moses, their law-giver, was faithful in all his house, only as a servant; but Christ, as a son over his own house; whose house are we. 1 Pet. ii. 5 Jehovah called Moses his servant. (Num. xii. 7,) and the children of Israel also, "my servants;" (Lev. xxv. 42, 55;) but of Jesus he said, "Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. And again, I will be to him a Father, and he shall be to me a Son," Heb. i. 5: and of the house or temple in which our great High Priest officiates, he says, "Ye are the temple of the living God—I will dwell in them, and walk in them: and I will be their God, and they shall be my people;" * * * * And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Cor. vi. 16-18. What honor, what dignity, what exalted relationship! Well might the beloved apostle John exclaim —"Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God!" 1 John iii. 1. And truly, if Jesus, who was emphatically the Son of God, was meek and lowly, and became obedient unto death on our account, surely we, as adopted children of God, should "be clothed with humility," and "humble ourselves under the mighty hand of God, that we may be exalted in due time." 1 Pet. v. 5, 6. "Now if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his," Rom. viii. 9; that is, the mind or disposition of Christ. The apostle Paul writes—"But we have the mind of Christ," 1 Cor. ii. 16; and he prays for his Roman brethren as follows: "Now the God of patience and consolation grant you to be likeminded one toward another according to (or after the example of) Christ Jesus." Rom. xv. 5. And to the church at Corinth he wrote, concerning the collection they were making for the poor saints in Judea, and setting before them the example of Christ. "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich," 2 Cor. viii. 9. Though rich in essential dignity as God's Son, "the appointed heir of all things," and the ordained judge and ruler of the world to come, (Heb. i. 3; Acts xvii. 31,) yet he who voluntarily became poor, for our sakes, as he said, "the Son of man hath not where to lay his head," Matt. viii. 20; and than apparently bereft of every thing, was delivered up into the hands of his foes, mocked, scourged, and spit upon, without one friend or witness on his behalf, he was crucified, as a blasphemer and a lawbreaker; and while his life-blood was oozing out, and the heavens were being shrouded in darkness, hear that agonizing cry—"My God! my God! why hast thou forsaken me?" Thus he died—for me and for you—"he gave his life a ransom for many."

May the love of Christ constrain us to copy his character, follow in his footsteps, and speaking the truth in love, grow up into him in all things. Amen.

Acts of Apostles.
Chap. 11.

1. And the apostles and the brethren who were throughout Joudaia heard that the nations also had accepted the Word of God.

2. But when Petros went up to Hierousalem, some of the circumcision differed in judgment with him,

3. Saying, Thou hast entered in unto men who hold to uncircumcision and hast eaten along with them.

4. And Petros beginning set forth the matter in detail to them, saying,

5. I was in a city, Joppe, offering votivo-prayer; and I saw in ecstacy, a vision, a certain instrumentality as it were a great fine linen cloth being let down from out the heavens in four divisions, and it came unto me;

6. Into which I steadfastly looked and was observing, and I saw the four-footed of the earth and the wild-beasts and the creeping things and the flying things of the heavens.

7. And I heard a voice saying unto me, Arise Petros, sacrifice and eat.

8. And I said, In no wise Lord, because nothing common nor unclean hath ever entered into my mouth.

9. And a voice a second time answered from out the heavens: What God hath cleansed, do not thou account common.

10. And this occurred a third time and the whole thing was drawn up into the heavens again.

11. And lo, straightway three men of mark stood at the house in which I was, sent unto me from Kaisareia.

12. And the Spirit said unto me, Go along with them: and these six brethren went along with me and we went into the man's house.

13. And he told us how he had seen the angel in his house standing and saying, Send to Joppe and summon Simon the one also called Petros.

14. And he will talk oracular words to thee, in which thou wilt have been saved and all thy house.

15. And when I had begun to talk the Spirit the Sanctified (Spirit) fell upon unauthoritatively (or in authority.)

16. And I remembered the oracular Word of the Lord, how he had said, Joannes hath baptized you in water, but ye will have been baptized in sanctified spirit.

17. If then God had given unto them the like giving as unto us also who had put faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, who was I to be able to hinder God?

18. And when they had heard these things they became quiet and glorified God saying, Surely God hath given repentance unto life also unto the nations.

19. Now those who had been dispersed by reason of the tribulation that had occurred on account of Stephanos, went through as far as Phoinike (land of dates) and Kupros (so-called from a certain species of cyprus the flowers of which were used in a costly unguent made here) and Antiocheia (a place opposite some other place), talking the Word to the Joudaisms only.

20. Now there were of them certain men of mark Kupreans and Kurenneans who had gone to Antiocheia and talked also to the Hellenists (Greeks) announcing the good tidings of the Lord Jesous.

21. And the Lord's hand was with them, and a vast number who had experienced faith turned unto the Lord.

22. And the Word was heard in the ears of the church that was in Hierousalem concerning them, and they sent out Barnabas as far as Antiocheia.

23. And when he had arrived and seen the grace of God he was rejoiced and exhorted them all to continue in the forwardness of their heart toward the Lord.

24. Because he was a good man and full of sanctified spirit and faith; and a considerable multitude was added to the Lord.

25. And he went out to Tarsos to look up Saulos, and finding him he conducted him to Antiocheia.

26. And it occurred unto them to be gathered together for a whole year in the church and to teach a considerable multitude and to be inspired to name (or to oracularly call) the disciples Christians first in Antiocheia.

27. And in those days there came down from Hierousalema prophets to Antiocheia.

28. And one of them by the name of Agabos (a led ox) signified through the Spirit that there was going to be a great famine over all the inhabited, which did occur in (the reign) of Klaudios (a great mourner).

29. And of the disciples even as any one was prospered, they decided each of them to send in the way of deaconship-service unto the brethren who dwelt in Joudaia,

30. And what they raised they sent unto the elders through the hand of Barnabas and Saulos.

COMMENT.

"Sacrifice" instead of "kill" R. V.
"Account" instead of "make" R. V.

"Men of mark" instead of "men" merely R. V. not supposes here.
"Making no distinction" not in the text R. V.
"Oracular words" instead of "words" merely R. V.
"Authoritatively" or "in authority" instead of "in the beginning" R. V.
"The oracular word of the Lord" instead of "the Word of the Lord" R. V.
"In water" and "in sanctified spirit" instead of "with water" and "with the Holy Ghost" R. V.
"Joudaisms" instead of "Jews" R. V. The word "Jew" is only a nickname.
The word for Greeks here is "Hellenists," whom some suppose to have been scattered Israelites who had been Greekized.
"And be inspired to name" or "to oracularly call" instead of "were called" R. V. which not only mistranslates the verb here used, but changes an active voice to a passive voice, a thing entirely unwarranted, as this infinitive here has the same dependence as the two preceding it in this sentence—namely on the finite verb ἐγένετο. The importance of this change must suggest itself to any thinking mind. For it determines whether the name "Christian" is an inspired name or not.
"Through" instead of "by" R. V.
"And what they raised" instead of "which also they did" R. V.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Dear Restitution:

I will send you a few thoughts that I have penned this afternoon. If you see fit you may give them to the brethren, they are these:

Are you not carnal: for where there is among you envying and strife, and divisions, are you not carnal, and walk as men? For while one saith I am of Paul, and another, I am of Appollos; are ye not carnal? Who then is Paul, and who is Appollos, but ministers by whom ye believed, even as God gave to every man. I have planted Apollos watered: but God gave the increase. So then neither is he that planteth any thing, neither is he that watereth, but God that giveth the increase. As it was in the days of Paul, so it is in these days. But let us remember that he that planteth, and he that watereth are one; and every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labor. Paul had heard by those of the house of Chloe that there were divisions and contentions among the Corinthian brethren. It made him feel sad. But it is more sad when the brethren know there is division among the ministers of the gospel of God, they who should be leaders among the brethren. Paul went out preaching the truths concerning the kingdom of God, was determined to know nothing save Christ and him crucified. It would be safe to follow his example. All should be laborers together with God. We should be wise master-builders, some may lay the foundation and others may build thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon. For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ. He should remember that the stone which the builders rejected became the head of the corner.

Paul in speaking of the works of the flesh, mentions emulation as one of them. With the true Christian there should be no spirit of rivalry among those who would be leaders. With an emulative spirit two or three in a church might do a great deal of hurt, more than could be made right in a long time if ever. Paul in summing up the works of the flesh says, they that do these things shall not inherit the kingdom of God. What an awful thought to think that any one of us who profess to love the name of Jesus and the fair heart of the Kingdom [illegible] and sisters, rather cultivate the graces which will be found on the other side of the question. Let us see what they are, 1st, But the fruit of the spirit is love. Do we love the brethren? If we do there will be no contention or wrangling. 2nd. Joy, may our souls be joyful in the Lord. 3rd. Peace, have we peace with God and man? 4th. Long suffering, are we long suffering? 5th. Gentleness, what is our manner to others? 6th. Goodness. 7th. Faith. 8th. Meekness. 9th. Temperance. Against such there is no law.

If we live in the spirit, let us walk in the spirit and not do the works of the flesh. And above all let us not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one another, envying one another. Paul says in 1 Thess. iv. 6, defraud not thy brother in any matter. Now there are more ways than one to defraud a person. To take away his good name or to speak lightly of him would defraud him, and in a manner too not pleasing to God. All the law is fulfilled in one word even this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another. But brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault ye which are spiritual restore such a one. But remember it should be done in the spirit of meekness and love.

ALMIRA BROOKS.

Dear Restitution:

Brother D. M. Hudler was with the church at Dixon, Ill. from August eleventh to the fourteenth, preaching four discourses. During these meetings two dear sisters put on Christ by baptism. Thus the good seed sown is bearing precious fruit. May they put on the whole armor of God and press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Your sister, looking for the glorious appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ.

A Business Question.

Business of all kinds reported dull. Money hard to get. This has been the cry, and we have tried to be patient with our friends who have asked for a "little time" in which to pay their dues. We are almost to the "end of our string," and now we ask you who have been favored by us in granting time to make long due payments, to now send us the money. We must have what you owe us right away. Will you make arrangements and send us our dues? This is "a Business Question." Please consider it in the light of "our side" and see what you would like us to do if we were in your place.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION proposes the restoration of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, SEPT. 19, 1894.

☞ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

THE essays read at the Kansas Conference will be given in due time.

IT is ignorance of God's purpose that breeds contempt for the means he employs, and makes people presumptuous enough to plan and arrange things for him.

BLIND attachment to an idea constitutes bigotry, and Holmes says "The bigot is like the pupil of the eye,—the more light you put upon it the more it will contract."

THE Annual Conference of the Church of God in Indiana was held at Argos, over the second Sunday of September. Bro. M. Joblin, of Cleveland, O. attended the meeting, and while so near us, made the friends in this place a short visit. Bro. Joblin is not very strong, and we hope did not overtax himself.

SPECIAL attention is called to the article by Bro. Conner in this paper. He suggests that a sort of ministers' meeting be held. It seems to us, as if this meeting might be held, and good be the result. Of course a sort of programme could be arranged at the outset, and not hold it simply to make a chance for each one to air his special "hobby," but a conference of ministers to devise better ways and means of working in the Master's vineyard. Who will respond to Bro. Conner's call?

"WHEN the Scriptures say God breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul," we understand that a divine principle of life was imparted to him which existed before any man was formed, and exists after man's organism is destroyed. But we must not forget that the same breath of life was given to all animals as well as to man. (Gen. ix. 21) so that if the "divine principle" we speak of is an independent personality in man, it amounts to the same in the beasts of earth.

A NEW edition of "Index Rerum," by R. C. Bingley, has just been issued. It is a "Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects;" giving subject heads, and then selected texts bearing thereon. Contains 98 pages, to which is added a large chart "exhibiting at a glance the duration of the kingdom of men, from the Babylonian dynasty to the end of Gentile times." You may order this work from R. C. Bingley Portland, Oregon, or from this office. The price is now but 15 cents post paid.

"THE workman made it, therefore it is not God; but the calf of Samaria shall be broken in pieces." What an impressive Scripture this is! The calf of Samaria is not God,—how do we know that? Why is it not God? The answer of the Spirit is:—"Because the workman made it." The existence of God depends upon his own independent power; belief in that existence rests upon the evidence of both nature and revelation. See Rom. i. 19, and Acts xiv. 17. We do not think with some that the infinity of God is mysterious, but with others who say it is simply unfathomable; not concealed, but incomprehensible to our finite faculties.

IT is estimated that 14,000,000,000 have been killed in war, and still they learn war. Inventive genius is most extensively employed in the production of implements of war, and nothing is more certain to bring wealth and worldly fame than the invention of a gun that will penetrate the thickest armor, or be effective at the greatest distance, or that will kill the greatest number in the shortest time. This condition of things can but confirm to us the belief that the time of the end is upon us. Yes! we are rushing on toward the mighty conflict that will leave the Prince of Peace master of the situation. It becomes us to stand ready to welcome him. It is those who are ready who go in.

"WISDOM does not show itself so much in precept as in life—in firmness of mind and mastery of appetite. It teaches us to do as well as to talk, and to make our words and actions all of a color."

WITH this we complete the "Symposium of Faith," furnished by the board of the Iowa Conference. While there have been some difference of opinion, in the main points of our faith all are agreed. In this connection we wish simply to state that whatever may have been written by some, the managers of this paper do not wish to be understood as endorsing any so-called "time-setting," "sabbath keeping," or "Josephitism." We believe no man knoweth the day nor the hour, but the Father himself. That our duty is to be ready for the change always. We believe we are now living under grace—not under law. We believe that Jesus is the only begotten Son of God.

Death's Doings.

The Church in Cleveland has again been called upon to give up one of their number, and this time so suddenly and unexpected that we could hardly realize that our dear Sister Sanford was silent in death's embrace, and that our beloved brother was left to struggle along with all the little ones without her. May the good God whose service they entered together seventeen years ago, bless the lonely one and grant him strength and favor in this great trial. By request we publish below the funeral address given at the Church of the Blessed Hope:—

Brothers and Sisters and friends: In obedience to the Divine injunction we have met to weep with those who weep. In doing this we are assured by the Spirit that it is better to go to the house of mourning than to the house of feasting, because death is the end of all men, and the living will lay it to heart. Sorrow is better than laughter for by the sadness of the countenance is the heart made better. The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning, but the heart of fools is in the house of mirth. Eccl. vii. 1-4: and our Blessed Lord endorses these words of Solomon when he says, Matt. v. 5, "Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted." And these words of Jesus are supplemented with those of the Spirit in David ages before, "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." Yes: joy cometh in the morning. And again the Spirit whispers to us in Rom. xiii. 12, "The night is far spent, the day is at hand." But what night is far spent? I answer, the long dark night of sin and sorrow, and suffering, and death that makes the whole creation groan and travail together in pain. The night is far spent! What glorious tidings this; that we are near the break of day. What joyful tidings, dear bereaved ones: the morn is about to dawn. WHAT morning? Oh, it is the Resurrection morn, when David says the Righteous shall have dominion over the wicked in the morning, and when awaking in his Lord's likeness will satisfy him;—the morning when Amos says the shadow of death shall be turned into morning. Oh, let us watch for the morning. All our hopes centre there. Yes; there we meet the Bright and Morning Star who will chase the shadows of night away. Human words are inadequate to assuage the grief of these stricken ones. And oh, what should we do without God's precious Word of promise, and invitation to cast all our care upon him—who careth for us. He says, "My grace is sufficient for thee; for my strength is made perfect in weakness." Let us listen to the apostle after he received this dispatch from heaven; we cannot fail to see that he took God at his word, for he exclaims: "Most GLADLY, therefore, will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me: therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake; for when I am weak, then I am strong." Oh, that we could ever live in the Spirit of the Truth so that when the mighty waves of affliction roll over us we would instinctively draw upon our Father's inexhaustible storehouse. To be called Christians and not avail ourselves of the Christian's privileges is to be deceiving ourselves. If we have found pardon and peace and reconciliation, and adoption, it is ours to reach out and take hold of God's strength. We need not be different about it either. We are invited to come boldly to the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy and find grace for every time of need. And the most timid can hear the voice from heaven, saying: "Fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." If we cast ourselves upon his bounty we shall be able to say—"The Eternal God is my refuge, and underneath are the Everlasting Arms." If we lie even again we shall hear the echo of the Spirit's words in Isaiah, "When thou passeth through the waters I will be with thee, and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee."

Beloved, we have the assurance of the Spirit that the enemy of our race will be destroyed, let us strive to live in the light of this promise, so that when he who has conquered death himself, and holds the keys, shall come and liberate the dead and change the living, he may find us fit to be gathered home: see Jesus as he is and be made like him;—more than that,—have his name in our foreheads: more than that—we shall eat of the tree of life which is in the midst of the Paradise of God: and the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed us and shall lead us to living fountains of water,—and God shall wipe away all tears—there shall be no more sorrow, sighing, pain or death. May the good time soon come.

Surely the past week has been one of darkness, and gloom, and sadness. The cruel enemy invaded our circle and snatched away our beloved sister so suddenly in the midst of life and usefulness that it seems to daze us. We can hardly realize that the quiet, pleasant, patient, hopeful sister we loved so well has been laid under the sod, and we shall see her smiling face no more,—hear her pleasant voice no more till the trumpet sounds and the dead in Christ arise. Yes; she was dearly beloved—loved best by those who knew her best. As with tear bedimmed eyes we stood around that death bed I heard a sister say, "Oh, it does seem as if I could be spared better than she!" I think that sister had been with Jesus—don't you? I am glad to say to you that the faith and hope that has been the support of our dear sister for seventeen years, sustained her as long as consciousness remained. Safe in the arms of Jesus, was her song. She was not afraid of death but regarded him as an enemy, and pleaded for life for the sake of her little ones. She would have the dear partner of her youth read the Word of Life to her, even after she had lost her hearing she would lie and watch the motions of his lips. She is beyond our reach now. She is silent in death now; and I ask if it is not a travesty on the religion of the Bible to say there is no death,—to say it is only transition.—to say it is a friend,—to say it is the gate to endless joys. I want to stamp these assertions as false by the Spirit of God, in Paul the apostle. He tells us the last ENEMY that shall be destroyed is death. The Spirit of God for it, then, death is a reality, it is not a myth, it is not the gate to endless joys. If death is not death, if death is a friend, what means these bitter tears? Oh, I tell you what they say,—they say that the very instincts of our nature give the lie to that theory, and prove the Word of God true: death is an enemy—it is to be destroyed—thank God—God would not destroy it, if it were a friend. If death was the gate to endless joys—what need was there of a resurrection? I want to say to you that the dear deceased one believed with Paul that there was just One Hope, not two or three or more. One Hope; and that hope is realized at the resurrection of the dead. "For the hope and resurrection of the dead, I am called in question, this day," Paul said before Agrippa. And writing to the Philippians he says he suffered the loss of all things—and counted everything as the vilest dross, to secure a resurrection from the dead,—tells us the Lord must descend, the trumpet shall sound and the dead in Christ shall rise triumphant and shout, oh, death where is thy sting, oh, grave, where is thy victory? But what there. Where is their everlasting home to be? Is it beyond the clouds? Is it away off somewhere? Is it Jesus says, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth," and by the 25th of Matt. we learn that Jesus erects his throne of glory on earth and says to them, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you." If you would share the power, honor and glory of that promised kingdom with Jesus, dear friends, you must believe the promise of it, you must repent, and cease to be hypocrites, you must live godly,—and wait till Jesus comes.

If the dear deceased one could have instructed us what he would say to us this morning she would have told us to cease to believe in the glorious Gospel of life from the dead to inherit God's promised kingdom of glory and righteousness and come under the whole heaven, cast them on Christ by baptism and look for him. Yes; Paul says he brings salvation to those who look for him. Oh, dear friends, let this warning and these words sound your funeral knell to resurrection life. And oh, unconverted ones, cheer up, the long dark night will soon end—the morning without clouds will soon dawn—and in the meantime cast all your burdens upon the Lord and he will sustain you. There is no mistake about that. His word was never known to fail; he who cannot lie has said my grace shall be sufficient for you. Yes; be sure to carry all your troubles to him, and they will not be few. Keep the eye of faith on the mark of the prize, and so by contemplating the joys of the Grand Assembly of God's saints you will outride all the storms and trials, and safely land in the haven of rest. God grant it for Jesus' sake. Amen.

Besides this we laid away Baby Mearnaugh who little more than entered upon the journey of life before returning to mother earth. Surely our life is a vapor that appeareth for a little time and then vanisheth away.

Dear brothers and sisters in Jesus:

Isn't it wonderful love in the dear God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ that permits me, a stranger, who has never looked upon your faces to thus address you?—to call you beloved?—to talk to you as if you belonged to one and the same great family? I should think it was. Wonderful love! love, higher and deeper and broader than our poor human hearts can fathom, or our tongues express. It found us orphans without God and without hope. It found us aliens and foreigners from God's beautiful Eden of the restitution land. It found us helpless in the grasp of sin and disease and death. We looked before us, and there was only the grave. We must go down into its silent and gloomy portals; and awaken, only to be judged and be remanded back to an oblivion black and dark and utterly hopeless. "This is the second death." How could we escape? How? Not by any device of our own. Not by living a life to please ourselves. But by imagining that if we walked in a way to be called good women and good men by our neighbors, it would bring us salvation; that God would be too good and kind to keep his word and put us out of being.

How then could we escape? We saw Jesus set forth as a propitiation for our sins, we dare not neglect the great salvation. It was life to accept him. Through him, we could find a Father; through him, a country of surpassing loveliness. He had power to loosen the bands of death, he could make us free from sin. O love of God! that allowed us to choose!—that set life and death before us, and earnestly besought us to "choose life, that we might live!" Through Jesus only, could come adoption. Through Him only, could we find entrance into the family of God, through him only, could we be made children, and become in reality brothers and sisters of the to be, immortalized ones. But to stay out: to have not the name of Christ; to neglect the choosing of the way of life—O man! woman! —have you thought what such neglect will bring? How can you escape? How can you escape? Have you any way? There is but one Savior. Let us him, and you are lost forever. As I write my dear brethren and sisters, if you realize the love of God that has brought your feet out of the miry clay and has established your goings; the love that has given you a sure hope while not sure that you feel and realize it by teaching it to your neighbors? You are in the family, through the mercy and love of God, for brothers. Don't say, "I am not going to give everything to the church, I want something for myself, because we have freely received, freely give. God has given us the riches of the gospel of salvation without money and without price, give it to others without money and without price. He has lifted the burden of condemnation from your shoulders, show other dear ones how it may be lifted from their shoulders, and how they may find rest and peace in Jesus. "The night cometh when no man can work." That night is near upon us now. It is such a time of fearful peace, and of heedlessness as to the things that belong to eternity, as was never known. It is going to grow rapidly worse. The saints of God are soon to be called away to the chambers of safety. It will be night then. No man can work for God. And above all things dear ones, deny yourselves all ungodliness and worldly lusts, live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from iniquity and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." You can see the signs of the coming advent, so can see that the judgments of God are falling upon the nations, you can see that Daniel's "time of trouble has come." Who shall be able to stand? Who? Only those who keep their eyes fixed upon God. He is requiring his own will to carry from wicked men, see that you hold back nothing of the rental back. Keep yourselves pure. May you have a blessed waiting together before the Lord. You tolerance is his name. Worship him in the beauty of holiness. The Lord be with you.

To those who desire to advance in the Truth.

As we have no general conference in which we can assemble and exchange thoughts on the great Bible doctrines so dear to us, I have thought that it might be profitable to us if we could meet at some convenient place, say, in Indiana, Illinois, or Iowa, in the near future, in a Ministerial Association, where we could spend a few days, very much to our profit, in discussing the fundamental principles of our faith, and the best methods to be employed in presenting them to the people. By this means we can also become better acquainted with each other. Although we have so few ministers we are almost strangers.

Can we not have a meeting of this kind somewhere in one of the states named, or in some other state, in the near future, say the first of November and spend a few days together? I feel that it would be very profitable to me. This will of course necessitate some expense on our part, but I feel that we would be more than repaid. I will suggest that all who favor the holding of such a meeting and will make an effort to attend, or will assist in any way to enable others to attend, write to THE RESTITUTION stating your desires, together with any suggestions you may offer.

If a suitable place can be chosen I would suggest that the first session of the meeting be held Tuesday evening, Oct. 30, 1894. I am not particular as to date, however, but would suggest commencing early in the week so that those with who it might not be convenient to remain over Sunday could have the benefit of two or three days meeting and not incur an appointment with their congregations.

Who will invite the ministers of the Church of God, in Christ Jesus, to furnish a place in which to meet and entertain them while in a Ministerial Association within their borders? Inasmuch as it might be difficult to decide as to the place of holding said meeting, I would further suggest:—Let every minister who favors the holding of such a meeting, and will make an effort to attend, write to THE RESTITUTION at once, stating name of the place in which he resides: and the effort to entertain the greatest number of names shall be entitled to the preference, providing an invitation or entertainment has been extended from that place. The publisher of THE RESTITUTION is to count and report. This plan I presume will be satisfactory to all. If such a meeting is to be held it is very necessary that we begin at once, as we will have but a few weeks in which to arrange a programme, etc.

Hoping this suggestion may meet with the approval of all those desiring to grow in knowledge of the Truth.

I am yours, in Christ.

Conference Report.

As was previously announced the Annual Conference of the Church of God in Indiana met at Argos, Ind., Sept. 6, 1894, and continued over the following Sunday.

The business meeting was called to order on Saturday at 2 P. M. The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and approved. The treasurer reported amount on hand at beginning of quarter, $131.22, since received $10.00, total $141.22.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: For President, J. F. Wagoner, 1st, Vice-President, J. L. Wince, 2nd Vice-President Robert Railsback, Secretary, A. C. Roberts, Treasurer, L. B. Boggs.

It was ordered that in lieu of issuing new letters of commendation those held by the ministers be signed by the president and secretary thus making them valid for the ensuing year.

It was further ordered that the next conference be carried on strictly in accordance with the Constitution of the conference, also, that the president instruct the churches to authorize their delegates to state to the conference time and their churches can donate for evangelical purposes. It was further ordered that the churches be notified of the action of the conference and that unless they comply with the same they will not be recognized by the conference.

The ministers present were, M. Joblin, J. L. Wince, J. F. Wagoner, J. S. Hatch, and L. E. Conner, all of whom took an active part in the meeting. Bro. Joblin delivered some excellent sermons to good and attentive audiences, and although there were no additions, yet we trust the effort was not all in vain.

Bro. Conner had to leave early Saturday morning to fill an appointment. There were but few of the brethren from a distance; but all who were there enjoyed a good meeting. Bro. Hugh Barnhill and wife were there from Hudson, Mich. Sister Barnhill although long since a member of the church did not feel satisfied with her baptism, not having a clear understanding at the time, was rebaptized on Monday following.

Announcement.

The first quarterly conference of the Church of God in Michigan, will convene (D. V.) at the Harper School House, six miles southeast of Vicksburg, Kalamazoo Co., Friday evening, Oct. 5th, and continue over the following Sunday. The purpose of this meeting is twofold. 1. To help each other; and 2, To help the unbeliever. To realize the best results in either, requires the presence of all at the meeting. It is not often that we are permitted to assemble in one body to shake glad hands, to cheer, encourage, and exhort; so let us lay aside all worldly cares for a few days and attend the meeting; doing all in our power, both individually and collectively for the advancement of His cause.

The brothers and sisters of that place have earnestly requested that the meeting might be held there, feeling that by our united effort, much good might be done. One and all try to be there. Don't say you can't. If you have to use any such expressions, throw them at the would-be obstacles, and then start off for the conference. Take your friends with you. Go with hearts full of love to God and to man. Take with you all the zeal and earnestness you possess. Go with the intention of cheering every face you meet. Drop a smile here a consoling word there; and a kind act yonder. Let us for a short time such an influence as will soften the hardest heart, and convict the vilest sinner. Those going by rail will get off at Vicksburg, where teams will be waiting for you Friday and Saturday.

F. L. ATWIN, Sec.

The Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of God, in Iowa will convene at Glad Brook at the New Church. This meeting will last four days, commencing Oct. 4th and continuing until Oct. 7th inclusive. All of like precious faith are cordially invited. Brethren, all that possibly can "come." The Glad Brook people have a fine place of worship and extend a hearty invitation to all, and we can be assured of a good meeting. Let us show them our appreciation of their invitation by our presence. Glad Brook is situated at the junction of the Chicago and Northwestern and Chicago and Great Western Railways, 20 miles northeast of Marshalltown, and is very easy of access by rail. All desiring to attend this meeting will please confer with Bro. G. P. or Albert Allard so that arrangements can be made to take care of you. Brethren, let us be up and doing, and make this meeting a memorable one. "The coming of the Lord draweth nigh, are we ready?"

O. J. ALLARD, Sec.

The annual conference of the Church of God in the Northwest, will convene in the new church at Scio's Ferry, Oregon, commencing Friday, Oct. 12, 1894, and hold over the following Sunday.

Ample provision will be made for visiting brethren. Teams will be in waiting at the National Hotel, Portland, for those wishing, if they will inform Bro. W. W. Jaquith to that effect. Be sure to write in time.

Dear brothers and sisters, another call has been made. Will all that can come up to the help of the Lord and work for the Master? The signs of the times show to us who are waiting and watching the near coming of our Savior. As time is short we should improve it. Besides all this such a reunion always helps us. We feel that we have a fortaste of what is to come.

Yours in the Truth.

ALMIRA BROOKS, Sec.

Change of Address.

On and after Sept. 25, 1894, my address will be Rossville, Illinois, instead of Plymouth, Ind. Correspondents will please take notice.

To the South at Low Rates via Pennsylvania Lines.

The last of the series of cheap excursions over the Pennsylvania Lines to enable land seekers and others to visit Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee have been fixed for Oct. 2, Nov. 6 and Dec. 4, also to points in the above states except Kentucky on October 6th. Tickets will be sold to all applicants at principal ticket offices of the Pennsylvania Lines, and will be good returning twenty days from date of sale.

Agricultural and Timber Lands.

There are thousands of acres of good farming and hardwood timber lands in northern Wisconsin, located on the Wisconsin Central Lines to be had at very low prices, and upon easy terms. For descriptive pamphlets, and full information, address Fredrick Abbot, Land Commissioner, Wisconsin Central Lines, Milwaukee, Wis.

Sos send. Send THE RESTITUTION to some one who is a stranger to God's truth, and perhaps from this may grow a desire on their part to accept them.

Poetry.

Finish thy Work.

Finish thy work, then rest thy down
On some celestial hill;
And—if its strength revives air
Take then thy fill.

Finish thy work, then seek peace,
Life's battle fought and won;
Hear from the throne the Master's voice,
"Well done, well done."

Finish thy work, then take thy harp,
Give praise to God always;
Sing a new song of thankful joy
And exalt ye here.

A Symposium of Faith.

Under the above heading the Conference Board of the Church of God in Iowa, sent out about one hundred circular letters, and have received the following replies:

SERIES 9.

My faith has its foundation in One God who is Omnipotent, Omniscient, Infinite and Eternal, whose laws are perfect, and the all pervading spirit of whose works is love.

God has revealed his will and purpose regarding man and this earth in his Word, which rightly divided becomes an unfailing guide in things moral and spiritual.

To know and do the will of God is the first duty of man, and will result in the attainment of every spiritual blessing.

Disobedience to the will of God is sin, and is the direct or indirect cause of every ill flesh is heir to, be they physical, social, moral or eternal; and the climax of all evil—death, is the wages of sin.

It is the will of God that all mankind shall acknowledge his sovereignty, in order that they may enjoy the blessings of his kingdom and to that end he has provided a means of justification and reconciliation, and offers to all this gospel of reconciliation the principle outlines of which plan are briefly as follows:

1. Jesus of Nazareth, the only begotten Son of God, born of a woman, lived a life of perfect harmony with the will of God, and was thus unworthy of death, yet he died "the just for the unjust," and rose again from the dead with an incorruptible body to an immortal life. To Jesus as the conqueror of sin and victor over death has been committed the work of redemption.

2. By the gospel he is now inviting those who are willing to become his followers: and all such are required to yield obedience to the will of God and to become "a peculiar people zealous of good works."

3. Jesus, who is now in the heavens, will return again to earth; and will then gather the faithful of all ages, both the living and dead, change them into his own likeness of glory, power, and incorruptibility, and associate them with himself in his work of blessing the nations of the earth.

4. With his associate saints the Lord Jesus will assume the rulership of the world, and will put down all oppression, will lift up the down-trodden, will inaugurate an era of peace, prosperity and happiness, and teach all mankind to know and love God and live obedient to his will. The final result will be that "all shall know God from the least unto the greatest." "God shall be all and in all;" and as a natural result, all of the vast train of evils which were the direct effect of sin shall disappear when the former things shall have passed away."

SAMUEL WILSON.

Members and Officers of the Christain Church:

I have a request to make to you which I hope you will grant. I may be wrong in so doing, but God being my Judge, I want to do what is right in the sight of God, and be honest with my fellow men. I have faithfully tried to keep my engagements with you as a fellow-member of this church, and have learned to love you all very much. It is, therefore, with pain that I announce to you my withdrawal, and I owe you this explanation. I must withdraw my membership with you in the church. To remain would be to misrepresent your views as well as mine, as we differ widely on the fundamental principles of the teaching of God's Word.

My faith in God is built upon the Covenants of Promise that God made to the fathers. You will find by reading these promises that the gospel of Christ is called good news and glad tidings of Great Joy that shall be to all people, and those glad tidings were God's promises made to the fathers. Paul says that gospel was preached to Abraham and he believed and it was imputed to him for righteousness because he believed. Paul says, "If ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise."

We find that God promised Abraham the land for an everlasting inheritance. Paul says, "they all died in faith not having received the promises, but saw them afar off." We see it must be in the future. We are the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus, for as many as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ, and if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise."

So, dear brethren, you see the saints inheritance is the land and not heaven, as you believe, for we find nowhere in God's Word the promise to die and go to heaven. Our only hope for a future life is by a resurrection from the dead.

I am looking for the Savior to come the second time, with power and great glory, to set up his kingdom as all the prophets have testified, it shall be here on the earth. Daniel says it shall be under the whole heaven, (not above it,) and Christ teaches us in his sermon on the Mount, "blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth."

Let me assure you that it is not because my love is less than formerly, for by God's grace I believe it is expanding toward him, and sympathetically toward all our race.

This action therefore, is not to be understood as a withdrawal from the Church of Christ whose names are written in heaven, but, merely a withdrawal from the Christain Church whose names are written on earth. I withdraw in order that I may be more free in my conscience toward God and men, that I may most fully fellowship all who are heartily the Lord's people, not only such in this congregation but all others as well.

I ask for no letter of dismission for I could not hope to be better suited elsewhere. So far as I am concerned I wish to remove every barrier between myself and fellow-pilgrims. You are well aware I have been helping you support the ministry here for preaching what I cannot believe, and I feel condemned for so doing. I believe it is my duty (what money I have to give for my Master) is to pay those who preach the gospel of the kingdom of God, for I have to give an account of my stewardship when the Lord comes how I have used his money. I do not wish to stand condemned in that day.

Now dear brothers and sisters I am looking for the soon coming of our Lord, for he is going to bring his reward with him to reward every man according as his work shall be, whether it be good or bad. I want to be found ready to hear that welcome plaudit, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter into the joys of the Lord."

Now brethren, you can see the difference wherein we stand. I want you to understand that my love for you is strong as ever, and still ask the privilege of coming here to worship with you in your meetings.

So, then to all of you who are in Christ Jesus, members of his Body, a branch in the true vine, (Christ) whom nothing can separate from the love of God in Christ Jesus my Lord.

Written this the first day of Oct. A. D. 1893.

Your brother in hope of immortality.

GEO. W. HAYNES.

[It will appear from this that Bro. Haynes simply sent us his declaration of faith, the communication written in 1893 when he withdrew from the Christian Church.—ED.]

1. I believe there is one God the Father dwelling in heaven, the Creator and sustainer of all things. He saw the end from the beginning. Gen. i. 1, 2; Isa. xlvi. 9, 10.

2. There is one Lord, the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God by the resurrection from the dead. In him is to be fulfilled all the promises. Acts ii. 30, 31, 32; iii. 20–26; Ps. xvi. 10, 11.

3. Salvation is deliverance from death. Man is mortal and subject to death. Eternal life is promised conditionally through Christ only. Gen. iii. 22; Matt. xxiv. 30, 31.

4. Christ will appear on earth again to reward his servants established his kingdom and rule the world in righteousness, and fill the earth with his glory. The earth will become the dwelling place of the Redeemed. Psa. ii. 7, 8.

5. Then there will be a personal reign of Christ on the earth for one thousand years. Rev. v. 10; xx. 1, 2, 6; Isa. ix. 6–8.

From your unworthy Sister in Christ

A. G. WINCHESTER.

1. Faith, repentance and baptism in order to a forgiveness of sins.

2. Personal second coming of Christ.

3. To reign over and among the nations. (mortal, and immortal.)

4. At the ending of the thousand years reign, sin with all its dreadful consequences will be destroyed.

5. God will then be with men, and no more sin or death.

Yours, as ever.

ELDER C. W. PITSER & WIFE.

Dear Brethren in Iowa Conference:

I am deprived of being with you in body, but am with you in Spirit, and hope lasting good will be done in the name of our Master. I am persuaded that the time we have to work is short, and every one that has been inducted into the Christ should stand as a light to guide others to the haven of rest.

We are truly living in perilous times. All nations have become restless, not knowing what is before them. Men's hearts failing them for fear and looking after the things coming to pass. But, let our hope be fixed, stayed, anchored in the coming of Christ to reward all the faithful.

"Therefore, my beloved brethren, be stedfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord.

M. M. MITCHELL.

(Concluded.)

[Received by Mr. W. A. Westergard.]

Change of Rest Days.

1. There was a change of dispensation.

2. There was a change of the law. Rom. viii. 2

3. There was a change of the priesthood. Heb. vii. 11, 12; iii. 1, 6.

4. There was a change of testaments. Heb. ix. 15, 20.

5. There was a change of Covenants. Heb. viii. 6–9.

6. There was a change of administrations and administrators. 2 Cor. iii. 7–11.

7. There was a change of customs. Acts vi. 7–13.

8. There was a change of yokes. Matt. xi. 28–30; Gal. v. 1–6.

9. Why not a change of Sabbaths? Moses brought Israel out from Egyptian bondage; Christ brings sinners out of the bondage of sin and death.

Why do Christians observe the first day of the week as a memorial?

1. Because God had recognized that day above all others in sending holy angels down from heaven for the purpose of rolling away the great stone sealed with the king's signet from the door of the sepulcher.

2. Because Jesus Christ, the great Head of the Church, on that day gained a triumphant victory over all the combined powers of darkness, the devil, demons, Jewish nation, and the Roman Empire all combined.

3. Because it opened a new dispensation in the history of the church and the world.

4. Because Jesus Christ was declared to be the Son of God with power according to the Spirit of holiness by his resurrection on that day.

5. Because by his resurrection on that day the door of present and future salvation by the proclamation of the gospel was opened to all nations.

6. Because by his resurrection from the dead on that day the way was opened preparatory to his exaltation at the right hand of God as King, Chief Shepherd, Governor, Lord and Ruler.

7. Because on that day the doctrine of the literal resurrection of the righteous dead to immortality was demonstrated to be true.

8. Because on that day the world to come, together with eternal life, immortality, the crown of life, the far more and exceeding and eternal weight of glory, the city of the Living God, with its many mansions, as a reward for a holy, loyal life, was made sure to them.

9. Because the apostolic church assembled on that day for worship and breaking of bread, and Jesus sanctified their worship by saying peace be unto you.

10. Because Paul says Christ is before all things and by him all things consist, and he is the Head of the body, the church, who is the beginning, the first born from the dead; that in all things he might have the preeminence. So by the observance of the first sabbath of the week we extol his name and keep in memory the works of creation.

11. Because our American government has sanctioned the practice of the church in all generations since Christ and have set apart the first sabbath of the week as a day of rest and worship.

Such are some of the more important reasons why Christians observe the Lord's day and not I observe it is to exalt God, and Jesus Christ, which is above every other name.

"If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord." (Not of Moses.) 1 Cor. xiv. 34.—A Sojourner.

Editor Restitution:

With your permission I will write just a little on the Woman question. I have just read Bro. Joblin's article. I was pleased with it, but as I had mine written before I will send it.

Paul says, I will therefore that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands without wrath and doubting. In like manner also that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety. Not with broidered hair, or gold or pearls or costly array. But I suffer not a woman to teach or usurp authority over man, but learn in silence. Dear brethren and sisters in Christ, here we have something from Holy Writ. What shall we do with it? Shall we put our own construction on it, and say it means this or that, or shall we take it as it says? Are women to learn in silence, without thought and be as a machine, if they would know any thing, ask their husband at home? What if they have no husband. Now my candid opinion is, that this advice, or whatever you may call it, was not given for the church of the present day. But for the church and for that particular church at Corinth, because they had just come out from heathendom, where the woman had not been lifted up to the plane of the man. History says that the worship of Venus was attended with shameful licentiousness at Corinth, therefore I think Paul refers indirectly to that when he is writing. This same Paul in writing to the Romans says, I commend unto you Phebe our sister, which is a servant of the church which is at Cenchrea, that ye receive her in the Lord as becometh saints. And that ye assist her in whatever business she hath need of you. This letter was written to the church at Rome. Phebe must have gone to Rome on some business for the church. I should judge so from the tenor of the letter. She might have been a teacher or preacher for all we know. At any rate Paul commended her to the church. He says she was a servant of the church which is at Cenchrea. It appears that Cenchrea is a seaport at Corinth. Phebe might have been a Corinthian, at any rate she was a servant of a church which was in Corinth. Now we have in these days women that are more apt to teach than some men. I have in mind now a sister of our church who in writing to me said, that she had been a believer in the gospel of Christ a long time, and that when she was married her husband had not accepted the gospel, but she had read him into believing it. Now she must have been apt to teach. She taught him the very way of life. But as to using authority over him, very likely she did not try to do so. I think it would be far better if the man did not claim that right as much as some do. We have in olden time Deborah who judged Israel for the space of forty years, so the record says. I could mention others but it would take too much room. Shall the women of the present day fold their talent in a napkin, because they are not allowed to teach? I for one say no. Those dear sisters who feel that they can do or say any thing to help fallen humanity take this yoke upon you, and by extra exertion (for this you will have to do) do the best you can. If qualified to do so go and preach the Word or with your pen proclaim the love of God to a dying world. If Paul could be here today, he would be astonished I have no doubt could he hear how glib some will quote him. The women of today have taken a stand that cannot be compared with those Corinthian women who had just emerged from heathendom, who had I think not forsaken all their foolish notions. Now I have had my say about the matter I would like to hear from others.

"Go work in my vineyard,
And do what you are,
Use this world for the season,
As not for the main;
When the reaping time comes,
And the saints shall all stand,
With songs on their lips,
And with harps in their hands,
Shall He to man then be dear
By the side of the sea!"

Conference Report.

The Churches of God in Kansas met at Oxford, Kansas, Aug. 10–13 according to call.

Friday evening Aug. 10 address of welcome, by Bro. T. M. Wasson. Saturday Aug. 11, 10 A. M. Bible reading from Matt. 25, conducted by Bro. O. B. Cleveland.

Saturday 2 P. M., business meeting. Bro. S. C. Oliver in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Secretary Eugene Randolph being absent Miss Della Miller was appointed Sec. protem to act in his stead.

The Treasurer's report of the Evangelist Fund showed that there had been $100.00 received into the treasury, and that $73.43 had been paid out for evangelical work.

The corresponding secretary's report showed that she had received and answered thirty letters of enquiry and in regard to church work.

The treasurer of the conference fund reported $7.00 received into the treasury, and $6.66 expended, leaving a balance of .40

The report given in by the ministers present was as follows, for the year ending Aug. 10, 1894.

Bro. O. B. Cleveland, an able speaker, preaches at Attica, Kan. every second Sunday at 11 A. M., and at the Star Valley school house at 3 P. M. of the same Sunday. Interest good.

Bro. S. C. Oliver reported that he had preached at Otto, Kan. every first Sunday, at Oxford every second Sunday, at Ashton every 3rd Sunday, and at Attica every 4th Sunday, during the past year. He had traveled over 6,000 miles, preached 124 discourses, baptized 13. Received from the churches and evangelist fund $491.10, expenses $58.74.

Bro. T. E. Adams preaches at his home near Ozaukie, Kan. twice a month. Baptized one willing believer the first Sunday in Aug. He held a meeting in Oklahoma in May, and helped five willing believers put on Christ by baptism.

Other preaching brethren present were J. M. Fyfe of Mo. I. S. Miller and H. M. Williams. They each gave an encouraging report.

The number of churches represented was six. The churches are progressing and the members of each church doing all they can for the Master's cause.

The officers elected for the ensuing year were I. S. Miller, Pres., H. M. Williams, Sec., Della Miller, Assist. Sec., and A. J. Chaplin, Treas.

Resolution passed, that all the worthy preaching brethren be given a letter of recommendation on application.

Letters of encouragement were received and read before the conference from J. T. Prime, Edson, Neb., Eliza A. Rahe, South Haven, Kan., Sarah E. Overman, Otto, Kan., S. Roxana Wilcox, Pierceton, Ind., and A. J. Eychaner, Hitchcock, Ia.

The motion was made that the minutes of this meeting, together with the letters and essays that were read before the conference, be sent to THE RESTITUTION office for publication.

It was left to the chairman to appoint a committee of three to assist in soliciting aid for the evangelist fund. Sister Clementine Overman was appointed for Otto, Kan., Sister Louisa Cleveland for Attica, Kan., and Bro. John Cochran for Bitter Creek.

It was decided that the next Annual Conference be held at Oxford, Kan., in August of the following year.

The first quarterly conference will be held at Attica, Kan. After the closing exercises meeting adjourned.

The meetings throughout the week were carried out according to the programme previously published in THE RESTITUTION. Many were the lessons of truth and admonition. Lessons which each one present should carry to their homes and put into practice in their daily lives. If each one would resolve in their heart to do this, less strife and contention and more love and mercy would be the result.

The Young Peoples' meetings of Tuesday and Sunday afternoons at 3 P. M. were especially interesting and instructive. The subject for Tuesday's meeting was "Practical Work." The meeting was lead by our young sister, Clementine Overman. It was a success in every sense of the word. Nearly all present took a part in the work, showing that they knew they had a work to perform, and that they were not backward in trying to do that work. After the young people had either talked or read something on this subject, some of our older brothers and sisters spoke encouraging words to the young.

The subject for Sunday 3 P. M. was "Christ died for us; what should we do for him?" This meeting was also lead by Sister Overman. Bro. Joseph Davis, H. M. Vickery and others followed by reading essays written on this subject, which were very impressive and instructive, which made this meeting one to be long remembered. Sister Overman though young in years and one who has not been long working for the Master, is an earnest, noble worker in the cause.

Reuben Fyfe, son of Bro. J. M. Fyfe of Mo., Chas. P. Oliver, son of Bro. S. C. Oliver of Attica, D. F. Miller, Castleton, Kan., and Miss Maude Wasson, made that good confession by putting on Christ by baptism. Also Bro. Joseph Davis expressed a desire to throw his membership with us, by giving his hand in token of the same.

Bro. S. C. Oliver preached a discourse on the "Second Coming of Christ" Sunday evening, which closed the meetings.

This meeting was largely attended. Those from a distance were Bro. O. B. Cleveland and wife, Bro. S. Oliver, wife and children, Bro. Abner Oliver, wife and children, Sister Cozad and Viola Carson, all of Attica. Bros. T. E. Adams, J. M. Fyfe and son, and a fair representation of all the churches. Many came by team and camped on the grounds.

The meeting was held in Bro. T. M. Jackson's grove, and was much more pleasant than it would have been had it been held at the school house.

But the final farewell time came, as is always the case in this life. Good byes were said, the tents were taken down, trunks were packed, and all returned to their homes. Hoping for, and waiting for the time that will soon come, when these sad partings will have an end. Submitted in love. Yours in hope of eternal life.

MISS DELLA J. MILLER,
Assist. Sec.

To the brethren and sisters in Iowa, Greeting?

I wish to tell you of our meeting and its grand results, and also of our needs, I say our needs because this is a common cause.

The tent came here to Alden near the middle of July, and was here and at Popejoy, five miles from here six weeks. As a result twenty-two have been baptized and many brought in from the Christian and other churches, and many more will soon be obedient. The whole country is aroused and people studying the Bible here as never before. Many who never attended meeting or looked into a Bible. Two churches have been organized and are holding meetings for Bible study, prayer and praise every Sunday, and one of them have Tuesday evening prayer meetings.

The tent is now at Eagle Grove, in Wright Co., where a big interest is already awakened, some to learn others to combat. Several from here will attend the meeting there this week to aid and encourage the evangelists. Surely Bro. Eychaner and Russell are a power for good in the Lord's hands, but the funds are running low, and this grand work must stop soon unless the subscriptions to the evangelist fund can be paid in soon. I know the times are hard but can't we retrench along some other line and send in the mites into the Lord's treasury, and so altogether make a total sufficient to keep the work moving? Sisters let us do without one new dress, or even our tea, if necessary, and may be some brother will give his tobacco money to the Lord, and so save another soul, while purifying his own. Don't hesitate to send the little mites for many littles will make a big. We have been here so long almost alone, I cannot bear to enjoy this happiness alone, but long for churches to be raised up around other lonely ones. God speed the work, and who will respond amen with solid cash. Remember our evangelist treasurer is Samuel White, Nevada, Story Co., Iowa.

"Bless the Lord, oh my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name."

OBITUARY.

As the minister who preached the funeral sermon of my brother, R. J. Hill, has not sent the notice of his death to the paper, his wife requested me to do so, although the time is so far past.

He was well known to the churches of Iowa and some parts of Michigan, as he was the son of Elder B. Hill, of Ingham Co., Mich., who was well known in the churches there 30 years ago, at which time R. J. removed to Iowa, where he labored as a pioneer evangelist for many years, scattering the seed (word) of the kingdom over several counties and baptizing scores of believing ones everywhere; his wife and family meanwhile working hard for their own support and enduring the privations and hardships known only to the family of a new country preacher.

The foundation of the disease which has taken him from us was laid amid the storms of those terrible prairie winters which developed into the most distressing form of asthma, by which he was disabled from preaching or laboring much for many years.

One year ago last thanksgiving day he was attacked with LaGrippe which left him with the lingering consumption from which he died on the 28th of July. Had he lived until September he would have been sixty-two years old.

Amid all his suffering and terrible weakness no word of murmuring or complaint was uttered, but the Spirit of the Divine Master was manifest in his patient endurance and thought of others, especially for his wife who he knew was constantly taxed far beyond her strength, but the kind Father upheld her to the last, but when her husband was laid to rest and her house was left desolate, her strength and courage failed together, and she has been prostrated by a nervous fever ever since. Pray for her, dear ones that she may be made strong, to still labor for the Master, and find comfort in hope of the soon coming King and a resurrection to a grand re-union where the inhabitants shall no more say I am sick.

Knowledge, Faith and Opinion. No. 3.

In concluding my last article I was about to consider the penalties, judgments, or sentences pronounced by God on the man, the woman, and the serpent—1st, beginning with the serpent, Gen. iii. 14, 15. "Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life; and I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel." Now just as it reads it is all plain enough, and we can all believe it, but how much has been said, and how many volumes have been written on opinion founded on part or parts of the sentence! First as to the serpent. Very many learned men do not understand the serpent to mean the literal or natural serpent, but that it refers to the devil—a mighty (not quite almighty) fallen angel—a spiritual being that almost, if not quite, possessed the attribute of omnipotence—not quite equal with God, but not far short of it. They suppose, that is it is their opinion—(and they place this opinion on an equality with faith) that the devil is addressed in the above sentence, which brings us to ask, who or what is the devil? In Jon. viii. 44 speaking of the devil Jesus says, "He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaks a lie, he speaks of his own, for he is a liar, and the father of it." This is supposed to refer to what the serpent did, and therefore it was not the literal or natural serpent that deceived the woman but the devil. Oh! how many and how bitter have been the disputes, strifes and discussions concerning the devil, his personality, nature, etc., etc. All because we are not satisfied with what is written. Time and again I have been asked, do you believe in the devil? I have answered no. Why, how is that—the Bible speaks of the devil and you claim to believe the Bible, don't you? I answer yes, that is the very reason I don't believe in the devil. Well then, why don't you believe in the devil? I answer because he is a liar and not to be believed. Eve believed in him and we see the consequence. I did not mean it in that way, I meant do you believe there is, or is not a devil? I answer, yes, a number of them! In the first place Jesus cast out many devils, but I admit that I think these are demons, and instead of devils it should read demons—(but who or what are the demons? here again opinions differ and I have mine, but for the present leave that question and proceed to the other word), but we read of more than one diabolis, or devil, the word used where the devil is meant. It is used in the plural three times, rendered false accusers—and slanderers (1 Tim. iii. 11) applied to wives or women, and Jesus speaks of Judas being a devil. John vi. 70. And addresses Peter as Satan, "get thee behind me Satan." So we see there are a number of devils—the word meaning adversary, opposer, enemy, etc. Whatever or whoever is the enemy or adversary in any case, is the devil in that case. Thus in years gone by Great Britain has had wars with many different nations. During the war reporters would write for the papers, they would speak of the opposing army as the enemy, "we have met the enemy and defeated him," etc. Now they may have said, we have met the devil and defeated him, because the two words mean the same thing. Thus what may have been the devil in one case, or at one time may not be in another case, or at another time. In the Bible it is not always clear who or what is the devil, or adversary, hence there may be differences of opinion. And whatever may be our views, or opinions on the subject, we will meet with some difficulties, and it becomes us not to be dogmatic about it. When Jesus speaks of Peter as Satan, or Judas as a devil, it is clear who is meant, and there is no room for opinion, but when we read of the devil in the temptation of Jesus—who can tell? I have seen various explanations or opinions, but after reading them all, I am still left in doubt, and I candidly confess to my readers, that I have my doubts as to who or what was the devil in that case. I believe what is written, but have no positive opinion as to the devil in that case. And so among the different views take your choice—whichever view you take, it will neither lessen nor increase my esteem for you, so long as you believe what is written. We have quite a number of devils (adversaries, or enemies) now among us. Anarchy is one, tobacco is another, and others, but I think the worst devil (enemy) in the world to day is the liquor traffic and the effects of it. As to the devil I must tell my readers a little story which was fact. A certain minister, pretty well known to me, was once discoursing about the devil, he remarked that the devil was a liar, a deceiver—in fact that he never told the truth—that he never did as he agreed or promised—he was thus giving it to him very eloquently when seeing an old brother sitting in a corner he referred to him by name saying "Bro. ——did you ever in all your long life know the devil to do as he agreed?" The old Bro. rising to his feet replied, "I never have any dealings with the old gentleman, brother." And so I say to my readers, "Have no dealings with the old gentleman," but abstain from the very appearance of evil in every form, and then whatever, or wherever may be the devil you will be safe—Have no dealings with him, her, it, or any kind of evil. But let us return to Gen. iii. 14. Does serpent here mean serpent? or devil? According to Jno. viii. 44, it would seem to be devil, but the woman said the serpent beguiled me, and Paul says 2 Cor. ii. 3, "I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ." It thus seems to be clearly stated that the devil was the one who caused the trouble, and that the serpent was the one who did it. Now, how can we believe both? Was the devil the serpent, or was the serpent the devil? As we have seen women may be devils (Diaboli) slanderers, etc. and Judas was devil. Jno. vi. 70. And Peter Satan on another occasion, is it not clear that on this occasion the serpent was the devil? (The adversary, opposer, or enemy). Any way what ever other devils there may be, whether spiritual or otherwise, and whatever opinions we may hold, this reads "and the Lord God said unto the serpent, Because," etc. Now let us leave our opinion and read on "to the serpent, because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life." Understanding serpent to mean the natural serpent we see the propriety of the language, but, if some spiritual being is meant, where would be the propriety of such words as,—above all cattle, beasts of the field, going on his belly, and eating dust all the days of his life? Especially if he was an immortal spirit as some suppose. As a people we have rather prided ourselves upon taking the Scriptures as they read, let us stick to this rule, and not try to read into passage what is not there. Let us read on. "And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head and thou shalt bruise his heel." Now what does that mean?

We see what it says—what does it mean? On this verse (15) hundreds and thousands of sermons have been delivered, and volume upon volume written, and why? Is it because the passage is difficult? Read over again and again, do my readers see anything difficult or obscure in it? Is it not a very plain statement? Now let us put aside all our preconceived ideas and read it just as a little child in all its simplicity and sincerity, and what do we see? I often advise my readers to bear in mind certain rules when reading the Scriptures, 1st, Who is the speaker or writer, whose words are they? 2nd, To whom spoken or written. 3rd, The occasion why, where, etc. And the more we can realize these and place ourselves there as it were, the better we will understand. Now in this case the speaker is God, the party spoken to the serpent, and the occasion—he (the serpent) had done an immense wrong, was guilty, and God pronounces judgment on him. This is the sentence, what does it mean? (In my next.)

Announcement.

The annual conference of the Church of God, known as the Northern Nebraska, and Southern Dakota Conference, will be held two miles south-east of Fairfax, South Dakota. This meeting will begin Friday night, Oct. 5th, 1894, and will continue as long as to be found of interest in the Master's cause. All of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and all that can bring tents and come prepared to camp the brethren at Fairfax and vicinity are ready to do all they can to make it pleasant for all the brethren that may come from abroad. Brethren, don't forget this meeting as we want your help, as we are just opening up a new field of labor in South Dakota. So, let us all care for ourselves that can, and come with our minds full of love and let us work earnestly for the Master's cause, for the condition of the world indicates his coming is very near at hand.

WM. H. DENSON, Sec'y.

The regular annual meeting of the Church of God at Lake Shore, Clarke Co., Washington, will be held at the new school house five miles north of Vancouver, beginning Friday Sept. 21 and holding over the fourth Sunday. Business meeting will be held Saturday at 2 p. m., all are invited to be present at this meeting. Come and let us have a good time. Gentile times will soon be in the past and the time for the saints to take the kingdom is near at hand, perhaps nearer than we think. It behooves us then to do all we can, and it must be done soon. Now brethren and sisters, let us make arrangements to be at this meeting, we need your presence, your council and encouragement that we may all be strengthened in the blessed cause. Those from a distance can be met at Vancouver with teams by addressing the undersigned at Vancouver. Please write at least one week before and try to be in Vancouver by 2 p. m. Parties will please call at Bro. S. M. Secrist's store so they may be found. Now brethren and sisters and friends of the cause of the Master, don't fail us but come. Yours in hope.

P. G. WOOLF.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1893, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

PRESENTS FOR FRIENDS.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of 8 page tract; and one of "Seeking and Finding," all for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth. Send to Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va.

☞It is necessary once more to call attention to the "Important notices" published on page 4 of this paper. Money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Bank draft, P. O. Money order, Express Money order, or Registered letter are safe ways to send money. Loose in a letter is a very unsafe way to send, as one Brother in Michigan knows to his sorrow. Some will say "I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

Cheap Excursions to the West.

An exceptionally favorable opportunity for visiting the richest and most productive sections of the west and north-west will be afforded by the Home-Seekers' low rate excursions which have been arranged by the North-Western Line. A Letter to a Friend. A new edition of this popular work has been printed. It is not necessary to say a word about this work to the older readers, but to the new ones we say the subject treated of is the "Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the One Hope, One Faith, and One Baptism." It was written some years ago by the late Mrs. C. C. Woodrow, and it is truly "A letter to a Friend." Many editions have been printed and distributed until this little 32 page tract is acknowledged as the most effective evangelizing agent that can be handed out. Price 10 cts. each. Send and get a supply to distribute.

Future Probation. By Wm. G. Moncrieff. We have received an advance of the new book of 148 pages, written by William Glen Moncrieff, subject, "Future Probation: Is That Awaiting Any of the Unrighteous?" Bro. Moncrieff is a writer well known to our readers, and of undoubted ability. This book is paper covers, and sells for 25 cts. each, and can be had at this office.

Was Jesus the Son of God?

A correspondent sends a number of questions relating to the above topic, and says: "We are not stiff-necked, we will gladly accept the truth when it is proven to us by the Standard." I am certainly glad if such is really the case. The Standard, I hold to be the Word of God. If my correspondent and his associates "will gladly accept the truth when it is proven by the Standard," they differ materially from the generality practice of Josephites. I know of no class of people who mutilate the "Standard" more than they do. They scruple not to erase from its sacred pages, every portion of the Divine Word which is contradictory to their theory. However, presuming that my correspondent and his associates really mean what they say, I shall proceed to answer the questions according to the Standard. He says: "The Seed of the Woman was to be ruler, the Seed of Abraham was to possess the land, the Seed of David was to sit on [illegible] throne; is there any divine seed spoken of here? I think not. Was it not the fruit of David's loins that was to sit on his throne? Who then has the right to sit on David's throne? Only Joseph's son? he was to be like his brethren. Would he be like his brethren if he was part God, and part man at his birth?"

My correspondent here asks and answers a question: "Who has the right to sit on David's throne? Only Joseph's son." Now, if my correspondent "will gladly accept the truth when it is proven to us by the Standard," he will at once have to repudiate the answer he has given to his own question,—"Only Joseph's son." The "Standard" cuts off all chances of Joseph's son from reigning on David's throne. There is not a single promise in the Word of God that any son of Joseph will ever occupy that throne.

Whose son then will occupy that throne? We will let Jesus answer, he ought to know whose son he is. See Mark xiv. 61, 62: "Again the high priest asked him, Art thou the Christ, the Son of the Blessed? And Jesus said, I am: and ye shall see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." Notice, when Pilate asked him, "Art thou the Christ, the Son of the Blessed?" he said, "I AM." My correspondent says: "Christ could not be the Son of God in reality until the proper time at the resurrection, he was the first fruits of them that slept. Can there be any difference between the first fruits and the general harvest?" Here Christ in the "Standard," positively affirms that he was the Son of the Blessed," before he was put to death, and that was certainly before his "resurrection."

See Luke xx. 41-44: "Art thou the Christ? tell us. And he said unto them, If I tell you, ye will not believe: And if I also ask you, ye will not answer me, nor let me go. Hereafter shall the Son of Man sit on the right hand of the power of God. Then said they all, Art thou then the Son of God? and he said unto them, Ye say that I am. And they said, What need we any further witness? for we ourselves have heard of his own mouth." Here is more witness with his "own mouth," in answer to the plain question: "Art thou then the Son of God?" before it is too late. "Son of Joseph can't we say one, can we?" Yes, say. "Were are not stiff-necked, we will gladly accept the truth when it is proven to us by the 'Standard.'" Here we have it, as plain as words can make it, from the lips of Jesus himself, as recorded in the "Standard," will you not explain to your readers "gladly accept the truth," or will you be a little longer "stiff-necked?"

John, who was ready to herald Christ at his first advent says: "I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God." Will my correspondent maintain that John "bare record" to a lie? If not, he must believe John's "record" "that this is the Son of God" or else remain "stiff-necked." Which will you do?

My correspondent speaking of the language of the angel concerning the birth of Jesus, says: "He shall be called the Son of the Highest," why did he not say he shall be the Son of God instead of called the Son of God? The angel knew that true language would be out of harmony with the prophecies concerning Christ." There is no force in my correspondent's remarks on the word called," using the Word of God abounds in positive declarations that he IS his Son. See Matt. iii. 16, 17: "And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him: And lo, a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Now, my dear sir, can you believe God? If my correspondent should introduce his boy to a friend and say: "This is my son," would his friend be likely to think he was a mere other man's son? And suppose he should continue and say: "This is my only begotten son," would not his friend also conclude that this boy was the only son of which he was the father? And if he should doubt him it would be considered an insult.

God introduced Jesus, and said: "This is my beloved Son," and in John iii. 16-18, he three times affirms that he is his Son, and twice that he is his "ONLY begotten Son" "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved. He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." My correspondent says: "Christ could not be the Son of God in reality until the proper time at the resurrection." God declares he is his Son, and more than that, his "only begotten Son," before his resurrection. Now my friend, you say: "We are not stiff-necked, we will gladly accept the truth when it is proven to us by the Standard." Will you do it? as the "Standard," says he is "the only begotten Son of God," before his resurrection.

Now, my dear Sir, you have a poor chance for eternal life unless you believe in Jesus as "the only begotten Son of God." The eighteenth verse under consideration says: "He that believeth on him, is not condemned: but he that believeth not, is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." Here the "Standard" says "He shall be called the Son of Man sit on the right hand of power of God. Then said they all, Art thou then the Son of God? and he said unto them, Ye say that I am. And they said, What need we any further witness? for we ourselves have heard of his own mouth." Here is more witness with his "own mouth," in answer to the plain question: "Art thou then the Son of God?" before it is too late. "Son of Joseph can't we say one, can we?" Yes, say. "Were are not stiff-necked, we will gladly accept the truth when it is proven to us by the 'Standard.'" Here we have it, as plain as words can make it, from the lips of Jesus himself, as recorded in the "Standard," will you not explain to your readers "gladly accept the truth," or will you be a little longer "stiff-necked?"

See Matt. iii. 16, 17: "And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him: And lo, a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Now, my dear sir, can you believe God? If my correspondent should introduce his boy to a friend and say: "This is my son," would his friend be likely to think he was a mere other man's son? And suppose he should continue and say: "This is my only begotten son," would not his friend also conclude that this boy was the only son of which he was the father? And if he should doubt him it would be considered an insult.

God introduced Jesus, and said: "This is my beloved Son," and in John iii. 16-18, he three times affirms that he is his Son, and twice that he is his "ONLY begotten Son" "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved. He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." My correspondent says: "Christ could not be the Son of God in reality until the proper time at the resurrection." God declares he is his Son, and more than that, his "only begotten Son," before his resurrection. Now my friend, you say: "We are not stiff-necked, we will gladly accept the truth when it is proven to us by the Standard." Will you do it? as the "Standard," says he is "the only begotten Son of God," before his resurrection.

Now, my dear Sir, you have a poor chance for eternal life unless you believe in Jesus as "the only begotten Son of God." The eighteenth verse under consideration says: "He that believeth on him, is not condemned: but he that believeth not, is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." Here the "Standard" says "He shall be called the Son of Man sit on the right hand of power of God. Then said they all, Art thou then the Son of God? and he said unto them, Ye say that I am. And they said, What need we any further witness? for we ourselves have heard of his own mouth." Here is more witness with his "own mouth," in answer to the plain question: "Art thou then the Son of God?" before it is too late. "Son of Joseph can't we say one, can we?" Yes, say. "Were are not stiff-necked, we will gladly accept the truth when it is proven to us by the 'Standard.'" Here we have it, as plain as words can make it, from the lips of Jesus himself, as recorded in the "Standard," will you not explain to your readers "gladly accept the truth," or will you be a little longer "stiff-necked?"

John, who was ready to herald Christ at his first advent says: "I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God." Will my correspondent maintain that John "bare record" to a lie? If not, he must believe John's "record" "that this is the Son of God" or else remain "stiff-necked." Which will you do?

My correspondent speaking of the language of the angel concerning the birth of Jesus, says: "He shall be called the Son of the Highest," why did he not say he shall be the Son of God instead of called the Son of God? The angel knew that true language would be out of harmony with the prophecies concerning Christ." There is no force in my correspondent's remarks on the word called," using the Word of God abounds in positive declarations that he IS his Son. See Matt. iii. 16, 17: "And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him: And lo, a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Now, my dear sir, can you believe God? If my correspondent should introduce his boy to a friend and say: "This is my son," would his friend be likely to think he was a mere other man's son? And suppose he should continue and say: "This is my only begotten son," would not his friend also conclude that this boy was the only son of which he was the father? And if he should doubt him it would be considered an insult.

God introduced Jesus, and said: "This is my beloved Son," and in John iii. 16-18, he three times affirms that he is his Son, and twice that he is his "ONLY begotten Son" "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved. He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." My correspondent says: "Christ could not be the Son of God in reality until the proper time at the resurrection." God declares he is his Son, and more than that, his "only begotten Son," before his resurrection. Now my friend, you say: "We are not stiff-necked, we will gladly accept the truth when it is proven to us by the Standard." Will you do it? as the "Standard," says he is "the only begotten Son of God," before his resurrection.

Now, my dear Sir, you have a poor chance for eternal life unless you believe in Jesus as "the only begotten Son of God." The eighteenth verse under consideration says: "He that believeth on him, is not condemned: but he that believeth not, is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." Here the "Standard" says part man? It is not a natural body, it is an actual spiritual body. If a natural body part God and part man? * * * If Christ was part mortal, and part divine at his birth, he is a Savior that the Bible knows nothing about."

I heartily agree with the sentiment expressed in the last quotation. The Bible knows nothing about a Christ that was part God and part man, part mortal and part immortal at his birth. At his birth he was wholly mortal. At his resurrection he exchanged the mortal for the immortal. The fact that he was the Son of God did not make him "part god," neither did it make him "part mortal and part divine at his birth." It is all perfectly clear if we only accept just what the "Standard" says. Luke's account harmonizes exactly with Matthew, and explains the matter. See Luke i. 30-35: And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favor with God. And behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: And he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Then said Mary unto the angel, How shall this be, seeing I know not a man? And the angel answered and said unto her, the Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God."

The reason here given why he should be called the "Son of God," was that "the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee," and set in operation the course of nature. This is not the first time that divine power has been exercised to assist nature in the birth of children as in the case of Isaac and John. The birth of Jesus was not any more miraculous than theirs; without divine aid their birth was not possible. They differed however from Jesus, in that the fathers, or authors of their being were earthly men. The origin of "the first man, is of the earth, earthy," but the origin of Jesus, "the second man is the Lord from heaven." My correspondent would have us believe that the fatherhood of Jesus was just as "earthly" as that of any other man, but the "Standard" says, he is "the Lord from heaven," or in other words, "the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore (for this reason) also that holy thing which shall be born shall be called the Son of God." There is not the least reason to suppose that because "the power of the Highest" "overshadowed" Mary, and caused nature to perform its work independent of man, that therefore the physical nature of the Highest was imparted to the son born. He inherited entirely the physical nature of his mother.

Practical Work.

Dear workers together with me for the kingdom: It is with great joy in anticipation of soon beholding the glory that shall be revealed when our King comes in, that I stand before you this afternoon. I am very glad that I had the opportunity of being at this meeting, it affords one so much pleasure to hear the beautiful Words of Life expounded, and see the interest shown by earnest workers assembled here. I think these Annual, Quarterly, and prayer-and-conference meetings are a great help to us in our Christian warfare, they cheer us up, revive our hopes, and encourage us to be more useful in the Lord's service. The Apostle Paul warns us to forsake not the assembling of ourselves together; but to exhort one another, and so much the more, as we see the day [of God] approaching. Heb. x. 25. And I tell you brothers and sisters, we should be diligent in this matter, for where there is no prayer and conference meeting you will find no life in that church collectively; and in these troublous times we fully realize the great necessity for prayer and communion with one another and with the Lord, so that the body of Christ will be more closely knit together in the bonds of mutual sympathy, love and helpfulness. The Church has well nigh accomplished her warfare, and her great adversary, knowing his time is short, is exceedingly industrious to foil the purpose of God's plan in her completion and exaltation, her foes multiply on every hand; but greater is he that is for us than all them that are against us; for we read in 2 Tim. ii. 12, "If we suffer (with Christ,) we shall also reign with him." And again let us say with the Psalmist, "I delight to do thy will, O my God," for God has great pleasure in those who delight to do his will, and who do not need to be made to appreciate right from wrong. Then, it is when we suffer gladly, willingly, self-sacrificingly, that we are counted worthy to obtain the prize; no matter how much we suffer, if it is not a worthy willing sacrifice, it is of no avail. It is but a reasonable return to God for all his goodness, to render our consecrated hearts and talents unto him in glad and cheerful service, let us, therefore, do it gladly and with zeal and energy, and let the measure of love and zeal that goes with it, prove the depth of our gratitude for all his loving kindness. Then, "Whatsoever ye do, the apostle says, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men." Col. iii 23. A hearty worker does not hesitate when a plain duty confronts him, he begins at once, and works with a will, and a service freely offered from the heart, is the only service the Lord will accept—for God loveth a cheerful giver. Then it is not the grudging service given from selfish motives God wants, but practical and progressive work, rendered by clean hands and from a pure heart, is what he requires of us.

The work of another, however much better it may be done than we could do it, will never cancel our own obligations. Then when we have been adopted into the family of God, we must begin to work, by adding to our faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity. Not only must we perform this work for ourselves, but we must reach out to others of the fallen race with words of truth, letting our light shine upon them, scatter good deeds among them, and let the love of Christ like a flowing stream reach out after them, that they too may glorify God, and receive divine blessings from their Creator. O what an important work is ours, guiding into ways of truth, life and peace, those for whom Christ died. If we cannot work in one way, we must work in another. If we cannot tell the glad tidings of great joy to the world, we can encourage and help those who can; and do all we can in the way of spreading the truth among our friends and neighbors, that thereby, some one might be led to a knowledge of the truth. Then let us press forward in this grand and noble work, serving the Lord faithfully, that when he comes we shall be worthy to reign with him in that glorious city. Jesus said unto his disciples, (Jno. iv. 34) "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work," and all who are striving for a crown, should, like Jesus, put him and his work before every thing else. Again he saith, "Behold, I say unto you, lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest, and he that reapeth receiveth wages and gathereth fruit unto life eternal: that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together." How important it is, therefore, that we feed the bread of life to the hungering multitudes, and tell the undying love of Jesus to save a dying and helpless race; for Oh! how rich, how full and how complete is our ransom sacrifice; the price paid for the sins of the whole world. Oh! how we need to hasten in these the last hours of our glorious privilege, to gather into God's store-house all the golden sheaves that are lying outside the fold. Soon the night will come when none can work: then let us awake to righteousness, and shine as lights in the world. Holding forth the Word of life. Phil. ii. 15, 16. That we should show forth the praises of him who hath called us out of darkness into his marvellous light. 1 Peter ii. 9. The Christian's duty is not to look for help, nor search fame, but to seek others and help them. Going after the lost alone, however, is not all that is required. The great mission of the church is to labor to save, to alleviate suffering humanity, and encourage the weak and erring, to build up their characters and fit themselves for heirs of the kingdom. This untiring, self-sacrificing devotion to Christian work, is a characteristic of our natures that we should cultivate. Then we must gather pearls of truth for the journey, and drop one whenever we have opportunity; remembering the beautiful proverb, "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver." Nor must we neglect to give a word of sympathy where needed, a kind look, a loving smile, a word of approval, a word of warning, words of encouragement, and many other Christian graces, more than I can enumerate, should help make up the every-day-life of a follower of Christ. There should be no such expression used as "Idle Christians," a true Christian is not idle; it is true, we being many members, have not the same office—not all given to teach, nor to the ministry, neither to prophesying, etc., but we all have our several duties to perform: "For God hath set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him." 1 Cor. xii. 18, 27-30. Therefore, if we would be vessels unto honor, sanctified and meet for the Master's use, and prepared unto every good work, we must strive daily to purge out the old leaven of sin that is constantly arising to disturb and endanger our spiritual life, for if we allow it to remain and work in us our love of righteousness will grow weaker; but purging it out by constantly resisting it, keeping our hearts so full of the love of God and love for his work, that there is no room for sin, or in other words cultivating the blessed fruits of the spirit of love, joy and peace, then indeed, as the apostle affirms, we shall be vessels meet for the Master's use. Then let as many as would be honored and used of the Master, seek to purify themselves even as he is pure; and war a good warfare against the world. But be assured in these duties we have the work of a lifetime. Practical work I consider a very important part—even the most essential duties of a Christian life. It is a subject that I feel incapable to set forth in a way to bring its beauties and importance to the minds of my hearers, as I am rather young both in years and experience. This subject is one that should be made both instructive and interesting to all, and well practiced by all who are running the race in view of an eternal inheritance in the kingdom of God.

MISS CLEMENTINE OVERMAN.

The Restitution.

THE RESURRECTION reveals the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a yearly ballot of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as per requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

[Read at Kansas Conference.]

Dear Fellow-travelers:

In a little of that love which has been extended to me by him who "showeth mercy to the thousands," I send you these few lines.

I regret so much that my circumstances will not permit of my being present to enjoy with you all the feast of this annual conference, but I must therefore content myself with the privilege of recognizing by letter my friends in the truth. I desire to acknowledge that the same power, that hath all along helped and sustained me, is not nor has been wanting in the needful hour: and as the ear of the Lord is open unto the cry of his poor dependent ones, what great encouragement does it afford me to continue steadfastly looking unto him the author of all my blessings. Oh! for a continuance of his fatherly goodness, and for the renewed extension of his preserving arm of power around me, that so I may be restrained thereby from all hurt and harm through this vale of tears and temptations, sustained by the same through "all the depths of affliction into which he may see it best for me to be plunged for my purification and peace.

My heart is much tendered and impressed while writing these lines, for indeed I am not able sufficiently to mention how good the Master is,—how worthy to be glorified, trusted in, obeyed, and loved, by all his servants and children. I praise the Lord my Savior for the very thought and hope now presented before me—that because he lives, I shall live also. My wish and fervent desire is, that all true well-wishers to Zion's welfare, all the hearty, zealous, live laborers of the truth may be preserved on the right hand and on the left;—during this yearly meeting,—that they may be in humble subjection to the great Master of our assemblies, that their speech may be directed to rightly divide the Word of Truth, that they may be severally encouraged and confirmed to serve him with greater diligence, each one abiding under their particular exercises, and upon the watch-tower.

In conclusion it seems with me, my dear brothers and sisters, to express to you my belief, that we have from time to time ample encouragement as a meeting or body in patience to possess our souls, to hold on our way steadily, and to lift up the head in hope, although occasions of discouragement and deep conflict have attended, and may yet await the faithful and honest hearted.

Lo, he cometh! The creation
Groans and staggers to her doom!
Thrones and empires fall before him,
And for David's throne make room.
Earth receives her Eden glory,
Gone the curse, the gloom, the night;
Here shall stand the city golden,
Where the Lamb himself gives light.

Dear brethren, may the Lord work marvelously, giving his blessing and presence among you, so that the flow of exhortation may be as a mighty stream and much good be done. May we all be builded together, and seek also to build up one another in the truth. Oh, may this blessed work with you and every where else, go forward notwithstanding opposition or misgivings.

May the Lord whom we serve and whom we look to, bless you all, and may he give all in the conference strength to go forth anew to gospel labor, is the wish of your sister in Christ.

SARAH E. OVERMAN.

To trust God when our warehouse are full, and our tables are spread, is no hard thing; but to trust him when our purses are empty, but a handful of meal and a cruse of oil left, and all the ways of relief stopped—herein lies the wisdom of a Christian's grace.

Those that would be fearless must keep themselves guiltless. If our heart reproach us not, then have we confidence both toward God and man.

☞ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

"Hast thou left thy first love?"

BAILEY says, "Keep thy mind pure from worldly taint, by the repellant strength of virtue."

In behalf of some of the afflicted ones of the One Body, Brother and Sister Sanford request Bro. B. Wilson to harmonize Jas. v. 14; I Tim. v. 28; 2 Tim. iv. 20; Phil. ii. 25-27; Acts ix. 37; John xi. 3, with the positions taken in his article in RESTITUTION for August 8th.

THE person who wrote the following lines must have been in an admirable frame of mind. He says:

"Henceforth it matters not
If storm or sunshine be my lot,
Whether or sweet I say can, I only pray
God keep me pure, and brave — amid
For the stern hour of strife."

IN view of the fact stated by James, "In many things we all offend," chap. iii. 2, what should we do without the family throne of favor?- without the Advocate,—without the Father, without the Spirit that maketh intercession for us (children) with groaning that cannot be uttered.

"OVER the great Bridge that spans the Ohio at Cincinnati, these words may be seen:- "All military and funeral processions when crossing this bridge must break step." The structure mighty as it is, could not bear the strain of the united muscular movement of a large body of men. This illustrates the power of united effort,—and engineers govern themselves and others accordingly; but we rarely see this principle acted upon as it should be in moral or spiritual affairs. The study seems to be to break step,—divide, sub-divide and scatter the power.

FOUR hundred and forty-five years before Christ, when Nehemiah was re-building the wall about their beloved city, amid great discouragements, Judah said, "There is much rubbish so that we are not able to rebuild the wall." We who are trying to build upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ being the chief corner stone, are pestered with rubbish in every way. It is rubbish everywhere. We have to dislodge the accumulated rubbish of ages before we can find soil that is safe to build upon. Every age and every year adds to the rubbish pile, and it is no wonder that Jesus in view of this, should have asked, "Shall he find the faith on the earth?"

WORKERS for God are sustained under most adverse circumstances. Sometimes by the fact that they are proclaiming God's truth at God's bidding and in God's way,—and the assurance that his Word will not return void, but accomplish that whereto it was sent. They take comfort from the fact that God takes care of the consequences, after they have done their duty. Oh that every one who had embraced the faith of Abraham realized that the time for work is fleeting fast, and what is done for God and truth must be done quickly, and that the words "occupy till I come," are no mere suggestion, but an imperative command. God help us each to ask "What am I doing for God?" And then consider whether there is to be any rewards without works—without doing?

A LETTER from Bro. A. J. Pettigrew informs us that Bro. N. H. Geisleman is located at Manatee, Florida, having bought property there. That he is much improved in health, is pleased with his new location, and the people like his preaching. Bro. Pettigrew will answer any inquiries regarding that part of Florida, and invites any of the brethren who may visit that state during the winter, to call on them.

WHILE waiting to see the manager the house I had entered the other day I caught sight of some lines that attracted me, and pencilled them off for RESTITUTION readers. They were as follows:

"To walk with God
Talk on, talk on
To walk with Him
Work on, work on.
Inspired it, we the words indeed,
Gifted so,
The work complete for better done,
Not needed half the strength laid on,
Gain I on
Martha would that Mary rest,
Martha murmurs much at that,
Martha, Martha, Mary hath
Hearing rest, Master's Word,
And the Lord her choice predicted,
Sit on, hear on,
Work without God to labor best,
Work on,
Father never will have it to your cost,
Toil on
Let us teach when God doth talk,
Much to suffer, much to do,
Much to suffer, much to rejoice
If God's labor crown our share;
So work with zeal, and watch and love,
Who works with Him shall share the rest with Him.
Work on."

Saved by Law or Gospel- Which? No. 1.

That this is a subject of vast importance none will dispute. It assumes that we need saving, that we can be saved, and that God's saving power is either law or Gospel. Another body of people holds that it requires both law and Gospel to save. We think the zeal of that people far outstrips their knowledge. They are wonderfully zealous. They go from house to house continually, and as the popular church members are not able to answer them they have come to think themselves on a great eminence far above the rest of the apostate churches around them. Their readers some months ago repeatedly visited some of our brethren and sisters, but soon found that they were not prepared to answer the questions they would be plied with. Soon after this one of their preachers began to attend our Sunday evening lectures, and asked for our literature. This soon led to a protracted discussion in private, after which we wrote out a number of propositions and handed to him, saying we would agree to prove them in a series of Sunday evening lectures, and invited him and all his Bible readers to attend. Quite a number did attend the first two lectures, and then dropped out, but the general interest was well sustained throughout. About that time repeated and urgent requests came from different parts of the country for articles on the sabbath question, because of the aggressive tactics of these advent people. As the way now seems clear we propose to reproduce some of the matter prepared for the lectures.

We chose the words of Paul, Rom. i. 16 for our starting point: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth, to the Jew first, and also to the Greek," or Gentile. Observe it is not a gospel, not one of several gospels, but the gospel,—not one of several powers employed by God to save men, but the power. 2ndly, This gospel is the means of salvation employed by God for saving both Jews and Gentiles. 3rd. It was not a new principle or system sprung upon the world without notice, because the first verse says, "Paul a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God, which he had promised afore by his prophets in the Holy Scriptures, concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord which was made of the Seed of David according to the flesh, and declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of Holiness by the resurrection from the dead, by whom we have received grace (favor) and apostleship for obedience to the faith among all nations, for, (on account of) his name: among whom are ye also the called (ones, or invited ones) of Jesus Christ." And in verse 8 he says, "First I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all that your faith is spoken of throughout the world." Here we find that the gospel of God and the gospel of Christ Paul was not ashamed of, and which was God's power to save were the same one gospel. This one gospel had been received by them at Rome written to, and were beloved of God- saints. They had been constituted saints by faith, and their faith was spoken of throughout the world. Their faith was Paul's faith, and Paul's faith rested on "the gospel of Christ, the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." There is no law in this statement.

Attention is called to the fact that this new and living way of calling people to Jesus is by the gospel of Christ, so that there would be no further use for the law, is shown in the 2nd verse to have been ing the subject of promise. Paul was separated unto the gospel of God which he had promised by his prophets in the Holy Scriptures. Do not let it slip past you that it was an act of faith that was promised. More than six hundred years before, God by Habakkuk, in chap. ii. 4 had forewarned the Jews of that era, by saying the just should live by faith. And immediately after setting forth the gospel of Christ as God's saving power, Paul quotes these words from the prophet, "The just shall live by faith." And how beautifully this has been set before us, by him who is the object of faith, in John iii. 36. We trust every one who wants to know whether salvation is obtainable by law or gospel will note well the words of him who spake as never man spake. The prophet and Paul have said, "The just shall live by faith," and Jesus says, "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him." It is Jesus who speaks here—he of whom Moses and the prophets did write, and of whom Moses some 1500 years before had said "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me, unto him shall ye hearken;" and again at verse 18, we read Jehovah's words, "I will raise them up a prophet among their brethren like unto thee, and I will put my words in his mouth, and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him; and it shall come to pass that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my own name, I will require it of him." We have an inspired exposition of this in Acts iii. 23. "And it shall come to pass that every soul that will not hear that prophet shall be destroyed from among the people;" that is what Jehovah meant when he said he would require it of him. It is a matter of life and death to believe or not believe that prophet.

Will our readers reflect a moment? That prophet was to be like Moses. Moses was God's lawgiver, and the mediator of the old covenant. Jesus, then, was to be God's lawgiver and mediator,- not of the same covenant, but a new and better covenant. The fact that a new covenant became necessary shows that the old one was superceded; and the fact that another lawgiver for God was raised up, shows that the law of Moses was superceded by the law of the God-raised prophet of the last times. We have infallible proof of this in the fact that Acts iii. 23 omits the law of Moses, and 2ndly, says those who will not hear that prophet shall be destroyed from among the people, obedience to the law of Moses will not avert the destruction, if it be kept. It behooves us to heed what he says: "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life, and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him." There are some of the words the Father promised to put in his mouth. Moses never said anything like that; it was never said before; and the prediction through Moses teaches that he (Moses) was to be superceded by that future prophet like him. The law of God he promulgated, and the covenant he was the mediator of were to fulfil their purpose in the divine economy and then cease to be operative. In view of Jehovah's solemn warning, we should take Jesus at his word, — he knew what to say and how to say it, told the whole truth, kept back nothing essential, surely, in view of the awful penalty for refusing to believe—not see life, and the wrath of God abiding upon him.

The foregoing is intended as the foundation, the ground work of what is to follow, the Lord willing. In our next we expect to deal with the question What is it to believe on the Son. We see no use in beginning in the middle and ending nowhere.

Justification by Faith. No. 1.

Instead of strictly complying with numerous requests to publish our discourses before the Indiana State Conference at Argos, on "Justification By Faith," and "The Purpose of Christ's Death," we have decided to give a series of articles on these subjects.

By way of introduction we may be allowed to say that it is unaccountably strange to us that some who seem to have a clear outline of the truth as it is in Jesus, should subsidize adopt views which are subversive of the truth. We do not impugn their motives, or question their honesty of purpose, but we do think they are unmindful of the injunction to "prove all things, and hold fast to the good."

The Apostolic Rule was to speak the things given to him of God, "and in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Spirit teacheth, comparing spiritual things with spiritual." I Cor. ii. 13. Would not this be a safe rule for us? Clearly, a doctrine which cannot be expressed in the words of the Spirit is a human production, and as such must be subversive of the truth, as we need no new doctrine either from God or man. Divine revelations only ceased when they were able to make us wise unto salvation.
